I was greatly impressed, if not filled, by this exceedingly unbalanced diet. It is very commonly known in this modern civilization — the knowledge has been increasing since we left the dark ages—that a balanced diet is necessary to healthy bodies. The idea that physical exercise — three days a week—alone will build up a person to be physically fit is not held by the majority of people in other parts of the country. A correct variety of food values must go along with it. I do not profess to be a dietician, but I think that even a wild beast of Africa would choose a meal with a little more variety than one of almost all starch.

I do not mean this as destructive criticism. It is merely an expression of certain observations. Who or what is responsible I do not attempt to suggest. However, I would like to point out a few curious things. Most appropriations of the college have been cut. For example, The Blue Stocking, The Collegian, PaC-SaC, Y. M. C. A., etc. all the activities receive less money yet the students this year are paying more. Nope, you're wrong—it's not the NRA, because there was no NRA when the budget was made up. Understand, these are merely observed facts; activities cannot run on nothing a year. By analogy, perhaps the dining hall is in the same predicament. At any rate, since the beginning of this year's administration there has been a noticeable difference in our meals, and that includes the Sunday ones too.

In case you think this letter is a little stiff, just remember, folks, it's the starch. —STUDENT.

"WHY EGGS ARE POINTED AT ONE END"

As Told by William Throckmorton Jones, III, Bart.

TO FRANK JOHNSTON

CHAPTER II

I must have been unconscious for some time, for when I wakened, old Reichstag was seated at the controls of the ship and gazing up—always up.

We were passing through layer after layer of fleecy-white clouds, and to me they seemed as many devils who, passing in a hideous dance macabre, had come to mock me and watch me to my doom.

We were climbing steadily. The clouds were growing thinner and thinner. Old Reichy had a look of hellish glee on his face and was mumbling to himself every minute. As for me, I was having the jitters, the nervous jerks and almost every ailment known to mortal man rolled up in one hideous nightmare. Once I thought of leaping over the side, but when I looked out and saw below me the earth, sparkling like some green jewel set in the white clouds, all thoughts of jumping left me. When I thought of my body broken by a fall from such a height I shuddered with horror. I would go with old Reichy to the very gates of Hell before I would attempt such a leap.

Soon we left the earth's atmosphere and entered the stratosphere, that land of perpetual twilight, where the cold stars were twinkling against a background of inky jet. To me these myriad stars seemed the thousands of eyes of some great devil lurking in the outer darkness of the unknown, ready to reach out and destroy us with a single blow—frail mortals that dared to pass through his dark and gloomy kingdom.

Off to the right and above us gleamed the red planet, Mars. We were pointed directly at it. I collected my scattered wits, and decided to go up where old Reichy was standing and attempt to reason with him. But that worthy was past reasoning. He had left the realm of reason and was dwelling in the realms of pure fantasy.

He was standing looking at Mars and murmuring, "At last my dreams are realized, I am going to be the ruler of the universe and you, Jones, you shall be the second power in the universe." With these prophetic words ringing through my feeble mind I went back and sat in my corner. And as I sat, the words of Aurelius came like a voice from the outer gloom that encircled us, "Short, threfore, is man's life and narrow is the corner wherein he dwells."

But it was to be no narrow corner for old Reichy. We were to be the greatest powers of the era, the "Kings of Space, Inc."

R. O. T. C. NEWS

Officers of the day and their orderlies for the week are:

Monday—Lt. H. Wyman, with Sgt. C. B. Lawter as orderly.

Tuesday — Lt. J. W. Haney, with Sgt. W. J. Clark as orderly.

Wednesday—Lt. J. L. Wilson, with Sgt. L. O. Elmore as orderly.

Friday—Lt. T. H. Wingate, with Sgt. P. W. Yearout as orderly.

Saturday—Capt. T. B. McTeer, with Sgt. J. McCaskill as orderly.

Drill periods during the week will be devoted to organizing and practicing football. All the companies have chosen their teams and are prepared for the contests to be held all week beginning Tuesday. The Home Guards have selected their team and for the past several days have been practicing rigidly. They seem to have a promising outfit.

The sophomores are all busy working on map reading. Each man is trying to show his ability as a surveyor.

The juniors last week were allowed to fire the machine gun. The harassing and loud noise which has been heard for the past several days during classes is not that of the "Cubans," but that of the rising gunners of the junior class.

Seniors are now entering that intense and interesting study of military history, and are getting a glimpse of the abilities of such officers as "Stonewall" Jackson.

The rifle team, under the direction of its captain, T. H. Wingate, has begun practicing and the schedule is posted on the bulletin board.

Uniform inspection will be held at the regular hour on Tuesday. In order to get a high mark it is necessary to have a neat uniform and shiny brass.

The unit had a rifle inspection by the ordinance service of the Augusta arsenal. The rifles, as a whole, were in fair condition.

With the rifle team starting its fall firing, the members of the fair sex banded themselves together and petitioned Capt. Wysor for a rifle team of their own. They will start firing soon. Matches with other co-ed and woman's teams will be announced later.

CAMPUS NOTES

The following are a few notes on the happenings of the week-end November 18 and 19:

"Polo" Pinson, class of '32, was on the campus Sunday afternoon.

Ben Covington and "Wee" Wyman went on a business trip to Laurens Saturday night.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Harry Mixon, of Charleston, spent Sunday on the campus with their son, Lawrence.

Miss Alice Gage, of Chester, was here Sunday afternoon.

Mike Caskey, class of '31, was back in Clinton for a few days.

A great many P. C. students, including the football team, attended the Carolina-Furman game in Columbia Saturday.

Tom Plaxico, heretofore studious library assistant, stepped out into the social life of Clinton Saturday night.

Claude Davis went home last Thursday on account of the death of an uncle.

"Red" Peterson visited his uncle in Laurens Sunday.

Bill Thompson spent the week-end in Camden.

Dick Wilson had two charming feminine visitors Sunday. Their names, however, could not be learned.

Joe E. Brown spent the week-end at his home in Columbia.

Mims Addresses Y. M. C. A. Group

The Young Men's Christian Association had as their guest on Thursday night, Prof. J. T. W. Mims. Prof. Mims is the principal of the local high school for colored people.

The subject of his talk was on "The Feeling of the Negro toward the White Man." His talk was brief but heart-to-heart. In this, the second time he has ever spoken before a white audience, he said simply that men of both races should do all possible to make friendship and understanding better between them.

An unusually large number of students and a good number of the faculty came to hear the speech. This man was the leader of the negro choir which sang for "Y" meeting a week ago. It is a program of this kind that the students seemingly take interest in and the "Y" intends to have more like it in the near future.

Thursday's program was the last for the month of November as the Thanksgiving holiday interferes with the date of the next meeting.

Possibly the silliest sophistry with which we have deluded ourselves is that, struggle between species being the order in nature, war is inevitable and natural. — Alexander Ruthven, president of the University of Michigan.

Seeks To Bring Speakers Here

At the last meeting of Sigma Upsilon, honorary literary fraternity, it was decided by that organization to begin a campaign for interesting speakers for the school. It has been a problem for the past several years to obtain good chapel speakers and a good part of the student body raised the question of getting someone of state and national fame to speak here.

Accordingly, Sigma Upsilon has sent invitation to Julia Peterkin and Robert Quillen to come here to address the students. Replies should be received from them in the near future.

"ALL FOR P. C." P. C. FOR ALL"

VOLUME XV PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE, CLINTON, S. C., DECEMBER 4, 1933 NUMBER 11

BOLICK NAMED GRID LEADER

Perrin Elected Alternate Captain for Second Time. Twenty-three Players Win Block "P" For 1933 Performance.

At a meeting of the varsity letter men last Monday morning, Harry Bolick was elected captain of the 1934 Presbyterian college football team, with Bob Perrin as alternate captain. Both men are, of course, rising seniors.

Last year Bolick, who plays halfback, was high score man in the state. This year he has been a powerful driving and blocking back. Both his defensive and offensive work have been commented on by the sports writers of the state. Bolick, who is from Charleston, is captain of the boxing team this year and is on the best collegiate boxers in the S. E. A. A. U. He is also a letter man in basketball and baseball. His power in the backfield will do much to bring home victories for the Blue Stockings next fall.

Perrin, who is from Union, has been one of the most brilliant backfield men in the state this year. He played at both quarter and halfback. His running and passing has been not only steady but brilliant. He is destined to do great things in the Blue Stocking backfield next year. Perrin also runs the low hurdles on the track team, and went to the Penn relays as alternate with the P. C. relay team last year. He was recently elected to Blue Key, honorary leadership fraternity.

At the same meeting it was announced that the following men made letters: Sims, Yearout, Forehand, Waldrop, Robinson, Tisdale, Boggs, Wilson, Horne, Reeder, Harvin, Bolick, Perrin, McCulloch, Higbe, Quarterman, Redmond, Wilbanks, Correll, Denny, Holliday, Tolbert, Peterson, and Shinnick, manager.

Captain Bolick

BOLICK —BACK—

Harry Bolick, captain of boxing this year, is elected captain of football team for next fall. He also plays basketball and baseball.

I. R. C. Delegates Go To Winthrop

Model League of Nations In Rock Hill This Week To Attract Several P. C. Men.

Seven representatives of the Presbyterian college chapter of the International Relations club will go to the Model League of Nations to be held at Winthrop college Friday and Saturday as delegates from Poland, Sweden and Iraq.

The assembly will be made up of students from nearby colleges who will carry on proceedings like those of the league.

J. Walker Combs, Jr., J. J. Rauch, Preston Charles, H. M. Wilson, Jr., Frank Guess, Colin Hudson, and Venable Martin will be the delegates. All except Combs are new members and have never sat in a Model League.

Due to the fact that several of the representatives will be absent Wednesday night on a glee club trip, when the I. R. C. is scheduled to meet, all club members are asked to meet after the "Y" program Thursday night and be prepared to discuss the questions that will be debated by the representatives to the league.

Topics slated for consideration at the assembly are: the Gran Chaco dispute, endorsement of the present German government, Japan's Pacific mandate, the Japanese question, and minorities.

Co-eds Organize New Sorority

An event new in the history of the college has come about. This is the formation of a co-ed club, called Alpha Psi Delta.

The purpose of the organization is to foster social life among the young ladies of Presbyterian college, as well as to promote extra-curricular activities for co-eds. It promises to be an unusually active and interesting group. Its formation is the fulfillment of a need of long standing, and the leaders of the movement are to be congratulated.

The officers of the new group are: Sara Copeland, president; Elizabeth Speake, vice-president; Margaret Jones, secretary; Georgia B. Blakely, treasurer. The other two charter members are Agnes Shealy and Mary Ellen Workman. All these are seniors.

Bids were issued last week to various girls of the lower classes. Those who accepted are Virginia Spratt, Frances Spratt, Mary Workman, Jamie Little, Mary Lawson, and Dolly Milling.

Itinerary Set For Glee Club

The Presbyterian College Glee club, having made its initial appearance of the year at the State Training school Friday night, will leave tomorrow morning for a three-day trip.

Friday night the club presented its program to an audience at the Training schol and on Tuesday night will make its first appearance of the year away from home. It will present a program at Bennettsville, S. C., that night. Wednesday afternoon the club will be at Hartsville, and Wednesday night at Darlington. There will be another afternoon performance at Sumter Thursday afternoon, and the club will return to school Thursday night.

Plans are now being made for another trip in South Carolina, and later in the year the club hopes to make a trip of several days' duration in Georgia.

Dramatic Club Announces Entire Cast For "Hot Copy" To Be Presented Soon

At a meeting of the Presbyterian College Dramatic club on Monday night, the remainder of the cast for the play, "Hot Copy," was selected. The final selections were as follows:

Catherine Blakely, as Sylvia Dale, the society reporter.

H. M. Wilson, Jr., as Bill Gregory, an ambitious news hound.

C. Steenbergen, as Bud Rice, in the print room.

Georgia B. Blakely, as Jane Corwin, the sob and scandal writer.

Margaret Jones, as Hazel Winston, aspiring social climber.

J. W. Combs, Jr., as Kenneth Wade, editor of the Herald.

B. W. Legare, as Randolph Peters, just one of the colored boys.

H. Wyman, as Dudley Kay, political boss of the town.

Elizabeth Blakely, as Peggy Wilson, another newspaper girl.

Christine Peake, as Mrs. Devine.

Work on the first two acts has already been started. As the date for the play is only two weeks away, practices will have to come every night. Dr. J. H. Davis has charge of the production and is being assisted by Hart Odom, president of the dramatic club. This is the first attempt at allowing the students to take partial charge of the plays.

There is now on foot a movement by the dramtic club to sponsor a freshman play in which all the charters will come from that class. It is in this manner that the dramatic club may be able to discover talent in the first-year class. This play would take form at the beginning of the second semester.

McCaskill Wins Honor Pendant

Pi Kappa Phi National Scholarship Pendant Won By Member of Class of 1933.

John C. McCaskill, of Liberty Hill, S. C., graduate of Presbyterian college last spring, was one of the seven members of Pi Kappa Phi national social fraternity selected to receive the scholarship pendant awarded each year to the outstanding scholars found in the forty-one chapters of the organization. This announcement was made by the national headquarters of the fraternity at Evanston, Illinois.

The presentation of the specially designed gold pendant and accompanying certificate will be made on December 10, the date celebrated in the organization as founder's day. The maximum number of undergraduates who may receive this award, the highest scholastic honor of the fraternity, is nine. That makes it a most distinctive recognition of mental attainments.

McCaskill graduated from Presbyterian college "magna cum laude." He was a leader also in student activities, having been business manager of The Blue Stocking, and president of the honorary fraternity council and of Sigma Upsilon, national literary fraternity. He was also a member of Sigma Kappa Alpha, Gamma Sigma, and the International Relations club.

P. C. Men Leaders At Columbia Sem

Each of the three classes of Columbia Theological seminary, Decatur, Ga., have former Presbyterian college men as presidents. C. W. Sessions is president of the senior class, N. C. McInnis is head of the middlers, and W. M. Frampton is president of the juniors.

Sessions is from McClellansville, S. C., and finished at P. C. with the class of '30. He was active in student activities, being president of the ministerial club and cheer leader. He was also a member of Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity. McInnis came to P. C. from Presbyterian Junior college in '31, and is from Little Rock, S. C. Frampton is from Charleston, and was a member of Kappa Alpha fraternity and the Pan-Hellenic council while here.

Intruder Chased In Gym Sunday

An unknown intruder snooping in the gym last Sunlay night caused considerable excitement as Forehand and a freshman chased him all over the building.

They noticed a flashlight gleam near the coach's office and investigated. The man, in dark clothes and with tennis shoes on, slipped past them several times in the dark before they could turn on the lights in every part of the building, going through most of the place before reaching the outside and escaping.

Plowdens Have Young Son

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Nelson Plowden annuonce the birth of a son at Summerton, S. C., on Monday, Nov. 27. Mr. and Mrs. Plowden announced their marriage during the second semester last year. Mrs. Plowden, who before her marriage was Miss Norvelle Brailsford, of Summerton, was at the time a student at Columbia college. She spent the rest of the year in Clinton with her husband.

Plowden is a senior at the college and a captain in the R. O. T. C. unit. He is a member of Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity and of Blue Key, honorary leadership fraternity.

Frosh Swimmers Begin Practice

Furman Clemson and Citadel Already Scheduled To Oppose Yearlings In Water Meets.

Last Monday the candidates for the freshman swimming team reported at the pool for their first practice. Hank Wilson, last year's state champion in the 100-yard sprint, is coaching the squad, taking over the job vacated by Jib Brewer.

No attempt is being made to condition the frosh because its value would be lost during the lay-off, but they are being taught the simple fundamentals of stroke and kick coordination, proper and fast turns, and racing starts. The varsity has not started to work yet, but it is hoped that with this preliminary working of the freshmen, by teaching them what they must know before they can start swimming in earnest, that the two squads will be able to work together, and competitively, as soon as the men return to school in January.

The absence of a diving board (the old one having been broken by the weight of one of the more corpulent students), has hindered the divers who otherwise would be able to keen in trim by short ractices. Coach Johnson has promised a new board within two weeks and if it is installed the squad as a whole, divers, and swimmers, will be able to work consistently.

Meets have already been scheduled with Furman, Clemson, and the Citadel, and entries have been sent in for the state meet, which will be held in Greenville in March. More meets will be held at home this year than last and it is hoped that not less than five will be swum in the local pool.

The varsity will be built largely around last year's freshman team, which won the freshman state meet. Captained by McFadden, with Powell Freeman as alternate, and with Walter, Valley, Denny, Graham and Wilson as the mainstays, the team should have a good season, despite keen competition which has already been seen at the other colleges in the state.

Boxers Start Training Today

Varsity and freshmen boxers start work today in preparation for the coming season. Several men have been doing preliminary tarining during the past few weeks, but Monday marks the beginning of work by the entire squad. Last year, P. C.'s team was one of the best in the state. This year, with all but two of the old men back, and several new men coming out, the prospects for a successful season are indeed bright.

Led by Captain Harry Bolick, the team should go places in a big way. Bolick was finalist in the A. A. U. meet two years ago, but was ineligible a large part of last season. Sims and Clark are both state champions in their weights, and Seagle and Wyman are experienced fighters.

Add to these five veterans several promising freshmen of last year and others who have shown ability and improvement, and the outlook for a good boxing team is indeed hopeful.

'C' ELIMINATES CIVILIAN TEAM

In R. O. T. C. Games "A" Company Also Wins Over "B," 6-0, and Will Play "C" for Championship of Campus.

Company "C" vs Home Guard

In the first game of R. O. T. C. football, "C" company defeated the Home Guards, 12 to 0. The "Army," although having no brighter individual stars than the non-military men, showed more consistent drive, and thereby won a well-deserved victory.

A scoring drive started when "C" got possession of the ball on the Home Guard 34-yard marker, as Nelson fumbled a punt early in the second half. Three tries at the line made a first down on the 23-yard stripe. Winget slipped through right tackle for eight yards, after which Wilson went over center to the two-yard line. Then Guerard, after failing at right tackle, circled left end for the touchdown. Wilson failed to kick the extra point.

"C" company showed an impressive running attack. A smooth-working backfield made steady gains through the powerful line. Guerard made good gains around end and tackles, while Wilson was effective in line-plunging.

The Home Guards had two unusually good backfield men in Nelson and Kemp. Nelson is fast and shifty, his specialty being end runs and plays through tackle. He also made several nice punt returns. Kemp did well on line plunges, and especially was his defensive work outstanding. In the

Basketball Gets Into Full Swing

Presbyterian college basketball men, flashing new shoes and a heavy Thanksgiving dinner, came out on the long end of a 27-19 score in a short scrimmage against the Laurens Mill quintet last Tuesday night. Closing the game with a barrage of field goals and "snow birds," a now sophomore varsity of Forehand, Levi, Wyatt, Bradley, and Adams defeated a team of former P. C. stars, such as Charlie Barrett, "Horse" Nettles, "Geechie" Adams, and others. The credit for victory may be equally distributed among all five players, as all played well and no substitutions were made. This was the first venture of the 1933-34 aggregation into the outside world and was rather encouraging.

Basketball practice will get into full swing this week, with the frosh every afternoon and the varsity every night. It is too early to make predictions, but we may be assured that "Lonnie Mac" will have a fast, fighting team on the floor when the initial whistle blows. The following start tonight with new vigor to mold a machine worthy of the Blue tockings: Wyatt, Levi, Holcomb, Collins, Potter, Waldrop, Belk, Forehand, Lynn, Bradley, Frank, and Adams.

Freshman Issue Comes Next Week

Next week's issue of The Blue Stocking will be edited by members of the freshman class. Joe Patrick, of Atlanta, Ga., has been chosen by the staff as editor. Patrick has been doing work on the paper since he came here in September.

He has not completed the selection of his staff and full announcement cannot be made now. However, the names of McLees, Love, and Miller will appear on the staff, he has announced.

College Heads At Convention

President McSween and Dean Brown are attending the convention of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools in Nashville, Tenn., this week, Dec. 1-8.

Mrs. McSween and Mrs. Brown, registrar of the college, are accompanying them on the trip.

P. C. SPIRIT

Blue Stocking teams have always been noted for their courage in fighting hard, no matter how the score stands. P. C. men have also been noted for their unfailing loyalty to their teams.

No matter how the breaks of the game may run, our athletes have been characterized by their undaunted spirit to carry on the fight. And the men cheer their team, winning or losing. That's what we call P. C. spirit.

In another very interesting, but decidedly grim contest, we are P. C. supporters. Our team is fighting with skill and courage a game against depression and a host of his strong teammates.

Even if things may not suit us exactly, let's be sports enough to realize that those in authority are playing their best for us.

Come on, fellows, let's cheer those who are giving everything they have for us. No matter what the breaks of the game, let's show our P. C. spirit and keep pulling for the team.

FIRST IMPRESSIONS

Every freshman has, before entering college, certain ideas, generally false, about the horrors he will have to experience during his first year there. He has heard nerve-racking tales from college men (generally sophomores) about the torture to which every plebe is subjected. He hears that he is to be nothing more than a slave to the will of every sophomore. A freshman, they tell him, amounts to less than the dirt under an upper classman's feet.

Just such ideas as these, many members of the present freshman class brought with them when they came here in September. Now let us see how these impressions tally with their actual experience.

Of course, it is to be expected that the first week of school would be a painful time for the plebes. We sophs, after a long period of suppression, and with the memory of many "dipping" feasts in our minds, pounced on the unlucky frosh like a pack of hungry wolves. The hapless "rats" spent a hectic week, what with "tea dances," "jeep meetings," and various other forms of entertainment.

After the first week, however, we second-year men became more used to our elevated position. Some of us, after a period of reckless indulgence with paddles, and various other instruments of discipline, lost interest in our new-found pleasure. Others among us, though not deserting the education of freshmen entirely, lost, as time went on, our former unflagging zeal for this pastime. The left comparatively few who were still enthusiastic wielders of the paddle.

Now, after nearly three months have passed, we hope the freshmen think better of the sophomore than they did at first. We realize that first impressions are hard to overcome. We remember how we felt last year to [illegible] who were fit to eat us alive, and we know also how we came to view favorably and with respect every upper classman. But still we hope that by now the "rats" think a little better of us than they did in September.

Claude Pooser, graduate of '32, who is at Columbia Theological seminary, was a visitor at the campus last week-end.

"Turk" Osman, of the Belton high school faculty and a graduate of P. C. with the class of '33, was on the campus Friday making plans for a track meet for the Belton school.

SOSPHOMORE

It must be amusing to an onlooker to see one of us. Here in our big second year as college men we think we are important, but our actions plainly label us as dunces.

Nature conspires with uninitiated freshmen to make a sophomore feel big. His slight proficiency in military drill or math, or German or football, or glee club or track makes him feel that he is an expert and a hero. Freshmen seek his advice. Something whispers in his ear that he must be an important person.

He does not realize that freshmen seek his advice because any counsel is better than none. He does not remember how often he had to be told where a rifle should be carried. He does not understand that his ability is only the natural result of patient coaching and training. He likes to feel that he is looked up to.

Remembering faintly that many paddlings and numerous errands were part of his education last year, he tries hard to pass on to the next year's class as much training as he can. Whether the insult is real or not, the offender must be punished. Whether the little job needs to be done or not, a freshman can do it easily. Bossing frosh is the easiest way in the world to get the feel of a "big ike."

It is true that we are at the most care-free time of happy-go-lucky college, that we enjoy sport—especially sport in which we can win the thrill of praise. We have passed the year when everything was new and when we were justly humbled from our proud attitude carried over from high school. We are entitled to take pleasure in initiating our freshmen so long as we do it in a friendly and sportsmanlike way. But while we are having our fine time on the top of the world, we sophomores might remember how funny we must must appear to those ahead—we "wise fools" of 1933.

Letters to the Editor

PAPER AROUSES INTEREST

Editor, The Blue Stocking:

Because of the apparent interest suddenly aroused by the editorial page, I think The Blue Stocking is to be commended or complimented. This is one of those rare times when the staff becomes aware that the students do at least peruse the columns of the paper. It is so seldom that any comment is made upon contributions to their publication that one would hardly know if it were being read or not.

Whether the removal of ads from the editorial page has made this section more readable and attractive to critical eyes or whether the contributions are more worthy and clever is responsible for the recent interest exhibited, is not known. Both are very good reasons. I think the latter is more logical. The success of a paper is really based on the interest aroused by its contents and I sincerely hope that with the good start The Blue Stocking has made toward this end that it will be able to continue to print the opinions of the student body in order to hold the interest and comment of its readers. —'36.

REPLY TO "STARCH"

Editor, The Blue Stocking:

One day while bumming home I caught a ride with a Furman man, who told me that the best meal he had ever eaten was in P. C.'s dining hall. It is recognized all over the state that Presbyterian College serves the best meals of all the colleges in the state.

Those who were listening when the budget was explained in chapel last year heard that the cost of board had been reduced as well as other activities. The board been cut $20 per student a year. This amounts to $100 a week for the dining room income. Then is it not quite obvious that we shouldn't expect to get quite as high-class food as we have in past years?

The unbelievable part is that we do get just as good food now at the lowered cost as we have in past years.

I think that the big majority of the students appreciate our most capable dietician, and know that she is doing her best to secure a variety of food. Come on, boys, and let's quit this griping and show our appreciation to our beloved matron.

—TWO STUDENTS.

Editor, The Blue Stocking:

In the interesting letter to the editor in the last week's issue, signed "Student," there appeared a phrase revealing a misunderstanding of fact which I would like to take this opportunity to clear up. The phrase in question was as follows, "All the activities receive less money, yet the students this year are paying more."

It may be recalled that at a chapel hour talk on "The Budget" last spring the changes in charges made by the Board of Trustees at the February, 1933, meeting were explained to the student body. The allocation of fees for the past two years were given and are here repeated.

Tuition	$100.00	$150.00
Board	180.00	160.00
Student Activities (PaC-SaC, Blue Stocking,, Collegian, Y. M. C. A., Glee Club, Forensic, etc.)	40.00	25.00
Room Rent	40.00 to $80	40.00 to $80
Library Fee	7.50	5.00
Medical and Hospital Fee	7.50 to $10	5.00 to $10
Laboratory Fees	4.00	4.00

It will be noted that reductions were made in Board, Student Activities Fee, Library, and Medical and Hospital Fees. An increase was made in Tuition Fee. It was explained that P. C. is operated as economically as could be hoped for without sacrifice of efficiency and that when the student paid the full amount of Tuition charged the amount fell short of the actual cost per student by nearly 50 per cent. This amount is made up each year by special gifts and a percentage of the Benevolent Budget of the Church which amounts annually to $15,000 to $20,000.

Owing to the rise in costs of food and supplies of nearly 20 per cent since the budget was made up in February of 1933, while the income of the Boarding Department was cut about 10 per cent, it is a tribute to the genius of our beloved Matron, Mrs. Hunter, that the high standard of the Boarding Department has been maintained as well as it has.

I might say also that every Professor and member of the Staff cheerfully accepted a reduction in salary for 1933-34 in order to make possible a balanced budget under which we are now operating.

We are happy to feel the loyal cooperation of Student Body and Faculty in the working out of our problems which has brought about the most satisfactory situation existing on the campus and in the Administration of the College for the six years of the present administration.

Cordially yours,
JOHN McSWEEN, President.

COMMENDS STAFF

Editor, The Blue Stocking:

One of the marks of the present day is that youth says what it used to think only. This should be commended in anyone. Criticism should always be helpful, whatever the motive of the criticiser may be. Last week you published a letter from a student who seemed to be impressed with "certain observations." I should like to express some observations myself.

This year The Blue Stocking has made some real progress. Especially has it improved in the last month. The "brown section" and the insert, with the removal of ads from the editorial page have contributed much toward the general appearance of the paper. The Collegiate Digest brings together college interests from various parts of the country, and the insert gives more space for editor comment and a greater chance for expression of the student body. The sport page also has been an improvement of the recent issues.

It would be from neglect only leave out the business management part in this progress. Although the receive less money this year from college, they are at present running on less than this reduced budget for. Considering the increase in size of the paper, this certainly worthy of commendations.

In closing, I should like to express my congratulations to the editor the junior class issue and to that the two coming class issues be as good. Perhaps, too, I should mention the fact that I am not member of The Blue Stocking staff but merely one who makes "certain observations."

OBSERVATIONS

Again, Dr. Brimm's sophomore Bible class gives this struggling writer an inspiration for his idle chatter. This morning the good Doctor asked a student the occupation of Matthew before he became a disciple. The aforementioned one replied that he was collecting the toll at a mill. Moral: If you are from the country, dont try to keep it hid. It's sure to come out anyway.

We heard recently of a devoted one who almost got drunk when he earnestly tried to drink the fluid from a bottle so he could recover his girl's beads which were spilled on the bottom of the bottle. He's almost as bad as the fellow who was so close that he looked in his cuckoo clock every day to see if the cuckoo had laid any eggs.

The same freshman who went after a left-handed monkey wrench refused to go after a bucket to gather up the taps that Cliff Johnson was blowing from his bugle. Yes, sir, Captain, we have some very militaristic freshmen.

One of our freshman co-eds fell down this past month and only made an "A" on Professor Martin's math. We always did say that girls were not mathematically-minded.

When asked if he was going to play R. O. T. C. football, one of the sophomores replied, "You can bet your sweet life I'm not. This guy's daddy didn't raise a fool. At least, I don't try some things but once."

A certain freshman requested that the Spencer hall paddle be dedicated to him since he had featured so largely in forming the tradition which surrounded this piece of wood. And, sure enough, this request was heeded—and with a most appropriate ceremony. At the end of the year the paddle is given to the freshman, along with the privilege to dispose of it as he sees fit.

One of our most eminent students, after several unsuccessful attempts to get an early date, in disgust, called the girl and asked for one on the fourth of July.

And speaking of R. O. T. C., this reminds me that we have at last reached company drill—the time when the freshmen who have been dictated to all years can get a true idea of the real knowledge of their dictators—the lieutenants.

Yes, sir, Company "C" is practically assured of the R. O. T. C. football championship. Chances looked pretty slim for this team for a while because they could not find a shoe that would fit "Footsie" Yow. But the public-spirited Vic Correll came to the rescue and loaned him a pair of his, which had become too small for him. B. V. (before Vic) the nearest to Footsie's size was a 12, nad he still complained that it pinched his toe.

The PaC-SaC photographers are working industriously these days collecting all sorts of original snapshots for the yearbook. They are getting unusual pictures instead of common ones. For instance, they have an elderly bachelor professor with a very, very "most popular" co-ed, and, believe it or not, Mr. Willard Jones with no one at all.

WITH the ALUMNI

Otto Ferrene, who is now teaching at Presbyterian Junior college, was on the campus for the Thanksgiving holidays.

Freeman Parker, of last year's graduating class, now a student at Columbia Theological seminary, who has been ill with pneumonia at his home for the past few weeks, is now convalescing nicely, his friends will be glad to know.

QUESTION BOX

Q. How much does the earth weigh?

A. 6 x 21 raised to the 21st power. This is a question very frequently asked. Also, What is weight? and How do you weigh the earth? Weight is merely the gravitational attraction between the earth and a given mass. That is why weight varies slightly at different heights from the earth, while mass remains constant. Strictly speaking, the "weight" of the earth is its mass rather than actual weight. In reading the above figure, put 21 zeros after the 6 and you have it.

Q. What causes tides in the ocean?

A. Tides are caused mainly by the gravitational attraction of the moon. The sun is too far away to have much effect, but when the sun and moon and earth are in a line, we have a higher tide than otherwise. Tides rise approximately twice a day, and are on opposite sides on the earth at the same time.

Q. Why do we sometimes see the face of a man in the moon, and sometimes an old woman or another figure?

A. Imagination. There are a lot of craters, etc., on the face of the moon, and these make various shadow formations. Seeing the figures is the mind's attempt to form picture concepts.

Correction:

In the last issue, in this column, the following statement appeared: "That means that tomorrow the sun will weigh 350,000 tons less than it does today." It should have read: " . . the sun will weigh 350,000 million tons less . . . " The mistake was in the linotyping.

This column will occasionally be used to answer questions on all phases of science. We don't promise to answer all questions submitted, but all will be published and commented upon. Questions must be signed by those asking them.

—why Luckies taste better, smoother

On certain mountains in the Near East is a limited collar of earth—called in Turkish, "Yacca." Tobaccos grown there cost as high as $1.00 a pound. Carefully they are examined, leaf by leaf. Often it takes a man a whole day to select two pounds of certain of these fine tobaccos. Lucky Strike is the world's biggest user of fine Turkish tobaccos. For these tender, delicate Turkish leaves are blended with choice tobaccos from our own Southland—to make your Lucky Strike a cigarette that is fully packed—round and firm—free from loose ends. That's why Luckies taste better, smoother.

Company "A" vs "B"

In the second game of the R. O. T. C. football series, "A" company defeated "B" company, 6 to 0, in a close, hard-fought contest. It was necessary to play an extra period in order to decide the victor. McCaskill scored for "A" company on a pass from Adams.

In the first half neither team made a serious threat, although once Company "A" took the ball to their opponents' 18-yard line, but there they were repulsed. Then, during the second half "B" made a drive from their own 40-yard line to the opposite 16-yard stripe, but they, too, lost the ball on downs.

When the regular time for the game was up, it was decided to play an extra period with the goal lines moved up to the 20-yard mark. For a few minutes the ball see-sawed back and forth down the field, but finally Company "A" got possession of the ball on their own 5-yard line. From there McCaskill passed to Freeman for 18 yards. Then McCaskill in three tries made a first down, leaving the oval five yards from the new goal. On the next play, the blond quarterback caught a pass from Adams for the winning touchdown.

Both of these teams showed good form in advancing the ball, although neither got dangerously close to scoring, save in the final extra period. McCaskill and Seagle were best in the victors' backfield, while Carothers and Copeland ran well for the opposition. Freeman and Wallace were best for Company "A" in the line. For Company "B," Buchan was outstanding in defensive play.

One noteworthy feature of the contest was the excellent punting by McCaskill (A), and Copeland (B). McCaskill once booted the ball out of bounds on the opposite one-yard line. Copeland, on the other hand, kicked out twice on the three- and eight-yard stripe.

The passing was little better than it was in the Home-Guard-Company "C" game. Company "A" attempted ten forwards and completed four, gaining 3, 5, 18 and 21 yards. The losers tried nine aerials and connected with only one for a 22-yard gain.

3 about Cigarettes

Not so long ago practically all cigarettes were made by hand

Now, Chesterfields are made by high-speed machines that turn out 750 cigarettes a minute, and the cigarettes are practically not touched by hand.

BY the use of long steel ovens—drying machines of the most modern type—and by ageing the leaf tobacco for 30 months like wine is aged—Chesterfield tobacco is milder and tastes better.

Only pure cigarette paper—the best made—is used for Chesterfield.

And to make sure that everything that goes into Chesterfield is just right, expert chemists test all materials that are used in any way in the manufacture.

Chesterfields are made and packed in clean, up-to-date factories, where the air is changed every 4½ minutes. The moisture-proof package, wrapped in Du Pont's No. 300 Cellophane—the best made—reaches you just as if you went by the factory door.

In a letter to us, an eminent scientist says:

"Chesterfield Cigarettes are just as pure as the water you drink."

PRESIDENT AND DEAN AT MEET

Dr. McSween and Dean M. W. Brown Represent Presbyterian At Annual Meeting of Southern Association of Colleges.

Dr. John McSween, president of Presbyterian college, and Dean M. W. Brown represented the college at the annual meeting of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools held last week, Dec. 4-8, at Nashville, Tenn.

The report made by the visiting committee that inspected the college last spring was the most interesting feature of the meeting for the Presbyterian representatives. The report was highly commendatory of the institution and described the student body as "intelligent, courteous and alert."

The Southern Association is the ranking accrediting body of schools and colleges in the South. Only institutions of the highest academic aims and achievements are admitted to its accredited list, and to remain on the list a high academic standard must be maintained, in addition to certain requirements for endowment. Presbyterian college has been a member of the association since 1923.

A great deal of time at the convention was taken up with reading the reports of various committees of investigation and other committees. Several applications for admission were considered.

"A noticeable trend in the aims of the association," said Dr. McSween when interviewed, "is a tendency to raise the standard of college work required for entrance into the organization." He expressed as the aim of Presbyterian college a desire that the always-high standard of scholastic work shall be constantly raised.

The meeting was largely attended, almost every college in the group being represented.

Dr. McSween and Dean Brown were accompanied on the trip, which was by automobile, by Mrs. McSween and Mrs. Brown.

Glee Club Makes Down-State Tour

Receives Tremendous Ovations At All Places Visited. Plans Another Tour After Holidays.

The Presbyterian College Glee club concluded a successful tour down-state with a performance Thursday afternoon at the Girls' high school in Sumter. On the tour, performances were given at Bennettsville, Hartsville, Darlington and Sumter.

The singers left Clinton Tuesday morning and returned Thursday evening. The orchestra accompanied the club on its trip but returned early Thursday afternoon since it did not perform at Sumter.

The first appearance was made at Bennettsville Tuesday night. A larger audeince attended the performance here than at any other place, approximately 800 people being present.

The second appearance was made at the Hartsville high school Wednesday morning. The audience consisted principally of high school students, although quite a few town people were presen..

Authorship Of Tuneful Alma Mater Finally Determined By Reporter After Long And Careful Search

Dr. Cartledge Responsible For Words of Presbyterian College Song. Rev. John Townsend, of Pelzer, Composer of Tune Now Used In Alma Mater.

By R. C. McLees

"'Mong Piedmont hills of old S. C.
There stands a college called P. C. . . ."

. . . and if volume is proof few would doubt the statement on the occasions upon which the arched ceiling of the auditorium resounds with the roar of over 300 loyal throats. Yet it is no mere speculation to state that very few of the possessors of those husky vocal chords know who figuratively stood P. C. among the ancient slopes of the Piedmont. Even among the ranks of the faculty there was dissention and uncertainty as to the author and composer of the words and music of the Alma Mater.

It required correspondence with a possible composer to clear the matter up. Rev. John Townsend, of Pelzer, S. C., acknowledged the composition of the music, and with the light already obtained on the subject it was he who enabled positive identification of the author of the words.

It is an interesting fact to know that the birthplace of the original Alma Mater, almost a score of years ago, was the house on the south side of the Plaza, now occupied by Dr. Spencer. In it, Dr. G. H. Cartledge, who was in charge of the glee club, composed the well-known words and set them to music of his own composition. When Dr. Cartledge departed to become a member of the faculty at Davidson college the musical element of Presbyterian college was left without a leader.

Accordingly, President Douglas, some years later, arranged with Mr. John Townsend, of Anderson, S. C., to come to Clinton every Wednesday to teach a class in the theory of music and to have charge of the glee club.

To quote Mr. Townsend's letter:

"Often I arrived at the college before scheduled time and one day I happened to meet one of the students, Joe Stokes, who remarked that he wished that I would teach the men to sing the Alma Mater properly. I asked to see a copy of the song and found that the words had not properly been set to music, making the accent fall on the off beat of the music. I called

Next Issue Of Paper Jan. 8th

The Blue Stocking and faculty join in wishing the students of Presbyterian college a very merry Christmas and a joyous and happy New Year.

Carmichael Speaks On "Stewardship"

Dr. P. H. Carmichael, Professor At Columbia Seminary, Addresses Presbyterian Congregation Sunday Morning.

While the government is making every effort to relieve the physical needs of the nation during these trying times, it makes no provision for spiritual necessity. The resources for the relief of spiritual need are limited by the generosity of Christians. It is up to them to supply the resources.

These words were the keynote of Dr. P. H. Carmichael's message to the Sunday morning congregation at the First Presbyterian church. Dr. Carmichael is head of the religious education department at Columbia Theological seminary, Decatur, Ga., and was representing the seminary here in the school's drive for funds.

The subject of Dr. Carmichael's address was "Stewardship and the Church Program." The essential purpose of the church program, he said, is the promulgation of religious education. In this day when the government is taking upon itself the support of many things essential to our well-being, the program of religious education is one of the few items neglected. Therefore the burden is left entirely up to the church, and Christians must supply the resources necessary for the relief of spiritual need.

With our sense of obligation to give there is need for a spirit of discrimination in order to place contributions where they will be most effective.

The speaker, who has been connected with the seminary only since September 1, brought greetings from the Presbytreian college students who are now preparing for the ministry at Columbia. Former P. C. students make up over one-fourth of the present enrollment, he said.

Bob Hannah In Local Hospital

Collegian Soon To Be Distributed

Walker Combs, editor of The Collegian, announced a few days ago that the winter edition of the college magazine will be distributed next week. Combs has been working hard on this issue and it promises to be one of the best in recent years.

Among those contributing articles for this edition were "Hank" Wilson, Frank Guess, H. Wyman, J. I. Nexsen, and F. S. Love. All of these men, with the exception of Love, have published articles in The Collegian before. A special feature of this edition will be its adornment with original linoleum cuts made by McLees, a freshman on the staff. Several of McLees' cuts have appeared in The Blue Stocking, and they will greatly enhance the appearance of The Collegian.

Back On Campus

Dr. John McSween, P. C. president, returned last week from the annual session of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

Colin Hudson Is Seriously Burned

Reported As Improving From Electrical Shock Received On Thursday. Now At Home.

Colin Hudson, Presbyterian sophomore, from Greenville, was seriously burned about the hands late Thursday afternoon when he grabbed a high tension wire.

Hudson was on top of the school bus unloading baggage following the glee club's return when the accident occurred. He was handing down baggage when the bus suddenly began rolling backward. He lost his balance and grabbed the wire to prevent falling.

Hudson was rendered unconscious and the power in the wire was so great that he could not release it. Furman Wallace, who was standing on the ground, immediately saw the gravity of the accident and leaped up, caught Hudson by the coat and pulled him from the wire.

When Hudson was pulled from the wire he fell to the ground but escaped serious injury in the fall.

One hand was burned seriously while the other was burned less severely. He was reported yesterday as resting very well and recuperating as rapidly as could be expected.

The Blue Stocking joins the student body in wishing him a speedy return to school.

Xmas Holidays Begin Friday

Christmas holidays begin Friday, December 15, and continue until Tuesday, January 2. Students are warned that an absence on the day immediately preceding or on the day immediately following a holiday incurs double demerits.

Several of the football players who did not take advantage of their holidays for Thanksgiving will take them Christmas, but sickness or death in the family is the only acceptable excuse for other men.

FROSH ELECT SUPERLATIVES

Results Of Contest Show Many Ties. Daniel and Bulwinkle Win Most Honors.

Many interesting facts were learned concerning the personalities of the first-year men at Presbyterian college last week when the results of the freshman superlative contest were ascertained. Freshmen took advantage of the opportunity to express their thoughts and opinions concerning their opinions on sophomores.

The contest was marked by an abundance of ties. Seven places were tie votes, while none of those elected had a complete walk-away. The polling, in fact, was very close in most cases, the largest plurality being won by Dabney in his election to the position of "best orator."

Daniel and Bulwinkle led the field in the number of places won, each being elected to three positions. Six men were elected to two places each. These figures include tie votes.

Collings and McSween shared honors for "most popular" and Collings placed again when he and Oxley tied for the honor of "best all-round."

The complete ballot is given below:

1. Most popular—Collings and McSween.
2. Best athlete—Abbott.
3. Greenest—Green.
4. Most handsome—Bulwinkle.
5. Ye ladies man—Plunkett.
6. Most vicious sophomore—Frank.
7. Biggest gold brick—Bolick.
8. Best sport—Oxley.
9. Best all-round—Oxley and Collings.
10. Most studious—Steenbergen.
11. Wittiest—McAlpine and Cappelmann.
12. Most popular co-ed—Mary Motes.
13. Most journalistic—Patrick.
14. Horsiest—Daniel and Worrell.
15. Dumbest—Norton.
16. Laziest—Mansfield.
17. Best orator—Dabney.
18. Biggest deadbeat—Mansfield.
19. Most courteous—Barringer.
20. Best physique—Prather and Bulwinkle.
21. Cutest—McLees, Legare, McAlpine, Daniel.
22. Most dignified—Dabney.

Three Men Tie In Council Race

The election last Friday of a student councilman from the freshman class resulted in a tie between three men, Collings, Daniel, and Dabney. Another election will be held to name one of these three to the position.

The names of the nominees were read Thursday morning in chapel and the balloting took place Friday. Those nominated by the council were Collings, Daniel, Dabney, Patrick, Matthews, J. P., Wallace, F. T., and McInnes.

A run-off will be held this week to elect one of the three men tied for first place. All three men are popular with the student body and any one of them is well fitted for a place on the council.

Collings is from Atlanta, Ga., Daniel is from Irmo, and Dabney from Florence.

Did you see the soph that went home for Thanksgiving and came back with a pretty picture of a very pretty girl? . . . Who is the soph that has two pictures of two girls? Every night he looks first at one, then the other. Several seconds later he sighs pitcously and shakes his head as if in doubt.

R. O. T. C. NEWS

Officers of the day for the week, with their orderlies, are given below:

Monday—Lt. C. W. Copeland, with Sgt. C. H. Elliott as orderly.

Tuesday—Lt. C. M. Lawson, with Sgt. K. F. Mills as orderly.

Wednesday—Lt. H. W. Wilson, with Sgt. H. S. Odom as orderly.

Thursday—Lt. H. D. Wilson, with Sgt. T. F. Carothers as orderly.

Friday—Lt. J. C. White, with Sgt. D. W. Boggs as orderly.

Colonel W. L. Reed was the officer who was in charge of the inspection Saturday and today. Colonel Reed is from the R. O. T. C. office of the Fourth Corps area, with offices at Fort McPherson, Atlanta.

The new first-class privates will be announced soon. To be named a first-class private adds three points to the final grade in military science. To be named corporal adds five points.

Several places on the co-ed rifle team are still open. Any co-ed interested in the team should see Captain Wysor at once.

Sturgeon Talks On Heavy Water

At the Chi Beta Phi's last meeting before Christmas, Prof. H. E. Sturgeon, of the chemistry department of the college, spoke on the subject of the newly discovered "heavy water." This water, he said, is composed of the same elements as regular water, hydrogen and oxygen, the only difference being that in it there is a different and heavier isotope of hydrogen.

Tests with this heavy water are being carried on at the present to attempt to find uses of practical value. Experiments with lower animals have shown that the liquid is toxic. As he pointed out, this property may possibly lead to a medical use.

The substance is made by successive electrolysis and right now the cost is about $150,000 a quart.

ON NEWSPAPER ALL-STATE

PERRIN, YEAROUT, AND REEDER WIN PLACES ON NEWSPAPER ALL-STATE MYTHICAL TEAMS

The Greenville News and The State Nominate Presbyterians For 1933 Eleven.

Two Presbyterian men were placed on the first teams of prominent all-state selections and one was named on the second team for the season of 1933. Perrin was named all-state quarterback by The State (Columbia), and Yearout all-state end by The Greenville News. Reeder placed on the second team of The State. All three of the men are juniors, and bid fair to make another fame-winning show during their last year on the gridiron.

Perrin, who is fourth highest scorer in the state, has played exceptionally well all season. His running of the team has been almost without fault and he has proven himself one of the best ball carriers in the state. He is also an excellent passer and defensive player.

Yearout has been outstanding on both offense and defense. He has turned in a polished performance at end and is recognized as one of the fastest intercollegiate football men in the state. He is as "fleet as a fox," to borrow Scoop Latimer's phrase used in commenting on Yearout.

Reeder has alternated at guard and center and has shown up brilliantly at both positions. On the second team of The State he was placed at guard, though his work at center has been, perhaps, even more spectacular than his performance at guard, although he plays both positions equally well.

Final Standing Of State Grid Teams

The final standing of South Carolina football teams, including games played only with Palmetto state teams, shows that Carolina and Furman were tied, with Presbyterian and Newberry finishing next.

The second division is composed of Citadel, Wofford, Clemson and Erskine. The complete standing of clubs in the state race follows:

Carolina	3	0	1	1.000
Furman	4	0	1	1.000
Presbyterian	3	1	1	.750
Newberry	2	1	1	.667
Citadel	2	4	1	.333
Wofford	2	5	0	.286
Clemson	1	3	1	.250
Erskine	1	4	0	.200

Favorites In Win Over Stubborn Foe In Finals

Passes Galore Feature All-Military Fracas With Many Being Intercepted. Wilson Scores In Twilight On Questioned Play.

In a game featured by many attempted passes, "C" company defeated "A" company, 6 to 0, for the championship of the R. O. T. C. unit at Presbyterian college. Neither team seriously threatened to score until the touchdown made at the close of the fracas. Company "C" registered six first downs against five for "A."

The touchdown came after the time for the game had been extended and the field shortened to the 20-yard stripe at each end. Company "C" blocked an "A" kick on the "A" two-yard line. Three tries at the line netted a yard, the Company "A" line stiffening to meet the attack. On the fourth down Wilson took the ball over the center for the tally. At first there was some discussion as to whether or not the ball had crossed the goal, but the officials finally ruled it a touchdown.

As a result of the practice received in the other games, both teams showed a better brand of ball than had been exhibited in the elimination matches.

In the first half McCaskill, "A" company, passed to Bradley for about 15 yards to the 20, but the ball went over on downs.

Freeman, "A" company end, intercepted a Company "C" pass in the second half and raced 30 yards to the 21-yard marker, where he was downed by the safety man. A possible score was averted when "C" retaliated by intercepting an "A" pass several plays later.

For "C" company, Guerard and Wilson in the backfield, and Wyman in the line, were outstanding. Bradley, Freeman, and McCaskill did excellent work for Company "A."

"C" company attempted 12 passes, completed two, and intercepted three. "A" attempted 14, completed three, and intercepted three.

The starting line-ups were as follows:

Company "C"	Company "A"
LE—Wooten	Freeman, M. P.
LT—Arnold	Elmore
LG—Rhodes	Barrett
C—Smith, J. B.	Wallace, W.
RG—Wyman	Chapman, C. G.
RT—Langston	Steenbergen
RE—Jordan	Bradley
QB—Guerard	Daniel
HB—Valley	Adams
HB—Walter	Williams
FB—Wilson	Seagle

Substitutes: "C" company: Potter, Johnson, Tuttle; "A" company: McCaskill, Jeanes, Johnson, Legare.

Officials: Perrin, referee; Plowden, umpire; Yearout, headlinesman.

All Battalion Team Announced

Representatives From All Companies Win Places. "C" Company Places Most Men. Home Guards Next.

John Suggs, chairman of The Blue Stocking committee designated to pick an all-battalion football team, announces that the committee has completed its task. Suggs states that there were so many scintillating gridiron performers that the task of selecting the eleven best men was quite difficult. It was so difficult, in fact, that the committee did not choose a second-string team, for so much time was consumed in picking the first team that no time remained for the choosing of the second.

The all-battalion team follows:
Right end, Bradley, A Company.
Right tackle, Warrenfells, Home Guards.
Right guard, Wyman, C Company.
Center, Buchan, B Company.
Fullback, John Wilson, C Company.
Halfback, Nelson, Home Guards.
Halfback, Carothers, B Company.
Quarter, Guerard, C Company.

This team is not strictly all-R. O. T. C., as several Home Guard men received places, but their work was so brilliant that they could not fairly be left off.

SPORT SHOTS

Now that the scribes have compared and contrasted their individual selections for the mythical all-state, all-Southern, all-American teams, we would like to suggest an all-state coaching staff. Our vote goes to the best trio of "builders of men" in the South: Coaches Johnson, McMillian, and Eichelberger. Presbyterian college is indeed fortunate in having them.

It is said that the fighting spirit of a football team is proportionate to the spirit of the student body. During the past season the cheer leaders have had a vast amount of trouble in getting the cooperation and support of the students. Next year let's all get behind the team and let them know we're backing them more than ever.

From the looks of the men in practice it seems that P. C. will have excellent varsity and freshman basketball teams this year.

The following is taken from an editorial in The Columbia Spectator, for December 5. The Spectator is a daily paper at Columbia university. In commenting on Columbia's receiving the bid to the Rose Bowl, the editor said:

"Columbia university had its chance yesterday to show conclusively that intercollegiate football here is not a public spectacle for profit. It had its chance to stand out above any institution in the United States as preeminently a university devoted to the advancement of learning and research. By permitting the football team to strike out for Pasadena it has repudiated its own standards."

The editorial went on to say that the trip of the team would interfere with basketball, as several of the players are also on the basketball squad, and declared that the whole business was a step backward in "placing intercollegiate football on a sane and decent level."

"The Lion has joined the circus," the editor stated in conclusion.

COLLEGE MEN

College men! How sweetly does that appellation ring in tune with the mowing top vest buttons. College men at last. Freddy Greengills takes on a new dignity.

He turns to his bosom friend who had been only "Jimmy" and speaks—"Ah. . . . Jones . . . " Down the street he walks, rat cap askew. The emblem of the lowly frosh is turned into the glorious badge of superiority . . . college man!

He wears his rat cap home and speaks there with easy familiarity of "Lanky." . . . "Oh, I forgot that you didn't know him. He's the back who made that open-field run for a touchdown in the last game. Well, Lanky says to me, he says, 'Fred, ole pal, . . . ' " So he disposes of those almost legendary heroes spoken of so reverently the year before.

Before the season, he speaks carelessly of the "High school team back home—they will do fairly well with practice. Yes, I played . . . " so he refers to the team which he served gratefully and joyfully as—water boy.

He flaunts his pledge button in the eyes of all ,and mentions, unconsciously of course, the number of bids he received — and neglects to mention why he took the least acceptable of all.

He waxes eloquent on the subject of his college. He is almost savagely sensitive to any fancied disparagement of his Alma Mater. Just as acid on metal will sometimes produce a gas (which he, as a student of chemistry, somewhat hazily imagines to be the case) so the spice of tea dances and pep meetings stirs the torpid enthusiasm of the recipient to some reaction, so he seizes upon the school spirit . . . a thing never well developed before.

He raises a mustache, scornfully flaunts it at socials in the face of those, who, being so unfortunate (so he imagines) as to be unable to don hirsute adornment equally ridiculous, feign disgust. Then upon the eve of going home for the week-end, he makes careful use of the instrument made famous by Mr. Gillette. And a very elaborate ritual it is.

He learns to appreciate the arguments at "bull sessions" and to enter into them on the slightest pretext, in order to be able to spring upon "the boys back home" some new word or phrase, with the fell purpose of building up a reputation as an intellectual giant.

He maintains against all comers his claims to superior bruises and paddlings undergone, and proudly speaks of his honorable scars. At school he walks five blocks out of his way to avoid meeting a well-known sophomore, but "Ah, can I take it?" he boasts to the home town boys. He can define at a moment's notice any such term as "cutting the book," "railroading," "diploma," "Christmas present," and "one-two-three."

He meets a few girls at a social, learns their names, and perhaps has a date with one of them. He has never "gone with the girls" much back home, but my, what a ladies man he is when he gets back to his native haunts.

On the whole, he is a fair specimen of greenness, youthful folly, callowness, but, as the early apple, green at first, bids fair to become a fairly creditable pippin, so does he. College man!

ON LYNCHING

The recent lynching that took place in San Jose, California, has aroused a great deal of interest and comment in all secions of the country. While the deed is being condemned in vitreous terms by people in all sections, there is an element found everywhere that agrees with Governor Rolph's statement that the lynching was a most effective warning to criminals that the United States is taking a positive and active stand against kidnapers and organized crime.

The main argument presented by those who condemn the act is the danger of getting the wrong man. To be sure, there is a possibility of killing the wrong man in some cases, but the confessed criminals were pointed out to the party by the jailer in this case. There was not the slightest chance of the party killing the wrong men.

Another argument that the opponents of Governor Rolph present is the breaking down of established law enforcement agencies by the people taking the law into their own hands. But this is not true. Organized crime is so complex and so effective that it can escape justice, unless such drastic measures as lynching are taken. The people en masse no doubt administered more equitable justice to the kidnapers than a court would have done.

The lynching will certainly tend toward producing a decline in the number of kidnapings. Since the lynching occurred there has not been a kidnaping case in the country, whereas during the period before the lynching at least two or three kidnaping cases were reported each week. Criminals of this day may not fear the law, but they do fear the wrath of the people, especially when it is demonstrated as it was in San Jose. The recent motion picture, "This Day and Age," effectively illustrates this point.

Technically, the lynching was a deplorable case of the people taking the law into their own hands; actually it was the most effective blow that has yet been taken at kidnaping.

A GRIN OR TWO

Customer: "Have you anything besides Glustick's corn syrup?"

Grocer: "Why, no, but that's the best brand that comes."

Customer: "Well, it never done me no good — I took six cans of it and my corn's as bad as ever.

Mistress: "So you want to get off to take care of your sick husband. Can't that grown daughter of yours do it?"

Servant: "No, ma'am, she ain't good for nothing around the house, so I just put her out in service."

Hardluck: "I'm just a young fellow that is struggling to make ends meet."

Carenot: "Well, if you're so badly bent financially, it ought to be easy for you."

Mother: "I'm afraid Robert is burning the candle at both ends."

Father: "Huh! That boy has cut the candle in two and lit up all four ends."

Traffic cop: "Hi, here! What in the world do you mean by speeding along like that? Don't you know you are liable to cause an accident? Why don't you use your noodle?"

Sweet Young Thing: "Noodle? Where is it? I've pulled and pushed everything on the dashboard, and I couldn't stop it."

Little Harold had been put out on the back porch while his mother cleaned up the lunch dishes.

"Harold, how many times do I have to tell you to stop pulling the cat's tail?" asked the mother.

"Honest, Mom, I'm just holding the tail, the cat is doing the pulling."

Doctor: "How in the world did you get such a black eye?"

Patient: "My wife hit me with a rock."

Doctor: "You wife? That's the first time I ever heard of a woman hitting anything she threw at!"

Patient: "She wasn't throwing at me. She was throwing at a neighbor's cat, and I was standing behind her."

The squad of recruits had been taken out to the rifle range for their first try at marksmanship. They knelt at 210 yards and fired. Not a hit. They were moved up to 200 yards. Not a hit. They tried at 100. Not a hit.

"Tenshun!" the sergeant bawled. "Fix bayonets! Charge! It's your only chance."

Friend: "Why are you so jubilant?"

Country Editor: "I just received another fine contribution from Farmer Brown's pen."

Friend: "Huh—what was it?"

Country Editor: "A fine fat pig on subscription."

A new type of villain has been added to the population of New York. It's the blood-sucking vampire bat brought from Panama to the New York Zoological park by Dr. Raymond L. Ditmars. With a body but three inches long and a wing-spread of seven inches, it has a head [illegible] much like an ugly bull-dog with the pointed ears of a bat. It's the only vampire bat ever to be placed on exhibition.

Work starts soon on the seventy-five million dollar Midtown Hudson tunnel to connect Manhattan with New Jersey at a point on the Jersey shore opposite the Empire State building. The tunnel is necessary because the Holland tunnel, two and a half miles south of the new site, will soon be inadequate to meet the traffic needs although it now carries an annual traffic of 12,000,000 cars.

Sign in a store selling second-hand books on Seventh avenue: Sale! Name Your Own Price. If You Don't Buy Here, You're Nuts!

Hail December 5th and the new era of drinking it will bring! Several movements are under way in New York to promote the vogue of refined drinking and leisurely eating "in respectable surroundings with after-dinner speakers invited solely because of their wit, brilliance or charm." One of the organizations is a group formed for charitable purposes and patterned on the order of the English Froth Blowers.

The Chairman of the Board of an immense corporation has a separate office in the tower of a building in the Grand Central zone. No desks there. Just divans, club chairs, fireplace and kitchen. Executives from Wall street and other districts drop in for a drink after "the market" has closed. Advance plans and the lowdown on the financial district are swapped over the glasses.

"Pea-soup fog" in the New York harbor recently tied up the Coast Guard's revenue cutters and left them guessing the probability that rum-runners were at the peak of their activities, for Rum Row, twelve miles out, has been humming in recent days as the runners have sought to cash in ahead of the repeal deadline.

Stand for half an hour in Grand Central station 'most any time and you're bound to see a bit of human interest. Last night it was a woman with streaming, long, bobbed red hair taking manly strides across the main concourse. She wore no stockings and her rouged heels and highly manicured toe nails, also rouged, showed vividly from the real, primitive sandals without heels. As she disappeared down the steps to the lower concourse, four people actually ran to catch up with her for another look. She took the train bound for Stamford, Connecticut.

There's a new racket in town. The so-called cut-price clothing shops of the lower east side have posted "snipers" on Fifth avenue. When a shopper stops to look in a Fifth avenue window, the sniper — usually a plainly-dressed woman — stops to look too. "My, but prices are high," says she to the shopper. "Why, prices are much lower on Division street. Why, there are coats just like that one at such-and-such store at half the price." It's a refinement of the old technique of grabbing a prospect and dragging him bodily into a store—a "hot" prospect, obviously interested in the merchandise on display.

Friend: "Did you suffer much from the recent flood?"

Henry Peck: "I certainly did. I was shut up in the house with my wife for nearly a week."

An angler had a four-hour's tussle with a huge salmon before he was able to land it. When at length he had made sure of his catch he took it home and related his triumph to his wife, and laid special stress on the time it took and the energy he had to expend before he could land the salmon. After he had finished, he waited anxiously for praise. For some moments there was silence, then with a puzzled expression, his wife looked up from her knitting.

"But, my dear," she said, "why didn't you cut the string and get rid of the brute?"

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

TO AN UNGRATEFUL P. C. STUDENT

Editor, The Blue Stocking:

I have just received my copy of The Blue Stocking dated Monday, November 27, 1933. It is always a pleasure to read the old collgee paper, and as an alumnus of our college, I wish to take issue with the student who wrote the audacious, glaring, uncivil, discourteous, crude, ignominous, rude, hypocritical, capricious, whimsical article entitled "Starch." The author certainly must be one of those rare specimens of humanity (and thank goodness they are rare), who is always nagging, grumbling, kicking, murmuring, muttering and never satisfied with the blessings he has or life in general.

In my undergraduate days I attended five schools, and my years at P. C. were most pleasant in every respect. In the various schools which I attended I came in contact with five dieticians and found the very best at Presbyterian College. And while attending school there (1933) I had the privilege of visiting the other outstanding schools in the state, and found that P. C., even during such distressing times, was holding doggedly to her tradition—that of serving the best meals of any South Carolina college, and since leaving the state I have learned that it is more than state-wide.

I would point the "starchy gentleman's" attention to the fact that P. C. is trying to serve the Church in her varied educational needs, and in doing this is giving to the youth of the Church the best educational advantages at the lowest possible cost. I wonder if the author of the disgusting article realizes that P. C. grants some seven to ten thousand dollars worth of student scholarships annually, and for these she is piling up a deficit. I would not be afraid to bet that the "starchy student" is on one of these scholarships, and if he isn't he is certainly affected by them, for through them the total cost of tuition for all students is lowered. You poor, unappreciative student—show me another college that is doing as much for the youth of Church. If you can endow the school with something like five hundred thousand dollars, they will feed you on a silver platter, and serve the meals to you in bed. Until you can do this "keep your trap shut" and don't write such perfidious articles, which shows you up as an ungrateful ass.

As an alumnus who loves his Alma Mater and appreciates all that she has meant to him, I do not propose to stand on the sideline and see her defamed and dishonored by one of her own sons. That dear, competent and efficient matron, with the administration and faculty, is serving the Church in an admirable way. I appreciate the struggle they are making in order to survive. And I pray that P. C.'s noble and sacrificial president and matron may be blessed as they continue to serve God and the Church. And I trust they will NEVER harken to the yelping, whining voice of some ungrateful student.

—"A LOYAL ALUMNUS."

THE BATTLE CONTINUES

Editor, The Blue Stocking:

The war is raging. "Peace, peace, but there is no peace." Will there never be an end? Students and faculty, talking and writing, all as a result of a short letter on "Starch" this reminds me of the little nut that produced the mighty oak.

The writers of the letter had decided to let the thing drop, call truce, or what have you, when [illegible] published additional letters which made them deem it wise to defend themselves. It is for them (the writers) that I am writing this. Many persons have entered this discussion, from the lowest buck private in the rear rank to the college president, some taking the matter seriously and others, with twinkling eye of enjoyment. And there are some whom I, personally, [illegible] pat each side on the back when the other isn't looking, for the sole purpose of pushing a hot argument without allowing themselves to be burned.

It seems rather pathetic to me that in this land of advancement there are still some who would down stand opinion by means of emotional appeal such as that used in the student body meeting on Nov. 29. It seems an insult to our intelligence to print a letter of such illogical reasoning as the first of the two replies last week. It is very amusing that side questions should be made main issues as in the second of last week's replies. To mention of activities and finance merely to suggest possibly a clue to the real reason, and was never stated as a cause. That the phrase quoted that reply was ambiguous and open to misunderstanding is sincerely regretted by the writers.

Most incredible of all, to me, is the fact that there are some in our midst who possess such little reading ability that they read into the letter implications almost criminal against some of the students' best friends. I assure you that these implications were not meant any more than they were written. No feelings were meant to hurt, and no persons "incriminated."

For myself I say: I am looking at the discussion with a "twinkling eye of enjoyment." I am enjoying the interest shown by the student body, which is a sign of awakening towards affairs on the camps. I am enjoying a new life put into the editorial page of The Blue Stocking. And, finally, I am enjoying the comical and ridiculous, the thoughtful and serious actions of human beings toward something to like or dislike. Hoping we shall all laugh together, my friends who wrote "Starch," my friends who took offense, and myself.

—CHAS. E. CARSON

Wild: "Do you remember when that girl was proud of a wasp-like waist?"

Wedmore: "I ought to remember it that was when I got stung."

A new farm hand from the city was told one wintry morning to harness the mule. In the dark he tackled one of the cows instead of the mule. The farmer shouted from the house, "Say, what are you doing?"

"I can't get the collar over the mule's head," yelled the new farm hand. "His ears are frozen."

A black hand letter addressed to a wealthy man demanded $25,000; otherwise they would kidnap his wife. Through error the missive was delivered to a poor laborer by the same name, who replied: "I ain't got no money. But I'm interested in your proposition."

A monologue is a conversation between a student and a professor.

Harvard has enough football equipment, besides 36 tackling dummies and 300 footballs, to outfit 600 men.

During its early days Harvard university required students qualifying for a bachelor of arts degree to be able to translate the Bible from its original form into Latin.

Every time a Colgate player scores a touchdown or blocks a kick in a major game he is presented with a new hat by Coach Andy Kerr.

CHASING THE ATOM

Physicists are still at the game of trying to break up the atom, trying to split the nucleus of that small particle of matter which cannot possibly be seen even with the most powerful of microscopes. This is attempted by bombarding the atom with a stream of electrons, and taking a picture of what happens. Electrons under a great pressure are necessary, so high voltage electricity must be used (voltage is a measure of electrical pressure). The latest machine for this purpose is that built by Dr. Van de Graaf, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He has two large columns, 25 feet high and six feet in diameter, upon which are two hollow aluminum spheres, 15 feet in diameter. By means of friction he produces static electricity on each sphere, the same kind of electricity you can make by moving a comb briskly through your hair, or rubbing a cat's back. Theoretically, there are 5,000,000 volts of plus charges on one sphere and 5,000,000 volts of minus on the other, giving a total of 1,000,000 volts. These opposite charges have an attraction for each other and leap through the air at a tremendous speed. In the actual tests, the electric charges rush through a vacuum tube, in order that there may be no air resistance to interfere. In that mad rush the electrons are supposed to hit the nuclei of the atoms put in the tube to be blasted, and who knows what the result will be?

Charges in a sphere always collect on the outside. That means that the safest place to be is inside the ball, as long as the metal itself is not touched. Therefore, those atom-blasters will sit inside these two spheres and make their photographs and measurements.

NEW WAY TO MAKE MONEY

Believing that experiment is better than theory, the United States Brewing association had a series of tests carried on at the University of Chicago to see is 3.2 is intoxicating. Volunteer students were paid $1 to $3 a day to drink 3.2 beer as directed by Dr. Carlson, in charge. Eight to fourteen bottles were sometimes poured down without stopping. That was real work for three dollars! As a result of the tests, Dr. Carlson concluded that "it is as good as impossible to get drunk on 3.2."

SPEED OF SAP

Professor Huber, of Darmstadt Tech High school, found a simple method of measuring the speed of sap in trees. He found that sap moves faster in the middle of the day, when it is hotter, than in the morning and evening. About six or seven in the morning and evening the rate of flow in a vine is about 30 inches an hour, while around one o'clock it is 28 feet per hour. Rate of flow in different plants varies. In some trees (conifers) it is too slow for him to measure, while in some leafy trees it is 150 feet an hour.

COLLEGE MEN

College men! How sweetly does that appelation ring in time with the showering top vest buttons. College men at last. Freddy Greengills takes on a new dignity.

He turns to his bosom friend who had been only "Jimmy" and speaks—"Ah, . . . Jones . . . " Down the street he walks, rat cap askew. The emblem of the lowly frosh is turned into the glorious badge of superiority . . . college man!

He wears his rat cap home and speaks there with easy familiarity of "Lanky." . . . "Oh, I forgot that you didn't know him. He's the back who made that open-field run for a touchdown in the last game. Well, Lanky says to me, he says, 'Fred, ole pal, ... ' " So he disposes of those almost legendary heroes spoken of so reverently the year before.

Before the season, he speaks carelessly of the "High school team back home—they will do fairly well with practice. Yes, I played . . . " so he refers to the team which he served gratefully and joyfully as—water boy.

He flaunts his pledge button in the eyes of all ,and mentions, unconsciously of course, the number of bids he received — and neglects to mention why he took the least acceptable of all.

He waxes eloquent on the subject of his college. He is almost savagely sensitive to any fancied disparagement of his Alma Mater. Just as acid on metal will sometimes produce a gas (which he, as a student of chemistry, somewhat hazily imagines to be the case) so the spice of tea dances and pep meetings stirs the torpid enthusiasm of the recipient to some reaction, so he seizes upon the school spirit . . . a thing never well developed before.

He raises a mustache, scornfully flaunts it at socials in the face of those, who, being so unfortunate (so he imagines) as to be unable to don hirsute adornment equally ridiculous, feign disgust. Then upon the eve of going home for the week-end, he makes careful use of the instrument made famous by Mr. Gillette. And a very elaborate ritual it is.

He learns to appreciate the arguments at "bull sessions" and to enter into them on the slightest pretext, in order to be able to spring upon "the boys back home" some new word or phrase, with the fell purpose of building up a reputation as an intellectual giant.

He maintains against all comers his claims to superior bruises and paddlings undergone, and proudly speaks of his honorable scars. At school he walks five blocks out of his way to avoid meeting a well-known sophomore, but "Ah, can I take it?" he boasts to the home town boys. He can define at a moment's notice any such term as "cutting the book," "railroading," "diploma," "Christmas present," and "one-two-three."

He meets a few girls at a social, learns their names, and perhaps has a date with one of them. He has never "gone with the girls" much back home, but my, what a ladies man he is when he gets back to his native haunts.

On the whole, he is a fair specimen of greenness, youthful folly, callowness, but, as the early apple, green at first, bids fair to become a fairly creditable pippin, so does he. College man!

ON LYNCHING

The recent lynching that took place in San Jose, California, has aroused a great deal of interest and comment in all secions of the country. While the deed is being condemned in vitreous terms by people in all sections, there is an element found everywhere that agrees with Governor Rolph's statement that the lynching was a most effective warning to criminals that the United States is taking a positive and active stand against kidnapers and organized crime.

The main argument presented by those who condemn the act is the danger of getting the wrong man. To be sure, there is a possibility of killing the wrong man in some cases, but the confessed criminals were pointed out to the party by the jailer in this case. There was not the slightest chance of the party killing the wrong men.

Another argument that the opponents of Governor Rolph present is the breaking down of established law enforcement agencies by the people taking the law into their own hands. But this is not true. Organized crime is so complex and so effective that it can escape justice, unless such drastic measures as lynching are taken. The people en masse no doubt administered more equitable justice to the kidnapers than a court would have done.

The lynching will certainly tend toward producing a decline in the number of kidnapings. Since the lynching occurred there has not been a kidnaping case in the country, whereas during the period before the lynching at least two or three kidnaping cases were reported each week. Criminals of this day may not fear the law, but they do fear the wrath of the people, especially when it is demonstrated as it was in San Jose. The recent motion picture, "This Day and Age," effectively illustrates this point.

Technically, the lynching was a deplorable case of the people taking the law into their own hands; actually it was the most effective blow that has yet been taken at kidnaping.

A GRIN OR TWO

Customer: "Have you anything besides Glustick's corn syrup?"

Grocer: "Why, no, but that's the best brand that comes."

Customer: "Well, it never done me no good — I took six cans of it and my corn's as bad as ever.

Mistress: "So you want to get off to take care of your sick husband. Can't that grown daughter of yours do it?"

Servant: "No, ma'am, she ain't good for nothing around the house, so I just put her out in service."

Hardluck: "I'm just a young fellow that is struggling to make ends meet."

Carenot: "Well, if you're so badly bent financially, it ought to be easy for you."

Mother: "I'm afraid Robert is burning the candle at both ends."

Father: "Huh! That boy has cut the candle in two and lit up all four ends."

Traffic cop: "Hi, here! What in the world do you mean by speeding along like that? Don't you know you are liable to cause an accident? Why don't you use your noodle?"

Sweet Young Thing: "Noodle? Where is it? I've pulled and pushed everyhing on the dashboard, and I couldn't stop it."

Little Harold had been put out on the back porch while his mother cleaned up the lunch dishes.

"Harold, how many times do I have to tell you to stop pulling the cat's tail?" asked the mother.

"Honest, Mom, I'm just holding the tail, the cat is doing the pulling."

Doctor: "How in the world did you get such a black eye?"

Patient: "My wife hit me with a rock."

Doctor: "You wife? That's the first time I ever heard of a woman hitting anything she threw at!"

Patient: "She wasn't throwing at me. She was throwing at a neighbor's cat, and I was standing behind her."

The squad of recruits had been taken out to the rifle range for their first try at marksmanship. They knelt at 210 yards and fired. Not a hit. They were moved up to 200 yards. Not a hit. They tried at 100. Not a hit.

"Tenshun!" the sergeant bawled. "Fix bayonets! Charge! It's your only chance."

Friend: "Why are you so jubilant?"

Country Editor: "I just received another fine contribution from Farmer Brown's pen."

Friend: "Huh—what was it?"

Country Editor: "A fine fat pig on subscription."

A new type of villain has been added to the population of New York. It's the blood-sucking vampire bat brought from Panama to the New York Zoological park by Dr. Raymond L. Ditmars. With a body but three inches long and a wing-spread of about seven inches, it has a head that looks very much like an ugly bull-dog with the pointed ears of a rat. It's the only vampire bat ever to be placed on exhibition.

Work starts soon on the seventy-five million dollar Midtown Hudson tunnel to connect Manhattan with New Jersey at a point on the Jersey shore opposite the Empire State building. The tunnel is necessary because the Holland tunnel, two and a half miles south of the new site, will soon be inadequate to meet the traffic needs although it now carries an annual traffic of 12,000,000 cars.

Sign in a store selling second-hand books on Seventh avenue: Sale! Name Your Own Price. If You Don't Buy Here, You're Nuts!

Hail December 5th and the new era of drinking it will bring! Several movements are under way in New York to promote the vogue of refined drinking and leisurely eating "in respectable surroundings with after-dinner speakers invited solely because of their wit, brilliance or charm." One of the organizations is a group formed for charitable purposes and patterned on the order of the English Froth Blowers.

The Chairman of the Board of an immense corporation has a separate office in the tower of a building in the Grand Central zone. No desks there. Just divans, club chairs, fireplace and kitchen. Executives from Wall street and other districts drop in for a drink after "the market" has closed. Advance plans and the lowdown on the financial district are swapped over the glasses.

"Pea-soup fog" in the New York harbor recently tied up the Coast Guard's revenue cutters and left them guessing the probability that rum-runners were at the peak of their activities, for Rum Row, twelve miles out, has been humming in recent days as the runners have sought to cash in ahead of the repeal deadline.

Stand for half an hour in Grand Central station 'most any time and you're bound to see a bit of human interest. Last night it was a woman with streaming, long, bobbed red hair taking manly strides across the main concourse. She wore no stockings and her rouged heels and highly manicured toe nails, also rouged, showed vividly from the real, primitive sandals without heels. As she disappeared down the steps to the lower concourse, four people actually ran to catch up with her for another look! She took the train bound for Stamford, Connecticut.

There's a new racket in town. The so-called cut-price clothing shops of the lower east side have posted "snipers" on Fifth avenue. When a shopper stops to look in a Fifth avenue window, the sniper — usually a plainly-dressed woman — stops to look too. "My, but prices are high," says she to the shopper. "Why, prices are much lower on Division street. Why, there are coats just like that one at such-and-such store at half the price." It's a refinement of the old technique of grabbing a prospect and dragging him bodily into a store—a "hot" prospect, obviously interested in the merchandise on display.

Friend: "Did you suffer much from the recent flood?"

Henry Peck: "I certainly did. I was shut up in the house with my wife for nearly a week."

An angler had a four-hour's tussle with a huge salmon before he was able to land it. When at length he had made sure of his catch he took it home and related his triumph to his wife, and laid special stress on the time it took and the energy he had to expand before he could land the salmon. After he had finished, he waited anxiously for praise. For some moments there was silence, then with a puzzled expression, his wife looked up from her knitting.

"But, my dear," she said, "why didn't you cut the string and get rid of the brute?"

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

TO AN UNGRATEFUL P. C. STUDENT

Editor, The Blue Stocking:

I have just received my copy of The Blue Stocking dated Monday, November 27, 1933. It is always a pleasure to read the old collgee paper, and as an alumnus of our college, I wish to take issue with the student who wrote the audacious, glaring, uncivil, discourteous, crude, ignominous, rude, hypocritical, capricious, whimsical article entitled "Starch." The author certainly must be one of those rare specimens of humanity (and thank goodness they are rare), who is always nagging, grumbling, kicking, murmuring, muttering and never satisfied with the blessings he has or life in general.

In my undergraduate days I attended five schools, and my years at P. C. were most pleasant in every respect. In the various schools which I attended I came in contact with five dieticians and found the very best at Presbyterian College. And while attending school there (1933) I had the privilege of visiting the other outstanding schools in the state, and found that P. C., even during such distressing times was holding doggedly to her tradition—that of serving the best meals of any South Carolina college, and since leaving the state I have learned that it is more than state-wide.

I would point the "starchy gentleman's" attention to the fact that P. C. is trying to serve the Church in her varied educational needs, and in doing this is giving to the youth of the Church the best educational advantages at the lowest possible cost. I wonder if the author of the disgusting article realizes that P. C. grants some seven to ten thousand dollars worth of student scholarships annually, and for these she is piling up a deficit. I would not be afraid to bet that the "starchy student" is on one of these scholarships, and if he isn't he is certainly affected by them, for through them the total cost of tuition for all students is lowered. You poor, unappreciative student—show me another college that is doing as much for the youth of Church. If you can endow the school with something like five hundred thousand dollars, they will feed you on a silver platter, and serve the meals to you in bed. Until you can do this "keep your trap shut" and don't write such perfidious articles, which shows you up as an ungrateful ass.

As an alumnus who loves his Alma Mater and appreciates all that she has meant to him, I do not propose to stand on the sideline and see her defamed and dishonored by one of her own sons. That dear, competent and efficient matron, with the administration and faculty, is serving the Church in an admirable way. I appreciate the struggle they are making in order to survive. And I pray that P. C.'s noble and sacrifical president and matron may be blessed as they continue to serve God and the Church. And I trust they will NEVER harken to the yelping, whining voice of some ungrateful student.

—"A LOYAL ALUMNUS."

THE BATTLE CONTINUES

Editor, The Blue Stocking:

The war is raging, "Peace, peace, but there is no peace." Will there never be an end? Students and faculty, talking and writing, all as a result of a short letter on "Starch" this reminds me of the little man who produced the mighty oak.

The writers of the letter have decided to let the thing drop, on the truce, or what have you, when I published additional letters which made them deem it wise to defend themselves. It is for them (the writers that I am writing this. Many people have entered this discussion, from the lowest buck private in the rear rank to the college president, some taking the matter seriously and others with a twinkling eye of enjoyment. And there are some whom I, personally, would pat each side on the back when the other isn't looking, for the sole purpose of pushing a hot argument without allowing themselves to be burned.

It seems rather pathetic to me that in this land of advancement there are still some who would down student opinion by means of emotional appeals such as that used in the student body meeting on Nov. 29. It seems an insult to our intelligence to print a letter of such illogical reasoning as the first of the two replies last week. It is very amusing that side questions should be made main issues as in the second of last week's replies. To mention of activities and finance merely to suggest possibly a clue to the real reason, and was never stated as a cause. That the phrase quoted in that reply was ambiguous and open to misunderstanding is sincerely regretted by the writers.

Most incredible of all, to me, is the fact that there are some in our midst who possess such little reading skill that they read into the letter implications almost criminal against one of the students' best friends. I assure you that these implications were not meant any more than they were written. No feelings were meant to be hurt, and no persons "incriminated."

For myself I say: I am looking forward to the discussion with a "chuckling of enjoyment." I am enjoying the interest shown by the student body which is a sign of awakening towards affairs on the camps. I am enjoying the new life put into the editorial page of The Blue Stocking. And, finally, I am enjoying the comical and ridiculous, the thoughtful and serious actions of human beings toward something they like or dislike. Hoping we shall all laugh together, my friends who wrote "Starch," my friends who took the defense, and myself.

—CHAS. E. CARSON

Wild: "Do you remember when a girl was proud of a wasp-like waist?"

Wedmore: "I ought to remember that was when I got stung."

A new farm hand from the city was told one wintry morning to harness the mule. In the dark he tackled one of the cows instead of the mule. The farmer shouted from the house, "So what are you doing?"

"I can't get the collar over the mule's head," yelled the new farm hand. "His ears are frozen."

A black hand letter addressed to a wealthy man demanded $20,000, otherwise they would kidnap his wife. Through error the missive was delivered to a poor laborer by the same name, who replied: "I ain't got no money, but I'm interested in your proposition."

FOR THROAT PROTECTION—FOR BETTER TASTE

TODAY and TOMORROW

by FRANK PARKER STOCKBRIDGE

LIBERTY — In New Hands

A good many years ago a colored man who served as doorman in a popular New York store, and whose courtesy and unfailing smile made him popular with the customers, told me he had taken a federal civil service examination for the position of elevator operator.

A little later I saw him and asked him about the government job. "They didn't appointed me to go 'way out West," he said, "and I can't do that, nohow. So I tossed the job down."

"Whereabouts out West did they want you to go?" I asked.

"Fort Wood, wherever that is," he replied. He was chagrined when I told him that Fort Wood was the official name of Bedloe's island, in New York harbor, on which the gigantic statue of Liberty stands!

What reminds me of the incident was the announcement a little while ago that Liberty has been taken out of the custody of the army and put under the care of the department of the interior. It is a part of the economy plans of the government. Washington thinks the army is rather extravagant.

HOUSES — Another Room

"One more room for every family in the United States with an income under $2,000 a year," is the slogan suggested by Professor O. M. W. Sprague, as a means of stimulating the building industry.

I agree with Professor Sprague, that there are plenty of houses for people who have incomes above $5,000 a year, but not enough, or not good enough, houses for people who have to live on a lower scale.

To carry out such a project will mean more economical methods of building, but I have been surprised to discover how many great business organizations are at work on ways to solve the problem of cheap, attractive and durable homes.

I expect to see the day when a completely modern five-room or six-room house, with land enough for gardening, can be bought in the vicinity of any big city for $4,000 or less.

SILVER — Gold's Partner

This is probably the last time I shall refer to silver in this column. Two and one-half years ago I predicted that silver would come back to its former monetary status and rise from the then price of around 26 cents an ounce to somewhere near its average price for the past forty years, of around 60 cents an ounce.

A little group of which I am a member has been studying the silver question intensively for three years and passing our conclusions on to men in a position to do something about it. Today, whenever the subject of the international monetary situation is publicly discussed, almost everyone who is regarded as an authority includes the rehabilitation of silver as a part of the program of recovery.

I think the case for silver has been won, and that the white metal has at last been lifted from the political degradation into which it was cast by the defeat of Bryan, to its proper place as a partner with gold in the thinking of economists and the monetary systems of the world.

LOTTERY — The Idea Grows

The French government lottery is making poor men rich and pulling money painlessly from the pockets of millions for the treasury. Iceland is about to set up a state lottery. In Italy last year I saw vendors, mostly women, on almost every corner selling lottery tickets. In Cuba, Mexico, most of the Latin countries, lotteries are established means of raising revenue.

The proposal has been made by men who are to be taken seriously, to establish a modified form of lottery under government auspices in this country. Frank A. Vanderlip, famous banker, suggests a scheme whereby there would be no losers, but the winners, instead of cash, would get a life income and all the others would get credit toward the purchase of government bonds.

I don't imagine public sentiment in America would approve of anything which savored of taking chances; yet the people of this country are more ready to gamble in stocks and in other ways than those of almost any other nation. It's a queer world.

GLEE CLUB MAKES DOWN-STATE TOUR

on Wednesday, being at Darlington Wednesday night.

Thursday morning the club proceeded on to Sumter where they gave a performance at the Girls' high school.

The orchestra played everywhere the glee club performed except at Sumter. Under the direction of K. Mills, the "Bandwagon" has developed into one of the finest ever produced at P. C., and it was well received everywhere it played. Dr. McSween has declared it to be the best orchestra he has yet heard here.

The club will make another tour soon after Christmas to another section of the state and is planning to make a trip to several Georgia cities in the spring.

AUTHORSHIP OF ALMA MATER IS DETERMINED

his attention to this fact, adding that this was what made the music hard to sing. With that I started improvising a tune to fit the words. Joe was enthusiastic over the new tune and asked that I set it down—all of which was done right then. When the glee club met, I showed them the music and they entered into the same enthusiastic spirit that Joe had shown. I think I took a copy of the melody to Anderson with me and harmonized it properly for them. The last I saw of the song was when I turned it over to the assistant director of the glee club. It was perhaps six or seven years later that I happened to be in Clinton for a baseball or football game and during an interval I heard the fellows sing this familiar old melody. After searching the archives of my memory I remembered that it was my own . . . At the same time I wrote the present Alma Mater there was considerable dissatisfaction with the 'singableness' of the song then in use. I got this from Joe Stokes and hence I wrote the new one. It might be interesting to you to know that the melody was written down just as it came to me, and I made no change in it after the first writing (something unusual for me). It was all done (except for harmonizing) in about ten minutes."

Aside from the fact that it is their own, Presbyterian college men have a right to pride in their Alma Mater for an additional reason. So far as it has been able to ascertain, this is the only college in the state which may boast of the music to its Alma Mater being original and written especially for the occasion. An instance of another college adopting a tune to its hymn of loyalty is that of Carolina—"Flow Gently, Sweet Afton." Wofford, Erskine, Queens-Chicora, and Citadel all use music that is identical with that of Cornell. Originality is scarce in this day and age, and worthy of pride when possessed.

STAFF MAKES NOMINATIONS

Guess, Dillard and Hudson Nominated By Blue Stocking Staff For High Posts Next Semester. Election To Take Place Next Wednesday.

The election for a new satff for The Blue Stocking will be held in chapel Wednesday morning.

Officers to be elected by the student body are editor, business manager, and managing editor. The editor and business manager will come from the present junior class or rising senior class. The managing editor will be a sophomore or rising junior.

Nominations from The Blue Stocking staff for the offices are Frank Guess for editor, Henry Dillard for business manager and Colin Hudson for managing editor. At the student body meeting Wednesday any member of the body will have a chance to nominate another candidate from the floor for any one of the three offices. In case no other nomination is made the candidates as nominated by the staff will automatically be chosen.

It is expected that little opposition will be experienced by the staff nominees. All are experienced and capable, each having been on the weekly staff since their entrance in school. Guess is now serving his third year and is now managing editor of the paper. Dillard became assistant advertising manager of the paper upon his entrance in school three years ago and has served on the business staff ever since. Hudson is in his second year as a staff member and gained a position as assistant editor at the beginning of the present school term, where he has performed good work.

Hosemen Arrange Cage Schedule

Blue Stockings Meet Every State Team. Wofford Contests Tonight In Spartanburg.

A 17-game basketball schedule for the Presbyterian Blue Stockings has been announced by the athletic council.

The Hose opened with Carolina last Thursday in Columbia, and played Clover here Saturday night. Tonight the varsity and freshmen play Wofford at Spartanburg.

The remaining games follow:

January 15: Georgia at Clinton.
January 16: Furman at Clinton (varsity and frosh).
January 18: Erskine at Due West (varsity and frosh).
January 20: Georgia at Athens.
January 31: Clemson at Clemson.
February 1: Erskine at Clinton (varsity and frosh).
February 2: Furman at Greenville (varsity and frosh).
February 9: Charleston at Charleston.
February 10: The Citadel at Charleston.
February 12: Charleston at Clinton.
February 13: Newberry at Clinton (varsity and frosh).
February 15: The Citadel at Clinton.
February 17: Wofford at Clinton (varsity and frosh).
February 20: Newberry at Newberry (varsity and frosh).

Rat Court Play Begins Wednesday

The Go-Clemson basketball schedule opens with Wofford at Spartanburg on January 10 and the freshmen team's schedule with Carolina frosh at Columbia on March 31. The complete frosh schedule as announced by the athletic department are as follows:

Basketball

Jan. 10: Wofford at Spartanburg.
Jan. 16: Furman at Clinton.
Jan. 18: Erskine at Due West.
Feb. 1: Erskine at Clinton.
Feb. 2: Furman at Greenville.

April 7: Clemson at Clemson.
April 21: Furman at Greenville.
April 28: Newberry at Clinton.
May 4 and 5: State meet at Due West.

Students Asked To Cooperate

The student body is asked to cooperate with the athletic department during afternoon boxing and basketball practice by remaining off the basketball court and out of the boxing room, Coach Johnson says.

Spectators may sit in the gallery to watch basketball, but because of lack of space in the boxing room no spectators will be allowed.

Johnstone Speaks On Recovery Acts

Chapel Speaker Gives Explanation of Roosevelt's Program For National Recovery.

Allan Johnstone, a member of President Roosevelt's emergency relief organization, spoke in chapel Wednesday morning on the recovery program.

Mr. Johnstone spoke of the magnitude of the undertaking and pointed out the difficulties that are encountered in the effort to guide a great nation out of the depths of depression.

"The condition of the United States in this world depression is much more serious than that of any other nation," he said. "The terrible condition of more than 18,000,000 citizens on the relief rolls of our nations is unprecedented in the history of the United States."

The recovery program, the speaker pointed out, consists of four phases, all of which are mutually supporting. The first is relief. This part of the program purposes to care for the destitute until other conditions enable them to take care of themselves.

The second is the much-discussed NRA, of which the AAA is a part. What the NRA is to industry, the AAA is to agriculture. The NRA provides for the operation of industry under self promulgated codes of fair competition, the most important development of which is the abolition of child labor. The AAA proposes a planned system of agriculture to cut down surplus production.

Next is public works. The CWA, which put four millions to work in six weeks, is part of this program. The main part is the development of planned programs of public works in every county in the United States which will be permanent.

The last phase is the readjustment of the nation's foreign trade. This is to be accomplished through legislation the president hopes to get through the present session of congress.

Clemson Is First P. C. Water Foe

With a new diving board installed, both varsity and freshman swimming teams are settling down to hard work in preparation for their opening meet, Feb. 3. Several excellent performers of last year will again be with the varsity. Most of these were members of last year's team, which won the state championship.

The varsity and freshmen teams open the season with Clemson at Clinton on February 3. The schedule is as follows:

Feb. 3: Clemson at Clinton (varsity and frosh).
Feb. 23: Clemson at Clemson (varsity and frosh).
March 1: Furman at Clinton (varsity and frosh).
March 15: Furman at Greenville (varsity and frosh).

Honor System Is Discussed At Y Meet

At the regular Y. M. C. A. meeting on last Thursday night, there was an open discussion of the honor system. The discussion was led by Bob Lyons, president of the student body, who gave a brief history of the system that has been used since 1925.

A number of students voiced their opinions as to the value of present system in the student body. A committee of students to do away with

Debaters Begin Year's Work Soon

Practice Starts With Beginning of Second Semester. Two Contests Already Arranged.

The Presbyterian college debating squad will get down to work with the beginning of the second semester, it was announced last week by Professor Swedenberg, debating coach.

Interest in this activity is at a high pitch this year. Several students have already indicated their desire to try out for the team and the co-eds have made arrangements to have a team of their own.

Meets with Maryville college (Maryville, Md.) and Winthrop college have been scheduled, with several others pending, among them Mercer university, besides other institutions in this state. No meets for the co-eds have been arranged to date, but interested girls are working toward this end and expect to announce a schedule of arguments soon.

According to Cecil Lawter, president of the local chapter of Pi Kappa Delta, the query to be used in all debates engaged in by P. C. will be the regular Pi Kappa Delta query for 1934: Resolved: That the powers of the president of the United States should be substantially increased as a settled policy.

The debating season begins in March and runs through April, so plenty of time is had for thorough preparation of briefs before that time. Practice debates will be held by candidates for the team in which the team to represent P. C. will be selected.

Since 1924, when the local chapter was installed, Pi Kappa Delta has taken charge of intercollegiate debating. Professor H. T. Swedenberg, one of the first presidents of the local chapter, is now serving as debating coach.

The complete schedule of intercollegiate arguments will be announced later. Anyone interested in trying out for the team should see Professor Swedenberg or Cecil Lawter.

Alpha Psi Delta Initiates Seven

The newly formed co-ed organization, Pi Kappa Delta, has initiated seven new members, bringing the total membership to thirteen.

The new members are Dolly Milling, [illegible] Mary Dunlap Lawton, [illegible] Anne Mary D. Wardlaw, [illegible] Mary Lou Wilson, [illegible] Mary Lou Wilson, [illegible] president.

Lawter Hangs Out Shingle

Cecil B. Lawter, widely publicized recently as a one-man organization, now lays claim to another distinction.

He is Presbyterian college's only undergraduate notary public.

A license was issued to Lawter last summer and he has since acted in his official capacity several times. He has yet to perform a marriage ceremony, however, he says, although he has been engaged to do a little knot tying in the spring, still some months off.

Lawter's headquarters at present is at 36 Calvert avenue.

Rifle Team Season Starts This Week

Mail Order Matches On Tap With Auburn, Lehigh and Iowa State. Sophs On Squad.

The 1934 rifle team season begins for the Presbyterian college marksmen this week with three mail order matches on tap.

Teams to be fired this week are: Alabama Polytechnic, Lehigh University, and Iowa State University.

The season for the sharpshooters will run through March with matches being fired each week. Several shoulder-to-shoulder matches are contemplated, with prospects of the team journeying to Clemson for a contest on the outdoor range, using the .30 calibre rifle.

Work has been virtually completed on a local outdoor range behind Judd hall on the site of the proposed new tennis courts. Target racks have been constructed and a barrier thrown up behind. Freshmen military students under the direction of Sergeant Young are responsible for this work.

When the weather permits, firing will be done on the outdoor range at both the 100-foot and the regulation 50-foot ranges.

A fifteen-man team will fire practically all the matches, with the ten high scores being taken as the team's mark. In some matches a five-man team will be used. Five men will fire in the Hearst Trophy competition in the spring and ten men will fire in the Corps Area competition.

The men selected for the squad in the elimination match finished last week are as follows: T. T. Upshur, R. N. Belk, R. W. Forehand, L. E. Anderson, F. M. Gregg, J. McClary, W. B. Morrow, E. K. Pitman, J. E. Ratchford, P. M. Tiller, and C. B. Elliott.

T. F. Carothers, J. G. Jeanes, E. M. Gregg, H. S. Odom and T. H. Wingate are automatically members of the team by virtue of their having won letters last year.

Alumni Journey In Foreign Lands

Rev. Carl W. McMurray, formerly of Atlanta, Ga., is now in Edinburgh, Scotland, obtaining his degree in Biblical Archaeology at the university there. During the summer of last year Mr. McMurray, who received his bachelor's degree in the class of [illegible] had charge of one of the [illegible] camps in the Holy Land. After the completion of the camp Mr. McMurray remained in Scotland to study.

Mr. McMurray is a graduate of P. C. and has the distinction of being the first editor of The Blue Stocking. He plans to return to the United States in the near future.

Rev. J. D. Henderson, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church of Spartanburg, S. C., a member of the class of [illegible] for one year during which time he will make a trip around the world. Mr. Henderson, formerly pastor of the Second Presbyterian church of Columbia, graduated at Presbyterian college in 1921, and since obtaining his degree in the seminary has been pastor of the Second Church of Spartanburg.

BOXERS TACKLE HEAVY CARD

Georgia, Florida, Clemson, Carolina and Citadel To Furnish Opposition for Mitten Slingers. Only One Home Match Scheduled. Veterans Report.

The Presbyterian college boxing team this season will tackle the most complete and toughest schedule that any Blue Stocking festival squad has faced in the history of the sport here.

Matches have been scheduled with five foes, four of them in foreign territory. The University of Florida and the University of Georgia will be met during the same week in their respective home arenas. Then less than a week later the Hosemen engage a tough rival in the Clemson Tigers, again away from home.

On Tuesday, February 13, the Florida engagement is scheduled and on Saturday of the same week, February 17, Coach Johnson journeys to Athens to take on the Georgia Bulldogs. The following Thursday, February 22, the season ends with the ever-interesting fracas at Clemson. The only home match listed is with the Carolina Gamecocks, who gained a victory over the locals last season by the narrow margin of one point. The other state bout considered is with The Citadel in Charleston. This bout is only tentative, but it is believed that the contract will be closed in the near future.

This is the first time that either Florida or Georgia have appeared on the P. C. boxing schedule. Both have been regular opponents of the Blue Stockings on the track for several years.

Strong Team Expected

With five experienced men back from last year's varsity squad and several promising sophomores on hand for workouts, prospects appear bright for an aggregation of leather pushers that will give a good account of itself as it goes through its unprecedented schedule.

Bill Clark and Bob Sims, last year's champions in the middle and heavyweight classes, along with Captain Harry Bolick and Jimmy Seagle, who is beginning his second season as a member of the leather and nose industry, will be looked to by P. C. backers for several victories. Wee Wyman, who has fought in the bantamweight group is the other experienced hand in the fold.

Workouts last week indicated that Sims, who fought last year just over the lightheavy limit, will be able to get down to the lighter class for at least a portion of the battles. In this event, Captain Bolick will be worked into the card as a middleweight, provided he can lose the surplus poundage, and "Soupy" Millsap, a huge mauler who has lately been showing promise, will take care of the [illegible] and class assignments.

The complete varsity boxing schedule follows:

Jan. 20 at [illegible]
Jan. 27 The Citadel at [illegible]
Feb. 3 Florida U. at [illegible]
Feb. 17 Georgia U. at Athens
Feb. 22 Clemson at [illegible]

Carolina Licks Hose In Opener

Presbyterian College's basketball season got off to a rather inauspicious start in Columbia Thursday night when Carolina's tall quintet passed the ball over, under and around the Blue Stockinged midgets, and scored almost at will. The Hose displayed a good brand of ball in the face of overwhelming odds but Carolina's team enabled them to throw [illegible] before the game ended. Carlson Bell, Carolina star, was high point man of the game for P. C., leading his teammates in scoring and playing a high-class defensive game.

This week's simile: To disappear as rapidly as paper in Professor Sturgeon's first-year chemistry class.

THE COLLEGIAN COMES TO LIFE

The fact that it was possible for The Collegian to be issued at this early date with prospects in sight for another, perhaps two more issues, before the end of the present school term indicates a revival of interest in this form of activity that we view with pleasure.

Creative writing, sister to debating and oratory in development of the self-expression which is a primary purpose of a college education, was indulged in so sparingly of late that it was generally conceded that there was no longer a place on the campus for a literary publication; and in the first draft of a student activities budget no provision was made for it, so we are told. However ,plans went on and contributions began to come in to the editors. Faced with this evidence of student interest, the administration made appropriation for the purpose of the publication. Some advertisements were sold, and thus the January issue of The Collegian, literary magazine of Presbyterian College was made possible.

The staff of The Collegian deserves praise for its work on the winter issue of the magazine.

The publication, unlike many of its predecessors, achieves a balance in the types of material used. Neither stories nor essays predominate its pages; and the sprinkling of poetry adds the finishing touch which makes for a pleasing makeup. The several cuts, made from linoleum by a member of the staff, add life to the pages as only illustrations can. The art work, done by Robert McLees, a member of the freshmen class, is the best that has appeared in any issue of the magazine.

But the publication is commendable not only for its physical makeup but also for the character of the material contained therein. Of the four stories and four essays used, none seem to have been thrown in as "fillers," to use a printshop term. All are worthwhile literary compositions that well deserve space in a college publication.

From Santa Monica Junior College exam papers: A taxidermist is a kind of thick fog; a toreador is a really bad storm; pooling — a practice indulged in by young men about town.

WHY NOT MORE CHAPEL SPEAKERS

Four months of the school year have passed; and so far a total of one outside speaker has been heard here.

It seems to us that a very educational feature of college life is being neglected. Men who have come into the past have brought messages that were interesting and helpful and [illegible] to class." (Quotations from Y. M. C. A. meeting last Tuesday.) I suppose they want "he-men" who will teach the students to "fear" to cheat.

No, gentlemen, fear is not the policy we need. Signed pledges will not do it. We must have the fundamentals of right and wrong, of help and harm, of Society and the Individual taught to us. We cannot take away guns and expect no war; we must find those impulses and instincts, those desires, which cause hatred and killing, and remedy them. We cannot eradicate cheating by scratching the surface with pledges, fear, "he-man" mob emotionalism; we must dig down underneath and unearth those driving forces which produce it, and by careful education eliminate the cause.

lation, or perhaps—and we emphasize the perhaps—because local civic clubs have neglected this service opportunity, few nationally, or even statewide, known figures are brought to Clinton. Intellectual, political and economic leaders make addresses in towns of larger size and students located in those places have the opportunity of hearing them.

It is not so here. The only chance P. C. students get to hear worthwhile outside speakers is in the college chapel; and so far in the present school year this opportunity has been lacking. Mr. Johnstone's talk last week on the economic recovery program was the one and only.

We do not know who is responsible for securing outside speakers, or even whether any one person or group is responsible; but we know that a wonderful opportunity to provide the student body with worthwhile educational and interesting chapel programs is being neglected.

About this time it is a consolation to know that Limbergh flunked out of the University of Wisconsin; Dr. W. J. Mayo, of the Mayo clinic, flunked out of the University of Michigan medical school; and Stewart Edward White and Franklin P. Adams were likewise given their walking papers from the S. L. A. college of the same institution during their freshman years.

OPEN FORUM

THE DOUBLE-CHECK HONOR SYSTEM

What we need is a double honor system. You know, a reenforcement, sort of. For a number of years we have been playing around with a so-called honor system in which everyone agrees to uphold no one cares what. Oh, not everyone—just 99 out of 100. And all the time we have a student government, with the faculty the highest authority. Also we have a student council, insignificant though it be. What we should do is get a larger group of students to take the place of the sometimes too watchful eye of the professor and the occasional hesitance of the council. In other words, a vigilance committee, say, of about 50.

In the present "system" everyone signs a pledge to uphold the constitution of the student body. But of course this is just done for show, to get our names on something—it doesn't really mean anything. What we must do is get this vigilance committee of 50 to sign a new pledge to uphold their previous pledges. This would give us a double honor system. There might even be added an extraordinarily special group—say, 25 of these 50—to sign a third pledge to carry out their second pledges that they carry out the first. This would put an extra check on the double-check plan.

In some such way as this it might even be a good idea to have some of the people of Clinton (and other towns, too) band together and agree to uphold the Constitution of the United States, and then form another special group to see that they carry out their noble intentions.

Now seriously, gentlemen, since the question of cheating has been lifted to the limelight it seems that we must come to some decision. One method of bringing about the Utopian idea of a cheatingless Presbyterian College is to get 50 students to sign a pledge to enforce Art. X of our constitution, that is, to agree not to cheat, and to turn up anyone whom they see cheating. The 50 who will sign this have already put their signatures to a pledge that they will enforce the whole constitution, "rules of the institution"; but the idea seems prevalent that a second signing will give them double honor or better intentions of fulfilling their promises. If this be true, perhaps some of us should sign a dozen or more times.

It is a significant fact that this new pledge includes only cheating. If I should sign, I feel that I should be saying with the rest, "I am not upholding the honor system, but denouncing cheating." Yet they cry for the "Honor system." And some I know personally, who are fighting so vigorously for this "new deal" are at the same time violating other parts of our system, especially in regard to drinking, which to me is offtimes far worse than cheating.

Don't misunderstand me. I am not advocating cheating; I am wholeheartedly in favor of its abolishment. But the method — there's the difference. You can't have peace by signing peace pacts; you can't abolish cheating by signing pledges. The advocates of the new plan want "men with guts enough to turn up even their own mother," yet they want such a system "that he (each student) will be as [illegible] as class." (Quotations from Y. M. C. A. meeting last Tuesday.) I suppose they want "he-men" who

After the Purdue football game, Mayor Harry D. Breene, of Iowa City, said to the quarterback, Joe Laws, of the Iowa team:

"You can have any city job you want except mine."

Said Joe: "I've always wanted to be a fireman."

Joe got his wish last week. The mayor made him honorary chief of the fire department.

Lehigh

Fifty-six Lehigh University students, arrested in fighting with Lafayette College students, have been suspended by the university.

Fights between students of the two institutions, ancient and bitter gridiron rivals, have been almost annual affairs around the time of the annual grid clash between the two schools.

Harvard

Protest against the ancient rule which virtually bars giving an "H" to a varsity man on any Harvard team unless he has participated in the annual Harvard-Yale meet was made recently by the Harvard Crimson, undergraduate newspaper.

"Though the contests with Yale still occupy the dominant position on Harvard athletic schedules," the Crimson said, "they are no longer the sole aim of the varsity program. There ought to be a revision of the present unjust arrangement which permits a man to go without reward even though he has participated in all the games except that with Yale."

Yale

At the Yale-Princeton football game at New Haven some weeks ago alumni and students of the two institutions were busy cheering their respective teams when an autogiro lazily chugged overhead with a huge crimson banner trailing behind.

The banner said: "Send your son to Harvard."

Harvard and Princeton for a few years past have been out of sorts with each other.

Barnard

Tests made at Barnard College this year show that freshman women are better in jumping, throwing, running and tumbling than freshman women at the college ten years ago.

The average freshman this year is 17 years old, 5 feet 3 inches tall, and weighs 120 pounds.

Peking

Men students at the Pekin National University (China) are threatening to strike because an order has been promulgated forbidding co-eds visiting men in their dormitory rooms.

Johns Hopkins

Two medical college co-eds at Johns Hopkins used ether instead of a hatchet on their Christmas turkey and as a result ate ham sandwiches instead of the expected feast. When they plucked the feathers from the bird, it revived and jumped out the kitchen window.

Georgia

A University of Georgia law student, tiring of mock trials, recently precipitated a real one by crowning a fellow student with a soft drink bottle when said student refused to pay a $1 debt. The affair cost the law student $10 but he obtained a partial return on his money by persuading the judge to help him prepare his briefs for the next day.

Coach McMillian Loses His Father

The student body expresses its heartfelt sympathy to Coach Lonnie McMillian in his recent bereavement.

Mr. McMillian's father died at Prescott, Ark., during the Christmas holidays.

(Frank Johnston in Disguise)

On account of a very serious memory lapse over the holidays the vagrant editor of our woeful paper has found it necessary that a new series of sketches from life be written. So, with malice toward none and absolutely no foresight, we take pleasure in presenting the first of these little incidences from the days of long ago. A series of simple sketches designed to make the world a better place to live in, and to show the seamy side of life—a few pictures of life's other side, as it were. With absolutely no apologies, we present the first—

THE STORY OF 'ALCIBIADES
or
Good Little Girls Should Stay at Home

One summer not so long ago it was my good fortune to spend some months in the state of Coma, and while there I heard from various and sundry sources a group of tales that have to be told, tales that once a man hears he is not able to keep to himself, but must pass on in the hope that some one may be benefitted by the great truths that are to be found in them. Such a tale is the story of Alcibiades, a city gal who went wrong in the country. The story as it was told to me by "Dead-Eye" Bill follows:

"It was the spring of '66 when I first came to Coma, the year of the big flood and such a sight that met my eye has never been seed afore or since. The houses were all gutted by the flood and were lying slaunchwise and antigoglin all thru the town. Now, mind you, stranger, this town—Perpetual was her name—Perpetual, Coma, had been the beauty spot of the whole valley, but now it was only a shadow of its former self. Right away I got mixed up in the plans for building the town back; cause I was allers a natural joiner so I just mixed right in and hope. I never was one to raise sand but when it come to helping people I was just a leetle ray o' sunshine going about and scattering happiness. Them was simple days back then, son, and we thought that the first and biggest need of Perpetual was a up-to-date saloon and amusement center. Well, all the men folks was for it, but ever last woman in the town was agin it. They was allers going on about the evils of strong drink but it allers pear'd to me like if a man was a durn fool and couldn't take his drams a-standin' he could do the next best thing and take 'em a settin'. But as I was a-saying, the females was dead agin it and was fer leaving the settlement. Howsoever that was fore the days of 'women's suffrage' and they never had no say-so in the matter. Now, son, many hands make light work and fore you knowed it we had a first-class establishment going full blast. They was fun fer all and no holts barred. A night never passed without there was some sort of plain and fancy fighting and I remember one night when some of the boys, in a playful mood, rounded up seven head of Mexicans and lynchin' 'em. That was jest too much fer the good women. They didn't mind the lynching of the critters so much, but the boys jest let 'em hang and in a climate like this that don't do so well. So they ups and decides that what us men folks needed was the refinin' influoence of religion, and just to keep 'em quiet we ups and builds a church and old Sam Payzam he gives' em a organ fer the church out of the saloon.

"We fellers thought that now our troubles was over since they had a church house they'd keep still, but not them women; they was out to reform the world and we was to be the fust, as they called it, to feel 'the great joy that comes from serving others and living the noble life.' One day the stage come a-rolling to a stop in front of old Sam's saloon and a tall, thin, kinda scared looking fellow got out. I knowed right away he was the new sky pilot, 'Minister' the women called him, but you could look at that feller and tell by the gleam in his eye that he was out to save folks from anything, any time, whether they wanted to be saved or not. He walks into old Sam's saloon and says, 'My man, you are the child of the devil.'

"Course old Sam was some tuck back but not fer long, 'cause he was one that was right clever when he was cornered. 'Well, tell my old man. "Howdy," ' he snorts, and bangs the parson over the head with a bottle of Old Crow. Well, the news got round that the new parson had lost a convert and his own life in the bargain and there was great weeping among the women on account of the preacher's sudden departure and amongst the boys 'cause Sam had busted such a lot of good whiskey over his head when next or that new fangled prep would a-done just as good.

"For once a woman set her mind on somethin' all h—— ain't a-gonna stop her. The ladies announced next day that there was to be a new parson in come the next Monday. Everbody was on hand to get a look at the new leader in the 'movement fer righteousness' as all the boys called it, and they was never more surprised in all their lives when they seen a female git off'n the stage. She was as purty as a picture and I seen right away that the church was gonna be filled the next meetin'. Lots of the boys jined in with her jest to get to hold her hand when she welcomed them into the 'seelect circle of the blest.' But there was a lots of holdouts and she raved and ranted fer 'bout two weeks but they still 'kept to their wicked ways' and wouldn't come into the circle of the blest.

"One of her wust customers was a gambler in Sam's joint who she hounded day and nite, but to no avail. He was satisfied as a sinner and would take his chances on salvation. She prayed fer him, the women prayed fer him, and the boys who had 'departed from their wicked ways' tried to git him to jine, but he stood fast and the parson seen she couldn't git him no other way so she went into the 'den of vice and iniquity like a lamb goin' to the slaughter' as the good women said. Well, this gamblin' kid never let on like he seen her till she comes up and says, 'I'll bet my year's salary agin your soul.' Now, he knowed she didn't git but $600 a year, but he never knowed what his soul was wuth, so he tuck her up. Of course, she lost, but as time went on she becomes a better gambler and soon he was just one jump ahead of her and knowed something had to be done, so he ups and shoots the works one night and the gal lost, but she was dead game and she married this gambler chap and today they got a son, and if you're ever out Frisco way drop in at the Last Chance saloon. But be careful, son, 'cause he'll quote the Lord's word to you and git you so intrusted in his talk that he'll save your soul and win your dough and send you away a pauper but a member of 'the select circle of the blest.' "

Crooks Find Pastor Foxy

At least two members of London's underworld have great respect for American travelers as the result of an adventure in that city by Rev. J. D. Henderson, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church at Spartanburg and a P. C. graduate of 1922.

Shortly before Christmas, Mr. Henderson was approached on a London street by two pious-looking gentlemen who professed an urgent need of the sum of 70 pounds for some charity with which Henderson was acquainted. He complied with the request and did not realize that he had been duped until he read in the afternoon paper a warning of the operations of a pair of crooks who solicited funds under false pretenses.

Being Scotch, Mr. Henderson had no intention of giving up such a sum without an attempt at retrieval. He carefully rid himself of a mustache, donned a set of plain glass specks and, completely altered in appearance, set out for the spot where the 70 pounds had been lost.

True to his expectations, the same gentlemen bobbed up with the same proposition.

"Oh yeah!" cried Mr. Henderson, as he grabbed the two and held them until the arrival of a bobbie (policeman to you).

CAMPUS NOTES

Colin Hudson, who is recovering from burns received just before Christmas holidays, arrived back on the campus Wednesday.

Mrs. B. W. Covington, of Florence, visited her son, Ben, on Monday evening.

John Glenn, of Spartanburg, is a new member of the junior class. He is a former student at Clemson.

Otis Ramsey, of Covington, Ga., visited James Gardner last week.

Floyd Surles, a Furman student, was the guest of Ernest Propst Monday evening.

Roy Forehand is suffering from a sprained ankle acquired in basketball practice Tuesday night.

MISS McQUISTON WEDS MAC ADAIR TUESDAY

In a beautiful ceremony, marked with dignity and simplicity, Miss LaVerne McQuiston, of Clinton, became the bride of Mac Adair. The wedding took place at the home of Dr. and Mrs. L. Ross Lynn on last Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock. Dr. Lynn, pastor of the bridge, officiated.

Immediately after the ceremony the couple left for a trip to Florida, after which they will be at home in Clinton.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Cora McQuiston, a member of the staff at Thornwell orphanage. Since completing her education she has held a secretarial position with a firm engaged in promoting educational campaigns.

The groom is a graduate of Presbyterian college and is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Adair, of Clinton. He is a member of the firm of Hipp & Adair, Clinton merchants.

OBSERVATIONS

And now we hear of the poor sap who went home Christmas to his girl, "You know, sweetheart, I am just crazy about you." But some one else had come into her life since he had been away and she replied, "I always knew you were crazy about something; but I never thought you would have the nerve to blame it on me."

But you had heard that one before, I suppose, and consider it a bit old? Well, in that case, just remember that the Grand Canyon is a bit old too, but folks tell me that it is a good stunt yet. Now, by hang, if you have heard that one, you can write your own column and see if anyone cares.

At last we have figured out a means by which ministers can boost their Sunday collection. We will admit that it is a most simple plan, but we maintain that it will work just the same. Here is the idea: every minister is to do all he can to get each young man in the congregation to bring a young lady to church every Sunday. When he gets this done the rest comes easy. We might say that a close observation of a representative number of P. C. students has led us to find that the collection from such "attended" students is to the collection of non-attended student in a ratio of 25 to 0. That is to say, the first group gives about two bits while the last group gives the naught. Yep, "strange but true," that's the word.

There are about three more issues of this paper by the present staff. About a week after that and exams will be over and after that there are only about four or five months until the summer vacation. Now, isn't that something to think about!

I would bet my bottom dollar that there are a host of men on our campus right now who would forfeit one-half of their kingdom to be where they were this time last week. But before you agree or disagree with me, just remember that one-half of nothing is nothing.

The college magazine came out recently. We had just read a magazine from a girl's college in the state and found it fascinating to see the marked difference in the topics chosen by the representatives of the two schools. As a general rule, the girls had written on "love," while the boys had written almost invariably on trouble and disaster. At any rate, we concluded that the young men were thinking of the things that would confront them after marriage, while the girls were concerned with the troubles they will meet before they make that "big venture."

TO CONDUCT CHAPEL

The chapel hour for the next three Wednesday mornings will be sponsored by the Y. M. C. A. as one of its regular features. The following men will lead the program: H. M. Wilson, Jan. 10; Cliff Johnson, Jan. 17; Ernest Arnold, Jan. 31 (after exam week).

Up in the 50's on Broadway stands a girl with the biggest wistful eyes when the cops don't make her move on. She sells Old English lavender.

In terms of population per acre, Park avenue is much more densely populated than some of the worst slum areas in the city.

We nominate for violent obliteration: The merchant of a town in a valley of Long Island who put up an enormous sign tha reads:

Rudy Valley Meat Market.

In dry-dock at the boat works up on the Harlem river that separates Manhattan from the Bronx, are some simple looking boats that might be grown up models of the first boat you whittled out of a stick of wood. They have no cabins on their flat, long decks, and the only thing that looks like the beginning of a bride is a wind-break and a rudimentary roof over the wheel and binnacle. They're painted a battleship grey and their decks are but a few inches above the waterline. They are ocean-going boats and their speed in attested by their three propellers. The men around the yards used to call them "fishing boats."

But the real reason they're in dry-dock is because there's too little use for expensive rum-runners now.

By implication New York state reinvent its sobriquet. "The Empire State" when General Washington described the state as "at present the seat of empire." This was in a speech in New York city on December 2, 1774.

There's at least one honest woman in New York. We saw her pick up a dime from the pavement of 42nd and Madison and actually run to restore it to the man who had just dropped it.

A Harlem Negro was brought to book for stealing a ham off the back of a delivery truck. His story to the judge was like this:

"Well, judge, Ah see this heah ham lookin' at me so lonesome like, A jest felt sorry for it an' thought Ah'd give it a home. Then Ah looked in the lost and found department of the newspapers for three days, an' nobody seem' to be lookin' for it, so Ah jest sorta adopted it."

KING-FERRENE MARRIAGE

Of interest to a wide circle of friends here and elsewhere is the announcement of the wedding of Miss Louise King, of Luverne, Ala., and Otto Ferrene, P. C. graduate of 1930, and now member of the faculty at Presbyterian Junior college, Maxton, N. C.

Mrs. Ferrene is the sister of Edwin King, who attended school here in 1930.

The Center Leaves have the finest
Tobacco Quality

that's why only center leaves are used in Luckies

The first thing people see and like about Luckies is how round and firm they are. The tobacco doesn't spill out and there are no loose ends to cling to lips. That's because we pack each and every Lucky full to the brim with long, even strands of the finest Turkish and domestic tobaccos—only the center leaves. Not the top leaves—because those are under-developed.

Not the bottom leaves—because those are inferior in quality. We use only the center leaves—because they are the mildest and fully ripe for perfect smoking. That's why Luckies always draw easily, burn evenly—and are always mild and smooth. So smoke a Lucky, a fully packed cigarette. And remember, "It's toasted"—for throat protection—for finer taste.

CLUB HONORS VARSITY TEAM

Chamber of Commerce Dedicates January Meeting To Presbyterian College Football Eleven. Sweater Awards Are Made By Coach Johnson.

The Chamber of Commerce with the Presbyterian College varsity football team as their honor guests, gathered around the royal board of hospitality Tuesday evening to enjoy a banquet at the Mary Musgrove tea room. It was a delightfully informal affair—Clinton's tribute to a fighting football team and its coaches.

The meeting was presided over by President E. D. Craig, who extended to the team a most cordial welcome and spoke of the pleasure derived by the club in having the gridiron fighters as their guests.

R. E. Ferguson was asked by the president to bring greetings to the team in behalf of the Chamber of Commerce. He spoke of the splendid reputation the team has made and held everywhere. He said that in his travel he had seen many teams in action, with thousands of spectators filling the stadiums, but nowhere had he seen a harder fighting, or a finer spirit of sportsmanship than right here at home by the Blue Hose eleven.

Dr. John McSween, president of the college, expressed his appreciation of the invitation extended the team to be the club's guests, and stated that the P. C. team is the greatest advertising medium that Clinton possesses. He spoke further of the pleasant and sympathetic relationship existing be-

P. C.-Georgia Meet Tonight On Court

The Presbyterian College basketball team has a full schedule in store for it this week, with four games scheduled.

Two games will be played on the home court, with two in foreign territory. A feature of the card will be two games with a new foe, the University of Georgia quintet. Tonight the Bulldogs will be engaged on the floor of the Leroy Springs gymnasium and Saturday a return engagement between the two teams will be played in Athens. This is the first time that P. C. and Georgia have met in basketball, although they are track rivals of long standing.

Other games of the week are with Furman and Erskine, in which both varsity and freshman squads participate. The Furman contest will be played in Clinton Tuesday (Jan. 16). The Erskine- P. C. fracas is to come off at Due West two days later, Thursday (Jan. 18).

The games with Erskine and Furman will render four state opponents that the Blue Hose have met, leaving Citadel, Newberry, Clemson, and College of Charleston unplayed. All of these teams will be met in the remaining games on the schedule, one at home and one abroad.

It was announced last week by the athletic department that the date for the Presbyterian-Erskine basketball game to be played at Clinton had been changed from February 1 to February 3. This is the same date that P. C.'s boxing team meets The Citadel in Charleston.

Demonstration Of Liquid Air Here

An interesting demonstration of liquid air will be presented in the college chapel on Wednesday, Jan. 17, at 7:30 p. m. This demonstration will be both interesting and educational. Air in its liquid state will apparently perform magical stunts, show interesting facts about the different states of matter, and explain distillation of gases.

Among these will be driving a nail with a lump of mercury, using ice as the power of running a steam engine, and other such phenomena.

The demonstration will be given by Mr. Sloan, a South Carolinian, and a graduate of Wofford college. It is being brought by the science department of Presbyterian college as one of a lecture series, and no admission charge is made.

Election For Editor, Business Manager, And Managing Editor Of The Blue Stocking To Be Held Tomorrow

Candidates For Staff Positions

Names of the men to be voted upon in The Blue Stocking staff election Tuesday follow:

For Editor
Frank Guess L. A. McCall

For Business Manager
Henry Dillard A. W. Harrison

For Managing Editor
C. M. Hudson C. R. Johnson

Guess, Dillard and Hudson are The Blue Stocking staff nominees. The other men were nominated from the floor at the student body meeting Wednesday.

Mr. Long Speaks At 'Y' Gathering

Local Pastor Makes Address On "Character and Life." Stresses Value of Early Decisions.

At the regular Y. M. C. A. meeting Thursday night, Rev. Edward Long gave an inspiring talk on the subject, "Character and Life."

In the course of the talk the speaker pointed out the necessary traits of character for a successful life. He showed that just as starting the day's work with a "strong spring" enabled one to perform the work for that day with more success than if the day had started sluggishly, a life must be started "with a strong spring in the right direction in order to be successful.

"There are a great many decisions that we would like to put off until late in life when the years have given us more insight and powers of good decisions. But there are many problems that can not be delayed. They come up early in life and decisions must be made on them at once. If no definite course is mapped out for your life as the result of these early decisions, your life will be of no earthly use. You will be an aimless drifter, no good to anyone.

"Most of the momentous decisions that a person is called on to make for himself come up before he reaches the age of twenty-five," the speaker further pointed out.

Mr. Long is pastor of the First Baptist church of Clinton. A large and appreciative audience heard the address.

The next meeting of the Y. M. C. A. will be held next Thursday at the regular time. The program for that night has not yet been announced, but students may be assured that something interesting, as usual, is in store.

Songbirds Return From 3-Day Tour

The glee club returned to the campus Saturday from its second trip of the season.

Wednesday night the club played at Shelby. The following night they gave a performance at Camden. Friday morning a few numbers were given at the Lancaster high school. The same afternoon class of the school served the songsters with hot chocolate and sandwiches after the performance. Friday night the club performed at Chester.

A third trip for the club is now being arranged for the club to appear in Anderson, S. C., and three cities in Georgia, Milledgeville, Toccoa and Augusta. This third trip will come during the second week of February.

"Hot Copy" To Be Presented Friday

The Presbyterian College dramatic club will give its first performance of the season Friday night at 8:00 o'clock at the Florida Street school.

Hank Wilson, J. W. Combs, A. M. Timmins, Georgia B. Blakely and Margaret Jones will play leading roles.

Admission will be 15 cents and 25 cents for the general public, and 15 cents for college boys.

McCall, Guess, Hudson, Johnson, Dillard and Harrison In Race For Three High Places On Weekly Paper. Slip-Up Causes Confusion and Re-Vote.

The final election for editor, business manager and managing editor of The Blue Stocking will be held tomorrow.

This announcement was made following the protest in the student body meeting Friday of the election run off Thursday. This protest was based on constitutional grounds that a week did not elapse between the time that nominations were made and the time of the election as the "ballot box" amendment to the Student Constitution calls for.

At the student body meeting Friday, a two-thirds majority voted that Thursday's election be validated and the results accepted as final. However, it was decided that a unanimous vote of the student body would be required for validation since the election was admittedly held contrary to constitutional requirements, and the new election was called for Tuesday (Jan. 16).

Blame for the present state of affairs has been definitely laid at the door of the present editor, who, unwittingly, had the student body president call for the election one week ahead of time. His reason for this action was to get the election over so that the results could be printed in this issue of The Blue Stocking, which is the last one for the present staff. The editor has not denied the charges.

The amendments to the student constitution under which the mistake occurred were made last spring and are not printed in the copies of the constitution that were circulated this year. They were printed in an issue of The Blue Stocking last spring immediately after being added to the constitution.

In Thursday's election, all three staff nominees won out with impressive majorities. The race for editor-in-chief was the closest, with Frank Guess polling 118 to 75 for L. A. McCall, his opponent. Colin Hudson was named managing editor over C. R. Johnson by a 145 to 42 count. The result of the race for business manager was Henry Dillard 120, Alton Harrison 67.

The same men who ran for office in the election last week will be the nominees in the coming election. The entire ticket is printed elsewhere in the paper.

Freshman Class Nominates Officers

At a meeting of the freshman class Monday morning, the following were nominated for the class officers. The election will take place Tuesday following examination week, January 20.

For president: Buchanan, Collings, Oxley and Fred Matthew.

Secretary-treasurer: Fireman Wallace, Jack McAlpine, McLees, McSween.

Historian: Mann, Evans, Plunkett, Rabney.

Poet: Bulwinkle, Lowe, Montgomery, Stanton.

No Paper Next Week

There will be no issue of The Blue Stocking next week because of examinations, which start next Monday.

The next issue will be February 5, one week after exams. This will be the first edition to be put out by the newly-elected staff; and will carry the announcement by the editor of the complete new staff that will be appointed to serve the next semester.

This is the final issue of the paper under the direction of the present staff.

P. C. Boxing Team To Meet Carolina

Blue Hose To Meet Gamecock Mittmen In Initial Contest For Locals Saturday Night.

The Presbyterian boxing team opens a difficult schedule Saturday night, January 20, meeting the mittmen of the University of South Carolina in the Leroy Springs gymnasium. The fighters will be in excellent shape by the time of the fight, it is thought, and fans will see action galore. No places are certain as yet for any of the P. C. boxers. All are working hard and the coming week will probably decide which will see action. Although Carolina has the benefit of two matches to her credit already, Coach Johnson expects his men to put up good, fast fights. Carolina has defeated Florida and N. C. State in the past two weeks.

Carolina will bring to Clinton such experienced men as Rivers, Humphlett, Griffith, and Willard. Willard is Southern conference middleweight champion, but often fights in the light-heavy class.

The P. C. men who will see action will come out of the [illegible] 115 pound class: [illegible] Wyman, G[illegible] Mc-Caskill; [illegible] Mills; 165 pound class: [illegible] eight of the class [illegible] maximum weight [illegible] 175 pounds. SEVEN NEW MEN FOR BLUE KEY

Boggs, Bolick, Combs, Dunlap, McCall, Perrin and Wingate Initiated Into Leadership Fraternity At Meeting Saturday. Dean Brown Makes Address.

At a luncheon meeting Saturday evening, Blue Key leadership fraternity initiated into the group seven new men. They were T. H. Wingate and J. W. Combs, seniors; and D. W. Boggs, George Dunlap, R. M. Perrin, H. E. Bolick, and L. A. McCall, juniors.

The ceremony took place at a delightful luncheon attended by undergraduate and faculty members of the group and the initiates. R. D. Lynn, Blue Key president, presided over the meeting and administered the oath of membership to the new men, following talks by Bob Sims, Dossey McFadden and Dean M. W. Brown.

McFadden was the first speaker. He gave a history of the Blue Key fraternity, telling of its founding at the University of Florida as the outgrowth of a group of leading students banded together for the purpose of arranging a homecoming celebration. This group found themselves thrown together in other activities for the betterment of the university and finally decided to organize themselves into a club for the development of campus leadership. At its organization there was no thought of Blue Key becoming national, but the need for a national fraternity of that type soon became evident and the present organization with over sixty chapters grew up.

Sims gave a short talk, explaining the symbolism of the Blue Key emblem.

The main speaker of the evening, Dean M. W. Brown, warned the members not to allow fraternal feeling to creep into the activities of the club and advocated as a characteristic for leaders a spirit of humility as against a feeling of superiority.

Those present besides the initiates were: Dean Brown, Dr. F. D. Jones, Capt. R. E. Wysor, Coach W. A. Johnson, Robert Lynn, Bob Sims and Dossey McFadden. Dr. John McSween was unable to attend.

Many Students Register Early

A number of students have already registered for the second semester, according to a report from the registrar's office.

The regular registration period for second semester courses will be from [illegible] classes on Monday, January 26. Students registering after that time [illegible] card completely and filling it with the registrar. The fee card from the college [illegible] may be completed by merely marking "No change" on the card given him by the business manager in a receipt for fees and tuition, and turning it over to the registrar.

Chapel Speaker Here Thursday

Dr. J. E. Mills, of the chemistry department of the University of South Carolina, will speak before the Presbyterian college student body at a special chapel hour Thursday, it was announced from the president's office last week.

The subject of Dr. Mills' address will be "Chemical Warfare."

A special class schedule will be followed Thursday, with the chapel hour coming at 11:55 instead of 8:15. Classes will begin at 8:15 and the class periods will last forty-five minutes.

OBSERVATIONS

And now we hear of the poor sap who went home Christmas to his girl. "You know, sweetheart, I am just crazy about you." But some one else had come into her life since he had been away and she replied, "I always knew you were crazy about some thing; but I never though, you would have the nerve to blame it on me."

But you had heard that one before, I suppose, and consider it a bit old? Well, in that case, just remember that the Grand Canyon is a bit old too, but folks tell me that it is a good crack yet. Now, by hang, if you have heard that one, you can write your own column and see if anyone cares.

At last we have figured out a means by which ministers can boost their Sunday collection. We will admit that it is a most simple plan, but we maintain that it will work just the same. Here is the idea: every minister is to do all he can to get each young man in the congregation to bring a young lady to church every Sunday. When he gets this done the rest comes easy. We might say that a close observation of a representative number of P. C. students has led us to find that the collection from such "attended" students is to the collection of non-attended student in a ratio of 25 to 0. That is to say, the first group gives about two bits while the last group gives the naught. Yep, "strange but true," that's the word.

There are about three more issues of this paper by the present staff. About a week after that and exams will be over and after that there are only about four or five months until the summer vacation. Now, isn't this something to think about!

I would bet my bottom dollar that there are a host of men on our campus right now who would forfeit one-half of their kingdom to be where they were this time last week. But before you agree or disagree with me, just remember that one-half of nothing is nothing.

The college magazine came out recently. We had just read a magazine from a girl's college in the state and found it fascinating to see the marked difference in the topics chosen by the representatives of the two schools. As a general rule, the girls had written on "love," while the boys had written almost invariably on trouble and disaster. At any rate, we concluded that the young men were thinking of the things that would confront them after marriage, while the girls were concerned with the troubles they will meet before they make that "big venture."

Officers of the day for this week, with their orderlies, are as follows:

Jan. 8: Lt. J. W. Combs, with Sgt. J. E. Rhodes as orderly.

Jan. 9: Lt. Frank Johnston, with Sgt. A. B. McCulloch as orderly.

Jan. 10: Lt. M. P. Freeman, with Sgt. J. M. Tolbert as orderly.

Jan. 11: Lt. H. Wyman, with Sgt. J. E. Jordan as orderly.

Jan. 12: Lt. J. W. Haney, with Sgt. R. D. Hannah as orderly.

Jan. 13: Lt. J. L. Wilson, with Sgt. W. R. Holcomb as orderly.

TO CONDUCT CHAPEL

The chapel hour for the next three Wednesday mornings will be sponsored by the Y. M. C. A. as one of its regular features. The following men will lead the program: H. M. Wilson, Jan. 10; Cliff Johnson, Jan. 17; Ernest Arnold, Jan. 31 (after exam week).

Up in the 50's on Broadway stands a girl with the biggest wistful eyes when the cops don't make her move on. She sells Old English Lavendar.

In terms of population per acre, Park avenue is much more densely populated than some of the worst slum areas in the city.

We nominate for violent obliteration: the merchant of a town in a valley of Long Island who put up an enormous sign tha reads:

In dry-dock at the boat works up on the Harlem river that separates Manhattan from the Bronx, are some simple looking boats that might be grown up models of the first boat you whittled out of a stick of wood. They have no cabins on their flat, long decks, and the only thing that looks like the beginning of a bride is a wind-break and a rudimentary roof over the wheel and binnacle. They're painted a battleship grey and their decks are but a few inches above the waterline. They are ocean-going boats and their speed in attested by their three propellers. The men around the yards used to call them "fishing boats."

But the real reason they're in dry-dock is because there's too little use for expensive rum-runners now.

By implication New York state received its sobriquet, "The Empire State" when General Washington described the state as "at present the seat of empire." This was in a speech in New York city on December 2, 1774.

There's at least one honest woman in New York. We saw her pick up a dime from the pavement of 42nd and Madison and actually run to restore it to the man who had just dropped it.

A Harlem Negro was brought to book for stealing a ham off the back of a delivery truck. His story to the judge was like this:

"Well, judge, Ah see this heah ham lookin' at me so lonesome like, A jest felt sorry for it an' thought Ah'd give it a home. Then Ah looked in the lost and found department of the newspapers for three days, an' nobody seem' to be lookin' for it, so Ah jest sorta adopted it."

KING-FERRENE MARRIAGE

Of interest to a wide circle of friends here and elsewhere is the announcement of the wedding of Miss Louise King, of Luverne, Ala., and Otto Ferrene, P. C. graduate of 1930, and now member of the faculty at Presbyterian Junior college, Maxton, N. C.

Mrs. Ferrene is the sister of Edwin King, who attended school here in 1930.

The Center Leaves have the finest Tobacco Quality

that's why only center leaves are used in Luckies

The first thing people see and like about Luckies is how round and firm they are. The tobacco doesn't spill out and there are no loose ends to cling to lips. That's because we pack each and every Lucky full to the brim with long, even strands of the finest Turkish and domestic tobaccos—only the center leaves. Not the top leaves—because those are under-developed. Not the bottom leaves—because those are inferior in quality. We use only the center leaves—because they are the mildest and fully ripe for perfect smoking. That's why Luckies always draw easily, burn evenly—and are always mild and smooth. So smoke a Lucky, a fully packed cigarette. And remember, "It's toasted"—for throat protection—for finer taste.

CLUB HONORS VARSITY TEAM

Chamber of Commerce Dedicates January Meeting To Presbyterian College Football Eleven. Sweater Awards Are Made By Coach Johnson.

The Chamber of Commerce with the Presbyterian College varsity football team as their honor guests, gathered around the royal board of hospitality Tuesday evening to enjoy a banquet at the Mary Musgrove tea room. It was a delightfully informal affair—Clinton's tribute to a fighting football team and its coaches.

The meeting was presided over by President E. D. Craig, who extended to the team a most cordial welcome and spoke of the pleasure derived by the club in having the gridiron fighters as their guests.

R. E. Ferguson was asked by the president to bring greetings to the team in behalf of the Chamber of Commerce. He spoke of the splendid reputation the team has made and held everywhere. He said that in his travel he had seen many teams in action, with thousands of spectators filling the stadiums, but nowhere had he seen a harder fighting, or a finer spirit of sportsmanship than right here at home by the Blue Hose eleven.

Dr. John McSween, president of the college, expressed his appreciation of the invitation extended the team to be the club's guests, and stated that the P. C. team is the greatest advertising medium that Clinton possesses. He spoke further of the pleasant and sympathetic relationship existing be-

P. C.-Georgia Meet Tonight On Court

The Presbyterian College basketball team has a full schedule in store for it this week, with four games scheduled.

Two games will be played on the home court, with two in foreign territory. A feature of the card will be two games with a new foe, the University of Georgia quintet. Tonight the Bulldogs will be engaged on the floor of the Leroy Springs gymnasium and Saturday a return engagement between the two teams will be played in Athens. This is the first time that P. C. and Georgia have met in basketball, although they are track rivals of long standing.

Other games of the week are with Furman and Erskine, in which both varsity and freshman squads participate. The Furman contest will be played in Clinton Tuesday (Jan. 16). The Erskine- P. C. fracas is to come off at Due West two days later, Thursday (Jan. 18).

The games with Erskine and Furman will make four state opponents that the Blue Hose have met, leaving Citadel, Newberry, Clemson, and College of Charleston unplayed. All of these teams will be met in the ten remaining games on the schedule, six at home and one abroad.

It was announced last week by the athletic department that the date for the Presbyterian-Erskine basketball game to be played at Clinton had been changed from February 1 to February 3. This is the same date that P. C.'s boxing team meets The Citadel in Charleston.

Demonstration Of Liquid Air Here

An interesting demonstration of liquid air will be presented in the college chapel on Wednesday, Jan. 17, at 7:30 p. m. This demonstration will be both interesting and educational. Air in its liquid state will apparently perform magical stunts, show interesting facts about the different states of matter, and explain distillation of gases.

Among these will be driving a nail with a lump of mercury, using ice as the power of running a steam engine, and other such phenomena.

The demonstration will be given by Mr. Sloan, a South Carolinian, and a graduate of Wofford college. It is being brought by the science department of Presbyterian college as one of a lecture series, and no admission charge is made.

Election For Editor, Business Manager, And Managing Editor Of The Blue Stocking To Be Held Tomorrow

Candidates For Staff Positions

Names of the men to be voted upon in The Blue Stocking staff election Tuesday follow:

For Editor
Frank Guess L. A. McCall

For Business Manager
Henry Dillard A. W. Harrison

For Managing Editor
C. M. Hudson C. R. Johnson

Guess, Dillard and Hudson are The Blue Stocking staff nominees. The other men were nominated from the floor at the student body meeting Wednesday.

McCall, Guess, Hudson, Johnson, Dillard and Harrison In Race For Three High Places On Weekly Paper. Slip-Up Causes Confusion and Re-Vote.

The final election for editor, business manager and managing editor of The Blue Stocking will be held tomorrow.

This announcement was made following the protest in the student body meeting Friday of the election run off Thursday. This protest was based on constitutional grounds that a week did not elapse between the time that nominations were made and the time of the election as the "ballot box" amendment to the Student Constitution calls for.

At the student body meeting Friday, a two-thirds majority voted that Thursday's election be validated and the results accepted as final. However, it was decided that a unanimous vote of the student body would be required for validation since the election was admittedly held contrary to constitutional requirements, and the new election was called for Tuesday (Jan. 16).

Blame for the present state of affairs has been definitely laid at the door of the present editor, who, unwittingly, had the student body president call for the election one week ahead of time. His reason for this action was to get the election over so that the results could be printed in this issue of The Blue Stocking, which is the last one for the present staff. The editor has not denied the charges.

The amendments to the student constitution under which the mistake occurred were made last spring and are not printed in the copies of the constitution that were circulated this year. They were printed in an issue of The Blue Stocking last spring immediately after being added to the constitution.

In Thursday's election, all three staff nominees won out with impressive majorities. The race for editor-in-chief was the closest, with Frank Guess polling 118 to 75 for L. A. McCall, his opponent. Colif Hudson was named managing editor over C. R. Johnson by a 145 to 42 count. The result of the race for business manager was Henry Dillard 120, Alton Harrison 67.

The same men who ran for office in the election last week will be the nominees in the coming election. The entire ticket is printed elsewhere in the paper.

Mr. Long Speaks At 'Y' Gathering

Local Pastor Makes Address On "Character and Life." Stresses Value of Early Decisions.

At the regular Y. M. C. A. meeting Thursday night, Rev. Edward Long gave an inspiring talk on the subject, "Character and Life."

In the course of the talk the speaker pointed out the necessary traits of character for a successful life. He showed that just as starting the day's work with a "strong spring' 'enabled one to perform the work for that day with more success than if the day had started sluggishly, a life must be started "with a strong spring in the right direction in order to be successful.

"There are a great many decisions that we would like to put off until late in life when the years have given us more insight and powers of good decisions. But there are many problems that can not be delayed. They come up early in life and decisions must be made on them at once. If no definite course is mapped out for your life as the result of these early decisions, your life will be of no earthly use. You will be an aimless drifter, no good to anyone.

"Most of the momentous decisions that a person is called on to make for himself come up before he reaches the age of twenty-five," the speaker further pointed out.

Mr. Long is pastor of the First Baptist church of Clinton. A large and appreciative audience heard the address.

The next meeting of the Y. M. C. A. will be held next Thursday at the regular time. The program for that night has not yet been announced, but students may be assured that some interesting, if not

The glee club returned to the campus Saturday from a several days' tour.

Wednesday night the club played at Bishopville. The following night they gave a performance at Camden. Friday morning a few numbers were given at the Lancaster high school. That evening the club entertained at the school house and served the singers with hot dogs and sandwiches after the performance. Friday night the club performed at Chester.

A third trip for the club is now being arranged for the club to appear in Anderson, S. C., and three cities in Georgia, Milledgeville, Toccoa and Augusta. This third trip will come during the second week of February.

"Hot Copy" To Be Presented Friday

The Presbyterian College dramatic club will give its first performance of the season Friday night at 8:30 o'clock at the Florida Street school.

Hank Wilson, J. W. Combs, A. M. Tommins, Georgia B. Blakely and Margaret Jones will play leading roles.

Admission will be 15 cents and 25 cents for the general public, and 15 cents for college boys.

Freshman Class Nominates Officers

At a freshman class meeting this morning the following were nominated for the class officers. The election will take place Tuesday following ex-

For president: Steenbergen, [illegible] Oxley and Jesse Matthews.

Poet: Reynolds, Love, Montgomery, Stanton.

No Paper Next Week

There will be no issue of The Blue Stocking next week because of examinations, which start next Monday.

The next issue will be February 5, one week after exams. This will be the first edition to be put out by the newly-elected staff; and will carry the announcement by the editor of the complete new staff that will be appointed to serve the next semester.

This is the final issue of the paper under the direction of the present staff.

Blue Hose To Meet Gamecock Mittmen In Initial Contest For Locals Saturday Night.

The Presbyterian boxing team opens a difficult schedule Saturday night, January 20, meeting the mittmen of the University of South Carolina in the Leroy Springs gymnasium. The fighters will be in excellent shape by the time of the fight, it is thought, and fans will see action galore. No places are certain as yet for any of the P. C. boxers. All are working hard and the coming week will probably decide which will see action. Although Carolina has the benefit of two matches to her credit already, Coach Johnson expects his men to put up good, fast fights. Carolina has defeated Florida and N. C. SO WHAT?

Getting on: This paper is no comic.

If we print jokes, people say we are silly;

If we don't, they say we are too serious.

If we clip from other papers, we are too lazy to write it down ourselves;

If we don't, we are stuck on our own stuff.

If we stick close to the job all day, we ought to be out hunting up news.

If we do get out and try to hustle, we ought to be on the job in the office.

If we don't print contributions, we don't appreciate true genius;

If we do, the paper is filled with junk.

If we make a change in a fellow's write-up, we are too critical;

If we don't we are asleep.

Now, like as not someone will say we swiped this from some other paper.

WE DID!

AN EXCUSE FOR LIVING

Few staffs of collegiate newspapers live up to their possibilities as organs of good will and publicity for the institutions they represent.

Too many papers are prone to be "collegiate," forgetting that the primary function of a school publication is as a representative of the school. Too many papers are used as instruments for venting the feelings of the editor or some other member of the staff, printing statements that would constitute excellent material for libel [illegible] to school respect [illegible] advantage of their legal minority and [illegible] Conditions such as the ones described above have resulted in some instances in the suspension of publi[illegible] ublic censorship, an unfortunate and inconvenient circumstance viewed [illegible]

[illegible] their college. They have realized the [illegible] [illegible] counted in putting someone "on [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

OBSERVATIONS

At last the army came through and passed the test of permanent corps officials. In the transaction, four men were demoted and two were advanced. By this the army did not lose anything; for we have a fine line and French and other expressions of dismay and dismal foreboding at the authorities by these four men since ones would be more than counteracted by the good wishes and good opinions of the other five.

But still speaking about these appointments, we could suppose how a certain one of these appointments could be justified. To this he replied, "Well, that man already had what Johnny wanted for Christmas."

The new flying field is the subject of no little considerable interest being shown in the work so far. We are reminded of last year, when some of the boys tried to pull a fast one. They go' a shot gun and turned it on the target, thus eliminating the trouble of firing—or, at least, an inspection of those scores indicated such action.

"Buffalo Bill" has ceased advising Tom Mix and has turned his affections on the "unsurpassable Mae West." (We borrowed the expression directly from Buffalo). You should make it your business to be around him for a short time and you will surely get the invitation to "come up and see me sometime." Also, he can demonstrate the movements of a Swiss watch with admirable perfection.

A simple sign on our campus is sufficient to cause much alarm to our administration. It read: "Wear Only Tennis Shoes." By this, we would think that nudism is gaining headway much faster than was expected.

After exams the annual classic in boxing (the R. O. T. C. scraps) will come off. Many have expressed their desire to be someone's punching bag (anyone's), and others will sign up later. All these men seem to hope that their opponent won't be such a "cheerful giver."

And that reminds us exams are just around the corner and, much to our sorrow, we know that they will not be as long in rounding that corner as the much-heralded "prosperity." These ever-recurring torments take the joy from a student's life; and the coming prosperity takes the joy from everyone else's; so we think that maybe the whole trouble lies in the corner. Why not take it out?

And to our sophomore friends there is more to look forward to. Early in the spring they will be tested on all they have absorbed in their ("long and useful") lives—the exam being call a "comprehensive" one. Well, if it isn't one thing, it's two more; so why worry?

Little To Worry About

I have never looked to see which of my plays has made the most money. It is economic enough to make money without having to count it afterwards. —George Bernard Shaw.

CLUB HONORS VARSITY TEAM

...town and college and of the fine loyalty manifested toward the institution by Clinton people since its founding in 1888.

Coach Walter A. Johnson, introduced by President Crane, called on Coaches EicheDoeger and McMillian for a few words. Both expressed their appreciation of the courtesy extended the team and spoke of the pleasure and satisfaction of working with a fine bunch of students such as is found at the college.

Bob Sims, captain of the team the past season, and Harry Bolick, newly elected captain for '34, thanked the club for its past interest and asked for a continuation of this support for the coming year.

Coach Johnson, director of athletics at the institution since 1915, spoke in deep appreciation of the fine spirit of cooperation he had always found in the community towards his teams and their fighting spirit. He then presented to each member of the varsity squad a beautiful blue sweater bearing a large garnet block "P." The student body, in voluntarily depriving themselves of four Sunday suppers, had made available the fund with which the sweaters were purchased.

Dr. McSween, following the presentation, paid a beautiful tribute to Coach Johnson who, he said, was without a peer in the American athletic field. The college is indeed fortunate, he said, in having a gentleman, a good coach, and a good fellow as the leader of its young men in their athletic activities.

The club during the evening received and cordially welcomed three new members, George W. Hedman, Dr. Felder Smith and S. G. Dillard.

Volume Procured For S. S. Teachers

The twenty-ninth annual volume of Martha Tarbell's "Tarbell's Teachers' Guide to the International Sunday School Lessons, Improved Uniform Course for 1934" has been purchased by the library for the benefit of those students, and members of the faculty, teaching Sunday school classes and those wishing to study the Sunday school lesson thoroughly. Due to the large demand for the previous issues of this helpful work the librarian has placed this issue on the reserve shelf. By this measure it is possible for all to use the book each week and impossible for one student to monopolize it.

The following new books were added to the library shelves during December:

Duke Endowment: "Eighth Annual Report of the Hospital Section, 1932."

Eichler, Lillian: "Customs of Mankind."

Flick, A. C.: "Decline of the Medieval Church," 2 volumes.

Hodgson, J. G.: "Economic Nationalism."

Johnson, J. E.: "Increasing the President's Power."

Redlich, Joseph: "Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria."

Penny, J. T.: "New Fresh-Water Sponge from South Carolina."

Presbyterian College faculty: "Rules of the Faculty."

South Carolina State Training School: "Sixteenth Annual Report."

It means something

..that Chesterfield has a modern up-to-date Tobacco Factory in far-off historic Smyrna

So important is the handling of Turkish tobacco in making Chesterfield cigarettes that Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co., maintains this specially equipped plant right in the heart of the famous Smyrna tobacco section.

It is the largest and most modern tobacco factory in the Near East.

Turkish tobacco, you know, is the best "seasoning" there is for cigarettes. At all times Chesterfield has in storage—at this plant and in America—about 350,000 bales of the right kinds of Turkish tobacco.

Wysor Allowed To Remain Here

As an unusual exception to the four-year rule, the war department announces that Capt. R. E. Wysor, Jr., will be located at Presbyterian college for his sixth year as professor of military science and tactics.

Efforts were made by the president of the college in a personal interview with the commanding officer of the Fourth Corps area and through Congressman J. J. McSwain to see that the practice of shifting officers every four years could be disregarded in his case.

Captain Wysor has contributed greatly to the morale and welfare of the college, and co-operation and service in the R. O. T. C. feel that they are fortunate to have him continued in command.

On Radio Program From Spartanburg

K. Mills and C. B. Lawter, aided by Misses Anna Mae Tarre, Myrtle Westbury and Rosa Mahaffey, conducted a half hour program over the Spartanburg radio station yesterday. It was a "Sunshine" program which had for its theme "Light Up the World for Jesus." The complete program follows:

Trumpet solo: "Ivory Palaces," K. Mills.

Duet, "Whispering Hope," Miss Westbury and Miss Tarre.

Trumpet solo, "Have Thine Own Way, Lord," K. Mills.

Duet, "His Eye Is On the Sparrow," Misses Westbury and Tarre. Accompanist, Miss Mahaffey.

P. C.-Clemson Meet On Wed.

The Presbyterian boxing team will meet Clemson college at Clemson Wednesday night, it was announced last week from Clemson.

The Hosemen were originally scheduled to meet the Tigers on February 22, but for an unannounced reason, the match was moved up to February 7. The change will make the Georgia encounters the final ones of the season. On Feb. 17, Georgia and P. C. meet at Athens and on Feb. 27 they meet at Clinton.

Alumni Committee To Meet Here

Group To Endeavor To Create Interest Among Former Student of College.

A committee of fifteen men, representing the Presbyterian College Alumni association, is to have a meeting on the campus sometime in the near future. This group's purpose is to try to create more interest among the alumni in the welfare of the college. They hope to accomplish this purpose mainly through establishing alumni clubs in various counties of South Carolina, and other states if possible.

In times past the alumni association as a body has rendered very little real service to the college. The reason for this was the lack of organization among old P. C. men.

The recently appointed committee is attempting to remedy the existing state of affairs by forming an alumni club in every county where a few former P. C. students live. At present there is only one active group of this kind, the Oconee County Association of P. C. alumni.

Freshman Class Names Officers

In the election held last week for freshman officers, J. K. Collings was elected president of the class; J. E. Patrick, vice-president; J. R. McAlpine, secretary-treasurer; J. L. Dabney, historian, and F. S. Love, poet.

Except for the office of poet, the count was so close that it was necessary to select the two nominees polling the highest number of votes in each case and call for another ballot.

Those who were still in the running on the second ballot were: For president, Collings and Steenbergen; for vice-president, Patrick and Robinson; for secretary-treasurer, McAlpine and McLees; historian, Dabney and Evans.

TO CONDUCT CHAPEL

The following men have been selected by the Y. M. C. A. officers to conduct the Wednesday morning chapel for the next month: Feb. 7, Bob Sims; Feb. 14, H. J. Montgomery; Feb. 21, Ralph Belk; Feb. 28, Powell Freeman.

Two Close Games Mark Basket Week

Renovated Hardwood Floor Artists Take On New Life. Nosed Out In Week-End Contests.

Two heart-breaking contests were lost by the Presbyterian basketeers last week, one by a three-point and the other by a five-point margin. A revamped line-up, consisting of Levi and Wyatt at forwards; Lynn and Bradley at guards, and Waldrep at center, has shown its ability to click, and led in both games until the final moments. Potter alternates with Levi at one of the forward positions.

In the only other game of the week, Clemson licked the Hosemen, 43-21.

Games scheduled for this week are: College of Charleston Friday, and Citadel Saturday. Both games are in Charleston.

Erskine-P. C.

In the best game seen on the local court since the Leroy Springs gymnasium was the newest building in town, a fast sailing Erskine Fleet sneaked up on an equally fast moving Presbyterian quintet and made good three field goals and a foul shot in rapid succession to take a five point lead in the final minute of play and win, 33 to 28.

The contest was close from the opening whistle. At no time until the final toot did either team have more than a four-point lead. The score at the half was 17-13, favoring P. C.

Erskine opened the second half by knotting the count, and ever after it was nip and tuck, with P. C. being ahead by two points one moment and the score tied the next. Finally Miller, Fleet forward, looped a beautiful "zipper" shot from near the center line

Founder's Day To Be Observed

Dr. Jones To Speak At Exercises Commemorating Birth Date of Late Dr. W. P. Jacobs.

Presbyterian college will celebrate its fifty-fourth birthday March 15, when Founder's Day will be observed. Dr. F. D. Jones, member of the college faculty, will make an address at special chapel exercises.

Since 1880 P. C. has grown from an insignificant school to its present status as an A-grade college. March 15 is the birthday of Dr. William P. Jacobs, whose life's efforts were spent in establishing and maintaining Thornwell orphanage and in beginning a school known as Clinton college, which became, in 1880, Presbyterian College of South Carolina.

The college was formerly located in the McCall building, now the Thornwell high school. In the early nineties, Alumni hall was erected on the new campus. Other enlargements followed rapidly. By 1904 the institution came fully under the control of the Presbyterians of the South Carolina synod. Since 1928 P. C. has been under the joint control of the synods of South Carolina and Georgia.

WINS BY K. O.

HARRY BOLICK

Who won his fight on the P. C.-Citadel boxing program Saturday night. He was the only Blue Hose fighter beside Bill Clark to turn in a win.

Harris To Hold Special Services

Popular Pastor From Milledgeville, Ga., Will Speak Twice Daily, February 20-23.

Rev. A. C. Harris, formerly a widely-known army chaplain and now pastor in Milledgeville, Ga., will speak at morning and evening services to be held in the Presbyterian college auditorium February 20-23.

As chaplain at several camps during the war and as pastor of many college students in Milledgeville, he has made friends of hundreds of young men. He was soon known in Milledgeville as such an interesting speaker that students filled his church week after week.

Mr. Harris is a graduate of Erskine college and Union Theological seminary, with further study at Princeton. Besides, he has passed work at the University of Hard Knocks to the extent that he was a successful business man and turned down a $10,000-a-year job, preferring the ministry.

Fraternities Add New Members

The local chapters of Beta Kappa and Pi Kappa Phi initiated a number of new men on the night of Feb. 1.

In the Beta Kappa ... were Alexander, Buchan, and Poole.

Pi Kappa Phi took in the following: R. M. Perrin, W. J. Clark, T. L. Estes, C. B. Lawter, T. H. Wingate, Ned S. Hays, R. C. McLees, J. M. Morgan, J. T. Holliday, J. C. Bock, W. F. Gaese, H. D. Dillard, D. W. Boggs, and Hastings Wyman.

Citadel Boxers Win Presbyterian Meet

Default Paves Way For Cadet Victory. Bolick and Clark Win For Blue Hose In Card Marked With Close Contests.

Charleston, Feb. 3.—A forfeit in the middleweight class proved the margin of victory in a boxing meet here tonight as the Citadel defeated Presbyterian college, 3 bouts to 2. Three draws featured the card, which was filled with plenty of action and close decisions.

Harry Bolick, P. C. captain, made swift work of Lucius Fishburne, Citadel light-heavy, knocking him out in the second round. Bill Clark gained a decision over Wade Britt for Presbyterian's other point.

The feature fight of the entire program was the setto between Bob Sims and Billy Symmes, in the unlimited class. The two giants fought furiously during the three rounds with skill and speed that would put many lighter and supposedly nimbler battlers well back in the shade. Some spectators expressed the belief that Sims should have had the decision, but the verdict was generally accepted without a murmur.

The other draws were in the welterweight fight between Youngblood and Mellary, and in the junior middleweight class between Mills and Smoak.

Mills, the showman who made an interesting spectcale of the P. C.-Carolina meet by bluffing his way through three rounds against an experienced opponent, abandoned his clowning tactics tonight long enough to earn a raw with Smoak, Citadel's junior middleweight.

Bolick fought his regular weight and, minus the necessity of excessive training in order to make weight, was in perfect condition and led Fishburne all the way until the sudden end in the second round. A stony right to the cadet's jaw turned out the lights and turned on the soft music.

Summary:

Bantamweight: Walter Nelson, Citadel, outpointed Seagle, Presbyterian.

Featherweight: Dave Dillard, Citadel, outpointed Jack McCaskill, Presbyterian.

Lightweight: Bill Clark, Presbyterian, outpointed Wade Britt, Citadel.

Welterweight: George Youngblood, Citadel, and Jimmy McClary, Presbyterian, fought to a draw.

Junior middleweight: Philip Smoak, Citadel, and K. Mills, Presbyterian, fought to a draw.

Senior middleweight: MacLowe, Citadel, won by default.

Light-heavyweight: Harry Bolick, Presbyterian, ... Bob Sims, Citadel, ... round.

... Presbyterian, and ... Citadel, fought to a draw.

Referee: Charlie Forbes.

First Annual Shows "Recitation Hall" At Thornwell, And Pictures Dr. Spencer Heading Faculty Of Five

By Robert C. McLees

Have you ever wondered how the campus would appear without its buildings? I confess I have often wondered how it would appear without its buildings. I recall when I was a little boy, about ten years old, I was given a box of colored crayons and a tablet from which I could make pictures. I remember how much I enjoyed drawing houses and trees and the like. Among the pictures I drew was one of the campus as it appeared to me. I remember that I drew the buildings in the form of a square, with a large tree in the center of the square. I remember that I drew the buildings in the form of a square, with a large tree in the center of the square. I remember that I drew the buildings in the form of a square, with a large tree in the center of the square.

In the year 1909 in that year appeared "The Grimes and Bees, a magazine, purporting to be a paper bound booklet, garnished with an alleged garnet card. Published on the Thornwell Orphanage press, T. Ellison Simpson as editor-in-chief, the staff of the "First Attempt" was as follows: J. J. Brown, John A. Simpson, John B. and John W. Carpenter, W. H. Boyd, and J. Preston Marion. It was sponsored by the Eukosmian and Philomathean literary societies; the first annual to be published, and the only one until 1914, when a PaC-SaC staff was organized by the junior class.

As president, Dr. Spencer's name headed a faculty list of five: Rev. W. S. Bean, A. W. McWhorter, A. V. Martin, and J. W. Davis. It ended: "Professor in Biblical and Religious Literature to be Supplied." (Dr. Brimm did not become active until). His name appeared instead on the faculty of the Presbyterian Theological Seminary of Columbia, S. C., as mentioned in the back of the slender annual).

In the illustrations, photographs of the three buildings appeared. The frontispiece, "Recitation Hall," Kay Mills, thoroughly familiar with all things connected with Thornwell Orphanage, would recognize as the "McCall Building"; in it most of the college activities were conducted. "Alumni Hall," without the shielding ivy and trees, was backed and flanked by open fields; in one of these, at approximately the same location as the present day football field, Presbyterian College met all comers for baseball and bloodshed, depending upon the temper of the participants. WE INTRODUCE OURSELVES

A prominent newspaper man has said, "The prime duty of a college newspaper is to reflect the life of the campus." That statement is particularly pertinent for us—a new staff with a long way to travel. It is a sort of goal that we can set and work towards. We are perhaps novices in the trade, but that can not keep us down if we exert our interest and our zeal, towards the making of a true chronicle of events. But that alone is not enough.

As a staff we will be powerless to make The Blue Stocking a credit unless we have the interest of the student body. It is your paper. It is your means of expression individually and collectively. It is yours to help by your support and your constructive criticism, but it is yours to break through indifference and a destructive attitude. It is only through a realization of your responsibility towards your paper, and a whole-hearted cooperation that we can hope to succeed in the goal that we have set.

There are always those who are critics at heart. Theirs is usually a spirit of disinterestedness backed by ignorance, but they are always willing to damn. This sort of spirit can ruin a thriving enterprise. On the other hand, there are critics who are motivated by a sense of giving aid through their criticism. The latter we can welcome.

We wish to solicit your kindly attitude and your forbearance. And thus we introduce ourselves in our first issue, a little green perhaps, but sincere in our endeavors.

NEW SEMESTER UNDER WAY

There is a peculiar look of eagerness on the faces of students. It is caused by that feeling of satisfaction that was present last week, when we [illegible] from January [illegible]

[illegible] ably the wonderful array on the bulletin [illegible]

At any rate, it seems that the se[illegible]

attack another country; we would in fact be very congenial, just a gentle police force to guarantee peace to all peoples. But now we come to that "certain point." We believe in democracy, but we seemingly limit it to our own selves; we do not extend it to other races and nations. Because if we did we would allow others equal armaments, equal preparedness. It's queer that they should want this equality, isn't it? But they do. They also must have a double-say-other force in order to protect their interests. Absurd, you say. Of course it's absurd. War itself is absurd, and so is every means taken to promote it, even though under the false pretense of over-preparedness.

Do we advocate stripping a country of its defense, and allowing the possibility of being overrun by another? Of course not. The State does not renounce a man the right to use his two fists when in a position of self-defense. But neither does it allow any of the parties involved the right to pass judgment over its own dispute. An outside party is brought in. This has been tried on a large scale with nations, but has found a surprisingly great lack of cooperation.

For causes of war and methods of their abolishment we would recommend Bertrand Russell's "Why Men Fight."

Many war cures have been given some helpful, some that may even work of given a chance, but it is safe to say that propaganda such as we quoted at the beginning will avail us nothing in eliminating war from our list of vices. —C. E. C.

EXAMS?—BUNK!

"I shouldn't have got a D. I know as much of that stuff as Tom, and he got C." "If Prof. ——— could teach I wouldn't have flunked." "That d—— exam wasn't a good test of what I know, anyway."

Probably you've been hearing a good bit of that kind of comments lately. Just excuses, alibis, you think. Perhaps they are, in most cases at least, but on the other hand may there not be some truth in them? After all, there is some difficulty in determining whether Jim should have 79 and C, or 79.5 and B.

When I look over a list of term grades and especially when I think of some of the students who get those grades, I wonder if marks are really representative of the persons. Along with this I wonder if the "A" students have received a better education than the "B" students, if they possess more knowledge, if they are any better fitted for life. I think also, What is the purpose of a college education? Is it learning, knowledge, high grades, social position? Only one thing, I believe, is its purpose: that is to teach, or rather to help the student find out for himself, how to think; or perhaps I should say to teach him to think, or the art of thinking, or the love of thinking. However yau may term it, I refer to that quality, or whatever you may choose to call it, which results in our desire and ability to think out in a rational way any problem that may come before us.

I do not believe that marks are any way near a good indication of the process of the individual. They are merely things camouflaged in terminology of old-time so-called education that if they were good in their day[illegible] who seem more interested in their systems of [illegible] than in teaching.

[illegible] the idea that I am trying to alibi any of my own marks. I have made AA's in this school, and also fallen from that pedestal of the self-honored to the low rank of E (and incidentally, all places in between). You have surmised, I guess, that I do not fa[illegible] the system of "grading." Along with that must go tests and examinations also. (This does not include comprehensive exams at certain intervals). A school in which the student is taught what he wants to know, a school not hampered by a useless A,

What Will Be Used For Fuel When the Earth's Supply of Coal and Oil Have Been Used Up?

This question recently asked me is frequently thought of by those who seem to be worried over the well-being of our posterity. Many things have been suggested. J. B. S. Haldane gives his answer in a small book, "Daedalus," of which I read a review last week. In his book he says that it will not be water power, as some contend, but sun and wind power that will be used in the future. Since the sun is not always with us—nor the wind—a means of storage will be needed. Thus, he says, when the sun is shining brightly and the wind blowing briskly, surplus power may be used "for the electrolytic decomposition of water into oxygen and hydrogen." These gases will be liquified and stored for use as needed. Liquid hydrogen is the most efficient method of storing energy that is known (comparatively, weight for weight), and gives three times as much heat per pound as gasoline does. This decomposition will be done all over the country, saving cost of transportation of fuel over long distances.

Whether this method of obtaining fuel will be used or one of which we at present know nothing, we of course cannot say. But suffice it to say that long before the time our coal and oil sources have been exhausted, other fuel will have been produced.

No wonder it has been so cold lately; we are living in an Ice Age. In fact, it seems that we have been for about 600,000 years. But warm weather is expected again a few thousand years hence. At least that's the latest report. The ice at both Poles is melting, and there is enough of it there (5,000,000 square miles in the Antarctic and 1,000,000 in the Arctic) to raise the level of the oceans 151 feet. Looks like some of our recently drained land will have to be drained all over again!

How much energy does it take for you to think? And have you eaten your "brain food" today? After extensive research and experiment, Dr. and Mrs. F. G. Benedict have concluded: that there is no close analogy between muscular and mental work; that there are no special brain foods, such as fish, as is commonly thought; and that the extra calories per hour produced by mental work is equal only to about those in half a peanut. From this we may judge that thinking is not such a laborious task after all.

R. O. T. C. NEWS

Officers of the day and their orderlies for the week are as follows:

Monday, Feb. 5—1st Lt. White, J. C. and Sgt. Mills, K. F. as orderly.

Tuesday, Feb. 6—1st Lt. Cranford, W. H., and Sgt. Odom, H. S. as orderly.

Wednesday, Feb. 7—2nd Lt. White, W. N., and Sgt. Carothers, T. F., as orderly.

Thursday, Feb. 8—1st Lt. Gregg, E. M. and 1st Sgt. Semple, J. M. as orderly.

Friday, Feb. 9—1st Lt. Wilson, A. P., and Sgt. Major Boggs, D. W., as orderly.

Saturday, Feb. 10—1st Lt. Ratchford, E. B., and Sgt. Underwood, [illegible]

Both uniform and rifle inspections will be held on Tuesday. Uniform inspection, as usual, will be at drill, and rifle inspection at 2 p. m. Students are urged to have their uniforms in the best of condition to improve the appearance of the unit as well as to get a grade for themselves. The last semester grades have shown that one may mean the difference between a AA and an A; or more likely the dif[illegible]

The annual Fourth Corps Area rifle [illegible] Monday and which will have [illegible] the scores will be compared with those of other [illegible] match would be good [illegible] on to the second as well as to the individual members of the team. The winners of the contests will receive a trophy, and the R. O. T. C. team hopes to add one more to the already [illegible] ing.

In order to reward seniors in the R. O. T. C. for their superior work in the class room, the professor of military science and tactics is giving to those seniors who have made an average of 90 or more during the past semester in military science, a certain number of free cuts. These cuts may be taken any time after Feb. 1; but must be taken in military science only. The list of students who are entitled to these cuts will be published by Capt. Wysor in the near future. This is a new experiment in the unit, but may be continued in the future. Rising seniors should at least take note of this.

To eliminate those students who come to drill in improper uniform, the military department is deducting two points from the final grade of any cadet guilty of such carelessness. All men are urged to be careful about this habit because a close check of uniforms will be made each morning.

The co-ed rifle team is coming along nicely; in fact, it is coming along a bit too nicely for the comfort of the members of the regular team. Last week Miss Eleanor Saner shot 96 prone, besides shots in the other positions correspondingly as high. And now you should see the boys quake for some co-ed will out-shoot them.

Maulers Give Way To Light-footed Boys

The old days when the ring game was not an art but a matter of who could take it the longest and still give it, has passed. The science of boxing has replaced the contests of endurance that saw two men stand toe to toe for round after round pounding away at each other's bodies until one went down, even in professional circles. The practice of outright slugging has never been widely prevalent in the amateur game. Amateurs have too much sense to deliberately take punishment in order to deal in a few telling blows for themselves. Then, too, the rules have always been designed to give the advantage to the crafty boxer, who can dance in, get a few licks, and then get away unharmed. The slow, cumbersome, but powerful behemoth who can take it plenty—but is not good for anything else unless he gets in his one weapon, will not win a fight unless he does use that single weapon; and the clever boxer will not give him a chance to use it.

So the day of the mauler is past. He has been replaced by the scientific boxer. This condition isn't relished by the average fight fan, who wants blood and groaning bodies on the canvas; but other more thoughtful of the followers of the manly art are glad to see the change. It puts boxing on a higher plane, in the category where it belongs—an art, not a slaughter.

Still Plenty of Action In Average Fight

The absence of slugging for slugging's sake and the you-hit-me-I'll-hit-you-harder brand of fighting has by no means degenerated the squared circle sport into a sissy's game. There is action galore in the average college boxing program, as anyone who saw the P. C.-Citadel or the Carolina-P. C. bards will assert. While the boys do not wade into a mill of flying fists with reckless abandon, as some fans think a real fighter must, they enter the ring with the will to win, and go into action vigorously with the first clang of the bell. No dilly-dallying around for several rounds "feeling out" the opponent, but three rounds packed with action. Footwork and science is in evidence; but, unlike his professional brother, the amateur looks upon the fancy work and pyrotechnics as the means to an end, not the end. And that end is a win. Victory is the uppermost thought in the mind of the true amateur fighter.

Sims-Bachelor Engagement Looks Like a Natural

Speaking of action, it is only natural that one's thoughts turn to the approaching southward journey for the Blue Hose mittmen. We know little of the strength of either Florida or Georgia, fistically speaking, but one can't help wishing there were some way to dead-head the "Dream Train" on this special jaunt, if only for the privilege of seeing Bob Sims and Graham Bachelor mix it up in Athens.

The two occupy somewhat analagous positions at their respective Alma Maters. Bachelor is an athletic jack-of-all-trades and master every one at the Georgia school. Besides boxing, he plays football, enters more than a few track and field events, and heaves a wicked horsehide sphere on the baseball diamond, we are told. In none of these does he perform mediocrely.

Sims is a versatile football player, a good broad and high jumper and weight man, besides being the most colorful boxer on the Blue Hose squad. In all his endeavors he never performs less than average.

The two will in all probability meet in the unlimited class. That fight will be a humdinger. Two big men, both good, both active, both willing to mix it, will fight for love of the sport, and there will be enough leather-covered fists flung in the roped square that night to please the most fastidious lover of ring action.

It Didn't Count, But Oh! How It Hurt

Mike Caskey told this one on Coach Johnson himself.

It was Mike's senior year, and he was captain of the team. They were fighting at Clemson. Here's the story:

"I don't remember who I was fighting. It doesn't matter much. Anyway, the going was pretty fast, with neither of us having an easy time of it. He started one for my jaw just as the bell ending the second round sounded. The blow struck after the round had officially ended, and knocked me cold.

"As I sat in my corner trying to shake off the effects of the lick, Coach Johnson [illegible] in my ear, [illegible] of comfort, 'Don't mind that, big boy, that lick didn't count. Struck after the bell. Struck after the bell'.

"It was a hard job to wring comfort from those words," said Caskey, "with bells softly ringing in my ears and stars [illegible] with meteors trying their best to obscure the heaving floor of the ring from my sight."

SWIMMERS LABOR TO GET IN SHAPE AS MEET DRAWS NEAR

Jim Brewer, Out Since the Opening of Practice Season, Returns To Take Over Coaching Activities. Dash Men, Divers and Distance Swimmers Work Hard To Get In Condition.

Under the direction of Jim Brewer, who has just returned to college after an absence of several months, the varsity and freshman tank teams are preparing for their first meet, which will be with Clemson at an undecided date. The meet was originally scheduled for February 9, but it will probably be postponed to some later date.

On the varsity squad, McFadden, captain of the team, and H. M. Wilson are working on the free style. McLaurin and Morrow, who has been assisting with life-saving work and physical education, are also training for the free style. Powell Freeman is working on the breast stroke, and Tom Valley on the back stroke, while McFadden will probably do the fancy diving. George Dunlap is manager.

The freshman team is also working hard and hopes to duplicate the feat of last year's rat team, which won the state championship. B. W. Legare is captain of the team, Will Wallace alternate captain, and Hamp Johnson manager. Alexander is working on fancy diving and the breast stroke. Will Wallace on the back stroke, and Kendall on fancy diving. The following are concentrating on the free style: Legare, Furman Wallace, McInnes, Propst, Schumacher, McKee, and Ed Montgomery.

Lauds Teachers For Their Work

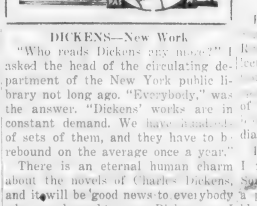
One In Every Four Gets Less Than Minimum NRA Scale, Shown By Statistics.

Greenwood, Jan. 26. Teachers' salaries in relation to wages paid by the NRA were emphasized in an address here yesterday before the Greenwood Teachers' association by Dr. Roswell C. Long, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, in his discussion of Character Education."

Dr. Long quoted the United States commissioner of education in a statement that the closing of schools constituted the "greatest crisis in American education" and in this connection paid high tribute to "that army of heroes and heroines—the teachers who have stuck to their tasks for the sheer love of the task, without compensation or with little compensation in terms of financial pay."

He then quoted the following statistics, regarded as peculiarly timely, from the report of the United States commission of education: in November, 1932, only 40 schools in the nation were closed; in April, 1933, 5,825 schools were closed; it is estimated on reports from county superintendents that by April of this year 20,300 schools will have been closed, with an enrollment of 1,025,000 pupils; and that during this year one teacher in every four will receive a salary lower than that permitted under the Blue Eagle code. The Southern states are especially affected.

The northeast section, representing all the New England states, spent last year an [illegible] per student; while the average for West Virginia, Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee and Kentucky was $40.56. On the first of last month 145 schools were reported closed in Alabama with 40 per cent of the teachers getting less than the minimum wage for unskilled labor under the NRA; in Arkansas, 400 schools closed with 85 per cent of teachers receiving less than the minimum of unskilled NRA labor; in Oklahoma, half of the schools are either closed or with a greatly reduced term, and 80 per cent of the teachers receive less than the minimum NRA wage; and in West Virginia 3,250 schools operating on less than a six months term, and 6,005 teachers receiving less than the minimum wage for unskilled NRA labor. It is estimated that to add the total of children ordinarily out of school in normal years, there will be the staggering total of 2,200,000 children of school age out of school.



"The crisis is bound to be followed by educational reconstruction," Dr. Long observed. "Reconstruction that must be one of purpose as well as of prosperity. In this task, you and I

Rifle Team Score Drops In 3rd Match

The rifle team fired a total of 3541 in the match last week for the second high score of the season. Wingate had the high individual score with a total of 366. P. M. Tiller and J. G. Jeanes followed closely with 364 and 362, respectively.

Following are the complete scores for the week, columns in the order, prone, sitting, kneeling, standing and total:

DICKENS—New Work

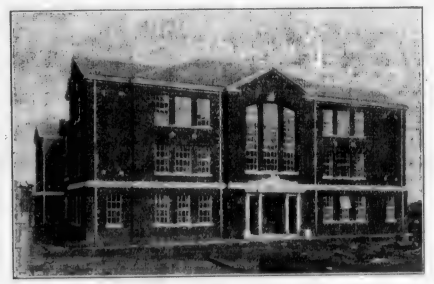
"Who reads Dickens any more?" I asked the head of the circulating department of the New York public library not long ago. "Everybody," was the answer. "Dickens' works are in constant demand. We have hundreds of sets of them, and they have to be rebound on the average once a year."

There is an eternal human charm about the novels of Charles Dickens, South Africa, telling how I. J. Dexter, and it will be good news to everybody a poor prospector, had found a pure I read the dispatch from Pretoria, tropics, as has happened three times white diamond as big as a hen's egg, which he sold at once for $315,000. To be sure, he hadn't traveled very far, but he had been hunting for diamonds for eighteen years. Now, at 62, he says he is going to go into farming on a large scale, which is what he has always wanted to do.

Only three other diamonds larger than this one, which weighs 726 carats, have ever been found. The largest, the Cullinan, holds chief place among England's crown jewels. And if anybody thinks it foolish to pay huge sums for a bit of stone, see how the money paid for the Jonker diamond goes immediately into circulation, for the purchase of land and livestock for Jonker's farm.

GOLD—IN Plowed Furrow

One of the impelling reasons for a readjustment of the gold standard of money is the fact that the world's supply of gold is not increasing while the gold requirements for international trade have increased enormously since the last "gold strike." But it is anybody's guess when and where another gold deposit will be found.



The other day an Australian farmer dropped a wrench while plowing. Going [illegible] to find for the wrench he saw a piece of glittering quartz in a furrow. It had a streak of gold in it. He forgot all [illegible] the wrench and started to dig [illegible] found a gold-bearing quartz [illegible] which he took out $2,200 [illegible] to ask.

Gold, as [illegible] prospectors say, is where you find it.

CLIMATE—It Changes

Greenland is getting colder while Alaska is getting warmer, scientists who have been studying Arctic conditions say. A hundred thousand years ago the glacial ice-cap scraped all North America bare of vegetation, as [illegible] such as Kentucky. As the ice [illegible] trees began to grow in its [illegible] soil. Forests are advancing [illegible] Alaska at the rate of [illegible] in hundred years, but ancient [illegible] in Greenland have been again denuded of trees and the [illegible] once was fertile is now [illegible] year around.

Some think this means that another [illegible] is forming, to descend upon the northern lands and once [illegible] man and beast to the tropics, as has happened three times in the past million years. But I think I shall let posterity do the worrying

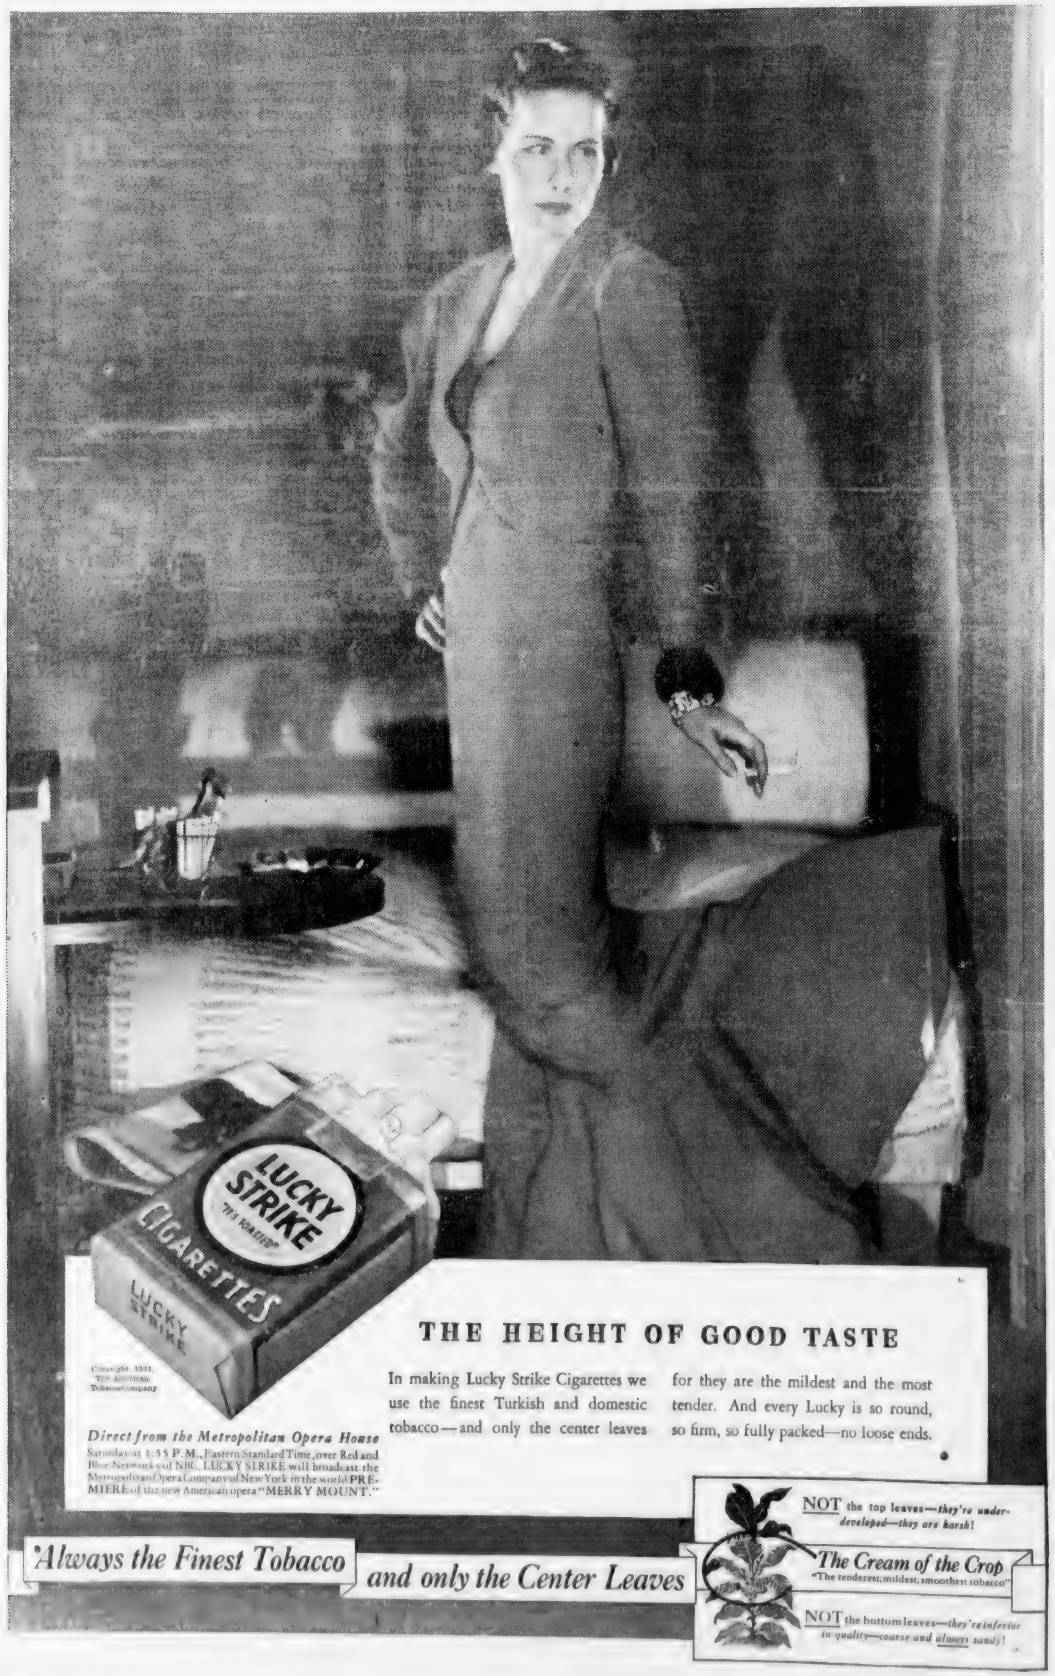
RAMBLING 'ROUND NEW YORK with HUGH KENNY



A four-page newspaper is published in New York with a vocabulary of only 2000 words. It is published by the Language Research committee affiliated with New York university, and is used to aid foreign-born adults in learning English and adjusting themselves to the American environment. The average American-born adult has a vocabulary of 25,000 words, yet the 2000-word newspaper is very readable, even to us.

The songs most frequently played on five New York radio stations a recent week in the radio census: "Puttin' Head Jonas," "The Boy You Love," "Along," "Honeymoon Hotel," "Good Night Little Girl," "Who Wrote That," "I Ask," "You've Got Everything," "Don't You Remember," "Heaven On ... bills and the J. Ohio has swallowed a whale! Or at least that's the story of the whale's owner here who shipped his 55-ton whale on a 65-foot truck recently, bound for New York. He says that not only is the whale worth $25,000 but that he loves it and its loss has affected him deeply. He has appealed to Lincoln highway police to help him locate the whale, the truck and the driver. The whale, stuffed, was to be put on exhibition here in New York.

In response to my telephoned inquiry for an out-of-town guess' case, this prompt answer from Radio City, music hall. "For equipment for the hard-of-hearing, speak to one of the ushers, deposit $2. The usher will show you to a seat in the twelfth row in the orchestra which is wired for the purpose, and connect the instrument. Return the instrument on leaving the theatre and your deposit will be returned in full."

ROUND-UP

The nightmare is over now. Exams are only an unpleasant memory, and we can allow our strained minds to relax again into unshrinking ease. The "hush-in-the-airish" atmosphere has faded. Perhaps this little bit of blank verse will revive the hopeless feeling. However, it's typical. The unknown author offers apologies to Mr. Carl Sandburg:

The fog always slides in
On little cat feet—
Just about the time
Of examinations.

It sits and looks
Over desk and chair
On silent haunches;
And then moves slowly on,
And sometimes it stays and stays.

It is curious what psychological power the word "examination" carries with it. I have seen many a person get the "jitters" an hour before standing one, and finally walk into the classroom as much perturbed as a pig going to slaughter (minus the squeal). I have seen a poor innocent young thing tearful when the questions were unshrouded, as was the case in high school where a forbiding black cheese-cloth curtain hung to veil the secret. Sometimes we muttered "woebegone," "Let us see the body." And then there are those whose serenity is never broken by even the sight of a conglomeration of math problems. I have often wondered whether these are generally the "bright" or the blandly ignorant. More likely the latter.

Whenever I hear that monotonously melancholy song, "The Last Round-Up," moaning in my unwilling ears, I think of Texas Guinan. Probably the most notorious figure in the growth of the American night-club, her "Hello, sucker" made her famous. She could take it as well as give it, and her last words were, "I'm headin' for the last round-up." The other day I found this saying of hers: "Marriage may be all right, but it seems like carrying love a little too far." She was Texas Guinan.

Having read "Marie Antoinette," Stefan Zweig's biography, mainly because it is the "thing to do," I became interested in French court life of the period enough to delve into the "Memoirs of Madame DuBarry." As a writer (if she was one), DuBarry was somewhat of a failure, but as a mistress she displayed remarkable talents, and her spicy anecdotes are rather amusing to the persevering reader. If you happen to be persevering, perhaps you'd be rewarded. However, Boccaccio is less taxing.

It's been interesting to note the succession of silly songs that have swept the country beginning with the amusing "Three Little Pigs" from Walt Disney's highly successful Mickey Mouse cartoon through "Annie Doesn't Live Here Anymore" and "Where's Elmer?" to the amazingly nonsensical "Jimmy Had a Nickel." It seems to be quite the rage. It may be a sign of our low mentality. Madness would overtake me if there weren't an occasional Jerome Kern or George Gershwin lyric to counteract. One of the most beautiful is "The Touch of Your Hand." The same author wrote the very popular "Ole Man River" of "Show Boat" fame.

From Other Campuses

Duke

Cornelius McGillicuddy, Jr., son of the famous Philadelphia Aehletics baseball manager, better known as Connie Mack, is one of the most promising players on the Duke university basketball varsity, which has won the North Carolina collegiate title for the last four seasons.

Connie, Jr., a sophomore, is jumping center for the Blue Devils, and although he has not yet been given definite assurance that he will be the regular center, his coach thinks there's not much doubt about his ability.

Next spring Connie, Jr., is expected to go out for college baseball, where he will be coached by one of his father's former stars, Jack Coombs. The Duke sophmoore is considered a pretty good pitcher, although he has never played around professional teams very much.

Los Angeles

One of the most drastic steps in the history of public education was taken recently when the Los Angeles board of education ordered the abandonment of 275 elementary school buildings which had been condemned as unsafe after last year's earthquake, and the substitution of 2,000 tents to house the 303,000 pupils put out of the school buildings.

Idaho

When CWA jobs were opened up to students at the University of Idaho, 438 students signed up for the jobs.

The work will be done about the campus, a publicly owned institution.

Northwestern

Another nice old fallacy has been smashed by a college professor.

Prof. G. L. Freeman, of Northwestern university, asserts that there is no "best time" in which to get the day's work done. Experiment's showed this, he says.

Some people have the idea, he says, that they can do their best work only in the early morning, or late at night. This is a mistaken notion, Prof. Freeman says.

"It is a matter of simple training," he said. "Differences in the time of eating, sleeping and exercising are responsible for daily variations in efficiency."

Lynchburg

Eugene and Leonard Bartnum are big athletes at different colleges, but the other day they ran together.

The "race" was to the minister's, and the brothers made it in a tie.

Eugene, captain of the Lynchburg (Va.) college basketball team, married Miss Ellen Douglas Powell of Lynchburg.

Leonard married Miss Helen Barker of Packers ang. Leonard is a football star at West Virginia Wesleyan university.

The double wedding was an elopement for all four young people.

After the ceremony the two brothers returned with their brides to their respective alma maters.

Michigan

Michigan State college just missed spoiling a long record of victories on the basketball court for Notre Dame last week.

It took three overtime periods for the Notre Dame varsity to win the contest, 38 to 33.

The victory was the twentieth straight for the Irish.

Moose Krause, Notre Dame center, won the contest when he sank two short shots from the floor in the third period which had begun 30 all.

Millsaps

The Purple and White, Millsaps college student paper, in its co-ed edition, listed ten points each on "How to hold your girl" and "How to hold your man."

How to hold your girl: 1. Be nice, but not good. 2. Talk lots. 3. Don't drink. 4. Be serious. 5. If you don't know the ropes, learn them. 6. Be sweet. 7. Don't tell dirty jokes. 8. Be sincere. 9. Be as faithful as possible. 10. Be thoughtful of her.

How to hold your man: 1. Don't be a goody-good, but be nice. 2. Don't talk too much. 3. Don't act sophisticated. 4. Be serious and act wise and worldly. 5. If you have brains, don't show it. 6. Be sweet, but don't be dependent. 7. Don't drink; don't cuss. 8. Be virtuous. 9. Don't expect him to be too faithful. 10. Don't suggest too early marriage.

Bradley

Bradley college (Peoria, Ill.) students have long had one big reason for disliking chapel services. They couldn't hear the speakers.

For years nothing was done about it. This year, however, Ray Kempf was in the student body, and he did something. He designed and built an amplifying system and presented it to the college. It was installed and it worked.

For his services to the institution, Kempf was awarded a scholarship.

CAMPUS NOTES

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Graham, of Rock Hill, visited their son, Cecile, on Saturday afternoon.

Buddy Chapman returned to school Thursday after recovering from a chronic infection that caused his prolonged absence.

Laurence Mixson and Ned Hays have recovered from the ill effects they suffered when they fell out of a motor boat into the cold waters of Lake Murray.

Joe E. Brown reports that he is getting along as well as could be expected after strenuous exam week.

K. Mills and his Band Wagon played for the Roosevelt ball in Union Tuesday night.

Allen Collins spent the week-end after examinations at his home near Monroe, N. C. He had as his guests Lee Redmond, Jimmy and John Wilson, Ben Robinson, J. Nelson Willis, and Boggs A. Robinson.

Charlie Wannamaker and Alex Kendall enjoyed the social life of Saluda after they finished exams.

Bill White, of the class of '33, spent a day on the campus recently. He is now employed by a Rock Hill bank.

We can now see more and better movies for less money. The Casino Theatre has introduced two ten-cent shows and three twenty-five-cent shows per week. The program for the coming week promises to be quite good.

On Monday and Tuesday Paul Muni's latest starring vehicle, "Hi Nellie," is one of the most discussed of the latest movies. Clinton is extremely lucky in getting it this week since it has been only one week on Broadway. The Wednesday show brings the inimitable-sophisticated Adolphe Menjou in his latest feature, "The Worst Woman in Paris?" Joe E. Brown is to be seen on Thursday's show, "Son of a Sailor." Jean Harlowe and Lee Tracy are co-starred for the first time in "Bombshell," which plays here Friday. It is quite an interesting and fast-moving comedy and it presents Miss Harlowe in her best performance to date. In this production she makes one realize she can act as well as being the possessor of lots of "these's" and "those's."

Radio

The programs for the coming week promise a great variety of entertainment. The outstanding programs are as follows:

Monday—Frances Alda, soprano; Lawrence Tibbett, baritone.

Tuesday—Wayne King and his orchestra; Ed Wynn; Ben Bernie and his orchestra.

Wednesday—Guy Lombardo and his orchestra; Burns and Allen.

Thursday — Cap'n Henry's Show Boat.

Friday—Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra (Leopold Stokowsky).

Saturday — Metropolitan Opera broadcast, "Merry Mount"; Olsen and Johnson, comedians; Boston Symphony orchestra (Serge Kossevitsky).

Sunday—Helen Morgan; Jan Garber and his orchestra; New York Philharmonic orchestra (Toscanini); Richard Bonelli, baritone; (novelty program (Jack Benny); Helen Hayes, motion picture and stage star.

On Saturday afternoon the lovers of opera will have an unusual treat when they hear the world premier of Howard Hanson's "Merry Mount," with Lawrence Tibbett and Gota Ljunberg in the leading roles. This is the fifteenth American opera to be presented by the Metropolitan. We all hope, however, that this presentation will prove to be betetr than the operatic version of Eugene O'Neil's "Emperor Jones." It should be especially interesting with Mme. Ljungberg in the east since her brilliant singing and characterization of Strauss' "Salome."

and a little later Baker bagged another. Not to be outdone, Joe Bradley arched one into the ozone which slid gracefully through the net to bring the Calvinists' score within two points of a deadlock. But ere long, close guarding resulted in a personal foul and an Erskine counter. Then another field goal and the game ended.

Bolton, Erskine center, was high scorer with eleven points, four field goals and three free throws. Waldrep, P. C. pivot man, bagged four field goals to take second scoring honors. Red Wyatt shot six points as did Lynn. Wyatt played a bang-up floor game. Lynn played his usual good guarding game, with Bradley sharing the honors.

P. C.-Furman

The last minute and a half meant a ball game for Furman on the Baptist court Friday when the Hurricane scored a field goal and a free throw in that period to nose out a strong P. C. team, 21-18.

Confident of the outcome as the result of their earlier easy defeat of the Presbyterians, the Hurricane was surprised at meeting a vastly improved quint that was ahead 13-7 at the half time point and held the lead until the waning moments of the fray.

Levi, Wyatt and Waldrep scored P. C.'s points, while Lynn and Bradley held the opposing forwards to a total of five. Roper, Baptist center, accounted for eleven of his teams points to lead the night's scoring.

It refers to the then "hobo avenue"—the long street fronting Thornwell Orphanage, in full view of certain bright eyes which possessed a deep interest for a large number of college boys . . . and still does. Professor McWhorter was an honorary member. "The Sickle Club" was not entirely masculine. Miss Annie Wright, the aunt of the writer, and "Miss Cat Bean"—now Mrs. Bothwell Graham, were the ones for whom it was quoted, "Wanted: a second hand ladies wheel." "Print Saxe" and "Lonnie Loyle" contributed five poetic pages on every subject from "Messhall Happiness" to "Rumpus Recollections" of a freshman: "Remember dreaming about half the night as on my front lay!"

And $100 covered matriculation, board, tuition and room-rent for one year.

Rats Hold Little Fleet For First Half, But Seceders Come Back Strong In Final Period.

Erskine frosh defeated the P. C. freshman basketball team, 43 to 29, in the Leroy Springs gymnasium Saturday night. During the early stages of the game it seemed that the rats might defeat the team from Due West, but during the final period the game was clearly Erskine's.

Evans was high scorer for P. C., with 10 points, while Gettys topped the Erskine scoring list with 14.

Furman-P. C.

The Presbyterian freshman basketball team lost a rather one-sided game with Furman frosh by a score of 39 to 19 at Greenville Friday night. Furman rats combined passing and good basket work to defeat the P. C. team. Starting for P. C. were Evans, Bolick, Mansfield, Bird and Daniels. Substitutions for P. C. were Cleveland and Weathers. Bolick was high scorer with 8 points.

For Furman, Culclasure was high scorer with a total of 25 points.

CLEMSON BOXERS SQUELCH P. C. HOPES FOR SECOND PLACE

Bolick and Sims Win For Presbyterian By Knockout Route. Seagle Outpoints Williams To Complete Blue Hose Winning. Bengals Take Victory By One Default and Four Decisions.

The Clemson college boxers put it on P. C.'s maulers Wednesday night by the tune of five bouts to three to squelch Blue Stocking hopes for second place in the state glove race. The bouts were held in the Clemson field house.

Bolick, Sims and Seagle were the fighters to turn in wins for the Hosemen. Sims and Bolick won by the knockout route. P. C. did not have an entry in the senior welterweight division and forfeited the bout in this class.

It was Bolick's second knockout in as many fights. Against Citadel, he laid Fishburne away in the second round and repeated against his fellow-townsman, Dick Allan, Clemson lightheavy. Allan went down once in the first round and was on the mat in the second spasm when his seconds chunked in the towel.

Plenty of fists were slung in the Seagle-Williams scrap, with "the Seag" having a comfortable margin on the winning side of the score pad from the opening bell. Seagle used a right hook and uppercuts with either hand to advantage. He flew into the center of the ring for all the world like a bantam rooster going into action, and about that size. And all that prevented feathers from flying all over the place from the ferocity of the action was the fact that neither gladiator was arrayed in the roosterical decorations. Williams is a crafty fighter who, though outclassed, stayed in the battle the whole way, dealing in telling blows when the occasion presented itself. Both men swung wildly at times. Williams started at least one would-be haymaker from over Seneca way; and Seagle retaliated with a right that originated in Walhalla, but luckily, neither blow landed.

With characteristic eagerness, Sims got down to work in the opening round, and had Henley on the mat for a seven-count in the first paragraph. Henley went down again in the second round for a count of seven, and a little later the referee stopped the fight when the Clemson man dropped to his knees to avoid one of Sims' dangerous rushes. The outcome of this go was never in doubt after the first round, but few expected the end so sudden.

Allan, Bolick's adversary in the middleweight division, twisted his ankle painfully on going down in the second round and was unable to rise before his seconds tossed in the towel. The P. C. captain had Allan outclassed from start to finish.

The closest bout on the night's program was between Bill Clark of P. C., and "Bull" Dawson of Clemson. Although Clark had the reach on the Tiger entry, the sneaky Dawson kept wading in and had an edge in the infighting to pile up points for a decision. Clark's straight left caught him often, but he always came back for more and slid under the annoying left frequently enough to bring the fight to Clark and make the Hoseman's superior reach ineffective.

"Chocolate" Fudge let J. McClary carry the fight for two rounds, contenting himself with flicking an occasional left to the torso or face to keep on even terms with the persevering P. C. fighter until the final stanza. In the third round he opened up and ran up enough points to take the bout, which had been on even terms to that point because of McClary's aggressiveness.

Making his first appearance in the ring, "Goat" Holliday fought the experienced, but by no means decrepit, Medlin of Clemson, and showed that he had possibilities, although the bout was Medlin's all the way. Downed for the count of eight in the opening round, Holliday came back in the second round to fight on more even terms. Medlin took every round.

The superior reach of Altman, kept Jack McCaskill on the defensive throughout the featherweight go and gained the decision for the Clemson battler. This tussle started slowly but gained momentum and both men were bleeding before the end of the first round. McCaskill received a cut over the right eye and Altman a cut across the nose.

In the only preliminary bout on the card, Gillis, 129, and Cousar, 127, fought three rounds to no decision. Both showed a willingness to mix, and did so freely.

The summary:

119 pound: Seagle (P. C.) winner over Williams (Clemson); decision.

129 pound: Altman (Clemson), winner over McCaskill (P. C.); decision.

139 pound: Dawson (Clemson), winner over Clark (P. C.); decision.

149 pound: Fudge (Clemson), winner over McClary (P. C.); decision.

159 pound: won by Clemson; forfeit.

169 pound: Bolick (P. C.), winner over Allan (Clemson); technical knockout.

179 pound: Medlin (Clemson), winner over Holliday (P. C.); decision.

Unlimited: Sims (P. C.) winner over Henley (Clemson); technical knockout.

Referee: Siegel (Clemson).

Swimmers To Meet Clemson Monday

Varsity and Freshmen Engage Tigers In Dual Meet In Leroy Springs Gymnasium.

In the second swimming meet ever to be held in Leroy Springs gymnasium, the varsity and freshman teams will swim against the strong Clemson tank teams on Monday afternoon, February 19, at 4:30 o'clock. The first meet that was held in the P. C. pool was with Furman last year. The Presbyterian freshman team won the state championship in 1933.

Monday's meet is the first of the season for P. C. as well as for Clemson. Both varsity and frosh squads have been training rigorously in anticipation of the coming contest, and uder the able coaching of Jim Brewer, will present serious obstacles to any team that aspires to state laurels. Although this is the first year that swimming has been listed as a minor sport at P. C., much interest is being manifested on the campus, and indications are that a large crowd will witness the meet that will open the season.

Members of the squads are: Varsity: H. M. Wilson, Valley, McFadden, Freeman, Morrow, Wooten.

Freshman: Alexander, Legare, Wallace, W., Propst, Wallace, F., McKee, Montgomery, McInnes, Kendall, Shoemaker, and Daniels.

George Dunlap is manager of the varsity team and Hamp Johnson is manager of the freshman.

Death Claims P. C. Alumnus

News has just been received here of the recent death of a distinguished alumnus of Presbyterian college, the Rev. Walter Warren Edge, D.D., of Lancaster, Pa.

Dr. Edge was graduated from Presbyterian college in the class of 1899, and after studying for the ministry at Columbia Theological seminary, entered upon his life work as a minister in 1902.

He took postgraduate work at Princeton seminary, and most of his preaching was done in the North, where he was very successful. He was an eloquent and thoughtful speaker, a student and a good pastor.

Dr. Edge represented Presbyterian college in the first intercollegiate oratorical contest in this state, held at Erskine college in 1899, where he won third place.

Dr. Edge was a brother of Mrs. G. A. Black and Mrs. J. V. Edwards of Clinton, and his aged mother, Mrs. N. J. Edge, is still living, also a resident of Clinton.

In his death the college feels that one of its finest alumni has gone, leaving behind a reputation in his life-work worthy of his alma mater.

Sorority Gives Social Affair

Large Number Attend Valentine Ball of Alpha Psi Delta At Country Club Last Week.

Alpha Psi Delta, P. C.'s recently organized sorority, held its first large social gathering Friday night at the Lakeside Country club. The event was in the form of a Valentine dance. K. Mills and his Bandwagon rose to the occasion by furnishing a wide selection of harmonious dance pieces. The social was chaperoned by Mrs. Paul Burroughs, Captain R. E. Wysor and Dr. J. H. Davis.

One feautre of the dance which was novel in the experience of most of the boys present was that the girls broke, as is generally the custom at dances given by young ladies' clubs. For this reason the members invited a number of outside girls from Clinton and Laurens, and also several from Converse college and the University of South Carolina. Most of the boys at the dance were from the college, practically all of the social lights of the campus being present.

The decoration of the ball room was very effectively done. A striking arrangement of red and white crepe paper carried out the Valentine theme. In a prominent place hung the seal of Alpha Psi Delta, done in the sorority colors, blue and white.

The affair was well planned and smoothly run off. There were four no-breaks and a half-hour intermission, during which the club members served punch and cakes.

The members of the newly-formed sorority are to be congratulated on their success in staging the first social event of its kind ever held at P. C. If they acquit themselves as well in other phases of college activities, the club will undoubtedly be an important factor in campus life.

Nelson Talks At Y. M. C. A. Meet

The Y. M. C. A. held its regular meeting on last Thursday night. E. L. Nelson spoke on the subject, "What Do You Know?"

Nelson said in part: "We often hear people ask this question, 'What do you know?' In reply we say, 'Nothing.' There are a great number of things that we do not know; and probably we shall never know. Looking back over the life of Paul, we find that he knew nothing until the Lord appeared to him. The Lord had to knock him down in the dust in order that he might learn something. Paul learned his lesson. He came to know Christ as his Lord.

"We must live the principles that Christ laid down for us, if we desire to know Him."

A quartet made up of students from the Bell Street (colored) school gave several musical selections, as the program came to a close.

P. C. Musicians Have Fine Tour

Glee Club and Orchestra Return After Appearances In Several S. C. and Georgia Towns.

The forty-two members of the Presbyterian College glee club and orchestra returned to the campus Thursday night after a four-day tour, giving performances in several South Carolina and Georgia towns. This is the third trip which the club has taken during the present school year, and marks the completion of a majority of the scheduled performances.

The first program was given Monday night in Anderson before a large audience in the Boys' High school auditorium. Tuesday morning the group gave a part of the regular program at the Seneca high school, and Tuesday night appeared in Toccoa, Ga.

Probably the most enthusiastic reception that the club has yet received was at the G. S. C. W. auditorium in Milledgeville, Ga., where the club was sponsored by the Presbyterian church. The boys were entertained at the college with a dinner dance given by the senior class, and after the performance with a dance at the country club.

During the past two years the glee club, under the direction of Dr. S. M. Huntley, has enjoyed a marked success. Increasing interest has been shown by the students, and besides being one of the most active of the extra-curricula activities on the campus, has proven to be an excellent advertisement for the college.

Review Of Coaches

Especially Walter A. Johnson

By R. C. McLees

Q. If the average Presbyterian student was informed on the subject, why would 1913 B. C. outrank both 1066 and 1492 in his list of important dates? A. Because the average student ordinarily is more interested in sports than in either William the Conqueror or Columbus, and 1913 B. C. dates the first year in which varsity football became a part of the activities of Presbyterian college. B. C.—"Before Coach"—and for the past seventeen years the title "Coach" has been the exclusive property of Walter A. Johnson.

Before 1913, football had been played—viciously enough, as Professor A. V. Martin, who was at least once an "innocent bystander overthrown," can testify. The fact that the Eukosmian and Philomathean literary societies were rivals on a make-shift gridiron, as well as on the rostrum, might indicate that in one or the other, brawn, baffled by brain, sought its revenge in physical contest.

Before 1913, "athletics" had mainly referred to baseball, and periodically the faculty committee had secured the services of some locally renowned athlete to coach the team for the season. In 1913, when football came into its own, it became necessary to secure a less transient physical director to supplement the faculty.

Coach E. L. Booe, whose services P. C. was fortunate enough to secure, is recorded as being: "one of the best athletes Davidson college ever produced . . . in the front rank of broken field runners and punters in the South; played professional baseball . . . at St. Paul near the top of the league in batting and fielding . . . while at Pittsburgh led the league in fielding, with 1000 in 30 games; in American association . . . secured at St. Paul for P. C. as coach . . . now property of Indianapolis team in the Federal league for the coming season . . . " Coach Booe remained with us for only a year. In 1914, Coach Erling C. Theller came to P. C. as "General Athletic Coach and Physical Director." His burly form appeared upon the

Dates Set For Greek Dances

Jimmie Gunn and Orchestra To Play For Pan-Hellenic Celebration March 2nd and 3rd.

The Pan-Hellenic council, composed of one member from each of the six social fraternities on the campus, has announced definite arrangements for the second group in the series of dances usually given each year. This group, designated as the Pan-Hellenic dances, will be danced at Copeland hall during the two days, March 2nd and 3rd.

There will be the customary three dances during the week-end: a formal dance Friday night, a tea dance Saturday afternoon, and an informal dance Saturday night. Jimmie Gunn and his orchestra, which have played several engagements from WBT in Charlotte, N. C., and at several college dances in this state, have been engaged to furnish the music for all three occasions.

This is usually one of the most colorful social events of the entire school year and generally draws a large crowd not only from the student body but from out of town as well. Up until last year it was the custom to have four major groups of dances annually, but last year due to financial conditions only two were given. This year the old schedule is being resumed. Although the dates set for the second group are rather early, it is thought that there will be a large crowd in attendance.

The members of the Pan-Hellenic council for this year and their fraternities are as follows: C. W. Graham, Pi Kappa Phi, president; C. B. Elliott, Alpha Lambda Tau; J. H. Viser, Pi Kappa Alpha; D. H. McFadden, Kappa Alpha; B. A. Robinson, Alpha Kappa Pi; and M. P. Freeman, Beta Kappa.

Usually one section of Smyth dormitory is open for the girls who are the guests of P. C. boys, but this practice is not to be continued this year.

McSween Cites Paul As Example

Presbyterian College Head Addresses Large Men's Sunday Meeting In Columbia.

Columbia, Feb. 6.—Using the example of the life of Paul, the Apostle, the Rev. John McSween, D.D., president of Presbyterian college, Clinton, delivered a strong and inspiring address to a large audience of men at the Imperial theatre Sunday afternoon. This was one of the meetings in the winter series being held under auspices of the Columbia Young Men's Christian association.

The Rev. F. Ray Riddle, pastor of Shandon Presbyterian church and a classmate of Doctor McSween at Columbia Theological seminary, introduced the speaker.

Introductory to his remarks, Doctor McSween spoke of the days when he was a student at the theological seminary, then located here, which, he said, had done much toward shaping his life and he counted it a privilege to come back to Columbia to address a body of men like that assembled Sunday.

The Presbyterian college head recessed the subject formerly announced, "What Can a Man Know About Re-

Frats Conduct Prayer Groups

Beginning tonight at seven o'clock, the six fraternities on the campus will conduct a short prayer group in the college chapel. These prayer meetings are being held in preparation for the coming to the campus of Rev. A. G. Harris, of Milledgeville, Ga., who will bring two gospel messages daily.

The schedule for these meetings are:

Monday—Alpha Kappa Pi.
Tuesday—Alpha Lambda Tau.
Wednesday—Beta Kappa.
Thursday—Kappa Alpha.
Friday—Pi Kappa Alpha.
Monday—Pi Kappa Phi.

Every student is urged to be present for these meetings. They will last only about ten minutes.

STUDENT VIEWPOINTS

Do you agree with everyone? And does everyone agree with you? Probably not. And, we may say, possibly not. In a college of nearly three hundred students there must be differences of opinion; there must be those who have their own thoughts and ideas. These, let us call the student viewpoints. There is only one way of allowing the students to express themselves, if we accept the democratic way of method, and that is through the college paper. It would really be [illegible] through the student's [illegible] there is what it should be.

It is our staff's primary purpose to provide an outlet for your opinions, your views, your ideas and thoughts. Too long there has been the notion that only what is adhered to by those in charge can be printed. But we want you to know that this is not our policy. This is your paper, not ours. Give us your thoughts, either of local or world-wide interest, and let us pass them on. We shall appreciate it, and we feel that our readers will also. We want The Blue Stocking to be truly an expression of "Student Viewpoints."

OPEN FORUM

BALANCE THE SPIRIT

Is the school spirit at Presbyterian college all that it should be? Let us look into the subject more thoroughly than is customary. What things are necessary to a school spirit?

We all, with a reasonable amount of sincerity, agree that three phases are required: an athletic, an honorable, and a religious spirit. Do we have these? The support given our teams by the student body of P. C. can not be surpassed by any school. Our teams are known by all their opponents as hard playing, but as clean teams. They exhibit a standard of sportsmanship unexcelled by any team on any field of contest. There is nothing that can be done to improve our spirit in this phase.

Only recently the student body took a stand against the Honor System in the second matter. The adoption by the students of the honorary council on cheating has done a great deal to avoid the expulsion of "rating" from our campus. Let us hope that in a short time cheating will be unknown here. The perfect school spirit must have the hatred for dishonor. We believe that the students see the necessity of it and will wipe it out. We think that this phase also is in good conditions and will take care of itself.

Next week P. C. will be given a chance to improve the religious phase of her spirit. Will we take advantage of this opportunity? Our Christian spirit can be improved. Let us remember that we can, by taking advantage of this opportunity, raise the already high standards even higher. Never allow it to be said that the students of Presbyterian college let such an opportunity escape them.

Will we work to make our school better? Will we be able to say that we, as students, have done our duty to P. C. if we do not continuously strive forward? Will we balance the spirit or will be leave the work unfinished?

WHEN WINTER COMES

"You—Freshman! Come here and plug up the hole in my wind-break!"

Present Day Science

Charles E. Carson

HINDOO LEGEND OF THE MOON

I think I shall digress a little today and tell you a story of the Moon. It is often quite a relief to get our minds off the more serious things and think of those of lighter vein, which after all, make life really worth living. I don't remember where or when I got this story, but here it is.

The Sun, Moon, and Wind were invited to dinner with Uncle and Aunt Thunder and Lightning. Their mother was a distant star. At the dinner the Sun and Wind were very greedy and very selfish, and neither thought to save anything to bring back to Mother Star. But the Moon was very kind, and kept the best of the meal to carry to its mother.

When they arrived home, Mother Star, who had seen all, asked what they had brought. The Sun said, "Nothing, we wanted to enjoy ourselves." The Wind said, "We were too busy eating to think about you." But the Moon said, "Here, see all these good things I've saved for you."

Therefore the Star cursed the Sun and Wind. She said to the Sun, "Because of your unthoughtfulness you will ever be hot and scorching. Men will cover up their heads when you appear." And to the Wind she said, "You will blow during the hot, dry weather, and poach and shrivel all living things." But to the Moon, "Be cool and calm and bright. You will have no dazzling glare. Your rays will be pure, and you will be liked by everyone."

And here's another. You know in England people imagine that the constellation we call the Big Dipper is a wagon. And here is the way the wagon got in the sky. Once as Jesus was walking along the shore of the Sea of Galilee, tired and weary, He met a peasant who offered Him a ride in his wagon. This Jesus accepted, and as a reward He offered the peasant a home in Heaven. The old Jew preferred, however, to drive his wagon forever in the sky, and be a guide to people on Earth. His wish was granted, and he now lives for eternity among the stars.

R. O. T. C. NEWS

Officers of the days and their orderlies for the coming week are as follows:

Monday, Feb. 12—1st Lt. Cowan, J. W., with Sgt. Arnold, V. M.

Tuesday, Feb. 13—1st Lt. Freeman, M. P., with Sgt. Fleming, R. F.

Wednesday, Feb. 14—1st Lt. Wyman, H., with Sgt. Harvin, S. I.

Thursday, Feb. 15—Batt. Adj. Haney, J. W., with Sgt. Dunlap, G.

Friday, Feb 16—Capt. Wilson, J. L., with Sgt. Rhodes, J.

Saturday, Feb. 17—Capt. Wingate, T. H., with Sgt. McCulloch, A. B.

Sophomores who have not already done so will call by the office of the P. M. S. and T. sometime Tuesday and get mimeographed lecture and map of the battle of Chancellorsville. It is important that each man have one of these sheets, for the classroom quiz of the week Feb. 12-17, will be taken from it.

By virtue of an order of the P. M. S. and T., the following changes in the Basic Department are effective from this date:

1. Cadet Willis, J. N., is reduced from the grade of corporal to the grade of private.
2. Cadet Morgan, J. M. regains his former grade of corporal.
3. Cadet Brewer, J. D., is advanced from the grade of private to the grade of private first class.

During this week and the following week, as has been the case the past two weeks, on Wednesday morning instead of reporting to drill as usual, "A" company freshmen will report to the Science building for instruction in "Military Policy of the United States" and "A" company sophomores will report to the armory for instruction in the automatic rifle. On Thursday at the same time, "B" company freshmen and sophomores will report to the above places; and on Friday "C" company freshmen and sophomores will do likewise.

Fearing that Cadet Morrow would neglect his army life since he only has to be corporal in his company when he isn't blowing the bugle or firing with the rifle squad; and knowing that he was the man who would be most congenial with the captain of the team, Captain Wysor has made this "most militaristic sophomore" manager of the co-ed rifle team. This is a new office in our military department, but shows promise of being an exceedingly interesting one—at least to the manager.

This week the rifle team will fire the remaining positions in the Fourth Corps Area match. Some of the positions were fired last week. Though Sgt. Young told his men before they began firing that they were just firing for the sake of having a score to send in, several of them have done just what he meant for them to do—shot remarkably well.

For the next few weeks, or until the weather becomes suitable, the battalion will practice the manual of arms in the gym. However, as soon as possible, regular drill will be resumed. The drill schedule is a bit behind this year and Captain Blanton is anxious to regain this time, since the annual spring inspection is not a long time off.

Every one in school, military and non-military, is keenly interested in the much-heralded shoulder-to-shoulder (no, with a rifle, stupid) contest between the young ladies who represent the school in the field of marksmanship and the very meek and solemn members of the regular rifle squad. To foster interest in the contest, Capt. Wysor has allowed the girls to be present when the boys fire and has made it legal for them to use any means of hook or crook or skill that they may desire to divert the attention of these men from that circular ring on the wall. In short, they can do anything—"they don't have to worry about being personal; they can get familiar if they want to." On the other hand, when they go to fire themselves, the boys, either for love of their lives or for shame, will long since have vacated the scene. Not even a man to see that no underhand work is done will be left behind. But before the battle, the boys are wondering if they are going to meet their Waterloo or their Katey, or both.

ROUND-UP

"And so they lived happily ever after—" That is the conventional—the ideal ending which we have established for the story book heroes of our fairy tales; the fairy tales which incorporate in their filmsy fabric so much of truth and human hopes and yearnings. We close our book with a sigh of pure contentment. Here, at least, things are as they should be. Here are men and women who find happiness for all life long.

Happiness is, of course, the ultimate goal of every normal human being. Most of us agree unconditionally with Santayama that, "Happiness is the only sanction of life; where happiness fails, existence remains a sad and lamentable experiment." Yet how few of us even approach this state! Rather, we drift blindly through life in a highly dilatory fashion. Our ideas as to what we want are extremely hazy. Eventually, and for the most part, subconsciously, we find that we have established definite goals. But all too often we also discover that life has passed us by; time has robbed us forever of any possible realization of these yearnings.

What makes for pleasure and consequent happiness? How do people want to live? Walter B. Pitkin, in the current issue of one of our widely-read periodicals, lists the following as what the human race craves at all times and in all places: 1. Long life; 2. Health; 3. Security; 4. Love and friendship; 5. Travel; 6. Experience; 7. Self-respect; 8. Reputation. This list does, of course, cover the field. The fulfillment of these will indubitably result in a truly happy man. Yet it is a distressing fact that few of us can ever expect to possess even the majority of them.

Is there not, then, a simpler and more practical guide than these? I believe that there is. Henry Ward Beecher expresses the idea admirably when he says, "The art af being happy lies in the power of extracting happiness from common things." For the attainment of this end a childish naivete is essential. The most beautiful thing that we are capable of experiencing is the mysterious. For this reason, habit is the arch-enemy of happiness. Almost inevitably, it seems, we sink into a dull acceptance of things as they appear. The phenomena of nature become prosaic and we do not pay to them the tribute af awe and wonder which they so richly merit. Our powers of perception are dulled; each experience tends to resemble the preceding one. And all the time we wonder that we are not happy. The achievement of this faculty of sensitive appreciation is not a simple task. It is, in itself, largely a matter of habit. But it is a habit well within the scope of every man and woman alive in the world today.

Never-the-less, we must face the fact that, anyway we consider it, the road to happiness is a treacherous one. It rolls along, firm and clearly defined, only to dwindle without warning into nothingness in the waste places of the pair. It [illegible] an assembly of notables that we find gathered here. They appear rather attractive, seated as they are with a studied nonchalance on the fallen pillars of their ruined worlds, indulging themselves in the exquisite luxury of [illegible] the past. "Ah," sighs Giyeon, "[illegible] past, and all is dust, and all is nothingness." "Yes," agrees his compatriot, Theognis, "one thing is certain, none of all mankind on whom the sun looks down gains happiness." Maupassant contributes with a truly remarkable epigram. "Happy are they whom life satisfies; who can answer themselves and be content; who have not discovered with a vast disgust that all things are a weariness." "Happiness?" scoffs Buddha, "Men are unhappy, [illegible] even those who seem happy." We are assailed by a strong temptation to join them. Almost unconsciously we catch ourselves looking around us for a seat. The discussion is truly a fascinating one. It is only the hardy that pushes along the ill-defined footpath that leads eventually to the valley of content. At best most of us spend our lives scurrying back and forth on the high road. Few of us reach the valley. Henry Van Dyke was of these few. And from its sunshine he sent back the words that sum up and answer the whole question of existence. "Be glad of life," he says, "because it gives you the chance to love, and to work, and to play, and to look up at the stars." He was a happy man!

SPORT SHOTS

A Mystery Solved. It's the Meekness of the Babe.

Something has been noticeably lacking in the realm of sports lately. The usual post-football lull has been augmented with another silence, whose cause was a matter of mystery for some time. Winter baseball swaps and purchases took up a great deal of space on sports pages, but the old spark and fire was not there.

And therein lies the clue to the contract tizzle and snap that sports news has lacked in past weeks. The annual winter fight, Ruth versus Ruppert for a salary raise, was called off by one of the principals, Ruppert was declared winner by a technical K. O.

Swat King One of Game's Greatest Attractions

"The Mighty Babe," as he will be known among the baseball-faithful and hero-worshipping youngsters for many years to come, has been the best drawing card that the national pastime has had in many summers. The fans know it and realized Jacob Ruppert, who serves beer and baseball successfully, knew it. That is why Ruth held out for unprecedented salary figures of $80,000 and $72,000; and that is why Ruppert paid it—with grumbling and threats, to be sure, but he paid it.

But Mr. Ruth is wise. He realizes that his star has set. The years have crept into his legs and weighted them so that it is now an effort to circle the bases, and what is more important, there is a vast amount of territory in Babe's part of the outfield that can be covered only by the fleet of foot, and the Herman Ruth of today is not the fleet-footed Ruth of yesterday. He was used part of the past season as a pinch hitter, and when he started a game rarely finished it.—are, no one who really knows will tell; but hair has become white long before the portion of the ritual "Whence came you? His Record Enough To Make the Turnstiles Click Still

While he may not see regular active service, Ruth will continue to entice dollars into the tills of the club owners. A glamour has been built around the "Swat King" that can not be easily erased and the name Ruth on the Yankee roster will be the means of drawing frequent customers through the turnstiles.

"...What Might Have Been"

By R. C. McLees

Be not dismayed, ye aspiring neophytes, ye newborn Beta Kappas, ye A. L. T.'s with sawdust and molasses in your lustrous hair. Consider what "might have been."

What if you were covered with flypaper and blue dye. What if you did have to number the myriad tiles in the floor of the hotel mezzanine, or count the thimblefuls of water in a barrel.

Before the savage, black Swahili warrior is even accounted a man, he must undergo some exquisite, self-inflicted torture. It is the earnest aspiration of each of these primitives to invent a torture the soul-racking anguish of which is so near the very edge of human endurance as to positively prove his stoical power of mind over matter. One favorite method required a stout bullock-skin sack, and a double handful of enormous, stinging ants, before whose armies all things living flee. The ants are sifted into the sack. Stripped, rubbed with honey, the chon-skinned gentleman leaps inside and draws the neck tight beneath his chin.

A few resinous splinters of wood, slid insidiously under the skin and lit; a few days spent stretched sprawling, face upward, upon a barren rock which fairly glows with heat before the abrupt sinking of the tropical sun . . . without water.

Why moan if forced to consume an ancient egg with pepper, or a well-oiled oyster? Suppose it were the well-known ordeal of the Sioux—the protracted fast, until famine brought delusions to the weakened brain, and the "Great Spirit" spoke.

What the rites beyond the antechamber of the initiates, in the Hung, or Triad society—the age-old mystery rite, the largest society in the world—are, no one who really knows will tell; but hair has become white long before the portion of the ritual "Whence came you? From the East. At what time? At sunrise, when the East was light."

Seneca Swamped By Rat Team

In their second game in as many days, the P. C. frosh basketball team overwhelmed Seneca high school by the score of 50 to 11 in the local gymnasium Tuesday night. The freshmen won easily and only time prevented the amassing of an even greater score. The entire team played a better brand of ball than that exhibited the night before, making good a larger percentage of the free shots, as well as floor shots.

Bolick, scoring 11 points, was high man for the evening.

Freshmen Lose By One Point

The Presbyterian freshman basketball team dropped a close game in the last few minutes of play to Greenwood high school in Leroy Springs gymnasium Monday night by the score of 16 to 15. Up until the closing seconds of play, the score see-sawed back and forth between the two teams, neither seeming to have the advantage. This was the second game lost to Greenwood, the other being played at Greenwood and lost by a three-point margin.

For Presbyterian, Evans was high scorer, with six points. Greenwood's high scorer was C. Griffin, with [illegible] points.

STUDENTS STARVE SELVES AT KANSAS U., GROUP DISCLOSES

Lawrence, Kansas.—Steps are being taken by officials of the University of Kansas to prevent self-supporting students starving themselves in order to obtain their educations.

A faculty committee was appointed recently to survey the conditions of such students, and one member of the committee reported:

"We were appalled to learn that many students are eating only two meals a day and those meals extremely light. Others were found trying to live on 15 cents a meal, eating a sandwich or a piece of cake or drinking a cup of coffee, and never varying this diet.

"Still others are trying to get by on toast and coffee and nothing else for breakfast, and then attempting to go the rest of the day without eating a thing. These students generally get so hungry about midnight that they go out and buy a hamburger sandwich or something similar."

The university, after receiving the report of the committee, issued a special bulletin to men and women doing their own cooking, telling them what foods were essential and should be included in even the least expensive diet.

One ambitious but poverty-stricken student was found to be living on a quart of milk and a sweet roll a day. His physical condition became such that he was forced to go to the university hospital for treatment.

The investigating committee, found, however, that when the students really know how to prepare menus and cook their food properly, they can get along well on very little money. One group of five men was found cooking its own meals at $1.25 to $1.50 a week per man, and eating nourishing food at that. These men were doing intelligent marketing, the committee found, instead of trying to skimp on their meals.

They bought their milk by the gallon, bought day-old bread, and got their vegetables as near as possible to the end of the day when the markets were glad to sell left-over stocks at very low prices.

Ackerman Urges Research To Keep Journalism Free

New York.—Careful research into the philosophy of journalism with an eye to keeping it free from government domination was urged last week by Dean Carl W. Ackerman of the Columbia school of journalism.

"I am confident," he said, "that new fields of research will be opened in journalism as well as in philosophy and the public welfare will be promoted, in time, as much as it has been promoted by research in the social sciences, in pure science and in medicine in recent years.

"The philosophy of journalism is a continuous search for knowledge of the truth in a life of action.

"In journalism today there is an irresistable urge to meet changing conditions of the day with change, but one of the needs of tomorrow is research—research in all of the relationships between the newspaper and the social order.

"Annually vast sums are pumped into the arteries of physics, government, medicine, social science, chemistry, electricity, philosophy, radio, economics, sociology, religion, history and other fields of inquiry; in the aggregate many millions of dollars are appropriated each year by educational and philanthropic foundations, while practically nothing is spent on research in journalism.

"In a nation where everyone active in public affairs recognizes the newspaper reports of his activities or heeds editorial comment; in a nation where there is a renascence of attention to editorials; where cartoonists wield the baton of public opinion; where news is the sinews of public sentiment; where reform, recovery and reconstruction depend in an important measure upon newspaper attention, interest and comment, surely here is a field for study.

"While not an exact science it is becoming an exacting profession, and as such it is entitled to recognition by those foundations whose sole right to exist is to improve education and advance the public welfare."

Norman Thomas, socialist leader, told a gathering in New York recently that the schools of this country had been "sterilized" by the removal of controversial subjects from their curriculums.

The Biblical characters of Green Pastures, the play based on Roark Bradford's book, Old Man Adam an' His Chillun, make up the figures in three large new stained glass windows recently dedicated in the chapel at Tuskegee institute. They were the first stained glass windows ever designed with Negro spirituals as the motif.

Seven Years—Still No Degree

Seven years ago Herman Evans began his education at Southern Methodist university, and still he has no degree.

Evans last week came to the decision that something was being put over on him. So he brought suit against the university for $21,917 for fees and tuition plus 6 per cent interest, alleging that the university had damaged his career, that the faculty had guided his course "for the sole purpose of collecting from him such fees and tuition as they might require him to pay."

Experiments Prove "Little Drink" Is Not Aid To "Best Work"

Ithaca, N. Y.—Belief on the part of many that they can do their best work after having had "a little drink," was shown to be erroneous in a series of experiments carried on at Cornell university by Dr. A. L. Winsor and Dr. E. I. Strongin.

The two scientists recently reported their findings to the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

The tests showed that drinking of alcohol increased errors from an average of two per minute to 25 per minute and that this unsteadiness lasted for about two hours. Coffee, on the other hand, was found to increase the steadiness of a sober man.

The two scientists also discovered how a person can drink and stay sober. The formula, they found, is simple enough—just drink alcohol and coffee at the same time. The effects of the two drinks were found to be antagonistic, leaving the drinker for the time being about where he started out. However, the effects of the coffee were found to wear off first, leaving the subject under the influence of the alcohol.

The experiments, moreover, affirmed the old belief that drinking black coffee is a fine way to recover from a hangover.

Drinking alcohol before and during a meal and coffee afterwards tends to aid digestion, the tests showed, because (1) alcohol while being sipped increases the flow of saliva and (2) coffee keeps the flow of saliva going. Alcohol, however, tends to dry up the saliva after it has been in the stomach for a short time, and this makes it necessary to drink the coffee to start the flow once more.

—the abc of pipe tobacco

The best tobacco for pipes comes from Kentucky . . and it's called "White Burley"

WE use White Burley in making Granger Rough Cut. It comes from the Blue Grass region of Kentucky—ripe, mild leaf tobacco that just about tops them all for fragrance and flavor.

From the right place on the stalk we select the kind that's best for pipes. Then we make it into Granger by Wellman's Method and cut it up into big shaggy flakes.

White Burley tobacco—made the way old man Wellman taught us how to make it—that's Granger.

MOVIES

On Monday and Tuesday the Casino theatre plays "Havana Widows," featuring Joan Blondell, Guy Kibbee, Glenda Farrell, and Allen Jenkins. Exhibitions charmes Joan and Glenda decide to take a short road to fun and wealth by trying their wiles on supposedly rich playboy Guy, while under the influence of the Havana sport. They get away to a good start, with Frank McHugh and Allen Jenkins, both in top form, figuring largely. But then now things go wrong—as wrong as they can go wrong in a Cuban election! The final twist adds a grand laugh, and proves that the race was conducted by people who know their comedy.

"The Mad Game," with Spencer Tracy and Claire Trevor, is scheduled to play for the first time show of the week. This picture is considered to be one of Tracy's best.

"Myrt and Marge" is the title of the movie for Thursday. This production is based on the adventures of Myrt and Marge who are featured daily on the radio.

Friday brings the lovely Ann Harding in one of her most interesting roles. She plays the part of a young doctor who is married for love, and believe me, she finds it. The cast includes Robert Young, as a wealthy playboy; Sari Maritza, as his playmate, Nils Asther, as the understanding doctor who is terribly in love with the devastating Miss Harding.

Saturday brings a new detective team which promises to be quite good. George Brent and Margaret Lindsay are featured in this cinema which bears the title, "From Headquarters." Miss Lindsay will be remembered for her fine portrayal in "Cavalcade" and "The House of 56th Street." Mr. Brent has been featured in several pictures recently including: "The Crash," "The Rich Are Always With Us" and "Lilly Turner."

RADIO

The past week has given the radio audience a diversified entertainment. On last Sunday night Kaufman and Connelly were presented by a new program, "Hall of Fame," which is sponsored by Hind's Honey and Almond Cream. So far this season they have presented Rosa Ponselle, Wheeler and Woolsey, Lily Pons, Katherine Hepburn and Douglass Montgomery. Kaufman and Connelly are noted for their Pulitzer prize winners, "Of Thee I Sing" and "Green Pastures," respectively. Last night the Hall of Fame presented Helen Hayes, famous stage and motion picture actress who is renowned for her performance in "The White Sister," "Night Flight," and Mary of Scotland."

Lotte Lehmann, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera company, was presented last evening by the Cadillac Motor program in conjunction with Arturo Toscannini, the world's most distinguished conductor.

Wayne King, Guy Lombardo, Ozzie Nelson, Joe Penner, Eddie Cantor, Gertrude Nissen, Bing Crosby, Burns and Allen, Frances Alda, John McCormack, Olsen and Johnson, The Metropolitan Opera, and the New York Philharmonic orchestra still prove to be the most popular entertainment of the week.

On Saturday afternoon, Feb. 17, Gounod's "Faust" will be broadcast in its entirety from the stage of the Metropolitan Opera house. Giovanni Martinelli, for twenty years the leading tenor of this organization, will be heard in the title role. Eide Norena will sing the part of Marguerite. Miss Norena is a new member, having made her debut last season in "La Boheme." This performance marks her first appearance on the air. Lawrence Tibbett will lend his glorious vocal equipment to the role of Valentine, while Ezio Pinza will essay the part of Mephistopheles, one of the most insidious characters in all opera. Gladys Swarthout, the young American mezzo-soprano will be heard in the attractive part of Siebel, while Henriette Wakefield will be the Martha on this occasion. The opera is based on Goethe's drama of the same name. The role of Marguerite is one of the "pet roles" of all prima donnas. Adelina Patti, Lillian Nordica, Dame Nellie Melba, Elisabeth Rethberg, Marie Mueller, and Mary Lewis are just a few of the world's greatest who have enjoyed outstanding triumphs in this famous opera. The plot is simply a delightful variation of Marlowe's play.

campus for only a year. 1915 saw his departure.

What made Milwaukee famous? "Milwaukee!" Instead of foaming, amber liquid, that word brings up in the majority of the minds at Presbyterian college a sound. The gruff, hearty, deep - chested, "woof-woof" tones that Coach Walter A. Johnson brought with him when he came to us in the fall of 1915 has become inseparable with even a mental picture of the man himself.

The seasons of 1915, '16 and '17 Coach spent in weaving together teams to "put P. C. on the map."

1917 the war. In December, after the close of the season, Coach W. A. Johnson left the college to become a Y. M. C. A. physical director at Camp Sevier. From there he was transferred to Camp Custer, Mich., and the 55th engineers, and with them he went overseas around the first of June, 1918. In the weary months waiting, after the Armistice, he coached a football team in the 55th engineers—still the physical director, although the roster listed him as a top-sergeant when he "hit the States" again after a fourteen months exile, July 4th, 1919.

During his absence, P. C. had carried on. G. W. Shaw, student, football ace, with "Chick" Galloway, who was just out of college, took the management of the team. The team that Shaw coached instead of playing for played only two games. That was in 1918.

The annual of 1921 bemoans the graduation of Lonnie "Pistol Ball" McMillan, captain and left end. The annual of 1922 joyfully chortles over his adherence to his Alma Mater. Practically the same applies to Hugh Eichelberger—our "Ike."

Coach Johnson seems to appreciate our Southland. In it he has chosen his career, his college, and his lovely wife.

Man can solve the problem of sin, for he has Holy Writ to show him that he can go to the Divine Power for guidance and be saved. He can know Christ and that the Savior has power to save those who place their trust in Him and who surrender their lives to Him.

Doctor McSween spoke of the disappointments that Paul suffered and urged that when men are tried they look to the life of the apostle. "All things work together for good to those who love God."

The former World war chaplain who served with the gallant Thirtieth division overseas, used several examples of men who had fought for their country and who had found real life through the saving grace of the Master.

The Presbyterian preacher and leader of men said that men think they are made to suffer through the tragic loss of a loved one or other adversities, but he again pointed to the example of Paul, whose life was filled with trouble, and stressed the fact that this is the time for the children of God to put their faith in Christ and follow Him more than ever.

Man can know, he said, that there is a reward for him in heaven if he is a follower of Christ. Victory is crowned only in surrender to God, Doctor McSween said.

At the close of the service a large number of men asked to be remembered in the prayer and quite a number went forward to dedicate their lives to Christ.

Faulty distribution of employment rather than a surplus of college-trained men and women is responsible for the discrepancy between opportunities and available trained workers, is the opinion of Dr. Walter V. Bingham, director of the Personnel research Federation in New York, many college men and women are preparing for the wrong occupations.

gion," to insert the word "His" before religion.

He pleaded to his hearers to let God work His will in them as Paul had done.

One can know that he is a Christian. There is no need to have any hesitancy about this, the speaker said. He said that there were two kinds of truth, demonstrable truth, by which a child can reason out that two and two make four and the life truth.

BLUE HOSE SPLIT GEORGIA SCRAP

Series of Thrilling Battles In Presbyterian-Bulldog Meet At Athens. Bolick and Sims, for Calvinists, Knock Out Opponents. Seagle and Clark Also Turn In Victories.

By T. H. Wingate
Staff Correspondent

Athens, Ga., Feb. 17. In a series of thrilling battles that kept spectators on the edges of the seats from the opening gong of the first preliminary to the sudden ending of the heavyweight bout, Presbyterian and University of Georgia fought to a 4-1 deadlock in Woodruff hall tonight.

Four technical knockouts in seven fights featured furious battling, two of the K.O.s going for the Blue Hose. One of the two preliminary bouts ended in a technical K.O.

Seagle, Clark, Bolick and Sims won for P. C. The senior welterweight was forfeited to Georgia.

Action in abundance was present in every fight on the card, with the battle of the bantams taking the sugar-coated pretzel for interesting struggling, if not for ring science. Jimmy Seagle and Ray Ivey hooked up in this embroglio which saw hefty and malicious slugging out of all proportion to the lilliputian dimensions of the gladiators combined with not-too-scientific wrestling attempts that had the two sprawling on the mat much of the time. Ivey had the edge in wrestling, but Seagle was way ahead with the real business of the evening.

Bolick had little trouble disposing of Sudderth in the second round of the middleweight scrap. The crafty Calvinist used a devastating left fist to floor the Georgian twice in the first round. Early in the second chukker the same weapon found Sudderth's jaw and flattened him out on the canvass like a carpet. As the referee counted, Georgia seconds tossed in the towel.

The only fight of the program in which the winner was hard to select was in the 129-pound class. Featherweights Ralph Righton and Jack McCaskill fought on practically even terms throughout, with Righton leading in both final rounds to gain the decision, after twice taking counts in the first. Righton fell from the ring for a count of five and took a count of nine resting on one knee in the initial stanza.

Bill Clark took all three rounds from H. G. Bell to punch out a decisive victory over the curly-haired Georgia lightweight. A chance blow to Clarks groin in the first slowed him down during the remainder of the round, but he came back in the second and third to punish his foe with rights and lefts to the head and body that had him groggy at the end.

Mickey Redutzky, undefeated Bulldog junior welterweight, won easily over Jimmy McClary by a technical knockout in the third round. Both men fought cautiously all the way, but Redutzky opened up an attack in the third that had McClary bewildered and clearly outclassed.

Fighting his third bout, Frank Hol-

Local Students To Receive Assistance

Government Funds To Pay For Part-Time Employment. Regulations Announced.

In an announcement in chapel Wednesday morning, Dr. John McSween, president of the institution, stated that Presbyterian college has made application for relief funds for a program of part-time employment for college students from the present time until the end of the current academic year.

These funds have been made available by the Federal Emergency Relief administration. The allotment of jobs will be equal to ten per cent of the full-time student enrollment, and the types of work for which the funds may be used cover the range of jobs customarily done in an institution by students who are working their way through college, including clerical, library, research, and work on buildings and grounds, and in dormitories and dining halls. The college is to be the final judge as to the type of project carried on within the institution.

Students will be selected for the jobs on the following considerations:

(a) Need. The student's financial status shall be such as to make impossible his attendance at college without this aid.

(b) Character and ability to do college work. The students shall be of good character and judged by the usual methods of determining ability employed by the particular college, shall possess such ability as to give assurance that they will do high grade work in college.

(c) Status as to present attendance. Not more than 75 per cent of the funds alloted to any institution shall be paid to students who were regularly enrolled in some college during January, 1934.

(d) Equitable division between sexes. Jobs shall be allocated between boys and girls in proportion to the enrollment of each in the particular school.

These student loan funds are being extended to colleges in all parts of the United States.

Columbia Doctor Addresses Students

Dr. Heyward Gibbs Speaks On Sex Hygiene. Doctors Wyman and Beckman Also Here.

At a special chapel hour on Wednesday morning Dr. Heyward Gibbs, of Columbia, spoke to the entire student body on the subject of sexual hygiene.

Each year the college has some one to speak on this subject. Several doctors are invited to come to the campus, and they devote part of the day to private conferences.

As Dr. Gibbs suggested, there is a division of opinion among educators concerning the public or group discussion of sex hygiene. Instruction on this matter depends mainly on the manner of presentation. His own discourse finely illustrated how effectively the subject of sex may be handled. Dr. Gibbs' speech was scientific, and sanely restrained. His hearers were quickened into a lofty sense of the moral and social values. He pointed out that a curb is to be placed upon certain emotions, and the expression of these. Dr. Gibbs' knowledge of recent biology, his literary references, and his excellent tastes show him to be a man of breadth and culture.

This year, besides Dr. Gibbs, there were Dr. Hugh Wyman and Dr. W. P. Beckman, both of Columbia. Dr. Wyman has come to us three years in succession.

These gentlemen have rendered the college a valuable service in quitting their own work to visit us at their own expense.

Grades Drop Off From 1933 Marks

Enrollment Is Practically the Same As Last Year. Failures Show Slight Increase.

Grades for the first semester of the 1933-34 session were decidedly lower than those of the corresponding period last year. A total of 227 D's and 128 E's was made this year in comparison with 211 D's and 110 E's made during the first semester of last year.

The freshmen footed the list with 96 D's and 70 E's, while the sophomores came next with 83 D's and 42 E's. 35 D's and 13 E's were recorded against the juniors, and 12 D's and 1 E against the seniors. Two E's were made by graduate students and 1 D by a special student.

Last year the order was as follows: Freshmen, 89 D's and 50 E's; sophomores, 75 D's and 49 E's; juniors, 23 D's and 5 E's; seniors, 24 D's and 6 E's.

The following statistics from the office of the registrar may prove of interest to many:

SOPHOMORES AND JUNIORS TO TAKE COMPREHENSIVES

Standard Tests Covering Every Field of Knowledge, With Several Hundred Multiple-Choice Questions Will Be Given In May By College Faculty.

Comprehensive examinations similar to those given to the sophomores last year will be taken by both sophomores and juniors at Presbyterian college some time in early May, the faculty announces.

Over 200,000 students have tested themselves on these sets of questions covering almost every subject, and all the results averaged and compared in the central offices of the Cooperative Test service.

Of the 147 colleges and universities that took advantage of the opportunity to use these complete standardized tests, Dean M. W. Brown states that Presbyterian college's scores as a whole were only a slight bit below the other averages and that a number of students ranked in the upper two per cent of the nation's students in some subjects.

Aside from the fact that they show how students here compare with those elsewhere, the tests are very valuable because they indicate how much knowledge a student has really absorbed, and along what lines his ability lies. Frequently faculty members have discovered that a student whom they had considered below par had actually learned a great deal outside of his regular assignments and was really becoming a well-educated person.

The juniors taking the test will likely improve considerably on last year's score because of their experience in taking such an examination before, and because of their wider information now.

Quick, accurate thinking and wide information are both necessary to score even a fourth of the possible 1800 answers. Time is so limited that a person has only one minute on the average to check the correct answer for three questions if he tries them all. Last year a student did very well to get one-third of the possible score.

The tests are furnished by the college to sophomores and juniors, and can be obtained by any others for twenty-five cents, the cost of the books, without transportation. A number of students did so last year and many are expected to do so again.

The joke is really on the faculty—if there is a joke. They have the difficult task of correcting and checking the papers and, according to the diminutive librarian, "It's lots more fun to take them—I've tried both jobs."

Delegates Tell of Experiences At Model League In First Meeting With Combs As President.

The International Relations club on Thursday evening held its first meeting in over two months. A new president, J. W. Combs, took charge for the meeting, since Charlie Plowden, former head of the club, failed to return to school after Christmas.

The program was made up of reports from the members who represented P. C. in the Model League Assembly at Winthrop college. Venable Martin, leader of the delegation, presided over this part of the program. John Rauch, Hugh Holman, Elmore Gregg, and Preston Charles made short talks, expressing their opinions of the league assembly. All agreed that it provided a valuable experience and created a great deal more interest in international affairs.

At the close of the program the club members made plans for a more active renewal of work for the rest of the schol year. The president appointed Frank Guess and Richard Potter as a committee to watch for material in the library to be used in getting up talks for future meetings. From this time on, it was decided, more stress will be placed on informal discussion.

Dean M. W. Brown, faculty member of the group, announced the receipt of several books given by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. These volumes are to be placed in the shelves of the college library. They are as follows:

"An Intelligent Man's Guide Through World Chaos," by G. D. Cole.

"The Future Comes," by Beard and Smith.

"Europe Since 1914," F. Lee Benns.

"The U. S. S. R. and the World Revolution," by Michael T. Florinsky.

"Germany Enters the Third Reich," by Calvin T. Hoover.

"Caribbean Backgrounds and Prospects," by Chester Lloyd Jones.

"Government and Politics of Italy," by Henry R. Spencer.

WHY NOT REAL DRAMATICS?

"Hot Copy," presented by the Dramatic Club, illustrated the latent possibilities of P. C. students. The play [illegible] of interest which [illegible] and the manner in which the characters are presented.

As a rule students at college show real interest in plays of a high order. The Carolina Players of the University of North Carolina are a group who have displayed almost professional ability. Successful original plays have been written by these students and performed in various cities. Most colleges have play guilds and clubs which are active on the campus and whose presentations are an important part of college activities.

Could not the students here develop a similar type of interest? The first recent performance demonstrated this need. A dramatic organization of sufficiently interested people should be able to start a more challenging program, one which requires a fair degree of training and talent and one which is planned on a highly entertaining scale. If good plays are selected and a tradition of effective acting is developed, then P. C. will not have to worry about the response of an audience. Students and outsiders cannot resist the attraction of entertaining dramatics.

"Hot Copy" suggests the need to stir up interest of this type. The benefit and value which are found in dramatics should evoke enough enthusiasm to create a bigger dramatic program.

"LINCOLN—THE MAN"

"Four score and seven years ago . . ." We have recently observed the 125th anniversary of the birth of perhaps the greatest American who ever lived. A man who had the spirit of America; one who believed that all must stand together, or be unable to stand at all; who believed deeply in the equality of all, a democrat of democrats; honest and helpful in his dealings with his associates and with himself; this is Lincoln.

We have read many stories of the life and work of this man; and especially has he been brought to our attention this past week. There are among [illegible] humble beings; and there are some [illegible] down in contempt.

He was neither; he was an ordinary man, a human individual. And although [illegible] thinking we don't like him, or don't agree with some of his ideas, or feel slightly jealous of his successes, we must admit that he is, more than any other, the person responsible for saving our Union, that Union which right now we would preserve at almost any cost. Lincoln's was a life of struggle and conflict, as well as one of victory and triumph. And through it all he was a man, a simple, honest, thinking man, who, as the years go by and false prejudice wears off, is emerging more and more as that great but humble American who led his country safely through its most trying times.

We can't all be Lincolns. It [illegible] true saying that the time often makes the man. But it is equally true that the man must be ready for the time. He must be in a position to allow the "time" to "make" him. Opportunity knocks often but only unto those who are ready does it enter. Those characteristics which were Lincoln's (Honest Abe, as he was significantly called) are not such as are unattainable by most of us. Though he ranks with the kings of the earth, yet he lived with the low and the meek. Honesty, faithfulness, hard work, love toward his fellows, and that unique insight into human nature: all are characteristics intimately connected with him.

America is in another crisis. Though different in its nature, yet it remains for men and women with his great patience, love, sincerity, knowledge (for Lincoln was better educated than our childhood fairy tales pretend), and insight, to guide us safely through. We wish for more characters like his, and in wishing it, we take off our hats to the true American — Abraham Lincoln. —C. E. C.

EDUCATION GETS A HAND

During the past several months the federal government has been aiding almost every branch of industry and enterprise in the United States. The president and his co-workers have done much in a short time; they have relieved the surface tension. And now finally the organization has reached the backbone of the country: education. With its mighty power of financing, the CWA comes to the aid of this suffering phase of American life.

Many boys and girls over the United States who are finding rough sledding and financial barriers in securing their desired education are to be benefited. Approximately one hundred thousand students are to be helped by this fund. They will earn the money by working two or more hours a day at various occupations. For their work they will receive adequate pay per hour. About fifteen dollars will be allowed each student receiving aid from this self-help fund.

Surely of all the accomplishments of the Roosevelt Administration this is one of the most commendable. Students, because of finances, have been dropping out of school at an alarming rate.

It is but a few steps from the college generation to the citizens of tomorrow. Statistics show that the most of the leaders of the nation come from institutions of higher learning. Rather to be looked for as colleges tend to develop leadership and character. If America is to hold her own in the world of government and industry, she must certainly see that these citizens are intelligent and prepared to carry on. The CWA is initiating this aid and it is certainly to be hoped for that all those receiving benefit will strive to make the most of their opportunity and make good while in college.

BOOK REVIEW

WHY MEN FIGHT

And we repeat the question. In fact, it reverberates all around the world. Why do men fight, anyway? "Why Men Fight" was written by Bertrand Russell, philosopher, educator, and mathematician. It has for a sub-title, "A Method of Abolishing the International Duel." This book, in our library, is not a new one, written in 1916 during the Great War, but is one very appropriate to the events of the day. It is not confined to the question of the "International duel," but contains other important phases of human life, including education, marriage, and religion.

In the first chapter Russell discusses "The Principle of Growth." Activity, he says, comes from two sources, impulse and desire. Of these, desire may be the result of reason, but this is not so true of impulse. There are things other than pure reason, according to Russell, which are necessary [illegible] alone that wars can be prevented, but [illegible] sions antagonistic to those that lead to war. It is the life of impulse that needs to be changed, not only the life of [illegible] the instinctive part of our character, "may be changed by beliefs, material circumstances, and by institutions."

In his second division he discusses the State. "The essence of the State is that it is the repository of the collective force of its citizens." There are reasons both for and against organized government and these are fully discussed.

The third chapter deals with war as a permanent institution. In this regard he considers: "why men tolerate it; why they ought not to tolerate it; what hope there is of their coming not to tolerate it; and how they could [illegible] if they wanted to do so." These four topics are developed, and in regard to the last, "And this can only be done by far-reaching changes in education, in the economic structure of society, and in the moral code by which public opinion controls the lives of men and women."

The fourth section contains Russell's views on property, or property ownership. We need a better system than we now have, and such a system "requires the abolition of the landowner and the restriction of the capitalist, but does not entail equality of earnings." Inclined toward socialism and syndicalism, and yet "unlike socialism, it is not a static or final system."

In connection with education, the fifth chapter, he gives what must have been revolutionary views at the time of writing, but which are becoming more effective every day. The basis, I think, of his views on education as an institution is contained in his words, "No institution inspired by fear can further life. Hope, not fear, is the creative principle in human affairs."

The first thing usually thought of when the name of Bertrand Russell is mentioned is free love. In one short chapter on "Marriage and the Population Question" he sets down very briefly his ideas on the subject. His primary purpose in this book is to discuss marriage as a political institution, and its importance to government. Marriage is a community institution, not primarily a private affair. Morals and ethics of individuals are their own affairs, but marriage is of community importance and should be regulated to the best interest of the State. These two divisions he develops much more at length in his book, "Marriage and Morals," especially from the individual's standpoint in regard to free love.

In next to the last chapter Russell takes up the question of religion. His position is far from orthodox; "It is not so much that the creed of the church is the wrong one. What is amiss is the mere existence of a creed." Yet he regards the religious as one of the creative forces in life.

"What can we do for the world while we live?" This he reads the final chapter. Be creative, he says; and in this connection he considers possession the antithesis of creation. "The supreme principle, both in politics and in private life, should be to promote all that is creative, and to diminish the impulses and desires that center around possession." Education, marriage, and religion he regards as creative, "yet all these have been vitiated by the intrusion of possessive motives."

I consider that as a whole this book is well worth reading. Many things you will find to be far different from what you were taught to believe, but for all that, I don't see how you can fail to enjoy it.

DETOUR—ROAD CLOSED FOR REPAIRS

What is matter? Though so common, something we cannot help seeing; which we cannot get away from; that we ourselves are: the more we investigate it the more elusive its constitutents become. We assume matter to be made up of small divisions called atoms. The theory most commonly known is that an atom is a small invisible particle made up of still smaller particles charged with positive and negative electricity, which we call protons and electrons. The protons are supposed to form a nucleus around which the electrons move. A miniature solar system it is. Various experiments have shown this conception of the atom to be false. And from a mathematical standpoint, according to the laws of nature the revolving electrons would never get closer to the center which would ruin the atom.

Not so long ago the Bohr atom, as it is called, came to hold the orthodox position. This time the electrons were supposed to move in separate orbits at different distances from the nucleus. This was based on the idea that energy can only increase or decrease by jumps, as provided by the quantum theory. The electrons revolve at definite distances or levels from the center, but cannot move between the orbits. Energy is released by an electron jumping from one orbit to another closer to the nucleus. Since the electron must jump the intervening space without ever being in that space, we see that the Bohr atom is really at best a mathematical concept.

However, it has recently been shown that this particle conception, used by Bohr, is inadequate. Its day is past; and with it passes our last possibility of picturing an electron. From now on we must deal with something which we can't even imagine, any more than we can imagine what the square root of minus five looks like.

The reason for this change is the discovery that the atom often behaves like a wave, not a particle at all. Yet we cannot call it a real wave, for it definitely acts in many cases as a particle. In other words, the atom seems at the same time to be a wave and a particle. Someone has suggested that we call this new atom a "waviele."

At present we are rather uncertain as to just what does compose matter. Perhaps we should do as Eddington suggests in speaking of the wave-particle controversy in connection with light: that instead of trying to explain the present situation, it would be better to nail a sign over the door, "Structural alterations in progress. No admittance except on business."

MOVIES

Louisa M. Alcott's picturization of "Little Women" plays on Monday and Tuesday at the Casino Theatre. This film marks the fourth performance of Katherine Hepburn as an RKO star. In this production she definitely proves that she is one of the outstanding actresses of Hollywood. It is an excellent film and includes the following cast of favorites: Joan Bennett, Paul Lukas, Douglass Montgomery, Edna May Oliver, Frances Dee, Jean Howard, Henry Stephenson, and Spring Byington.

On Wednesday Zane Grey's "Thundering Herd" is the feature. The cast includes Randolph Scott, Judith Allen, Noah Beery and Buster Crabbe.

Thursday's dime show brings Heather Angel, who will be remembered for her sterling performance in "Berkeley Square," in her latest movie, "Orient Express."

On Friday one of the most notable casts of the season is assembled for the MGM production of "Beauty for Sale." Those who like Alice Brady will have a treat in store for she figures prominently in this film, giving another of her amusing neurotic characterizations. Besides Miss Brady, one finds Madge Evans, Una Merkel, Otto Kruger, May Robson, and Muriel Kirkland in this highly entertaining cinema.

RADIO

On Saturday, Feb. 10, one of the largest audiences gathered at the Metropolitan to hear Dr. Howard Hanson's opera, "Merry Mount." The opera was broadcast and thousands were either thrilled or disappointed in the work. Lawrence Tibbett was the whole show. His voice was magnificent and the critics say that his acting was superb. Gota Ljungberg, Edward Johnson, and Gladys Swarthout were utterly wasted in their inferior roles. It was a shame to even make them appear for they had absolutely nothing to do except make a background for the leading baritone. The chorus was of second importance. This worthy ensemble did some splendid singing and Mr. Guilio Setti must be highly complimented for his brilliant control over such a large assembly of voices. The opera lacked arias, duets and large climaxes in the various scenes. The orchestral score was beautiful and Mr. Serafin conducted with his accustomed brilliance. The gullible youth raved over the work while the critics and musical genius shook their heads and sighed.

"Faust" was the opera which was performed this past Saturday. Giovanni Martinelli proved that he is still the greatest living tenor. His high "C" in the second act aria was just as resonant and clear as it was ten years ago. Gladys Swarthout, the young American prima donna was one of the shining lights of the production. Her Flower Song in the third act was a gem of vocal production. Lawrence Tibbett, the Valentine of the occasion, sang his part well but several of his high notes were forced but his death scene was so good that the above faults were soon forgotten. Eide Norena, the Norwegian soprano, was quite disappointing in her delineation of Marguerite. Mme. Norena has a lyric soprano voice which needs a little more cultivation. Her runs were particularly slurred and not at all clear. Her singing of the final trio with Faust and Mephistopheles was, however, beautifully done. Ezio Pinza's Mephistopheles was one of the outstanding performances of the afternoon. His singing of "Le Veau D'Or" and the "Serenade" was an excellent piece of vocalism. The other members of the cast included Henriette Wakefield and Paola Ananian. The French conductor, Louis Hasselmans, was in excellent form and conducted in a masterly fashion.

Of the outstanding broadcasts of last week were: Helen Hayes, who appeared on the Hinds program in a sketch from "Dear Brutus"; Joe Penner, Eddie Cantor, Lawrence Tibbett, Burns and Allen, Jack Benny, and Olsen and Johnson.

This coming week all of the weekly programs are the same as usual. The Metropolitan is broadcasting the entire opera, "Tannhauser," by Richard Wagner. Atur Bodanzky will conduct and the cast is as follows: Lottie Lehmann as Elizabeth, Lauritz Melchior as Tannhauser, Ludwig Hofmann as the Landgrav, Maria Olszewska as Venus, Editha Fleischer as the Shepherd, and Friedrich Schorr as Wolfram. Among the familiar works in this opera are the Pilgrim's Chorus, the Wedding March, and the Ode to the Evening Star. The story of the opera deals with man's fight between good and evil. In the beginning of the first act Tannhauser is found in the realm of Venus. Here he enjoys the fascinating charms of the voluptuous Venus. Tiring of this life, he returns to earth and his true love, Elizabeth. On his return he hears of a song contest and he enters as one of the numerous contestors. His song is filled with descriptions of the beautiful Venus and of his lustful life with her. Elizabeth is heartbroken and the people send him to Rome to do penance. When the pilgrims return, Tannhauser is not amongst them, for he decides to pay another visit to Venus instead. Finally in the end he repents of his sin and is forgiven by heaven, but only too late, for the beautiful Elizabeth has died of a broken heart.

Citadel Five Takes Blue Hose Measure

In one of the most exciting games seen in recent weeks on the home court, the P. C. basketeers lost to an aggressive Citadel quintet, 29 to 22. The action was fast and furious, especially in the last quarter, and it seemed at times that the Blue Hose might gain the lead, but for every point P. C. scored the invaders from Charleston scored one in return.

For several minutes in the second half the score stood at 16-14 in favor of Citadel, with neither team able to score. Finally Citadel tallied from the floor and the scoring moratorium was broken.

For Presbyterian, Wyatt was high scorer with 12 points, and for Citadel, McGee with 9.

The Largest user OF FINE TURKISH TOBACCOS

...one reason why Luckies taste better, smoother

In Turkey too, only the finest tobaccos are selected for Lucky Strike—the mildest leaves, the most delicate, the most aromatic. Lucky Strike is the world's largest user of fine Turkish tobaccos. Then these tender, delicate Turkish leaves are blended with choice tobaccos from our own Southland—to make your Lucky Strike a cigarette that is fully packed—so round, so firm—free from loose ends. That's why Luckies taste better, smoother. "It's toasted"—for throat protection—for finer taste.

Direct From The Metropolitan Opera House
Saturday at 1:45 P. M., Eastern Standard Time, over Red and Blue Networks of NBC, LUCKY STRIKE will broadcast the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York in the complete Opera, "Tannhauser."

Always the Finest Tobacco and only the Center Leaves

NOT the top leaves—they're under-developed—they are harsh!
The Cream of the Crop
"The tenderest, mildest, smoothest tobacco"
NOT the bottom leaves—they're inferior in quality—coarse and always sandy!

Varsity Rifle Team To Meet Co-Eds

"Battle of the Century" Comes Tuesday. "Silk Stockings" To Use "Every Means Available" To Disconcert Opponents.

Tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 six members of the varsity rifle team, [illegible] "coaching" on the part of their opponents, will fire a match against the girls' team.

In order to make the contest more even, Secretary Young, who conceived the idea, the co-eds will make use of all available means of disconcerting the marksmen, urging them on, applauding their efforts and making themselves generally obnoxious to the nervous. Members of the boys' team will be required to maintain silence while the co-eds shoot at the bull's eye.

Mary B. Workman is captain of the co-eds. Other members of the team are: Christine Drake, Eleanor Saner, Virginia Scoggs, Frances Stuart and Miss J. H. Hunter. The men who will fire for the varsity have not yet been selected. The entire squad will gather at the rifle range at 3:30 Tuesday and the names of the lucky men will be drawn from a hat.

Florida U. Boxers Win Close Meet

Victory For Alligators Is By Narrow Margin, 4½ to 3½. Three Bouts Forfeited.

Presbyterian [illegible] a close meet to the University of Florida last [illegible], 4½ to 3½.

Three of the scheduled eight bouts were forfeited. Florida forfeited the unlimited and bantamweight classes and P. C. forfeited in the junior middleweight division. Bill Cain defeated Dan Allen to take the lightweight battle and the Sherman-Bolick senior middleweight was judged a draw.

The summary:

Featherweight: Bob McMillen, of Florida, defeated Wes Wyman, Presbyterian, by technical knockout in three rounds.

Lightweight: Bill Clark, Presbyterian, won from Dan Allen, Florida, by decision in three rounds.

Welterweight: Eddie Heimberger, Florida, outpointed Jimmy McClary, Presbyterian, in three rounds.

Senior middleweight: Ed Sherman, Florida, drew with Harry Bolick, Presbyterian.

Light heavyweight: Charlie Fleming, Florida, won decision from Frank Hockday, Presbyterian.

Freshmen Defeat Pelzer Hi School

The Presbyterian freshman basketball team stampeded the basketeers of Ellen Woodside high school, of Pelzer, to the tune of a 59 to 8 score here Tuesday night. The frosh gained the lead from the first tip-off and completely outclassed the visitors.

The entire rat team played excellent ball. Evans, who scored 22 points, was especially outstanding in his basket work.

AN OMISSION

Because of some extraordinary slip, The Blue Stocking last week failed to publish an account of the thrilling game in which the basketballers defeated the College of Charleston, 45-0.

Quite frequently it would have been agreeable to everyone to have left out basketball returns, but this time The Blue Stocking regrets the omission. This issue carries a brief write-up on the sports page.

MEET CLEMSON HERE TODAY

The picture above is of last year's swimming squad. Some of the men now out are not pictured, while two in the picture are not in school this year. Reading from left to right, standing, are: John Rauch, manager; Jim Brewer, coach; Henry Calvert, Allison Walters, Roy Forehand, Phil Adams, Charles Denny, George Dunlap, manager. Sitting, left to right, J. E. Norment, Bo'y Hannah, Hank Wilson, Dassey McFadden, captain, Phil Hays (not in school now), Tom Valley, James Carson (not in school now).

A return meet at Clemson is scheduled for Friday.

Splash, Splash, and P. C.'s Mermen Launch Second Season

This afternoon in the Leroy Springs pool, spectators saw the most interesting of indoor sports. It was the second swimming meet staged in Presbyterian's pool, the first for this season, and it marks the dawning of a new development of P. C.'s ever-widening program for student physical well-being.

Since the completion of the pool dedicated to the late Colonel Leroy Springs, it has been used only sporadically. The student body as a group did not benefit from its presence as it should. This was partly due to the fact that no systematic method of training was used. But with the advent of the compulsory physical education program last year and the providing of a regular coach, enough men chose the water sport to form the nucleus for the initial tank team. From that beginning the sport has started on its way to become one of the principal forms of athletics at P. C. It is already one of the most interesting from the spectator's viewpoint. Last year's freshman team won the state championship, and awakened the campus to the realization that here was a sport that amounted to something after all.

Coach Brewer is handicapped in his job of producing a successful team by a lack of material. The men on hand are good aplenty, but there just isn't enough of them. With the small number of men now on the squad, several will have to enter more than one event, with the result that fatigue will take its toll in the second or third contests with an accompanying loss of points, perhaps a meet. Either that or forfeit some events.

There is plenty of opportunity even at this late hour for candidates who wish to go out for the team. Even if the new candidates do not make the team, they will receive some high-class instruction in the art of swimming and diving and will be an asset to the team in the future.

Too Soon For Baseball But For Your Sake, Mr. Wood

In spite of the lengthy epic concerning the ups and downs of one Mr. Ruth that appeared in this corner last week, we persist in the belief that it is too soon to talk baseball, but just to please J. B. Wood, who has a persistent hankering for publicity, a few inches of type will be devoted to the exploits of that worthy individual.

Mr. Wood, in case you don't know, is the captain of the forthcoming 1934 edition of the Blue Hose diamond team. He is just a little stuck on himself, in his quiet, modest way, especially where baseball is converned. His most redeeming feature is a seemingly unquenchable love for the national pastime, which can be compared only with his devotion to a hunk of coconut pie with a slice of cheese.

If you are beginning to think that Mr. Wood is not really such a hot player, take a look at his past three-year record. His batting average for the three years has been .350, which isn't bad at all.

But to fiet on with the interview. Wood says that the most thrilling game in which he ever engaged was between two mill teams near Striped Nation, Alabama. Largely on his own recommendations, Wood was hired by Eskatchewon for the final championship game with the rival spinney, Cunthitum. Concerning the details of the contest Wood is very hazy. The drill came, he says, when his Eskatchewon team-mates chased him out of town following his fourth strikeout of the afternoon with the tying run on base.

Boxers Meet Georgia Again. This Thing Gets Regular

It started with the track team, this habit of meeting the University of Georgia in athletics. Last year and the year before, the Blue Hose track squad (giant slayers in some cases, but not this one) let the Bulldogs. Then basketball games were scheduled, on a home and home basis. And now the boxing team has just returned from a meet in Athens to begin preparations for another with the same team in Clinton. Maybe before long we can meet the Bulldogs on the gridiron. They ought to have a swimming team, too. The rifle team already has a match with them.

Princeton A. C.; Princeton U. There's a Difference

Several weeks ago the cmapus was agog with the rumor that Presbyterian had scheduled a baseball game with Princeton. True enough, but the Princeton referred to was the Princeton Athletic club, not Princeton university, according to Coach Johnson, who was called on to confirm the report.

The Princeton A. C., we understand, is a group of Princeton, N. J., young gentlemen engaged in making a barnstorming trip through this section of the country, taking on virtually every college ball team in the state.

Charleston Wins Spirited Conte

Maroons Secure Revenge, 43 For Thrilling P. C. Vict Last Week.

The College of Charleston ba ball team came to P. C. last seeking revenge for the 45-40 de handed it by the Hose in Charles and got it in a 43-36 decision.

Led by Levi, Waldrep and Ford P. C. kept close on the heels of fast-passing quint from Charl but were never able to overcom five-point lead racked up by the rooms shortly after the opening tle. The Maroons added a field go this total in the waning moment the contest.

The schedule, which was print a previous issue, includes meets Clemson at Clemson, Furman Greenville, and with Davidson at vidson. The state freshman meet be held on May 4 at Clinton.

Freshmen Ring Up Fourth Straight

In the fourth successive victory in as many games, the Presbyterian freshman basketball team trounced Elberton High of Elberton, Ga., Friday night in Leroy Springs gymnasium by a score of 24 to 20. In the part of the game, the rats held a substantial lead, but the visitors slowly cut down the margin. However, closing whistle found the frosh again forging ahead.

Evans was high scorer for P with 11 points.

ROUND-UP

Bores invariably talk about the weather. A detailed account of the climatic conditions of the past week or even sometimes of the past year is the subject of many a floundering conversation. It is certainly not uncommon to hear in embarrassed monosyllables, "We've surely had bad weather, haven't we?" or in tones of feigned interestedness, "Isn't it hot today?" And there follows one of these sweetly polite replies continuing on the same assinine plane. They can't seem to let the weather alone, and they continue having a lovely boring time together, unless some courageous soul seeks a new channel. But however tiring it may be the weather is always a very convenient subject to fall back upon. It quite often breaks the ice of new acquaintanceships, but it has the faculty of forestalling as well. We have all been guilty at some time or other, and I have bored and been bored with the weather, but some day in a fit of desperation and utter intolerance I'm going to "holler" to a chronic "weather-bore," "Yes, it's cold (or hot, as the case may be), but if you can't think of anything better to talk about; don't talk."

There are many categories of bores, some of them perhaps more obnoxious than others, but the worst stands a good stone's throw ahead of even the unbearable "weather-bore." He is the shameless individual who, when you ask him how he is he will tell you. He is one whose health outranks the importance of the poor over-worked weather, and can never dispense with a slightly deceitful but pleasant, "I'm fine," but whose face lights up in an ecstatic frown when he rubs his leg with a perceptible groan and punishes you with a discourse on his lumbago. He has more ailments than poor afflicted Job, and the ill-granted powers of long-windedness. Irving Cobb contends that the person who persists in asking you how you are every time he sees you is just as bad, but I must give my whole-hearted support to the former. There's none like him; I've been bored by him enough to know.

Princess Alexandra Kropotkin asks this question in her column in a current "Liberty": "Do you or don't you stop them when friends preface a story with, 'Stop me if you've herad this one'?" She can't decide whether to say yes, she's heard it, and look at their crest-fallen faces or suffer in polite silence. That is a problem which one must decide for oneself. Cobb says he despises the one who says yes, for he's just waiting to pull a very moulded one on you. I have tried both. I have halted a gloating joke-teller at the half-way mark and been extremely happy to have squelched him for the time being, but on the other hand, I have injured the feelings of a well-meaning, harmless story-teller and been infinitely sorry. But attentive listening is equally as unbearable. And so I will have to take my place in the ranks of the "on-the-fencers." The former is painfully embarrassing and the latter detrimental to the health, and it's hard to decide the lesser of two evils.

Literature has yielded up some fine exponents of the gentle art of boredom. When Miss Clarissa Harlow "took her pen in hand" there was absolutely no stopping her. And one couldn't omit the sailor who tells the story of "Moby Dick." I could very easily stand the relation of his voyage in detail, but when he began to classify the sea animals with a description of each, I gave up.

Professors come in for their share of credit for being good bores, whether rightfully or not. To quote from a poem called "Professor," by Paul Tanaquil:

"It was his lot to earn his daily bread
In the oppressive tangle of routine,
His eyes forgot the grails they once had seen
When he was younger; so, uncomforted,
He suffocated into greyness, shed
Even his wit; his mind was a machine—
In time they sentenced him to be a
Dean—
Some of him lives but most of him is dead."

From the student point of view, the average professor is a colorless individual, with horn-rimmed spectacles, unseeing eyes, and a moth-eaten soul, who has lapsed into the stage of characteristic absent-mindedness. And his voice has the monotonous boring quality of Grey's "Elegy" and the peculiar faculty of lulling one into an uncomfortable state of semi-consciousness. That's undoubtedly what the student thinks. But I often wonder what the professor could say of the average student. As he looks into the sea of drooping eyes and gaping mouths, and faces unenthusiastic, I wonder if he doesn't say unto himself, "What bores!"

R. O. T. C. NEWS

Officers of the day and their orderlies for the coming week are:

Monday, Feb. 19—Capt. McTeer, T. B., with Sgt. Jordan, F. E.

Tuesday, Feb. 20—Capt. McFadden, D. H., with Sgt. Hannah, R. D.

Wednesday, Feb, 21—Capt. Viser, J. H., with Sgt. Colcomb, W. R.

Thursday, Feb. 22—Major Sims, R. E., with Sgt. Lawter, C. B.

Beginning this week, freshmen will study first-aid and hygiene. They have just finished a course in military history; and before that they studied map reading. Since this new study is a familiar and applicable one, it is hoped that the last roll call will not be so disastrous as those of their other courses this term.

Very soon the sophomores will be called to account for the number of times they have neglected the study of the automatic rifle. The test will be on the mechanics of stripping and assembling the piece and on the principles of its function. In order to get a minimum number of failures, Capt. Blanton is requesting that those men who feel they do not have a good knowledge of these phases, to turn their names in to him immediately so he can arrange to give them extra instruction.

"Sarge" must have shattered the morale of his rifle team when he told them they had no chance to win the Fourth Corps Area rifle match; or else these men got the jitters from thinking about the supreme importance of the occasion, for the last scores of the match indicated that those rifles were mighty unsteady in someone's hand. When speaking of those fifties, etc., Capt. just said, "Punk"; and that just about describes it. However, some of the men claim they were trying to deceive the members of the co-ed team—make them think they had a soft snap before them.

But anyway, speaking of the varsity-co-ed match: It is the great pleasure and personal satisfaction of someone to announce that all speculation, humiliation and what not will be over after Tuesday afternoon. Miss Mary Workman, just recently elected captain of the co-ed rifle team, will lead her cohorts to the range at 3:30 and the firing will begin immediately. The order of firing will be as announced before—the boys will fire while being subjected to the discretion of their opponents; and then the girls will fire (believe it or not), unattended. When all is over the flag of true will be raised and then the scores will be compiled and the casualties (if any) will be removed. The boys will learn the result within the next week—that is, if they can be found.

Rules of the Match

1. The co-eds will be permitted to occupy special grandstand seats and will be permitted the privilege of making remarks to the members of the varsity team while the latter are firing.

2. While the co-eds are firing the varsity will be denied the privilege of speaking to those firing or in other ways divert their attention.

3. The varsity is prohibited the use of sand bags.

4. Mr. Tom Plaxico, press representative, will be allowed the same privilege as is given the co-eds, both as to sitting in the reserved section and the privilege of making remarks to the members of the varsity while they are firing.

5. The members of the varsity who are to fire will be chosen by lot. The team manager of each team and Sgt. Young to decide the details.

(Signed)
Mary Workman, Co-ed Captain.
T. H. Wingate, Varsity Captain.

We didn't notice any "blue violets" on the campus Valentine day; but we did notice quite a few blue sophomores. And why were they blue? Oh, the Capt. just "blue" up and informed about fifteen of these gentlemen that they would forfeit three points of their final grade in military science for not readng hs order (and this column) which told them to get a mimeographed lecture from him on a certain day. And for some reason or other, these men were affected. We hope the blue tints will disappear with the memories of valentines. However, the three points can't be forgotten.

Loading a pipe, son, is like building a fire

"NOW if you want to build a fire you've got to have the right kind of chimney, and you've got to have the right kind of wood, seasoned right and packed right in the fireplace. If you've got all this, it's easy to light up.

"It's pretty near the same way in smoking a pipe. Now if you've got Granger Tobacco—the right kind of pipe tobacco—any old pipe will do.

"And if you put in a pinch at a time and pack it down good and tight—the way to load a pipe—all you need to do is strike a match.

"Granger smokes sweet and cool right down to the bottom of the bowl.

"That's pipe comfort, I tell you."

Scenes and Events Of Days Long Gone Pass In Review

encumbrances of football, and taking seeming flow, the fate of the oak, lastly it trailed itself down the slight ... to a safer place.

Alumni hall was erected in the fall of 1891—the year of the arrival of the young professor, Dr. A. E. Spencer. By Christmas, when his wife joined him, the nineteen rooms were occupied and smoke was pouring from each of its six chimneys. The late Mr. J. P. Jacobs, son of the founder of the college, and father of Mr. William P. Jacobs, a prominent alumnus, raised the money and planned both Alumni hall and the "Professors' Cottage." Their similarity to certain structures on the Thornwell campus leaves room for speculation as to whether or not he received any assistance from the architect of the orphanage. Mr. Jacobs for a number of years occupied the "Cottage," while he took charge of the new dormitory.

Since this has developed into a rather rambling narrative, it is ethical to add a few more digressing incidents.

It is hard to imagine, now, the "porosity" of the settlement of the college end of town. Mr. Henry Davis, a Laurens lawyer and alumnus, can vouch for his statement: As he sat in the window of his corner room on the second floor of Alumni hall, he watched Professor Marion come across the rise where the ticket-box, lonely and deserted in mid-season, now stands; gun under arm, he followed his dog until it pointed a covey of birds; firing, the Professor followed them, and by the time he had reached the future site of the Administration building, he had bagged seven birds.

An aunt of mine recalls one rat reception. As the freshmen assembled in the second story door of the door of Alumni hall, a deluge of water from the window directly above the steps drenched her. Creeping back, he changed, and, a subdued rodent, went ... and ... to the gathering dusk."

The remarkable outcome of the Teasdell twins (now Greenville doctors)—"Scrap" was removed for the progress ... from ... considering ... was an occasional blanket.

In those days, the ... were accompanied by ... Marion ... the story of the boy who, coming back late at night and avoiding lighting the lamp for fear of drawing mosquitoes, threw his hat on the table, his coat on the bed, and sat in a chair—and all three hit fly-paper!

Long suffering trees! Thirty years or more ago, there was an unmarried professor on the faculty. One night as he pedaled out on his bicycle to go "courting," he passed between two recently set-out young trees, and there ran full tilt into a wire, stretched across by mischievous students. Down he went, and up came one of the saplings. Trees are unfortunate things!

the college, considered him well qualified to speak on that subject.

Dr. Beckman's address was taken up primarily with the main adjustments that each human must make in the course of a full life-time, and the results of failure to make these adjustments. He said that in his field there are two important things, heredity and environment, and that he had directed his attention to the individual in relation to his environment.

Along with his remarks on human adjustments Dr. Beckman gave some interesting case histories that he had gathered from his own experience.

LIBRARY IS USED MORE THIS YEAR

last year, may have stimulated the reading appetite.

Among the recent purchases are several that are of particular interest to South Carolinians. Hervey Allen's "Anthony Adverse" is a gigantic novel that has held a high place on the list of best sellers for several months. Hervey Allen at one time lived in Charleston and was joint editor with DuBose Heyward of their book of Carolina poems entitled "Carolina Chansons." "Black Genesis," by Samuel Gaillard Stoney and Gertrude Mathews Shelby contains Negro folklore in the low country dialects. The preface has a discussion of the origin of "Gullah." Then there is another novel by the author of "Porgy," DuBose Heyward's "Peter Ashley." Julia Peterkin's "Roll, Jordan, Roll" is remarkable more for the artistic photographic studies by Doris Ulmann than for the plantation stories of the Negroes on Mrs. Peterkin's place. Herbert Ravenel Sass has received much favorable criticism of his glamorous story of the pre-Confederate-war-coastal-South Carolina, "Look Back to Glory."

Some other additions of interest are Hans Fallada's "Little Man, What Next?"; Roark Bradford's "John Henry"; Faris' "Seeing the Sunny South" (Lippincott, 1921, and therefore out of date regarding traveling conditions but still one of the best travel books for the South); Levine's "Stalin"; Oberndorfer's "What We Hear in Music"; Geoffrey Parsons' "Stream of History"; Barret Wendell's "Traditions of European Literature, From Homer to Dante"; and the "Rubaiyat," by Omar Khayyam, translated by Edward Fitzgerald and beautifully illustrated by Edmund Dulac.

... was ... by a vastly superior foe, Charley Jacobson. Jacobson won by a technical K.O. in the second.

In the final encounter of the evening, Morehead, replacing Batchelor in the unlimited class, entered the ring calm and collected. Bob Sims entered the opposite corner just as calm ... Forty-five seconds later Morehead, still calm, was collected from the canvass by Georgia seconds, while Sims stepped through the ropes on the opposite side of the ring.

In two no-decision preliminaries, Gillis and Capperman of P. C., fought Victory and King, of Georgia. Capperman knocked King out in the second round. Gillis seemed master of the situation in the other prelim, although a winner was not declared.

The summary:

Bantamweight: Seagle, Presbyterian, winner over Ivey, Georgia; decision.

Featherweight: Righton, Georgia, winner over McCaskill, Presbyterian; decision.

Lightweight: Clark, Presbyterian, winner over Bell, Georgia; decision.

Junior welterweight: Redutzky, of Georgia, winner over McClary, Presbyterian; technical knockout.

Senior welterweight: Forfeited to Georgia.

Middleweight: Bolick, Presbyterian, winner over Sudderth, Georgia; technical knockout.

Light-heavyweight: Jacobson, Georgia, winner over Holliday, Presbyterian; knockout.

Unlimited: Sims, Presbyterian, winner over Morehead, Georgia; knockout.

Referee: Wilson.

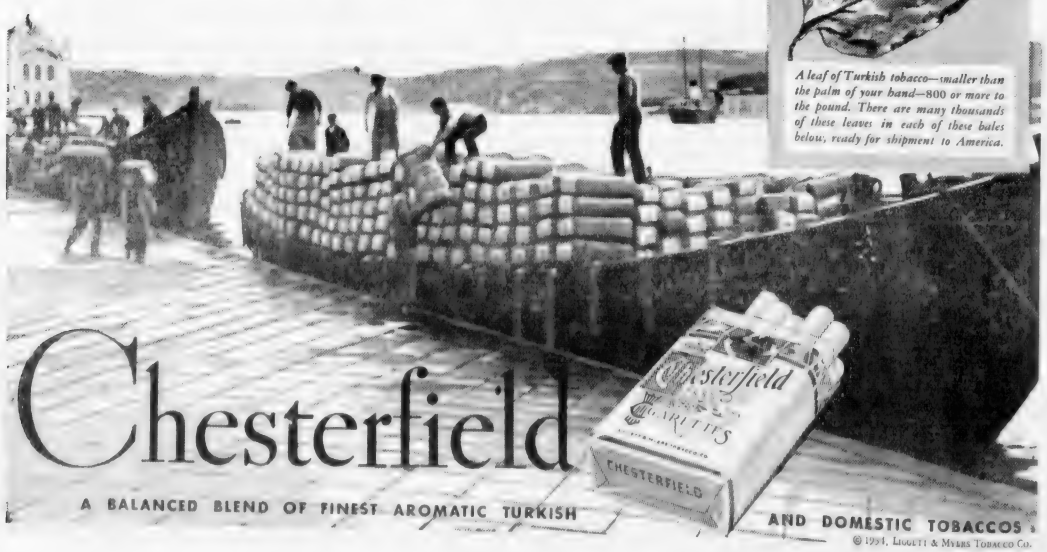
Each year Turkey and Greece ship us thousands of bales of fine tobaccos—

But why send 4,000 miles for tobacco?

...because spicy, aromatic Turkish is the best seasoning there is for a cigarette.



It adds something to flavor and aroma that no other tobacco can give.

Chesterfield uses Turkish tobacco—from Samsoun, Smyrna, Cavalla and Xanthi.

Then it blends and cross-blends them with various kinds of choice home-grown tobaccos in the right balance to give you a cigarette that's milder, a cigarette that tastes better.

A leaf of Turkish tobacco—smaller than the palm of your hand—800 or more to the pound. There are many thousands of these leaves in each of these bales below, ready for shipment to America.

"ALL FOR P. C. P. C. FOR ALL"

VOLUME XV PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE, CLINTON, S. C., FEBRUARY 26, 1931 NUMBER 18

Board Of Trustees Meets Tomorrow

J. H. Thornwell and Rev. J. C. Plaxico Will Be New Members To Help Act On Important College Affairs.

The annual meeting of the board of trustees of Presbyterian college will be held in the science building tomorrow, with Rev. H. W. DuBose, D.D., of Spartanburg, as chairman. Much important action was taken at last year's meeting of the board, and other vital questions are likely to be settled at this time.

Two newly-elected members of the board will be present among the twenty-five solons from all parts of South Carolina and Georgia who direct the affairs of the college.

J. H. Thornwell, a Presbyterian college graduate, now prominent in the field of education as superintendent of the Hartsville, S. C. schools, becomes one of the three representatives of the alumni association on the board.

Rev. J. C. Plaxico, of Menlo, Ga., has been chosen by Cherokee presbytery to speak for it as a trustee and will be the other new member.

In order that the board may have a suitable meeting place, the periodicals will be moved out of the reading room into the main library, and the tables and chairs arranged for the round-table discussion.

Varsity Outshoots Co-ed Rifle Team

Sweet-Talking Girls "Rattle" Three Markemen, But "The Army" Steadies To Defeat Feminine Challengers.

With girls to the right of them, girls to the left of them, girls in front of them, and at times girls over them, the varsity sharpshooters refused to be affected by the volleys of jabbering to which they were subjected, and on Tuesday afternoon won the long-heralded varsity-co-ed rifle match by a safe majority of about 200 points.

It is not to be taken that the girls did not furnish any competition for the men; for this they did, both in firing themselves and in disconcerting their opponents. In fact, three of the six men who fired will clean rifles for a certain time for allowing one or more co-eds to outshoot them. Then, too, Miss Mary Workman, co-ed captain, explains that the nerves of some members of her team were in tatters due to the long anticipation of the meet and because of the loss of sleep by others of the squad on the Sunday night preceding the contest, thus preventing them from firing with their usual deliberation.

Amusing incidents of the contest were the times when a co-ed insisted that a fixer was winking at her when he aimed the gun; when another girl urged an opponent to fire faster, saying she didn't believe he was such a fast man after all; when one of the boys, trying in vain to hold the gun on the target, insisted that he was at a party and had got stuck with a certain girl.

As was agreed, the members of the varsity team who fired were chosen by drawing names from a box. F. Gregg, L. Anderson, R. Belk, E. Pitman, J. Jeanes, and T. Upshur were chosen. The co-ed team was composed of V. Spratt, F. Spratt, E. Saner, M. Workman, C. Peake, and Mrs. J. H. Hunter.

For the girls, Misses Peake and Saner were especially good; and Upshur, Jeanes and Gregg shot high for the varsity.

The promoters of the match are well pleased with the results and hope to make this contest an annual affair.

McSween To Speak Friday Over WBT

President McSween will speak from radio station WBT, at Charlotte, N. C., at 5 p. m. Friday in a fifteen-minute talk on the history of Presbyterian college.

His address will be part of the half-hour program given weekly for over a year by the South Carolina Economic association, chartered in 1921 "to further interest in South Carolina."

Five Selected For Scholarship Frat

Five new men have been chosen for membership in Sigma Kappa Alpha, national honorary scholarship fraternity. Two of the men are seniors and three are juniors, according to the rule that the men nominated for this honor must be selected from the two upper classes.

The seniors are T. L. Shinnick, with an average of 2.807, and D. H. McFadden, with 2.717. From the junior class there are J. P. Todd, 2.617; C. B. Elliott, 2.872; and W. F. Guess, 2.689.

Election to Sigma Kappa Alpha is one of the greatest honors a student can gain. The requirements are exceedingly difficult. To be chosen, a man must belong to either the junior or senior class, and must be rated scholastically in the upper five per cent of his class. Finally, he must be passed by a majority vote of the faculty.

At present there are only three members of this fraternity. J. W. Combs is president; H. Wyman, vice-president; and R. D. Lynn, secretary-treasurer.

Two Fraternities Hold Initiations

J. B. Wood, regent of Alpha Lambda Tau social fraternity, has announced this week the initiation of two new men into the brotherhood. They are Norwood Baskin and Robert Coulter. Baskin, who comes from Bishopville, S. C., is in the junior class, and Coulter, whose home is in LaFayette, Ga., entered P. C. as a freshman after a semester at Tulane university in New Orleans, La.

Pi Kappa Alpha added four men to its ranks on Sunday night. They are: Fred Oxley and Allan McSween, both of Clinton, Thomas Barringer of Florence, and A. C. Daniel of Irmo. All of these men are in the freshman class.

CWA Projects Help College

New Athletic Storehouse, Laundry, and Tennis Courts Are Being Made Ready While Government Employs Students.

Preliminary work is going forward rapidly on a new athletic supply building for Presbyterian college which will make room for a college laundry beneath the gym. Twenty-six students are enabled by the CWA to continue school and do the work for the college.

Dirt is now being excavated for the foundations of the 25x30-foot building which is to house bulky sport equipment of all sorts, and the material is being used to build up the sides and terraces of the six tennis courts under construction.

The new building will add greatly to the efficiency of the athletic department in giving a safe and convenient storeroom for track hurdles, football field markers, baseball accessories and materials used in keeping up the tennis courts.

A considerable amount will be saved by having the new laundry clean all the uniforms of the athletic department and the linen of the dining hall as well as some student washing.

The new block of tennis courts lying on four terraced levels, with sodded grass on the slopes, behind the dining hall will when completed be one of the prettiest spots on the campus.

Work on the courts is necessarily very slow, since the existence of CWA must be allowed ample time to settle, but all three projects—courts, athletic storehouse, and laundry — will likely be ready by fall.

The alumni of 1923 are responsible for giving the laundry machinery by their foresight in taking out endowment policies and by their loyalty in carrying them until money is on hand for the valuable class project.

Students are now using all of the government funds available to those who were in school at the beginning of the semester, receiving an average of about twelve dollars a month until June for their work.

Additional students may be enabled to enter college again by these funds if they enroll before March 1.

Young Is Editor New York Paper

Glen Cove, N. Y., Feb. 20. — B. R. Young, graduate of Presbyterian college, Clinton, S. C., class of 1931, and former night editor of a New York daily newspaper, has been named editor of the City Record, Glen Cove, according to an announcement made by F. M. Dunbaugh, president of North Shore Newspapers, Inc.

Mr. Young is well known in New York newspaper circles. Prior to journalistic work in the North he was associated in an editorial capacity with a weekly publication in North Carolina.

Plan For Second Issue Of Collegian

J. W. Combs, editor of The Collegian states that he is making plans for a second edition of the college literary magazine to appear some time in March. Two meetings of the staff have been called to solicit material. Several "literary efforts" have come in, and the business staff has started a drive for advertisements.

The last issue of the magazine was very successful, presenting a wide variety of material and featuring illustrations which were done by Robert McLees. It is thought that the second issue is to be even better.

Anderson Pastor Holds Meetings

Rev. Joe H. Carter Heard Here In Series of Sermons. Much Enthusiasm Registered.

Rev. Joe H. Carter, pastor of the Central Presbyterian church of Anderson, held a series of religious services here during the past week. Starting Tuesday and continuing through Friday, Mr. Carter preached twice daily, at a special chapel hour each morning, and at 7:30 in the evening.

Rev. A. G. Harris of Milledgeville, Ga., was originally scheduled to hold these services, but cancelled his engagement because of sickness.

These meetings have been held each year on the campus during the Presbyterian church's "week of prayer for colleges," and have proved highly successful in reviving religious interest.

The subjects of all of Mr. Carter's talks were in the form of questions. Tuesday morning he spoke on "What is the Greatest Thought in the World?"; Tuesday night, "What Is Man?"; Wednesday morning, "What Is God?"; Wednesday night, "Who Is Jesus Christ?"; Thursday morning, "What Is Wrong With the World?"; Thursday night, "[illegible]?"; Friday morning, "What Is Sin?"; and Friday night, "What Is Beyond?"

All of these subjects were particularly interesting in the light of Mr. Carter's explanations, and the student body registered quite a lot of spirit in both the morning and evening services. Lunch was furnished at different times by the glee club, a quartet, and by A. T. Jeter, soloist.

Varsity Rifle Team Sets School Record

In its first intercollegiate match in three weeks, the varsity rifle team set a new high school record for team scoring with a total of 3066 out of a possible 3000. T. H. Wingate was individual high scorer with 374. T. F. Carothers and C. B. Elliott followed closely with 369 and 365, respectively.

The complete score follows, columns from left to right in the order: prone, sitting, kneeling, standing, and total:

Wooten Taken To Columbia Hospital

Walter Wooten, P. C. sophomore, is in a Columbia hospital undergoing treatment for a collapsed lung.

Wooten first suffered with pains in his chest Friday morning and was carried to the Hays hospital, from which he was removed to the Columbia hospital when his condition became more serious.

Wooten is a member of the varsity swimming team.

Baseball Coaches Plan For Season

Coach Jake Todd, of Erskine, Is Elected Secretary and Will Arrange Schedule For Season.

The head coaches of seven South Carolina colleges met on the Presbyterian college campus Wednesday as guests of Coach W. A. Johnson to talk over plans for intercollegiate baseball this spring. The men present were: Jake Todd of Erskine, Billy Laval of Carolina, Jess Neely of Clemson, "Dizzy" McLeod of Furman, "Dutch" MacLean of Newberry, and Tatum Gressette of The Citadel.

The purpose of the gathering was to arrange a schedule for the Palmetto league, South Carolina intercollegiate baseball association. The group decided to run the games under the same rules in use last year.

Mr. Gressette announced that The Citadel, which has not put out a baseball team in the last year or two, plans to join the association in 1935, since circumstances make it impossible this year.

Another act of the coaches was to elect Jake Todd, Erskine coach, secretary of the group.

Basketeers Click In Brilliant Win

Newberry Plays Steady Ball But Unable To Match P. C. Sharpshooters Levi and Wyatt.

In its last appearance before a local audience, the Presbyterian college basketball team played magnificent second-half ball to break a 15-all deadlock and emerge victorious on the long end of a 35-27 score against Newberry early last week.

After a somewhat listless first half, the P. C. team started the final period with a rush that had Newberry bewildered and before the Indians quite knew what had happened the Calvinists were 19 points in the lead. This lead was never seriously threatened, although the margin was cut down to eleven points before the end of the contest.

The entire team played good ball, with the diminutive forwards, Levi and Wyatt, taking off scoring honors with 15 and 14 points, respectively. Bradley and Lynn held down Newberry forwards successfully during most of the game. Waldrep's ability to take the ball from the opponents' backboard was the factor that enabled the Hose to end the first half in a tie with the Indians.

High scorer for Newberry was Ingram with 11. Beck, the other forward, shot nine points during the time he was in the contest.

The summary:

Bulldogs To Come Loaded For Bear Following Evenly-Divided Series In Athens. Blue Hose Also Primed For Action. Contest Brings Season To Close For Both Teams.

Tomorrow night in Legoy Springs gymnasium Presbyterian college and the University of Georgia wind up their respective seasons and officially write finis on the 1931 boxing season for this state.

The Bulldogs will bring to Clinton for the return encounter a squad of capable and rugged leather-pushers that battered out three clean-cut decisions over the Calvinists in their first meeting. With a none too successful season behind them the Georgians will be battling to end the season's work in a blaze of victorious glory. Reports from the Georgia training quarters indicate that the Bulldog is straining at the leash and is loaded for bear on his invasion of the Palmetto state.

And if the Bulldogs are ready, the Blue Stockinged gladiators are no less primed for action. They, too, have had a season that, although several meets were lost by very slim margins, is nothing to write home about. The four-four draw with Georgia is its only redeeming feature and the Presbyterians are itching for a victory. In ... feit in the junior middleweight class, ... five bouts to get the decision, while ... with three close defeats and one tie behind them. The tie is with their opponents on the same ... having met in Athens a week ago.

In Redutsky, Jacobson and Righton, Georgia has three men who will give anybody trouble in the hem-encloused square. All are crafty and experienced fisticians with two-fisted attacks. All won their bouts in the first P. C.-Georgia meeting. Redutsky is the welterweight entry and is undefeated this season. Jacobson is a light-heavy and Righton is a featherweight.

There is still some doubt that Graham Bachelor, 210-pound giant who was prevented from performing at Athens by an injured hand, will see action here. The Georgia Joe Purvis is slated to meet Bob Sims, state heavyweight champion. If he is not ..., he will be replaced by Moorehead.

P. C.'s entries in every class but one have been definitely decided upon. In the featherweight division, in which he has the choice of three nifty boxers, Coach Johnson is undecided which to use. Jack McCaskill, who gave Georgia's Righton a stiff battle, appears to have an edge. Other entries are as follows: Bantamweight, Seagle; lightweight, Clark; welterweight, McClary; middleweight, Bolick; light-heavyweight, Holliday; unlimited, Sims.

Georgia's probable entries will be as follows: bantamweight, Ivey; featherweight, Righton or Victory; lightweight, Bell; welterweight, Redutsky; middleweight, Sudderth; light-heavyweight, Jacobson; unlimited, Bachelor or Moorehead.

Dramatic Group Enjoys Banquet

The members of the Presbyterian College Dramatic club, along with the two faculty advisers, Professors Davis and Swedenberg, enjoyed a banquet Thursday evening at the Mary Musgrove tea room. Miss Floy Owings, who trained a number of grammar school children taking part in the club's latest production, was also present. H. S. Odom, president of the organization, acted as toastmaster.

During the course of the banquet speeches were made by Odom and Professors Davis and Swedenberg. The rest of the program was given to business, during which H. M. Wilson was elected to lead the dramatic organization as president during the school year [illegible]. The group also discussed plans for a bigger program and presentation of a higher type of drama.

"SOMEBODY TOLD ME . . . "

If a stranger were to come in our midst, we wonder whether he would recognize this noble institution as a [illegible] be it [illegible] thought is to what length the story may be stretched and still be believable. Unfortunately, extreme lengths may be reached before it is too absurd for some people. For instance, if a student is seen drinking ginger ale in the room it is immediately rumored that a drunken orgy took place in [illegible]om. The next logical addition is that a student council member walked in on the festivities. Therefore, the next morning the students, for by now the story has grown to include at least ten, are very interested and astonished to learn they have been suspended and are well on their way [illegible] they will remain for a period of two weeks. Thus, instead of a kingdom being lost for want of a horseshoe nail, we have a reputation being lost for a drink of ginger ale.

Some old fogies may think rumor is dangerous, but just allow your mind to dwell on what great sport it is to see how far stories will circulate and how many different people will be involved. It is fine fun to hurt other people and to ruin reputations. Why, if there is a sufficient demand for it a course might be given in "The History and Practical Application of The Art of Rumor." The course will probably begin with the Greeks who maligned fair Dame Rumor, thinking of her as an evil goddess, and will end with the present day when an enlightened generation has finally allowed her to come into her own by placing her in a preeminent place among the so-called fine arts. There are several good student instructors available and we are sure that there will be no lack of interest [illegible] students.

BIRTH CONTROL

"A blue stork is to be mated to the Blue Eagle if the plan of the American Conference on Birth Control and National Recovery succeeds." So begins a Literary Digest report of a bill in "the nursery of the House Judiciary Committee," a bill which has as its end the legalizing of the "dissemination by physicians of contraceptive information and advice, with due regard to those States content to let nature take its course."

Although this bill may be overshadowed by monetary matters, balancing the budget, etc., it is of supreme importance. All through the ages the question of birth control has been discussed, though not always openly since some people insist that ignorance is bliss. Yes, even in this day of education there are some who still believe that what one doesn't know won't hurt him. And the worst part of it is that so many who fail in this class are the ones who are responsible for our laws. Ignorance is not bliss, and the laws of nature, unlike those of the "moralists," do not consider the knowledge or the ignorance of a violator.

There has been a time in our human history when tabus on certain things were very helpful, even necessary. But in our life today, and especially in thsi supposedly free America, tabus must be lifted. They are a disgrace to our advancement. They must be done away with, whether they have been imposed by religion, morality, science, or just superstition; we are now wanting and requiring free knowledge just as we have for so long wanted free speech.

There is absolutely no logical reason why physicians should not be allowed to furnish contraceptive information to those who wish it. To the cause of eugenics alone it would be a wonderful aid. Yet many of us tread along the road of life content to allow worn-out conventions of by-gone days be the ruling factor in our lives.

It is rather amusing, and quite significant, too, in our type of politics, that instead of being in the hands of those primarily interested and versed in such matters, the bill is with a group of politicians the chairman of which is a bachelor who "professed only an academic interest in it."

Much credit should be given to Mrs. Margaret Sanger, whose efforts for years have fostered the birth control movement, and to Mrs. Thomas N. Hepburn (mother of the actress), who is helping Mrs. Sanger put the bill before our law-makers at the present time. A noble work, the outcome of which we hope will be the enlightenment of all. —C. E. C.

ROUND-UP

Somewhere, sometime, somebody formed a blessed organization for the abolishment of punning. And I might suggest they lay a snare to catch the punsters. For there are many of them prowling on an unknowing public. You can never tell when one of those insidious individuals will assail you with a pun and then eat into you with a breath that stays forever after in your ears. It is just as likely he will accost you with an ever-broadening grin and ask if you know what the undertaker's slogan is. And then if your suspicions aren't yet aroused and you volunteer a willing, "No," you will hear, "Good Mourning To You." But they are not always half so clever, oftentimes being spontaneously uttered with not one whit of forethought. And then is when you must grit your teeth in grim forbearance, possibly preen an insipid smile, and cringe from the possibility of another such. And yet for all that the world has known some excellent and clever men "who were not able punsters" — the "Gloomy Dean of St. Patrick's" did his share. But I still stand staunch and firm in my opinion the Dean was in the wrong.

Nominated for oblivion: Edgar Guest, because as a long-suffering and long-suffered traveler on the "path to home," he has burdened a weary world with his homely observations in more homely verse. Eddie Cantor, because his once entertaining radio program has become as dull and tiresome as Ed Wynn's joke, and because he once sang "Now's the Time To Fall in Love." Rudy Vallee, because his twangy, mush-mouthed croon brings back unpleasant memories of a song called the "Maine Stein Song," and because he has cluttered up the newspapers too long with his controversial divorce.

One seldom realizes that the name our paper bears is a remnant of the classical days of the eighteenth century when the illustrious Doctor Johnson held forth at the Cheshire Cheese Tavern and the notable Mrs. Montagu in her salon, where Benjamin Stillingfleet was an habitue. He wore grey or blue worsted stockings instead of the customary black, and the literati came to be known by the name Blue Stockings.

Up in Hartford, Connecticut, they gave a premiere of Gertrude Stein's seemingly absurd, cellophane-wrapped opera, "Four Saints in Three Acts." A reviewer says it has 30 saints, a prelude, and four acts. He says, too, that the meaning is utterly unfathomable and provides the main controversy despite the fact that Miss Stein chose Harlem Negroes to take parts of Spanish characters. But if Gertrude has made it hard to understand she's just living up to Alice B. Toklas. She wrote the libretto on the assumption that opera-goers don't understand the words in an opera, so she put in what sounded musical regardless of any meaning whatever. She made an aria out of this: "Pigeons on the grass alas Short longer grass short longer longer shorter yellow grass Pigeons large pigeons on the shorter longer yellow grass alas pigeons on the grass . . . " "Time" says St. Ignatius made it reverent. Very well, and perhaps he did, but I doubt seriously whether even St. Ignatius could do anything with the thoroughly tongue-twisting chant, "Let Lucy Lily Lily . . . "

And to end a disjointed series, I bring in a borrowed bit of humor. It was found above the sugar bowl in a small town cafe: "Use one spoon of sugar in your coffee and sir like hell; we don't mind the noise."

LE MONDE

From India—Gandhi's Resistance

Mahatma Gandhi has recently given us his attitude toward war. The whole center of his existence (and the whole world, he seems to think) is nonviolence. "There is no escape for any of us save through truth and nonviolence." War is wrong and must be done away with. "I know that war is wrong, is an unmitigated evil. I know, too, that it has got to go. I firmly believe that freedom won through bloodshed or fraud is no freedom." Mr. Gandhi thinks it is more a matter of the heart, not the intellect. In this regard, he says, "True guidance comes by constant waiting upon God, by utmost humility, self-abnegation, by being ready to sacrifice one's self. Its practice requires fearlessness and courage of the highest order." The end of his ideals and hopes are the same as ours, but he would proceed by "Not violence, not untruth, but non-violence."

A Jerusalem of Youth

Even the "rebuilding" of Palestine is a youth movement, says Emile Schreiber from Paris. Most people think that the "cement which unites the Jewish people in the Holy Land" is their religion. To a large extent this is true. Yet, according to this report, many young Palestinian Jews are atheists who have "come to the ancient homeland of their race only for the sake of making an honest living and in answer to the challenge to their young Jewish blood which the creation of a new country offers." It seems that the old Jews censured in Europe "worshipped their ancient tradition" and that only the young generation are returning to Palestine. The Zionist organization sends there only those under thirty-five years of age and particularly favor imigrants under twenty. Yet while the new Holy Land is being made up of youth, it is the old orthodox Jews in Europe who "have kept alive the flame of faith" which is responsible for the present renascence of action.

At Duke—A Student Revolt

And speaking of "youth movements," we come nearer home, right in our own Southland, to Duke university, where they have decreed that the words "student government" shall have the accent on "student." They recently have demanded of the administration and trustees:

1. A new constitution for student and Pan-Hellenic councils, granting full student control of student affairs.
2. Free speech for students in classrooms and in publications.
3. Abolishment of $2 to $5 fines for throwing cigarette butts in hallways, marking on walls, and spilling water.
4. Sunday opening of swimming pool and tennis courts.
5. Better food in the Union dining hall.

The "last straw" seems to have been the action of the dean in ruling void a trial of a student offender by the students' Pan-Hellenic council, because he happened not to be present at the trial. It is probably more than a "youthful outburst." Back of it all, it is said, was the "refusal of Trinity-Duke's long-time ruling trio, President Few, Vice-Presidents, and Dean Wannamaker, just themselves to running a university instead of a small co[illegible]

OPEN FORUM

Editor, The Blue Stocking:

An announcement of unusual interest is that concerning the comprehensive examinations which all sophomores and juniors will be required to take in May. This set of questions is supposed to be a close estimate of the knowledge a student has gained in various fields of learning. An inspection of last year's comprehensive reveals that such a quiz should indeed furnish a pretty fair test of knowledge—if the student himself cooperates by doing his best to make the highest grade possible. Right here we see a defect which weakens the whole proposition at the start. The average student standing the test will say to himself, "What possible good will it do me to make a good grade? Why should I work hard on an exam when I get no reward at all for doing good work?" Then probably he will stand the examination without so much as looking at half the questions.

This, it seems, is the way the "best minds" in the field of education judge the college student's knowledge. We have been wondering for a long time how the American student has acquired such a reputation for stupidity in all matters pertaining to book learning and general enlightenment. It happens this way: The leading educators of the country send out comprehensive exams to something like 150 colleges. The college authorities say, in effect, to the individual student, "You are required to sit in the examination room for the specified length of time. If you write nothing at all on your paper we will know that your mind is a perfect blank, as far as common knowledge is concerned." Please note that one is given no incentive whatever toward making a high grade. He is mere told that he must sit for two hours over each of the five parts of the exam. Finally, after the returns are sent in and tabulated, the leaders in this gigantic experiment broadcast far and wide the fact that the American college man is deplorably lacking in the very rudiments of essential knowledge.

We have here, apparently, the source of facts on which critics base their assumption of the American college man's blissful ignorance on so many subjects. A great mystery has been cleared up.

Thus, it appears, we college students are measured mentally by nothing more than a farce. We are told to "stand" the tests—that is, to remain in the room for the required period of time. Thus, one man may sign his name to the paper and never make another mark on it; yet he gets just as much consideration as the man who answers correctly every one of the 1800 questions. Naturally, few will attempt to gain a high ranking. Since this is true one migh well ask, "How could any information of value possibly be obtained from a test of this kind?"

One might think from this that I am unalterably opposed to comprehensive examinations. On the other hand, I think the idea is a good one, if it is carried out in the right way. However, I should like to suggest one modification which I am convinced would make the comprehensives a complete success insofar as reliable statistics are concerned. Continue the system used last year of allowing students who attain a grade of 500 to be exempt from regular examinations. This seems to me the only way such a questionnaire can be made to indicate just how much information a college man holds in his much-deprecated brain. One can readily see that if this proposed system is used, P. C. will rank much higher than she otherwise would.

Let it be understood that I am not opposing the comprehensive examination in itself. However, I think any fair-minded person will agree with me that those who take this test of knowledge seriously and conscientiously should be rewarded. —C.

R. O. T. C. NEWS

Officers of the day and their orderlies for the week are as follows:

Monday, Feb. 26—2nd Lt. Copeland, C. W., with Sgt. Yearout, P. W.
Tuesday, Feb. 27—2nd Lt. Lawson, C. M., with Sgt. McCaskill, J.
Wednesday, Feb. 28—2nd Lt. Wilson, H. W., with Sgt. Carson, C. E.
Thursday, March 1—2nd Lt. Wilson, H. D., with Sgt. McCall, L. A.
Friday, March 2—1st Lt. White, J. C., with Sgt. Jeanes, J. G.
Saturday, March 3—1st Lt. Crawford, W. H., with 1st Sgt. Bolick, H. E.

Due to a slight illness, Captain Wysor was unable to be with the corps the first part of last week. The student body is glad to see him back at his work again this week.

The first month of the second semester was over on Saturday past; but due to conflicts with the meeting held on the campus last week, Captain Blanton found it impossible to give any tests to his sophomore classes in military science. However, this week a practical test of stripping and assembling the automatic rifle, and a written quiz on its function will be given. The practical test can be taken either at some drill period or during a vacant period; but the written work will be given at the regular class meeting. All sophomores are requested to arrange with Captain Blanton some time to take the practical test.

Captain Wysor promised some time ago that the annual R. O. T. C. boxing fracas would be staged immediately after the basketball team won another game. That game was won last week and now every one clamors for this promise to be fulfilled. But on second thought, maybe those men who signed for participation in this affair are not among the clamorers. The men had been resting easy, for the basketball season was drawing to a close and there was still no victory in sight. Now since they have been assured that the slugging will soon be a reality, the P. M. S. and T. hopes that no one gets cold feet—or at least that there will be no cold feet until the match is in progress.

For the next few weeks, when the weather permits, the battalion will study extended order on the drill field. This training is given to acquaint the men with actual battle conditions and to train them to act promptly and intelligently if they were thrown in such a position. It is recommended that every man in the corps read or re-read the material on this subject in the manual, for it is imperative that every man know it thoroughly. After all, this is the chief battle training that is given; the other being merely preliminary. When the first year men are told to "scatter out so everybody won't be killed if a shell drops near you," we suspect that many of them will realize for the first time that war is really something more than marching troops.

The merit badge for this month should go to Dr. Davis for his cooperation with the military department in reducing the number of "gold bricks" in our army. The doctor has discontinued the practice of giving only "broken-bone" pills for various maladies; and now prescribes a second dose which, when taken, will surely make those patients remain in for a day whether they were sick at first or not. All interested, see Dr. Davis for particulars.

Frosh Mermen Lead Clemson

The P. C. freshman swimming team opened its schedule at Clemson Friday afternoon, winning by a score of 45 to 32. P. C. entered a team that the Clemson rats were unable to overcome, and one which will present strong opposition to freshman teams at the state meet.

The first event, the 400-yard relay, was won by Clemson, Presbyterian taking second. Swimming for P. C. were Legare, McInnes, Kendall, and Montgomery. In the 200-yard breast stroke, J. Freeman took second place for P. C. and in the 150-yard backstroke Will Wallace took first place for P. C. His time was 2:28.2. Propst came from behind on the last leg of the 60-yard dash to take second place for P. C. Furman Wallace placed second in the 440 free style, Will Wallace first in the 100-yard dash, and Propst second. Kendall defeated the Clemson diving entrant, 5 to 3, to clinch another first place. Will Wallace and Propst finished the 200 in the order named to take first and second places. Clemson forfeited the medley relay.

Will Wallace, who took three first places, was high scorer for P. C. with 15 points. Propst was next with nine points.

Every Lucky Strike is made from the finest tobacco and only the center leaves. Not the top leaves—because those are under-developed—not ripe. They would give a harsh smoke. Not the bottom leaves—because those are inferior in quality. They grow close to the ground, and are tough, coarse and always sandy. The center leaves are the mildest leaves, for which farmers are paid higher prices. Only these center leaves are used in making Luckies the fully packed cigarette—so round, so firm—free from loose ends. That's why Luckies draw easily, burn evenly. And remember—"It's toasted"—for throat protection—for finer taste.

Two Big Events This Week; Both Interesting

This week will see the closing of one local season and the opening of another. Tomorrow night the Blue Blue Stocking boxing team will wind up its season in a return engagement with the University of Georgia Bulldogs. Friday and Saturday, the spring social season will be officially opened with the Pan-Hellenic dances.

News of the social reawakening will spell some people but, somehow, we don't believe it will be possible to get worked up over anything in exactly the same manner we are now about the Georgia-P. C. fracas. The action-packed Blue Hose-Bulldog entanglement at Athens some time ago put the matter in a grave danger of apoplexy. There just weren't any relaxation periods such as a nice, slow bout with each man waiting for the other to lead, or a movie scrap with two beautiful young gentlemen dancers interpreting "The Weaving Pansy," inappropriately [illegible] boxing gloves and trunks.

No, there just wasn't any such thing. Every fight on the card was a "jam-up good 'un," as we used to say [illegible] became literary. Four [illegible] seven bouts is proof [illegible] several gloves were [illegible] course of the evening.

At Last They Clicked. The Basketeers

The Presbyterian basketball team may [illegible] its season a success. Three games won, nine lost, many of them by slim margins.

In winning from the College of Charleston and Newberry, the hoopsters showed real form, particularly in the second half of the Newberry game on the local court. The midget forwards, Wyatt and Levi, stayed [illegible] their guard men and [illegible] opposing goal.

The team did not show much form [illegible] readily indicates, but the combination showed steady improvement and clicked regularly in the final stages of the [illegible] man through graduation, so the combination that finally got around to functioning smoothly will be back in [illegible] before. We won more games [illegible]

Intramural Basketball League Contains Thirteen Teams

"13" may be unlucky for some, but [illegible] basketball tournament it means that this year's tourney will be the largest ever held. It means also that practi[illegible] no end of trouble will be encountered [illegible]

[illegible] have already started working out in order to be in shape for the occasion. [illegible] more rivalry than there ever was between Athens and Sparta. But there is plenty of interest being manifested in other quarters. Dormitory teams are determined to lift from the concrete brow of Alumni Hall the victory crown that [illegible] dwelling has worn for two seasons. Alumni is just as determined to retain it.

The Thornwell team is a new entry into the tussle, and with characteristic Thornwell spirit, has settled down to the business of bringing home the bacon in the shape of a basketball championship. With the "Home of Peace" occupants lending moral support, other teams will do well to keep an eye on the orphanage quint.

Intramural Games To Begin Monday

Dormitories and Fraternities Organize For Campus Basketball Tournament. Afternoon and Night Contests.

Under the direction of the athletic department, a series of intramural basketball games have been arranged to begin on Monday, March 5. The games will be played between the various dormitories and fraternities on the campus and the day students. A fraternity member or pledge may play either for his fraternity or for his dormitory, but no man will be allowed to play on more than one team. After having played on one team no man will be allowed to change teams.

The games will consist of two 20-minute halves and will be played in the afternoon and at night. In some cases it may be necessary for a team to play two games in one day, but one of these will be played in the afternoon and the other at night. All students of the college are eligible except members of the varsity and freshman basketball teams or men who have practiced with either.

The schedule is as follows:

Monday, March 5

1:00 p. m.—Kappa Alpha vs Smyth (B).

7:00 p. m. Alpha Lambda Tau vs Alumni.

8:00 p. m. Pi Kappa Phi vs Smyth (A and C).

Tuesday

[illegible] Pi Kappa Alpha vs Laurens.

[illegible] Day Students vs Spencer.

Wednesday

[illegible] Winner of bracket 2 vs winner of bracket three.

7:00—Alpha Kappa Pi vs winner of bracket 4.

8:00 — Thornwell vs winner of bracket 5.

Thursday

1:00—Winner brackets 1 and 2 vs winner brackets 3 and 4.

7:00—Winner 5 and 6 vs winner 7 and 8.

8:00—No game.

Friday

8:00—Finals between two undefeated teams.

Certain men have been appointed to organize the various teams. These are:

Kappa Alpha—Harvin, S. I.
Smyth (B)—Nelson.
Beta Kappa—Powell Freeman.
Alpha Lambda Tau—Waldrep.
Alumni—Worrell.

Still More Boxing. Army Series Yet To Come

Before the basketball tourney gets under way, another intramural event of long standing must be got out of the way. It is the R. O. T. C. boxing tournament.

This affair habitually draws larger crowds than any other local athletic event with the possible exception of some football games. And the large [illegible] never go away disappointed. What the spectators miss seeing of ring science is made up for by the generous supply of ludicrous situations that every R. O. T. C. boxing card furnishes. Everybody, including the participants, has lots of fun in the two nights which constitute the life of the tournament.

The exact date for this event has not yet been set but it will probably come shortly after the P. C.-Georgia scraps, likely the latter part of next week.

A Few More Notes From a Frayed Cuff

Presbyterian will meet the University of Florida in track sometime in April. The meet was arranged during the boxing team's recent trip to Gainesville. It had formerly been announced that the two teams would not meet this spring. . . . P. C. swimmers have scheduled a meet with the University of Georgia tank team. . . . If you remember, that action was suggested in this column recently. . . . The words most frequently used in press dispatches to describe the Blue Hose basketball team during the past season were "hard fighting." . . . Taylor, Carolina bantamweight, has been named state champion by The State. Jimmy Searle beat Taylor. What does that make Searle? . . . Bob Sims retained his heavyweight title won last year. Bolick was named runner-up to champion Willard in the middleweight

Newberry Cagers Win Close Game

Although leading 15 to 11 at the half, the P. C. basketball team allowed Newberry college to come from behind in the last two minutes of play to defeat them by the narrow margin of 29 to 24, in Newberry Saturday night.

In the early stages of the game, the Blue Stockings held a 9 to 1 advantage over the Indians and from that point until the half kept their opponents consantly on the alert.

With about five minutes to play in the last half and the score standing at 24-16 in favor of P. C., neither team seemed able to score. The ball stayed near the center of the floor for several minutes, when suddenly the action began. Hewey, of Newberry, tallied from the floor time and again and when the smoke cleared away and the final whistle sounded, the Indians had taken the Hose's scalps.

Hewey was outstanding for Newberry because of his excellent basketwork. He amassed a total of 15 points, seven goals from the floor and three free shots. Wyatt and Waldrep led the scoring for Presbyterian with 10 and 8 points, respectively.

Blue Sox Drop Game To Papooses

The P. C. freshmen dropped a nip and tuck basketball game to the Newberry rats, 23 to 21, at Newberry Saturday night. Earlier in the week the Sox had defeated Newberry, 59-19, in the Leroy Springs gymnasium, but were unable to duplicate their achievement.

The Papooses took an early [illegible] lead but P. C. overcame this and held the large end of an 11-to-9 score at the half.

In the closing half of the game the rats still held the lead, but Newberry unleashed an attack that tied the score, 21-21, with one minute to play. Morgan tallied in this last minute to give Newberry the victory. Alexander was high scorer for Presbyterian with 10 points.

Local Tank Team Loses To Clemson

Blue Stocking Swimmers Drop Two Meets To Tigers, First In Local Pool and the Return Event At Clemson.

Presbyterian swimmers met their second defeat of the week at the hands of Clemson college at Clemson Friday, by a score of 57-27.

The Blue Hose could win but two first places, while taking three seconds and the same number of third places to make 27 points. The medley relay team, composed of Valley, Freeman, and Wilson, won its event, and Powell Freeman took first in the 200 yard breast stroke. Wilson came in second in the 60 and 100 yard dash, and McFadden was runner-up in the diving. Morrow, Valley and McFadden took third in the 150 yard backstroke, 440 free style and 200 yard dash, respectively.

Goodson, Clemson flash, repeated his performance of four days before by smashing the state record for the 440 yard free style.

Wilson was high scorer for P. C. with two second places and a berth on the winning relay team to his credit.

The summary:

Search Still Going On For A Name For the College; Many Are Suggested

By Robert C. McLees

What would YOU name your college?

Perhaps you don't know it, but there has been a considerable movement to change the name from "Presbyterian College" to something else. In each of the last two meetings of the board of trustees, there has been passed a motion to change the name. There have been discussions and suggestions, but the lack of a NAME. No name was splendid and rare enough to rise above petty prejudice; it has meant that the motion has looked desperately around, gasped pitifully for nourishment, and ended by feebly expiring on the chairman's desk.

In 1882, a charter was granted to "Clinton College." Fair enough. About seven years later, the name was changed to "Presbyterian College of South Carolina"—a 34-letter attempt to rally the Presbyterian element in South Carolina around the young institution. When the Synod of Georgia added its support, the name was shortened to "Presbyterian College—not a name: a denomination. What would "Baptist Institute," or "Methodist University" convey to you? Perhaps "preacher colleges"; certainly nothing more definite. Neither does "Presbyterian College" carry with it an individuality beyond the boundaries of its natural orbit. It is the opinion of Dean Marshall Brown, if I may quote him, that if the name of the college had been changed a dozen years ago, the psychological effect would have resulted in from seventy to seventy-five more students enrolled than there are at present.

There have been no lack of suggestions, but none have "hit the spot." The following paragraphs on each explain themselves.

"Coligny College,"—the protegy of Dr. W. S. Bean. The objection raised to the naming of the college after the famous old Huguenot was that the inconvenience of constantly being forced to spell and pronounce "Co-lee-nya" for the curious would drive all concerned distracted.

"Calvin College"—a half-hearted suggestion, easily wilted by a harsh word from a cynical Board.

Both of these last named would have resulted in changing of the initials to "C. C. of S. C." With the present "alphabetical administration" and its C. C. C.'s, C. W. A.'s, N. R. A.'s and R. F. C.'s things would become hopelessly involved in a tangle of vowels and consonants—so it became the aim of the "seekers" to find a name which would leave the euphony of "P. C." unchanged, a title beginning with a "P."

"Palmer College" — Unfortunately, Palmer Junior college, of Florida, has prior right to the name of the eminent Presbyterian divine.

"If I had the money," said one, "if I had the money, I would plank down an endowment and say, 'Name it Poinsett!' I would imply in the catalog that the fact that Poinsett was an Episcopalian was irrelevant. His love of nature, and his interest in international affairs are the qualities which I wish to honor." The eternal objection: " 'Poinsett College!' The discoverer of Poinsettia pulcherrima; why not call it 'Pansy College,' and avoid being mediocre in our flowerlikeness!" The comment of a sarcastic auditor.

" 'Palmetto College'—We must identify the college with the state!" In order to have a specimen of our emblematic tree on the campus, it would be necessary to set the C. W. A. at work on a central hot-house. Aside from that, press notices would read something like this: "Palmetto Cabbages Shredded Into Slaw by Tigers Turned Vegetarian!" "Sauer-Kraut Kids Sour This Season." Perish the thought!

And "Piedmont" has already been appropriated.

On Tuesday, the board of trustees meets. If there is any son of Adam, the prime "namer" of all (didn't he receive the original contract, no competitors considered?), who has a suggestion to make, let him kindly turn it in to the editor—and it will be welcome grist for the annual appelative mill.

NOBEL PRIZE FOR SCIENCE

There are several Nobel prize winners whom I would like to mention. The first is the prize for medicine which in the year 1933 went to the American biologist, Dr. Thomas Hunt Morgan. His work is in the field of Genetics, that subject which considers the question of heredity as it is shown to us by the diverse combinations of factors which we call "genes." This is a new science with a great future ahead of it. The main difficulty in studying and solving the questions that come up in genetics is the fact that no one person can, during his life span, observe the hereditary history of many generations of men. Therefore the study centers mainly around animals which reproduce more quickly, such as mice. Dr. Morgan has bred and studied about 500 generations of these rodents since 1910. They reproduce about 25 generations a year (no wonder we always have to keep the trap set), giving Dr. Morgan many millions of "patients" to experiment with. Five hundred generations in terms of the life-span of man would be 12,500 years.

Dr. Morgan, who is president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, was born at Lexington, Kentucky, in 1866.

The Nobel prize for physics was divided this year between Prof. Schroedinger of the University of Berlin, and Prof. P. A. M. Dirac of Cambridge. Prof. Schroedinger is a native Austrian and was forced to leave Germany by the Nazi power, and is at present a Fellow of Magdalen college, Oxford. His outstanding work has been to determine a mathematical system with which can be united the Quanta theory of Plank and the wave theory of de Broglie. It was then necessary that these two be made to work into Einstein's theory of Relativity. This was the achievement of Prof. Dirac, who is a Fellow of St. John's college, Cambridge.

Presbyterians To Hold Institute

First Presbyterian Church Of This City Will Be Host March 1st To S. C. Presbytery.

A [illegible] institute and conference on religious education and men's work of great importance to members of the South Carolina presbytery will be held at the First Presbyterian church of this city on March 1, according to an announcement by Dr. Roswell C. Long of Greenwood, chairman of the Presbytery's committee of religious education.

[illegible] members of the occasion, Dr. Long said, include Dr. J. L. Fairly, co-ordinate secretary, Dr. J. E. Purcell, director of adult education, and Miss Atha Bowman, writer and field worker, all of the Southern Presbyterian church's headquarters committee of religious education at Richmond, Va.

The program will begin at 4 p. m. with devotional services conducted by Dr. D. J. Woods, pastor of the church, followed by afternoon addresses by Drs. Fairly and Purcell and group discussion. A 35c supper will be served from 5:30 to 6:30 and reconvening at 7 o'clock the conference will continue until 9 o'clock.

All of the leaders of the Associated Reformed Presbyterian churches of the second presbytery are invited to attend and participate in the conference. Dr. Long said he had issued invitations through their ministers to churches in Greenwood, Newberry, Abbeville, Laurens and Anderson counties. Those expected to attend are the pastors, Sunday school officers and teachers and officers and leaders in auxiliary, young peoples and men's groups.

"Ministers and other workers who attended the conference on foreign missions held here last November will anticipate this conforerence with much eagerness," Dr. Long stated, "since it is designed to do for religious education in an inspirational way what was done for the cause of foreign missions."

CAMPUS NOTES

"Pewee" Mahaffey did some "heavy" courting at Lander Saturday night.

Charles Beatty, B. Redmond, and Ben Covington took their usual weekly trip to Gaffney Sunday afternoon.

The name of a new student, Ralph King, has been added to the college role. King attended Furman university last semester.

Jimmy Viser has been ill abed for several days, though it seems that his cheerful nature is still predominant.

Tom Estes, after recovering from a severe boil, suffered burns from a liniment with which he was rubbed down by Freshman Clark.

Joe E. Brown says that by the time this comes out he will have spent the week-end in Blacksburg, if by that time his hair has grown out long enough to part.

BETTER THAN CWA

And here's another way to make money during the depression. "The Student," Miami university undergraduate paper, recommends that the university buy 300 sheep, costing about $2,700. The school could then sell the mutton for about $3,000, heads and hooves for $60, and what skins are left over after making diplomas for about $1,500. Also the wool can bring in some profit. And in this way instead of each student paying $10 as a diploma fee, "every senior will have his diploma and in addition he will have a dividend of $15.06."

On Monday and Tuesday Monogram Pictures presents "Broken Dreams," with Beryl Mercer, Martha Sleeper, Randolph Scott and Buster Phelps.

Wednesday brings William Powell in "Detective 62." This Warner picture is an entertaining production and is noteworthy for the splendid cast which includes: Margaret Lindsay, Natalie Moorhead, Ruth Donnelly, Arthur Hohl, and Gordon Westcott.

The long-awaited "Design For Living" comes to the Casino on Thursday. Although one would not recognize Noel Coward's play, one will be merely with the program, his cutest pleased with the screen version which a contract with Lord, everyone is mer- was so ably directed by Herr Ernst py. The remainder of the Paramount cast includes Gary Cooper, Frederic March, Edward Everett Horton, Isabel Jewell, Franklin Pangborn and Nora Gregl.

Ruby Valley's programs during the past three weeks have been exceptionally good. Leonore Ulric, the famous stage actress, gave a sketch from one of her most popular successes and was graciously given by the radio city audience. Tallulah Bankhead, one of the greatest actresses of the day, gave an amusing skit from "Forsaking All Others," the play in which she made such an outstanding success and which the motion picture version of her most popular role. William Smith Bean, D. D. 1849-1920

Recently, in connection with the "honor system revival" movement, there has been some mention of the tradiitons of Presbyterian College. The spirit, the history, and those who figure in it are the traditions of P. C.

Among these latter, one of the most lovable and deserving of a place in the P. C. "Hall of Traditions" was Dr. William Smith Bean. It is deplorable that the flood of tradition at Presbyterian College is at such a low ebb that only perhaps five per cent of those on the campus recognize the name of Dr. Bean.

Dr. W. S. Bean was possibly the most scholarly Christian gentleman ever to have been included in the faculty of Presbyterian College, in a linguistic way. He spoke German fluently, was an excellent Latin scholar, and read both French and Spanish. Every year it was his custom to read through the Old Testament in Hebrew, and the New Testament in the Greek. Led by his love of Dante, about whom he had written many articles for permanent publications, in his old age he taught himself to read the archaic Italian in which the original was written. He was also the author of "The Teachings of the Lord Jesus."

From his first connection with the college in 1892, until 1912, when he retired from full professorship to the less taxing position of librarian and assistant professor of English, he taught a wide range of subjects. Among these were mental, moral, and natural philosophy, political economy, economics and civics, psychology, ethics, logic and German. Whenever there was a breach to be filled, Dr. Bean was there to fill it from his ripe store of scholarship—be it Bible, or be it pagan mythology.

Dr. Bean was born in Augusta, Georgia, on March 18, 1849. There and in New Hampshire he spent his boyhood. For a time he was a student in Dartmouth College, later entering the University of Georgia. He shared with one classmate the distinction of graduating with the highest scholastic standing ever attained in that institution. He was theologically educated at Princeton and Columbia Seminaries, and his first pastorate was at Washington, Georgia. There he married Miss Annie Barnett, who died while he still held the pastorate, leaving him one son. Broken by grief, he resigned his position and, refusing all offers, retired to his studies for a year at the University of Leipzig, Germany. A cablegram summoned him back to resume pastoral labors at the First Presbyterian Church of Augusta. Later, while at the head of the Tubman School for young ladies, he was married to Miss Kate L. Fleming. In 1893, after a pastorate at Florence, S. C., he purchased control of "The Southern Presbyterian" at Clinton, and moved to Clinton to edit it, as well as to accept a position in the Presbyterian College. The paper proved financially unsuccessful.

Always a minister of the Gospel, he preached at numerous small churches in the vicinity of Clinton.

During his years with the college, his sprightly humor, his affection for boys, his charming affability endeared him to all who met him, and his house was often filled with youthful friends. Never would he scold, nor would he intentionally hurt another's feelings. During the last eight years of his life, when cut off to a certain extent from human intercourse by deafness, he did not grow bitter or resentful, but gave to the world a noble example of how a Christian should bear his burdens.

"In the fall of 1919 his health gave way and he gradually grew weaker until death came to him on the evening of June 14th, 1920." His beloved wife and four children survive him.

Presbyterian students would do well to model themselves on the traditions that are theirs by right of inheritance.

Joe College Growing Up

No longer are schools prisons, reformatories, places where boys and girls, men and women are shut up inside of four walls and crammed with something called culture, like a dose of castor oil poured down the throat of a small child. No longer are students condemned to the death of the traditions of their forefathers; they search out knowledge for themselves, and if they can't find it they create it. Even the Brown Shirts of Germany, although instead of reveling in the gloriousness of the past, they must rise, stand erect, and with arm outstretched, yell "Heil," are enjoying what they think is freedom—freedom from the old—and delight in that menace called Hitlerism which they hope will give them a larger and better empire.

Students are studying what they think best, saying what they think, whether best or worse. They are beginning to revolt against those things which put a ban on that impulse of curiosity, to find and create knowledge. At Sarah Lawrence College the students carry on individualized work. Some courses are of their own choosing, pursued in their own way, without test or examination, and merely supervised by faculty members at the students' own request.

At Swarthmore, fraternities and secret clubs of all kinds were voted down after giving them a fair trial. Eighty per cent of the student body were members of such organizations, too, when it was decided they were not as helpful as harmful to the school.

Certain elements in many schools have turned against athletics, and an increasing number have openly declared themselves antagonistic to all kinds of military training. In connection with this last, the War Resisters League reports that out of a poll of 22,000 students, about 7,000 would unconditionally fight for their country, 8,000 would absolutely refuse, and 7,000 would enter a war only if it were on American soil. Such figures as these show a trend against that old idea of the "glory of war." And, right or wrong, it shows that the American student is not so afraid to say what he thinks as he once was.

Also a greater interest is being shown in politics on the campuses of the world. We don't mean "campus politics" either, but national and international politics. There are the Brown Shirts of Germany, the Black Shirts of Italy (and recently of England), the Pioneers and Union of Youth of Russia, and the Student Revolutionaries in Cuba, Spain, and South America. In the United States, during the last presidential election, there were numerous political groups, including 250 Thomas-for-President clubs. And speaking of Thomas, in a straw vote, he ran on many campuses second to Hoover, and at the four largest colleges in New York City and three Western universities was first; this shows a slight trend in some sections toward Socialism. At Emory there is a group of students taking a working part in county politics in order that they may be better fitted for such work when hey have graduated. There are at present NRA clubs and 200 Young Democrats organizations.

All this shows that students are waking up to the fact that there is a world about them and that they are a vital part of it. No longer are they content to sit back, twiddle their thumbs, and answer questions of the old schoolmarm; they must know what is going on, form their own thoughts, and put these thoughts into action.

Present-Day Science

Are Acquired Traits Inherited?

About the time science is ready to say Yes or No to a question something comes along to upset the answer. But such is science, always moving on toward something better, never content to sit down and rest long in any one place. The question of heredity is one of long standing, that has bothered people for many generations. No doubt much of ourselves, our personalities, is inherited; some would go so far as to say that our lives are determined the day we are born, or even before that, at the time two germ cells come together.

Few believe that those characteristics which we acquire through life can be passed on to posterity. Yet an interesting experiment with rats has a rather astonishing bearing on the subject. Quite recently it has been found that rats apparently give a legacy of acquired "intelligence" to their children. If we put a rat in a maze has, say, ten outlets, all of which blind alleys except one, the rodent one chance in ten of going the way the first time. If this process repeated a large number of times chances of the rat going the right the first time is found to increase finally seems to "know" which is the correct one. Using a great of these creatures, and the offspring of each generation we find that generation is more "intelligent" the last. Why? In the first place the rats actually acquired "knowledge" of the maze? And is it inherited, transmitted to the spring? Scientifically, we would er think that acquired traits are inherited, but is that really the These experiments are being out at present, and only more mentation and observation will answer.—Chas. E. Carson.

A letter was received recently from the War Department informing the P. M. S. and T. that the annual spring inspection will be held on April 24 and 25 of this year. The date was originally set one week earlier but was changed due to the suspension of school for that length of time. The inspecting officer will be Col. J. A. Brockman, now stationed with the 82nd Division in Columbia. Due to bad weather during the present term and also to a fuller theoretical schedule, the field work has been delayed considerably; but now with the coming of better weather a full drill schedule will be conducted in preparation for this inspection. The unit has maintained the rating of excellent for the past few years and there is no reason that the uniforms given the freshmen next year should not bear the blue star on the sleeve as the present ones do. The fact that our uniforms do or do not have these stars has a definite bearing on the reputation of the school as well as on the policy of the government on maintaining a corps here. This being true, each man in the battalion is urged to get his drill regulations from winter quarters and study them until he is plenty sure he knows thoroughly any duty that may be expected of him.

Despite the fact that several members of the rifle team were a bit wavery when they fired the Fourth Corps Area match, the final results were gratifying to those in charge as the team came out eighth in the contest. This is more encouraging when we consider that the team last year came out twelfth in the same affair. And more than that, looking at the outcome of the whole season, Sarge is highly pleased with his team. In fact, he says it is the best since he has been here (if that is saying anything). Teams of schools of rather wide note have been defeated by our own team. Considering some of these—DePauw, Michigan State, New Mexico A. and M., U. of South Dakota, Dayton, et al. —the team should be a source of pride for any unit.

It is hoped that shoulder-to-shoulder matches with teams of the state can be arranged and steps toward that end have been taken; but no definite announcement concerning the time can be made yet.

In the near future our team will begin firing for competition for the Hearst trophy. Two five-men teams will be selected to compete and their scores will be sent to Chicago to be compared with scores of corresponding teams from the whole United States.

The Basic men have just completed a course in military history with results that are not to be boasted of by any one. The grades in all sections were low. However, the sophomores will soon complete a study of the automatic rifle and it is hoped that many of these men will do well enough on these tests to raise their marks to a presentable level.

For the spring inspection, about 20 sophomores and a number of freshmen will be selected to take the theoretical tests given in connection with other practical demonstrations. Those men sleected will have to put out some effort to make a good showing for the unit; but Captain Blanton will arrange some compensation which will justify all this effort. The nature of the reward will be announced later.

As is the custom each year, both Captains have begun a close observation of sophomores by which they will make their selections of men who rate the Advanced Course. Already a tentative list of 35 has been fixed; but anything may happen before the final choice is let out. All men are urged to make the best showing possible in the remaining months of drill; for the showing during this time will have more consequence than all the showing made previous to this.

Alford Is First Alumnus To Pay

D. C. Alford, who graduated from Presbyterian college in the class of 1921, was the first alumnus to pay his alumni dues for the year 1934.

The following is quoted from Mr. Alford's letter to Willard L. Jones, secretary of the association:

"Enclosed please find $3.00 for my membership fee in the Alumni Association.

"I enjoyed the meeting the other day and I am glad to see some active steps being taken toward organization of the P. C. alumni. Properly organized and working together they can do something worthwhile for P. C. . . .

"This is a big job . . . and depend on me to give you all the help I can to assist you in the organization of the alumni."

CAMPUS NOTES

Earl Winn and "Speedy" Andrews served tea in their room Saturday afternoon.

"Wild Bill" Cody, the man of the wide open spaces, took a trip to York in order to look after his extensive cattle interests.

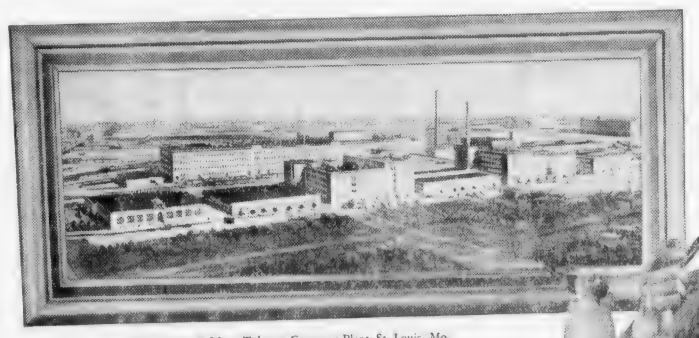
Sam Hughes, the campus handyman, has been forced, on account of his delicate health, to leave the work in charge of his subordinates. It is hoped that he will soon be able to take up his work again.

"Red" Peterson has been having foot trouble lately. The Blue Stocking representative was unable to learn what the particular malady was.

Jimmy Viser had as his guests Wednesday his mother, Mrs. J. H. Viser, and his sister, Janice, and Misses Janet Reaves and Bobbie Jane Campbell.

Lee Quarterman and Billy Nexsen were unfortunately confined to their beds during the Pan-Hellenic dances.

Tom Plaxico says that the co-ed-varsity rifle match was a huge success, speaking from a social standpoint.



It is suggested that the scarlet fever suspects come over to Spencer dormitory in order to warm up the place a little, since no other possibility of obtaining heat seems likely.

Charlie Graham and K. Mills are reported ill from indigestion on account of receiving a much-longed-for box, which they have been patiently awaiting since last September.

BOXERS GAIN BRILLIANT VICTORY OVER GEORGIA

FIVE VICTORIES AND A TIE ARE REGISTERED IN FINAL MATCH OF P. C. LEATHER-SLINGERS.

With a devastating array of right and left punches that packed dynamite, the Presbyterian boxing team closed the 1933 season with a decisive win over the University of Georgia by the score of 5½ to 2½ in Leroy Springs gymnasium on Tuesday night, February 27, previous to the suspension of college activities. In a previous meet on February 17, P. C. had fought Georgia to a 4-4 deadlock, but the entire Gladiator team seemed inspired in the return engagement.

In the first regular bout of the evening, Scagle defeated Ivey, bantamweight, of Georgia, by a technical knockout. "The Seig" lost no time in taking the scrap to the enemy and kept his man constantly in fear of a knockout. Repeated jabs to the face opened a cut over Ivey's eye and his wounds stopped the fight between the second and third rounds. Scagle defeated Ivey at Athens by a decision in the previous meet.

In the featherweight class, McCaskill won a decision over Victor of Georgia. McCaskill also took the fight to his opponent and gave an excellent exhibition of ringmanship. Several times it seemed that he would send his man out via the knockout route, but each time Victor saved himself.

Not to be outdone by his teammates, Bill Clarke punched his way through three rounds to take the decision over Ashford. Clarke clearly showed himself to be the better boxer and sent the lightweight from Georgia home nursing varied and sundry bruises.

The next bout, the welterweight, saw Georgia's only victory except for the forfeit in the junior welterweight division. Redutzky, who is said to be one of Georgia's best fighters, took the decision over McClary. Although losing the decision, McClary put up an excellent scrap and, despite an injured nose that he had received in the Athens mix-up, gave his man plenty of trouble.

The next bout, the middleweight, was probably the most spectacular of the evening, although it was by no means the closest. Harry Bolick put his Georgia peach on ice and sent it back home to Athens in one minute and thirty seconds of the first round. The peach, in the person of Sudderth, was knocked down several times and seemed about to take the long sleep when the referee stopped the fight.

Holliday and Jacobson, light-heavyweights, fought to a draw. "Goof" had Jacobson on his knees when the final bell sounded.

The heavyweight bout was forfeited by Georgia, and Bob Sims, who was to have fought his last fight for P. C., was denied the privilege of getting his man. In Athens on February 17, Sims knocked Morehead out in forty-five seconds of the first round.

Two preliminaries were fought. Gillis and Abbott fought for P. C. No decisions were rendered, but Gillis landed one to the button to knock his opponent out, after two rounds of action. Abbott seemed fairly evenly matched with his man.

Summary of bouts:

Bantamweight: Scagle (P. C.) won by technical knockout over Ivey (Ga.) in two rounds.

Featherweight: McCaskill (P. C.) won decision over Victor (Ga.)

Lightweight: Clarke (P. C.) took decision over Ashford (Ga.)

Welterweight: Redutzky (Ga.) won decision over McClary (P. C.)

Junior welterweight: Georgia won by default.

Middleweight: Bolick (P. C.) won by technical knockout over Sudderth (Ga.) in one minute, 30 seconds.

Light-heavyweight: Jacobson (Ga.) and Holliday (P. C.) fought to a draw.

Heavyweight: P. C. won by default.

P. C. STUDENT WEDS

A marriage of interest was that of Miss Mary D. Black of Clinton, to Cecil B. Lawter, member of the junior class at Presbyterian college. The ceremony was performed by Dr. F. D. Jones of the college faculty, on Wednesday, March 7, at Dr. Jones' home, and was witnessed by Ben Covington and Ralph Belk.

The bride was graduated from Winthrop college in the class of 1932, and for the past year has been teaching at St. George, S. C.

JONES SPEAKS FOUNDER'S DAY

Jones told how Dr. Jacobs planned his college for the "common man," how he introduced the courses then in use (classical, humanities), for he had to use what he had in his reach, and tried to adapt them to the plane of the "farmer's sons and daughters" who were under him by his own knowledge and that of his instructors. And in connection with the religious side of the institution, he said that Dr. Jacobs' ideas were not concerned with any special slant on theology, but to impress on the boys and girls who passed under him the "idea" of Christianity.

5 about Cigarettes

Practically untouched by human hands

WE'D like you to see Chesterfields made. We know you'd be impressed by the absolute cleanliness of our factories.

The tobaccos are the best that money can buy.

Expert chemists test for cleanliness and purity all materials used in any way in the manufacture of Chesterfield cigarettes.

The factories are modern throughout. Even the air is changed every 4½ minutes.

When you smoke a Chesterfield you can be sure that there isn't a purer cigarette made.

In a letter to us an eminent scientist says: "Chesterfields are just as pure as the water you drink."

Inspectors examine Chesterfields as they come from the cigarette making machines and throw out any imperfect cigarettes.

Tournament Final Be Played Tonight

Smyth Dormitory and Pi Kappa Alpha Teams Meet To Decide Campus Championship.

In the semi-finals of the intramural basketball tourney sponsored by Blue Key honorary fraternity, the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity defeated Kappa Alpha by a score of 25 to 14, and Smyth dormitory defeated Pi Kappa Phi, 25 to 19. As a result of their victories, these two teams were to fight it out Saturday night for the campus championship, but because of the absence of Captain Nelson of the Smyth team, the game was postponed until tonight.

In the first bracket, played on Monday night, Kappa Alpha defeated Alpha Kappa Pi, 19 to 14. Pi Kappa Alpha defeated Spencer, 31 to 28, and Pi Kappa Phi trounced Laurens by a score of 30 to 10.

The second night, Tuesday, saw the downfall of the Day Students at the hands of the Thornwell cagers, the victory of K. A. over A. L. T., and the victory Pi K. A. over Alumni.

Pi Kappa Phi opened the program Wednesday night by defeating the Beta Kappas and Smyth followed suit to defeat Thornwell. Then Thursday night the four undefeated teams clashed and Pi K. A. and Smyth emerged as victors.

All of the games were hard fought and were a great success. No varsity or freshmen players were allowed to compete, so the contestants were comparatively inexperienced, but all of the teams put on fine exhibitions of sportsmanship and ability.

Tonight's game should be one of the best, if not the best, of the tournament. The Smyth rooters promise that their team will not come away without the scalps of the Pi Kappa Alphas, and the Pi Kappa Alphas are just as determined to lick the Smyth aggregation. No matter who wins, the game will be a fight to the finish.

Thornwell To Get Degree From P. C.

Board To Confer Litt.D. Upon College Alumnus. Is Superintendent of Hartsville Schools.

The board of trustees of Presbyterian college, at their recent meeting, decided to confer upon J. H. Thornwell, class of 1903, the degree of doctor of literature.

Dr. Thornwell has been superintendent of the public schools at Hartsville, S. C., for a number of years. He was at one time assistant secretary of state of South Carolina.

Dr. Thornwell is one of the most beloved and useful superintendents in the state and has shown much interest and loyalty to his alma mater.

Dr. Thornwell is the grandson of one of the greatest theologians the Presbyterian church has ever produced, Dr James Henley Thornwell, for whom Thornwell orphanage is named.

The degree will be formally conferred at the commencement exercises this year.

Literary Fraternity To Invite Quillen

Sigma Upsilon Holds Meet After Lull In Activity. Guess Reads Paper Before Group.

After a rather extended lull in activity, Sigma Upsilon, honorary literary fraternity, met in the Pi Kappa Alpha rooms Wednesday night of last week.

The program was in charge of W. F. Guess, who presented a paper on "Some Trends in Modern American Poetry."

The meeting ended with a general informal discussion, after which it was decided to invite Robert Quillen, "the sage of Tusculum Inn," to speak before the club some time in the spring.

P. C. FRESHMEN WIN STATE SWIMMING MEET SATURDAY

REPEAT PERFORMANCE OF 1933 IN GREAT STYLE

Six New Records Made. Three Each By Clemson and Presbyterian. Wallace Is Star.

For the second consecutive year, Presbyterian college's freshman tank team has returned from the state swimming meet with the bacon, in the form of a state championship, in their possession.

The Blue Sox barely nosed out Clemson's yearling squad in Greenville Saturday by the score of 43-42. Furman trailed with 26 points.

The meet was close throughout, with first P. C. and then Clemson ahead in the scoring columns; and the outcome was in doubt until the finish of the medley relay, last event of the day. Before the relay Clemson led by a 36-35 count.

Six new records were hung up, three by Clemson and the same number by Presbyterian. William Wallace, diminutive P. C. tanker, was the sensation of the meet, breaking two state frosh records. He navigated the 150-yard back stroke in the time of 2 minutes, 30 and four-tenths seconds, and came back three events later to take the 100-yard dash in 1 minute, five-and seven-tenths seconds. Alexander was the other Hoseman to establish a new mark. He went over the 200-yard breast stroke route in 3 minutes, ten and one-tenth seconds. Alexander also took first in the fancy diving with 79.39 points.

Clemson clipped time off the existing 400-yard relay, 440 free style, and 220 dash records for her share in the general disregard for records prevalent during the afternoon. Hunter, in the 440 and, Bacot, in the 220, are the new titleholders.

Freshman summary:

400-yard relay: Clemson, first; P. C. second; Furman, third. Time 4:51.3 (new state record).

200-yard breast stroke: Alexander (P. C.) first; Bacot (Clemson) second; Watson (Furman) third. Time, 3:10.1 (new state record).

150-yard back stroke: Wallace (P. C.) first; Watkins (Clemson) second; Crigler (Furman) third; Padgett (Furman) fourth. Time, 2:30.4 (new state record).

Psychology Class Attends Clinic

Group Spends Friday Afternoon At State Hospital To Make Practical Observation.

Friday afternoon the psychology classes of Presbyterian college attended a clinic at the South Carolina State hospital in Columbia. This is the second trip that the class has taken in connection with their work in the study of abnormal people, the first being some weeks ago to attend a similar clinic at the State Training school in Clinton.

The group was taken to the entertainment hall where Dr. C. J. Milling, a Presbyterian college graduate, now on the staff of the institution, presented the subjects, and lectured on some of the more common types of insanity. He also told something of the workings of the hospital.

After the conclusion of the regular clinic Dr. Milling conducted the group through several of the open wards and recreation rooms. He exhibited and explained some of the methods now used to control the more violent patients, emphasizing the fact that the old "straight-jacket" procedure has been abolished.

Dr. F. D. Jones thanked those in charge for their kindness in conducting the clinic, and for giving his classes the privilege of having practical observation in psychology.

CLEMSON TIGERS WIN VARSITY COMPETITION

Tigers Hang Up Three New Marks. P. C. and Furman Finish In Order Named.

Three records fell before the onslaught of Clemson college varsity swimmers in Greenville Saturday as the Tigers splashed to their second tank title in as many years, leaving Furman and Presbyterian college in the backwash with 30 and 23 points, respectively. Clemson scored 54 points.

Presbyterian swimmers scored two first places, two seconds and two thirds with a squad so small in numbers that the Hose were forced to scratch entries in two events.

Alternate Captain Powell Freeman crossed the line first in the 200-yard breast stroke event, and Hank Wilson, lanky Yankee, splashed 40 yards in enough haste to show damp heels to his rivals and chalk up a first place in this event. Tom Valley followed McHugh of Clemson across the finish line as the Clemsonite smashed the state record in the 150-yard back stroke. P. C.'s other second place came in the medley relay.

P. C.'s third places were accounted for by Wilson in the 100-yard dash and McFadden in the 220.

Varsity summary:

400-yard relay: Clemson, first; Furman, second; P. C., no entry. Time, 4:16.8 (new state record).

200-yard breast stroke: Freeman (P. C.) first; Trobeigh (Furman) second; Crudge (Furman) third; Jackson (Clemson) fourth. Time, 3:16.3.

150-yard back stroke: McHugh (Clemson) first; Valley (P. C.) second; Sacco (Furman) third; Basha (Clemson) fourth. Time, 2:07.1 (new state record).

40-yard dash: Wilson (P. C.) first;

Bandwagon Makes Music For Spring Socials Of Phis

Springs Social Held Last Week-End At Country Club. K. Mills and Bandwagon Play.

The Pi Kappa Phi fraternity staged its spring dances last week-end, on Friday and Saturday nights, at the Lakeside Country club. The music was furnished by K. Mills and his Bandwagon, who harmonized with splendid effect.

A large crowd attended both functions. Many girls from out of town were here, while the social element of the campus was represented in force.

The quality of the Bandwagon's music was quite up to their usual standard. Assisting the musical organization was Pride Ratteree, former P. C. student, who handled the bass horn with his old-time vim and vigor. It also might be added that Joe E. Brown's management of the drums was little short of phenomenal.

One of the guests, Miss Mildred Whitten, supplied a little diversion now and then with vocal renditions of popular songs. Charlie Graham also came through with some good selections.

The chaperones were Dr. and Mrs. S. C. Mays, Prof. and Mrs. H. E. Sturgeon, Robert S. Owens, Prof. H. T. Swedenberg, and H. L. Eichelberger.

This occasion marked the beginning of the spring season. More events of the kind are expected to follow.

ALT Initiates Montgomery

C. B. Elliott, newly-elected regent of the Alpha Lambda Tau fraternity, announces the initiation of H. J. Montgomery of Bishopville, on Friday, March 23rd. Montgomery is vice-president of the student body, senior councilman, president of the glee club, and a member of the varsity baseball squad.

Dates For Final Exams Changed

Exams Set For May 30 To June 5. Commencement Program To Remain Unchanged.

At the faculty meeting on March 21, it was decided that the time lost due to sickness on the campus would be made up at the end of the present semester. Exams will begin on May 30 and continue through June 5. Commencement, however, will be held as scheduled, with the baccalaureate sermon on May 27, and the regular graduating exercises on the 29th.

The sermon is to be delivered by Rev. Stuart R. Oglesby, D.D., pastor of the Central Presbyterian church of Atlanta, Ga.

Track Teams Meet Carolina Saturday

Both Varsity and Freshman Outfits Go Into Action. Meet Is Changed To P. C. Field.

Both varsity and freshman track teams of Presbyterian college open their seasons with Carolina on Saturday on Johnson field. The meet was previously scheduled to be run off in Columbia, but because of the fact that the Carolina track is undergoing improvements, it will be held here. The teams will be slightly handicapped by reason of the recent holidays, but the men should be in fair shape by the end of the week.

The varsity will be composed of several seasoned men of last year's team and others who served on the frosh team. It is too early as yet to name any definite contestants in the various events, but it is felt that the Gamecocks will run into plenty of trouble when they meet the Hose.

While many of the rat aspirants to track honors are without experience, it is thought that they will give the Biddies more than enough competition. Coach McMillian hopes to develop much material that can be used next year in molding the varsity.

The roster of candidates for the two teams is:

Varsity: Waldrep, F. Jordan, Yearout, E. Arnold, C. Johnson, Hudson, P. Freeman, Winget, Underwood, Guerard, Wilbanks, Estes, Carothers, Barrett, Perrin, Clark, Bradley, Willis, H. D. Cranford, Gillis, Pitman, Beatty, Charles, Sims, McCulloch, J. White, S. Harvin, Forehand. The manager is W. H. Cranford, and the trainer, J. H. Chapman.

Freshmen: Prather, J. B. Jacobs, Gambrell, Williams, Jordan, Collings, Thompson, Peeler, Abbott, McSween, McAlpine, Love, Freeman, Crew, King, Mann, Oxley, Duckett. Tuttle is manager.

Blue Key Pushes Sports Program

The local chapter of Blue Key fraternity, honorary leadership group, will sponsor an extensive program of intramural athletics this spring, it was announced last week.

The program began last Monday with a basketball tournament for the campus championship and will run through the end of the spring term. Present plans call for intramural competition in basketball, swimming and baseball, with tentative plans being laid for a college field day. The organization also hopes to put on a boxing tournament to replace the one held heretofore by the R. O. T. C. department. Both the field day and boxing events will depend on the interest evidenced by the student body.

Twelve teams took part in the basketball tourney which started last Monday at seven o'clock and ran thru Saturday. This is a larger number of teams than has ever participated in an intra-mural tournament since its inauguration two years ago. Day students and the Thornwell orphanage team were newcomers to the list of entries.

PaC-SaC, Collegian Editors Are Named

Dunlap to Edit Annual, Odom Heads Magazine, and Arnold Named Y. M. C. A. President In Student Body Elections.

D. W. Boggs was elected president of the student body on the first ballot last Tuesday, while Van Arnold took leadership of the Y. M. C. A. and George Dunlap and H. S. Odom were confirmed as editors of the PaC-SaC and The Collegian, respectively, in the elections held at Presbyterian college. The latter three were unopposed.

Boggs, of Liberty, S. C., during his three years here, has steadily been known for fine sportsmanship and honor, and has been a valuable athlete for the Blue Stocking teams. He ranks highest among the juniors in the R. O. T. C., and is a member of Blue Key leadership fraternity. Socially, he is a Pi Kappa Phi. With him as senior councilmen are T. F. Carothers as vice-president, and L. A. McCall, Jr., who have served on the council this year.

The secretary of the student body, a rising junior, is to be R. R. Potter. With him on the council and close runners-up for secretary are R. W. Forehand and J. McClary.

Van Arnold of Sylacauga, Alabama, was the sole nominee for president of the Y. M. C. A., since C. B. Lawter has left college because of his recent marriage. A student for the ministry, Arnold has consistently taken an active interest in Sunday school and Christian Endeavor as well as in "Y" work. Associated with him as vice-president will be C. F. McCutcheon, another ministerial student. The secretary for the new year is R. R. Pot-

Dr. George Belk Dies In Memphis

Former Presbyterian College Athlete Was Widely Known In South Carolina.

Memphis, Tenn., March 20.—Dr. George W. Belk, 38, pastor of the Evergreen Presbyterian church here for two and a half years, is dead. Death was due to uremic poisoning.

Funeral services were arranged for today for the minister who died last night. The body will be buried in Swannanoa, N. C.

A native of Chatham, Va., Doctor Belk had a notable athletic record at Presbyterian college, Clinton, and at the University of South Carolina.

After two years at Presbyterian college, he entered the army and served as a lieutenant in the field artillery in France during the World war. After the war he was graduated from the University of South Carolina where he won 12 varsity letters and completed his ministerial training at the Columbia Theological seminary, Columbia.

He received the doctor of divinity degree from Southwestern university of Memphis. He came here from Versailles, Ky.

P. C. Debate Men Lose To Catawba

The Presbyterian college affirmative team was defeated by the negative visitors from Catawba college, Salisbury, N. C., last Thursday evening.

As in the first debate, a little over a week earlier, a good number of outside visitors were assembled to hear the discussion on "Resolved, That the powers of the president should be substantially increased as a settled policy."

R. R. Potter and C. M. Hudson again upheld the affirmative against the negative of G. W. Dozier and H. A. Wolfe, who represented the negative.

The Catawba team won on a tote, having defeated Furman the night previous, but going to Erskine for the next encounter.

The Renascence of Art

The Greeks had a word for it and the word is Art. Today there is beginning a possible revival of the ancient art of the Parthenon. Murals of a gigantic scale like those of the Italian, Michelangelo, and wall paintings like those in the old cathedrals are being done in America today.

Unawares, the CWA has begun possbily one of the greatest revivals of art the world has ever seen. As the result of the payment of public money for the relief of starving artists, masterpieces for posterity are being created. In public buildings such as schools, city halls, municipal play houses, and post offices, the ceilings and side-walls are being magnificently covered with the work of American portrait and landscape painters.

This subsidization of genius is not a new thing. The governments of Greece, Italy, and Egypt created all the marvelous handiwork in ancient times, the work we refer to as the "Wonders of the World," under the draft of public labor. The Pharoahs of Egypt used the flood of the Nile and millions of enslaved craftsmen to build monuments of themselves that they might be remembered. And though the Pharoahs have long since passed away, their memory is indelible in the Pyramids.

All the art that has survived through the ages from the Pyramids to the Statue of Liberty has been paid for out of public funds. Even of the Church paintings and carvings is this true, since for so long the Church and State were one.

Objections may arise that much of the work that will be splashed upon our public buildings will be rotten stuff. Even so, if only a small percent is worth preservation in time to come, it is at least an initiation of the revival of art and craftsmanship. Most of the patrons of art look upon the artist as a vagabond, more or less, and the big business men who pose for the sake of art feel that they are giving alms to a pauper. But not so; the artist has something great to give to the world, for which in return we give but a meager living.

And so begins a renascence of art in the twentieth century. What will be the result, or what good will come out of it, no one knows. The least we can or should hope for is that America will take her place along with other nations on the crest of achievement in art.

What Are They Worth?

In the modern school or college extra-curricula activities have taken a prominent place, and are generally considered vital parts of the educational system. They encompass a wide field, ranging all the way from well-organized athletics to newspaper and magazine work, and the more important of them are supported either partially or wholly by the college, and have a very definite place on the regular budget. We, as students, regard them as important and devote a great deal of our time to those towards which our interests incline. Some of them have become permanent institutions on the campus with definite traditions behind them and of these we seldom question the value.

In the student's zeal either to participate in more varied activities or to add honor to his name he has gradually formed a series of clubs and fraternities. In the beginning we prefer to believe that each was organized for a purpose and an aim, and at least we know that each made some particular interest the basis of its foundation. We like to imagine, too, that in the beginning they strived to create a force on the campus, and to do something for the betterment of the school. If this was true, then they justified their existence, and proved that the club form of extra-curricula activity was important in the make-up of the school.

But today we cannot help but take a cynical attitude towards clubs and honorary fraternities in existence on our campus. To accept them as standing institutions, to fail to place them in a critical light, and to find out if they merit existence is to be hypocritical. We have let them pass without question long enough.

Some of them, if they started off vigorously, have degenerated into a pitiful state of inactivity. In a few honorary fraternities a meeting is held at the beginning of each year to bid enough new members to send the regular dues to national headquarters, and to pay for a page in the annual. There may be another meeting, but usually it is forgotten about until the next year when the president again faces the problem of paying for the pictures in the annual, which seems to be the fraternity's sole aim and purpose. Others are a little higher in the scale of activity, and have several half-hearted meetings during the year. Even those that seem to carry on in the proper manner, and have regular stated meetings fail utterly in promoting any particular interest. We do not wish to be too caustic in our statements, but we feel safe in saying that no honorary fraternity on the campus does half that it should towards the betterment of the college.

Honorary fraternities are in a sad plight. This state is very apparently caused from the student's lack of interest. However, it is possible that there are entirely too many on the campus for any one to thrive and serve any definite purpose. We believe that there ought to be an accounting, and if it is found that there is nothing to justify a fraternity's existence it should be disbanded. If it means nothing to the college or to the individuals who are associated with it is there any reason that it should exist?

The Administration and Private Affairs of the Student

There has been quite a bit of discussion, both pro and con, as the result of a student being expelled recently for getting married. The faculty, following the wishes of the President, had passed a rule which automatically drops from the roll any student who marries, except by special permission. As a consequence of that rule a popular and influential member of our junior class has been deprived of further education at Presbyterian College, and has had his plans for later study at Columbia Seminary, as a candidate for the ministry of the Gospel, interferred with. And it has left a possibility of taking from the Church a part of that which is so greatly needed: influential ministers of the Word.

This raises important questions. To what extent should the president and faculty of a college concern themselves with the personal and private affairs of the student? Should they direct various phases of his social and economic problems and desires? Or should they only be concerned with his academic work?

We are not taking sides in this discussion; we are merely raising questions that naturally follow such an action. We should like very much to have the opinions of the students themselves, and even the faculty, for publication in following issues of the paper in order that we may give unbiasedly the honest views on the campus.

It might be possible to achieve exact justice for everybody but where would you put all the jails?—San Francisco Chronicle.

Present-Day Science

Did you know that the tail of a comet sometimes moves in front of its head? Well, it does, just like the cart before the horse. The reason we'll see in just a moment. Do you know what a comet is? The word itself comes from two Greek words meaning long-haired star. A comet may be compared with the head of a maiden with long hair streaming behind, or blowing in front. There are three main divisions of a comet: the nucleus, appearing star-like; the coma, a misty and diffuse envelope surrounding the nucleus; and the tail. While the density is not very great, none of them having a mass of more than one hundred-thousandth of the Earth's, the comet's size may be many times that of the Earth. The diameter, which includes the nucleus and coma, may be several hundred thousand miles, while the tail may extend out into space to the distance of hundreds of millions of miles.

The comet is a group of particles of matter, held together by the attraction of the particles around in space. This year the military department is sending one junior and one senior to a convention of ROTC units from all parts of the United States, which is to be held in Washington about the middle of April. These men will be selected or appointed later; but the method to be used is not known yet. In fact, anyone who cares to put out a few of his government dollars for a nice vacation from school may be considered for the trip. And none need fear that he won't get a consideration, for a little birdie just told us that the competition for this venture will be scanty, since men of such liberal means are few and far between.

Just prior to the annual inspection, selections of the best drilled individuals in the battalion will be made. These men are rewarded with a substantial money prize; but the amount is not to be disclosed yet. However, with the increased value of gold, all may be assured that there will be no heirloom of that nature to show little Charlie in future days. But still it may mean a nice box of candy for the girl; or, better still, a big box of dingles for those who are not selected; so it is advisable to give the affair a trial. Remember, the appointments for next year are being made right now by the impression you are making by your deserving conduct on the drill field.

The juniors will get a new thrill about the middle of April when they begin to fire the 30-calibers on the range. We suspect that those "mausers" which have contributed so nobly to the chagrin and mortification of these men for three years will show that they can come in handy in some instances—especially if someone wanted to simulate the kick of a mule.

Since all sophomores will be or may be required to stand an exmaination on the recently-completed military history, during the big inspection, Capt. Blanton requests that as many men as find it possible, get from the library a copy of Steele's "Campaigns" or Thompson's "Jeb Stuart" if for nothing else than to look at the enlightening pictures. Captain says there are some most interesting pictures in these volumes and that it would be excellent pastime for any enterprising cadet to look through these books in preparation for this exam.

The sophomores will regret to learn that they will be required to have another course or so before they are ready to meet the big man on the 24th. These courses include a review of scouting as studied last year and a continuance of the subject in patroling, and an "attack" of combat principles.

It is advisable that every man in the corps read the bulletin board daily. And why is this so imperative just now? Oh, well, you may get demoted and would surely want to know about it; or to look at the wrong side of the cloud, you may have been raised a notch or so. Anyway, that is what happened to Cadet H. M. Wilson during the past week; and anything that happens once may happen again, so there you are. Where? Oh, no place in particular. But as far as the composer is concerned he is about three-thirds prepared to lay his frame down for its nightly rest.

CAMPUS NOTES

Red Peterson has just recovered from an attack of influenza.

Ed Norment and Alton Harrison are recuperating from measles.

Tom Plaxico has received an offer of a position as radio crooner. He is undecided as to whether or not he will accept.

Joe E. Brown has accepted the position of trainer of the track team. The quality of his rub-downs is considered unequalled in this part of the country.

Red Peterson and E. I. Norment filed joint suit against Tom Estes, owner of Simon, the campus canine, for the sum of $8.51 to cover cost of smoking-bed-room slippers and magazines chewed up by said Simon.

MOVIES

Joan Crawford and Clark Gable are reunited in "Dancing Lady," which plays at the Casino theatre Monday and Tuesday. If you are a Joan Crawford fan you will eat this one up. The supporting cast boasts such names as Franchot Tone, May Robson, Ted Healy and his Stooges, Art Jarret, the popular radio crooner, Nelson Eddy, famous concert baritone, Winnie Lightner, who became famous overnight in the original "Gold Diggers."

Wednesday's picture is "Horseplay," starring Slim Summerville. This Universal comedy is Slim's latest and promises to be quite amusing.

Arthur Somers Roche's "Penthouse," which ran as a serial in Cosmopolitan last summer, comes to the Casino on Thursday. This MGM picture stars Warner Baxter and features Myrna Loy, Mae Clarke, Phillips Holmes, Nat Pendleton, Charles Butterworth, George E. Stone and Martha Sleeper. It is one of the most entertaining and exciting pictures of the season and Myrna Loy gives one of the most exhilirating performances of her career.

Alice Brady returns to the local screen on Friday. The title of the movie is "Stage Mother" and the cast includes: Franchot Tone, Maureen O'Sullivan, Ted Healy, Russell Hardie and Phillips Holmes. Miss Brady, who will be remembered for her sterling characterizations in "When Ladies Meet," "Beauty for Sale," "Broadway to Hollywood," Should Ladies Meet?" and "Miss Fane's Baby Is Stolen," gives one of her best performances in "Stage Mother." Here she plays the role of a hard mother who has such high stage ambitions for her daughter. Miss Brady gives a dynamic bit of acting in one scene where she parts with her little child. This picture will make one realize that she is the one who made such a great hit in Eugene O'Neil's "Mourning Becomes Elektra" on the New York stage.

RADIO

Did you hear Fanny Brice on the Hall of Fame hour last Sunday night? Her act proves that she is the outstanding star of the "Follies" this season.

The Metropolitan Parade is one of the most entertaining half hours on the air. It is broadcast at different hours during the day over CBS.

Donald Novis, Joe Penner, Eddie Cantor, Bing Crosby, Ruth Etting, Al Jolson, Paul Whiteman, Isham Jones, Ozzie Nelson, Rudy Valle, and Helen Morgan are holding the spotlight this week.

"Salome" was heard by the Saturday matinee audience. Atur Bodanzky conducted the turbulent music in a true musician's style. He was truly superb. Gota Ljungberg, the Norwegian soprano, sang the title role with great beauty of tone which is an accomplishment which could not be accomplished by just any soprano. She is one of the most important members of this illustrious organization but it had to take her performance in this work to prove the fact to the managers of the "Met." Max Lorenz, in the role of Herod, sang beautifully and his final scene with Mme. Ljungberg was one of the most dramatic the audience had ever witnessed. Dorothee Manski, Friedrich Schorr, Hans Clemens, and Doris Doe were all excellent in their respective roles. The climax of the biblical score which was based upon the work of Oscar Wilde is the aria of Salome in which she dances and sings to the head of John, the Baptiser. This aria is one of the most dynamic and taxing arias in the realm opera. Mme. Ljungberg encompassed the runs and dissonants with a remarkable ease and her voice soared to the high D above high C at the close, sending a chill up and down the spines of her listeners. She immediately won an ovation. At the first presentation of this opera this year she received thirty-five curtain calls.

ticles at the outer part of the coma. When this happens some of the outside particles lag behind, forming a tail which is built up as the distance from the sun becomes less. At this time the tail is in rear of the nucleus, but imagine what will happen when the head has rounded the sun in its elliptical journey: the tail which is held out by the sun's radiation pressure will then be leading, with the head doing its best to keep up. But this race does not last long, for as the comet gets farther and farther away from the sun the force of the sunlight becomes less and less, gradually allowing the tail to come back into the coma from which it had originated. And with this the comet is gone, maybe to come back; but just as likely it will sail on, never to return.

Furman 'Y' Group Leads Meet Here

Interesting Program Enjoyed On Local Campus. Student Volunteer Movement Explained.

The Y. M. C. A. program Thursday night was presented by a delegation from Furman university, Greenville, S. C., [illegible]. An interesting and varied program was given.

A. L. Nance welcomed the group on behalf of the local "Y" and introduced the leader, Mr. Strauss.

An enjoyable part of the program was the several vocal solos. Songs were rendered by Miss Martha Steward, William Boyle, and Wes Maloy, the accompanist being Woodrow Tisdale.

Miss Mary Steward, of the Student Volunteer Group, spoke on foreign missions. "We have been commanded by Christ," she said, "to preach the gospel to every creature. What must we do to faithfully carry out his command? First, we must sound the alarm. Let us gather together earnest Christians to serve as missionaries in the fields that are now white unto harvest. Second, we must rally our forces and go forth into the fields intent on serving God. Third, let us work in the Lord with all our might and bring into the folds those who know not God. And lastly, after doing these things, let us shout the victory."

Miss Steward explained the purpose and aims of the Student Volunteer group. This is a national organization of the young people who feel that they have been called to serve God in the foreign fields. The members sign a pledge to do their best in the furtherance of interest in foreign missions. Miss Steward intimated that plans for [illegible] a group on the local campus were being made, the group to serve as a subsidiary to the Y. M. C. A. or the Ministerial club.

Chris Lawson spoke, taking as his subject "The Master's Call." "The call of the Master," said Mr. Lawson, "is a call to service. Everyone who has really amounted to much in God's kingdom has heard and heeded this call."

Mr. Maloy, secretary of religious work on the Furman campus, spoke a few words, and extended to the local "Y" an invitation to visit the Furman group in the next few weeks.

The P. C. "Y" considered the program of real spiritual benefit and feels deeply indebted to the Furman group.

Collegiate Exchange

The Citadel "Bull Dog" boasts no less than nine feature columns in its make-up. We lost ourselves among the maze of columns trying to find the news. Living up to the military idea, someone has thought up the clever "Column Left" and "Column Right." Mr. Clay, of "The Mirror" on the right shoots his military propaganda straight. He believes in the R. O. T. C. That's no great wonder at all.

An editorial in "Ring-Tum Phi" of Washington and Lee asserts that some old traditions are worth keeping, and an open forum writer deplores the host of old worn-out habits called "traditions" which dominate the W. and L. student.

One College, according to the "Park Stylus," of Park College in Missouri, has elected one of its students as king of the handshakers and awarded him a pair of canvas gloves so that he could more easily carry on his activities. They did this because they believed that the "glad-hand" boys were never given just recognition.

BOGGS IS PRESIDENT OF STUDENT BODY

ter, who was chosen over H. M. Wilson, Jr., for the post. The other members of the "Y" cabinet will be picked by the president.

The PaC-SaC is to be edited by George Dunlap, of Rock Hill, another Blue Key man, and Kappa Alpha, who helps out in athletics and sings a second tenor on the glee club. Other key members on the staff for the annual, elected unanimously, are J. M. Seagle for business manager, and J. P. Todd, for advertising manager.

H. S. Odom, who will have charge of the college literary magazine, is well-fitted along such lines of liberal arts. He has written several short stories, has led the dramatic club, and also has been a member and soloist on the glee club. He is a Pi Kappa Alpha and member of campus honorary fraternities. The position of business manager for The Collegian is still open, as the only nominee, John Rauch, was declared ineligible, according to the rule requiring a certain scholarship average.

This rule, put into effect after nominations were closed, threw out many candidates, and left several elections uncontested.

Of all the men in New York there is one who probably has the biggest "little black book" of telephone numbers of really gorgeous gals. His name is Powers and he is the man that artists and advertising agencies call whenever they want a particular type of model for painting, sketching or photographs. Powers has them all classified and can find them on short notice. The most difficult requirements for a model to fulfill are those for color photography, since this type of photograph cannot be retouched. Hence the model must have never a blemish — not even a freckle. Color photographs frequently cost as much as $1,000 each!

Theatres and after theatre hotcha spots are more and more adopting the microphone and loud speaker system for entertainers until it seems that if anyone outside of the Metropolitan opera or concert hall should attempt to sing without them he'd be thought something of a freak.

You've heard the gag about the New Yorker landing in the West and immediately asking, "But where are the Indians?" . . . The census figures show that there were 391 Indians in New York city in 1930. They don't specify whether they were wearing feathers or not.

"ALL FOR P. C." P. C. FOR ALL"

VOLUME XV PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE, CLINTON, S. C., APRIL 2, 1934 NUMBER 21

P. C. ALUMNUS IN NEW YORK

J. G. Miller, Class of '24, Named Assistant Corporation Counsel of New York City. Former All-State Center Rises In Politics.

At a recent date, Joseph G. Miller, 41 Park Terrace, West, New York, was appointed assistant corporation counsel for the city of New York, at a salary of $4,750.00.

Miller has risen quite rapidly in the affairs of the city of New York. After graduating from Presbyterian college, and later at Columbia university and taking a special degree at New York university, he was named as assistant in the Seabury investigation, attracted the attention of Mr. Seabury, and was appointed to serve as assistant federal district attorney in the Southern district of New York. When the Republican administration was displaced by the Democrats, he naturally was let out. In the meantime, he was active in the campaign to elect the fusionist ticket, with LaGuardia as the candidate. Miller had charge of a district in upper New York in the election, and did a good job. This appointment is no doubt in compensation for his excellent work.

Miller is a capable attorney, and bids fair to occupy a position of prominence in the legal world. Miller graduated from Presbyterian in '24 and was prominent in the affairs on the campus. He was editor-in-chief of the PaC-SaC and a member of Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity. He was also captain of the football team and all-state center in '23.

Baseball Men Lose Season's Opener

Trenton, N. J. Team Downs Locals, 9-4, Here Friday. Schedule For Year Announced.

In the Blue Stockings' opening baseball game, played here Friday afternoon, the University Athletic club of Trenton, N. J., won by a score of 9 to 4.

The leading hitter for the Eastern visitors was Pancoast, making two hits out of three trials. Plowden and Horne led the Blue Stockings, with Plowden sinking a three-bagger in center field and Horne getting two singles out of four trips to the plate.

P. C. seemed on the verge of scoring several times but Lee and Gustaferi made spectacular catches to thwart the efforts of the local team. With one man on in the fourth, Lee went on his back to take Holiday's fly to left field and later, in the sixth, Gustaferi speared Bolick's center field drive.

Presbyterian's opening inter-collegiate game will be played with Erskine at Due West tomorrow. This game opens the schedule of the Palmetto College league.

P. C.'s complete schedule follows:
April 3—Erskine at Due West.
April 6—Wofford at Spartanburg.
April 9—Clemson at Clinton.
April 11—Carolina at Clinton.
April 14—Furman at Clinton.
April 17—Clemson at Clemson.
April 19—Furman at Greenville.
April 21—Wofford at Clinton.
April 23—Carolina at Columbia.
April 28—Erskine at Clinton.
May 1—Newberry at Newberry.
May 3—Newberry at Clinton.

Pi Kappa Alphas Give Spring Party

Informal Social At Country Club Well Attended. Two Radios Provide Music For the Hall.

The Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity began its spring social activities with an informal dance at the country club on Saturday night.

With this dance was inaugurated a new system of furnishing music. Two radios were used to good effect. The affair was attended by two members from each fraternity group on the campus and several non-fraternity men. Beautiful girls were in abundance and the dance proved to be an enjoyable one.

The Pi Kappa Alphas plan to sponsor several dances in the near future.

Tournament To Select Tennis Men

During the past week a tournament for the purpose of selecting a tennis team has been in progress. The matches will be completed by April 4 and the five men winning the various brackets will compose four-fifths of the team. The other men will be chosen by the coach and the rest of the team. Elmore Gregg is captain of the team and expects an even better squad than that of last year.

The first inter-collegiate match will be played with Furman on April 6, probably here. Matches have been arranged with practically every college in the state except The Citadel and the College of Charleston. In all, about 13 games will be played.

The squad will number seven men, but because of lack of transportation, only five will make the trips. The others, however, will be allowed to make their letters at home. He is interested in being elected this year as honors thus has been shown on the campus in the past few seasons.

Gillespie President Atlanta Ministers

Rev. R. T. Gillespie, of the Rock Spring Presbyterian church, Decatur, Ga., was elected president of the Atlanta Presbyterian Ministers association at a meeting of the organization Tuesday of last week.

Gillespie graduated here, magna cum laude, in the class of 1930. He was a member of the Beta Kappa social fraternity and several of the local honorary societies. He was a member of The Blue Stocking staff during the four years he attended P. C.

He received his theological training at Columbia seminary in Decatur, which his father was the head until his death in 1931.

Student Council Installed Tuesday

Sims Retires After Administering Oath To Boggs. New President Swears In Assistants.

The retiring president of the student body, R. E. Sims, swore in the new president, D. W. Boggs, last Tuesday at chapel. He, in turn, installed the student councilmen for the coming year.

Before leaving office, Sims spoke briefly to the student body, expressing his appreciation for their loyalty and help during the past year. This finished, he called the newly elected president before the rostrum and administered the oath of office.

The new student body head gave the oath to the new councilmen, who are as follows: Senior, T. F. Carothers and L. A. McCall; junior, R. R. Potter, R. W. Forehand, and James McClary; sophomore, J. K. Collings and Charles Steenbergen.

After the student council was sworn in Boggs thanked the student body for the confidence placed in him and asked their cooperation during his term of office.

The other student body officers are: T. F. Carothers, vice-president, and R. R. Potter, secretary-treasurer.

Hays And Hunter Go Through Rites

Popular Clinton Doctor and Genial College Business Manager Initiated Into Pi Kappa Phi.

Ralph Belk, archon of Pi Kappa Phi social fraternity, announces that two new men have been initiated into the order. They are Dr. S. C. Hays, the college's consulting physician, and J. H. Hunter, the administration's business manager.

Dr. Hays is widely known in and around Clinton for his surgical work. He is remembered, too, as a graduate and former professor here. During his college days Hunter was an active member of the fraternity, but due to some circumstance he did not go thru the ritual of initiation.

State Registrars To Meet April 6

Prominent Educators Will Take Part In Sessions. Dr. John McSween On Program.

Newberry, March 22.—The sixth annual meeting of the South Carolina Association of Collegiate Registrars will be held April 6, at Newberry college, according to announcement of Prof. C. A. Kaufman, registrar at Newberry college.

The topic for general discussion for the morning meeting will be "The Experimental Junior College of Certain South Carolina High Schools." The leaders will be John A. Chase, registrar of the University of South Carolina, and R. H. Jones, registrar of Winthrop college.

James H. Hope, state superintendent of education, will make an address on "The Proposed Plan for Merging State Institutions."

From 1 until 2:30 o'clock a luncheon will be held in the dining hall. Prof. Charles L. Trabert, of Newberry college faculty, will preside. Dr. S. J. Derrick, also of the Newberry college faculty, will make an address. A short musical program, featuring Arthur Cornwell, tenor, with Miss Geneva Erickson, accompanist, will be rendered.

In the afternoon from 3 until 5 o'clock, Major L. A. Prouty, registrar of the Citadel, will preside. An address, "The Coordination of the High School and College Curricula," will be given by Dr. John McSween, president of Presbyterian college.

Discussions will then be made by Miss Chase, Thomas [illegible], Lonnie [illegible], and Miss [illegible].

Six Colleges On Debate Schedule

Two Teams Already Met. Still More Forensic Battles Likely To Be Arranged.

Six more engagements are already definitely scheduled for this spring for Presbyterian college debaters, and several more are pending, according to H. M. Wilson, who is one of the negative team and has charge of correspondence now that C. B. Lawter is not in school. The contests booked so far are as follows:

The negative team goes to Winthrop on April 4.

The affirmative goes to Erskine on April 11.

The negative entertains Converse here on April 24.

Both negative and affirmative teams go on the road April 30 to debate Newberry and Wofford in a triangular affair in which each pair of opposing teams meet on neutral college ground.

The negative team of Wilson and A. V. Martin, Jr., has been making ready, under the direction of Prof. H. T. Swedenberg, and gets its first real action at Winthrop. The affirmative partnership of Potter and Hudson has already met Maryville and Catawba teams here.

Smyth Basketeers Win Intra-Murals

Dormitory Crew Runs Over Fraternity Teams To Take Campus Basketball Championship.

In the final game of the intra-mural basketball tourney sponsored by the Blue Key honorary fraternity, the quintet of Smyth dormitory defeated Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity by a score of 28 to 14. The Smyth team led from the opening whistle. At the half the score stood 12 to 6, in favor of Smyth. The game was played Monday night at 7 o'clock.

This game brought to a close the series of games in which Pi Kappa Alpha, Kappa Alpha, Smyth and Pi Kappa Phi went to the semi-finals. This series of games was the first in the list of proposed sports to be sponsored by Blue Key, and was a complete success.

By reason of the victory over Pi Kappa Alpha, Smyth holds the championship of the campus in intra-mural basketball.

Austrian Troubles Talked By I. R. C.

Odom and E. Gregg Lead General Discussion of Austrian Socialist-Nazi Fighting.

The International Relations club last Wednesday discussed the Austrian uprisings, with prepared talks by H. S. Odom and E. M. Gregg.

Odom explained the causes of the socialist attacks on the Dolfuss government and led a general discussion.

Gregg told of the attitudes taken by the other countries surrounding Austria and said that Mussolini was very anxious to keep Hitlerism from engulfing Austria also.

The club planned the next program on Japan's policies, with Hugh Holman and Preston Charles to lead the discussion.

Chi Beta Phi Men Wade In 'Science'

Seven men were initiated into Chi Beta Phi scientific fraternity last Wednesday. One could see these men going about the campus, in class and out wearing a rubber apron on their backs and a string of test tubes around their necks. Very "scientific" did they look, and the rubber aprons could be turned around at meal-time and used to the best advantage. The grand climax came that night when the neophytes read their "scientific dissertations" and were sent "through the mill."

Those initiated were: E. R. Andrews, D. W. Boggs, C. A. Chapman, J. H. Chapman, H. L. McLaurin, P. M. Tinker, and I. A. Walker. All these men [illegible]

PRESBYTERIAN VARSITY AND FROSH WIN FROM CAROLINA

In Opening Meet of 1934 Season For Both Teams, Blue Stockings Have Difficult Time Winning 70-61. Tom Craig of University, Is High Scorer With 23 Points. Relay Decides Outcome. Contest of First-Year Men Is Not So Close, Score Being 78-40.

While their big brothers were having a tough time licking the Gamecocks from Carolina Saturday, Presbyterians freshman team found the going comparatively easy in putting it on the Biddies to the tune of 78-40.

Jacobs, P. C., was high scorer with 16 points. The former Thornwell athlete took first places in the high jump, shot put and pole vault, and third in the low hurdles. Taylor and Epps, both of Carolina, scored 11 points.

Peeler, nonchalant Blue Hose strider, duplicated Clark's feat by winning both the quarter and half-mile runs, to become second high scorer for the Blue Sox. Williams scored seven points with a raft of seconds and thirds.

The mile and two-mile events were not run as Carolina did not have entries. Presbyterian's crack mile relay quartet, not to be outdone by the varsity, came home way ahead in the meet finale. Jordan, Love, Jacobs and Peeler compose the first-year relay team.

Summary:

440-yard run: Peeler (P. C.); Harp (S. C.); McSween (P. C.) Time, 55.1.

100-yard dash: Epps (S. C.); Thompson (P. C.); Adkinson (S. C.) Time, 10.5 seconds.

High jump: Jacobs (P. C.); Taylor (S. C.) and Williams (P. C.) tied for second. Height, 5 feet, 6 inches.

120-yard high hurdles: Taylor (S. C.); Jordan (P. C.) Williams (P. C.) Time, 17.1 seconds.

Javelin: Taylor (S. C.); Turner (S. C.); Williams (P. C.) Distance, 151 feet, 1 inch.

880-yard run: Peeler (P. C.); Adkinson (S. C.) Time, 2:16.7.

220-yard dash: Parrott (S. C.); Bargeron (S. C.); Love (P. C.) Time, 25 seconds.

Pole vault: Jacobs (P. C.); Epps (S. C.); Taylor (S. C.) Height, 10 feet, 9 inches.

220-yard low hurdles: Jordan (P. C.); Epps (S. C.); Jacobs (P. C.) Time, 28.5 seconds.

Mile relay: Won by Presbyterian (Jordan, Love, Jacobs, Peeler).

Presbyterian college won over the University of South Carolina in a thrilling track meet here Saturday, 70-61.

The final outcome of the meet was in doubt until the finish of the mile relay, when a quartet of flying quarter-milers bearing P. C. colors, dissipated all fears concerning the Blue Hose's weakness in the middle distances by turning in the near record time of 3:31.4, and placing on the score sheet the five points that won the meet.

Tom Craig, burly Carolina ace, was the individual sensation of the afternoon, scoring 23 points. He took firsts in the high jump, discus, shot put, low hurdles and second in the javelin throw. Craig's team-mate, Hutt, tallied 13 points for second scoring honors.

Bill Clark and "Bird" Carothers took two first places each to lead their team in scoring. Clark won the quarter and the half, while Carothers won the pole vault and broad jump.

The most exciting race of the meet came in the half mile, with McLaughlin and Clark staging a beautiful duel for the lead on the home stretch and Clark finally winning. Forehand led the race until the final eighth when McLaughlin's team-mate made an effort for the lead and went into second place ahead of Clark. Whereupon, McLaughlin came up from the rear and passed the entire trio. Clark then made his bid for honors and took the lead as the runners, still bunched, hit the home stretch. He crossed the tape with the distance separating him from McLaughlin widening.

Blue Hose distance runners came through in fine style to take two places in each of the long jaunts. Hudson and Cranford took first and third, respectively, in the two-mile, and Gibbes and Estes came in second and third in the mile, Gibbes pushing Cardwell all the way, the Carolina runner winning in 4:48.2.

Varsity summary:

Mile run: Cardwell (S. C.); Gibbs (P. C.); Estes (P. C.) Time, 4:48.2.

440-yard: Clark, Winget, Perrin (all P. C.) Time, 56.2.

100-yard dash: Hutt (S. C.); Bradley (P. C.); Mauney (S. C.) Time, 10.1.

High hurdles: Petit (S. C.); Waldrep (P. C.); Wilbanks (P. C.) Time, 16.6.

Half mile: Clark (P. C.); McLaughlin (S. C.); Forehand (P. C.) Time, 2:05.2.

Pole vault: Carothers (P. C.); Underwood (P. C.); and Farnum (S. C.) tied for second. Height, 11 feet, 3 in.

Javelin: Freeman (P. C.); Craig (S. C.); Sims (P. C.) Distance, 173 feet, 11 inches.

220-yard dash: Hutt (S. C.); Yearout (P. C.); Mauney (S. C.) Time, 22.5.

Shot put: Craig (S. C.); Sims (P. C.); Taylor (S. C.) Distance, 43 feet, 4 1-8 inches.

High jump: Craig (S. C.); Sims (P. C.); Waldrep (P. C.) Height, 5 feet, 10 1-2 inches.

Two-mile run: Hudson (P. C.); Wolfe (S. C.); Cranford (P. C.) Time, 10 minutes, 39.3 seconds.

Low hurdles: Craig (S. C.) Perrin (P. C.); Wilbanks (P. C.) Time, 27.7.

Discus: Craig (S. C.); Taylor (S. C.); Wilbanks (P. C.) Distance, 130 feet, six inches.

Broad jump: Carothers (P. C.); Hutt (S. C.); Mauney (S. C.) Distance, 20 feet, 2 1-2 inches.

Mile relay: Won by Presbyterian college (Bradley, Winget, Yearout and Clark. Time, 3 minutes, 31 seconds.

Officials: Starter, Carter Newman (Clemson); Referee, Jacobs (P. C.); Timer, (Davis) P. C.

MONDAY, APRIL 2, 1934

"If Winter Comes . . ."

" . . . If Winter comes, can Spring be far behind?" We quoted that with a ringing sound of hope not so long ago when mud bogged all our thoroughfares, and ice clung tenaciously to steps. We did not mind so much the sharp cold wind, when we thought of warm days soon to come. And then last week we gazed through the window at a dripping grey mist, and damp grey clouds, and sighed hopelessly. "If Winter comes, can Spring be far behind?" We had given her up in despair. True, she had skimmed through once or twice and wakened a peach tree or two into half-hearted bloom only to play the traitor and slink off behind the rain clouds and the wind.

And then in all our apprehension there came a lull. The drizzle ceased. The mist fled. There was a brooding silence, a hushed expectancy, and Spring whispered when a warm wind blew out of the South. The next day there was anxious sunlight that steadily grew confident. And now it has driven the dampness and the mustiness away. Trees have leafed up and this time we feel that tired of her endless dallying, Spring has come for a while. But she's far, far behind this year and even yet a little skittish. We don't want to glory too much, for any day now she might move silently out for an interim of snow.

Comprehensives — and Modern Education

It will be only a short time until juniors and sophomores will take the comprehensive examinations. Among the student body there is quite a bit of feeling of disgust for these. And those who have such a feeling are in a number of ways justified. Ten whole hours of work, two school days, are taken from our regular classes. Many of the questions used have never come up in our classrooms, yet professors, though perhaps unaware of the fact, let these exams influence their grading. Then there is the psychological reaction against having to do something for which no credit is given. The exams must be taken; they are required, and as yet no reward has been announced for the ones who will do the best. Human nature rebels at the idea of seeking the end of the rainbow, however pretty, when it is known that the pot of gold has ceased to exist. And for some reason it does not help matters to remind ourselves that we are cog-wheels in the machines of education laboratories.

However true these things may be, it would be a little unfair if we did not look at the other side for a moment. What possible advantages could result from these tests? There are four main things we should like to suggest.

First, they tell what the students need most. In a liberal arts college we expect a well-rounded education, however specialized we may desire to be in any one subject. These exams cover all fields of general knowledge, and from them it is easy to see what we are falling down on, what it is that should be known, that we have not yet learned.

Second, they indicate what the college teaches. Looking at a group of such tests it is not hard to see the weak places of the school's teaching program. If certain departments need to be built up, the comprehensives are an excellent way to tell what should be done by showing exactly what is needed.

Third, by giving the same type of test each year the individual student can observe his increase. He can actually see some indication of his increased knowledge as a result of many a laborious hour spent puzzling over some abstract problem. Or, if there has been no increase surely he would want to know, in order that he may find a way of adjustment.

Fourth, and lastly, the comprehensive examinations are probably of greatest value for comparative purposes. When a large number of colleges uses the same methods of testing it is obviously a simple matter to see which ones put out the best work, which have the best instructors, the best students, and which ones are the most progressive. Comparisons mong different parts of the country, as well as individual schools are shown, so that among other things we can see how we rank with students of Texas, New York or California.

Are not these things worth while? Only knowledge can make us free from the slavery of superstition and tradition, and only some tangible means of comparing different types of teaching, different methods of learning, and the effects of various kinds of modern education, will give us that knowledge. Standard comprehensive examinations are the best means at present of acquiring the information. They are a test for the individual, the teacher, the school, and for education itself. And as a result of the test modern education can be improved. With these considerations, should we not wish to cooperate in the small way that we can?

Dances On the Campus

With the Pan-Hellenic Finals soon coming, and the Spring Hop just recently over, it is quite fitting that something be said once more concerning the student dances being given on the campus, either in the gymnasium or the dining hall, or a place provided by the College. The place where the dances have been held in former times is condemned and has been for many years. No one had especially paid attention to the condition of the building until the last dances. Then it was quite evident how rickety the building has become for the hall fairly shook under the pressure of the rhythmic motions of the couples. Such a place is not in keeping with the College standards of doing things and doesn't give the College as good a name as it might have. For certainly student social life should afford a more decent place and a safer place for its guests, as well as its own group.

Presbyterian College dances have attained a high reputation for having no drinking to mention and no sots on the floor. This is more than many colleges can boast of, and the students are constantly being informed by their guests what a good clean time they have at the social affairs at P. C. And what a pity that the Synods do not allow such functions to be given on the campus as at other schools. The students also have gained a name for seeing that everyone has a good time and that the functions do not drag. With a reputation for entertaining so well, it is a pity that the students do not have a better place to use their social talents and to develop them. In a few words, Presbyterian can put over clean entertainment for her guests as well as her athletic teams put over clean sports. Surely with this in mind there could be no objection to giving the dances on the campus.

Then, as for objections as to ruining the floor, it would do no more than scratch the wax. The polishing and re-waxing of which the Pan-Hellenic Council would be glad to take care of. In truth, dancing would polish the floor. Certainly the harm, if any, a dance could do cannot be compared with that which the military department has already done to the gymnasium floor by using it for drills. No amount of dancing would dent the floor the way the dropping of those heavy guns on it has done, not to mention the cleated feet of the cadets. And daily, students are allowed to shuffle and scuffle on the basketball floor in their leather shoes.

With these two items or objections over-ruled by general opinion, which, after all, is usually pretty logical and reasonable, there remains no reason why the Synods should not be petitioned to allow the students the privilege of giving dances in the gymnasium, and if not there, to provide a social hall on the campus. P. C. deserves the same rights and privileges as any other school sponsored by the churches. She deserves them, so why can she not have them?

Present-Day Science

CAROLINA BAYS

Question: Why are meteors or comets thought to have hit South Carolina?

Answer: There are a great number of depressions in the surface of the ground in this vicinity. In fact, they cover a territory of over 40,000 square miles along the coast. They are usually referred to by the name Carolina Bays, as it was in South Carolina that they were first noticed.

It was as long ago as 1895 when "peculiar elliptical depressions" were reported around Darlington, but not until 1930 were similar features photographed near Conway. These formations show up clearly in a picture and it is there that they were not studied sooner.

Careful observation of the 43 depressions near Conway show them to have an average length of 2210 feet and a width of 1430, almost twice as long as they are wide. Most of them have rims around the edges, which are higher at the southeastern end. These rims have very gentle slopes, making it impractical to observe them from the ground. For example, one (a typical one) near Conway possesses a rim five feet high, and a slope base 250 feet wide. In other words, the rise and fall of the elevated edges are so gradual that we may be on top of one and not be aware of it.

Many analyses have been made of the dirt and sand and various kind of rock found. The bays themselves are filled mainly with decayed vegetation and peat, while the rims are formed of fine material, sand and grain-sized rocks. A very interesting observation is that the major axes of the bays are all approximately, that is, the elongated all same direction. If comets were planned, each one had direction. These northwest-southeast. The important significance as to their origin.

Now comes the [illegible] and these things got [illegible] they, anyway? why are in this part of the country are they so symetrical and same direction?" R. O. T. C. NEWS

Officers of the day and their orderlies for the coming week are:

Monday, April 2 — 2nd Lt. C. M. Lawson, with Sgt. Clark W. J.

Tuesday, April 3 — 2nd Lt. H. W. Wilson with Sgt. Elmore, L. O.

Wednesday, April 4 — 2nd Lt. H. D. Wilson, with Sgt. Yearout, P. W.

Thursday, April 5 — 1st Lt. J. C. White, with Sgt. McCaskill, Jack.

Friday, April 6—1st Lt. W. H. Cranford, with Sgt. Carson, C. E.

Saturday, April 7 — 2nd Lt. W. N. White, with Sgt. McCall, L. A.

Beginning with Monday, April 2, a new policy will be pursued by the military department to eliminate the so-called "gold bricks" in our corps. On that day, for the first time, but on each Monday hencoforth and forever, there will be a make-up drill from "4 to proficency." This means that any man who has for any reason missed a drill period during the week preceding that date will drill from 4:00 o'clock until he shows the ones in charge that he is proficient in the execution of movements required then. However, if a cadet has been absent from drill several times during the week, and his absences are not excessive, or, if they are with reasonable excuses, he may be excused from remaining drills as soon as he has shown his ability to drill satisfactorily. The list of those bricks or indisposed ones will be posted each Monday and they will report promptly at 4:00 in uniform and with rifle. Any culprit who does not report to his make-up will pay for it with double penalties. So long, you gold bricks. Your name will soon be spoken only as reminiscences.

It has been decided definitely that the state rifle match will be fired at Clemson on April 12, with Clemson, The Citadel, Wofford and Presbyterian contending. Our team already has begun practice on the new outdoor range for this event. Too, indoor practice for the Hearst trophy is being continued on the indoor range. By carrying on both practices together, Sarge hopes to have his men primed for both affairs. Especially does he want to make a good showing in the state meet. It gives one more satisfaction to win from someone he knows, probably—or sumptin.

Lt. Col. R. D. Lynn and Sgt. L. A. McCall will represent the senior and junior classes, respectively, of Presbyterian at the National Convention of ROTC Colleges in the United States, which will be held in Washington, D. C., on April 13 and 14. These men should have a fine time in store for them, considering all the senatorial amusements of the capital city which are in full swing for the big boys who are also having a memorial time of it just now. However, Captain Wysor demands that these two attend at least one of the meetings—just for the principle of the thing, you know.

Some cadet was seen up town a day or so ago in improper uniform; but Captain Wysor failed to recognize him just then. This party will please have the grace to report to the Captain immediately and receive the reward. But it must be remembered that the nature of the reward will vary with his present rank in the corps. If the one who reports is a sophomore he will believe he is a freshman when the Captain is finished. On the other hand, if the guilty one is a freshman, he surely can't believe he will be a sophomore in the next six months.

The demotion of corporals has reached such a degree that it is now a matter of conjecture among the survivors as to who will be next.

The spring inspection is just a few weeks off now. These last weeks will be a particular time in the minds of all; so if you don't know an extra amount about your business, you had better learn something. It will cost you in the long run. And remember, if some movement before the inspector is messed by you that long run won't take place until a few days later—from Captain's office.

MOVIES

"Mr. Skitch," the Fox picture which stars Will Rogers, comes to the Casino theatre on Monday and Tuesday. This is one of the most amusing pictures that Mr. Rogers has made. In the cast one will find Florence Desmond, whose imitations of the movie stars will tickle your "funny bone," Zasu Pitts, Harry Green, Rochelle Hudson, and Charles Starrett.

Wednesday brings one of the most exciting pictures of the year. It is "Night Flight," which stars John Barrymore, Helen Hayes, Myrna Loy, Lionel Barrymore, Robert Montgomery, Clark Gable, William Gargan, and Dorothy Burgess. The entire play takes place in twenty-four hours. These hours hold plenty of suspense and entertainment.

Thursday brings Jean Parker, the "Beth" of "Little Women," and Tom Brown in "Two Alone." This RKO picture is very dramatic and it provides Miss Parker with one of her most dramatic parts.

Elissa Landi returns to the local screen Friday in Universal's "By Candlelight." This comedy, which is laid in Vienna, is one of the most sophisticated comedies of the year. The supporting cast boasts of Esther Ralston, Paul Lukas and Nils Asther.

Only the Center Leaves... they are the Mildest Leaves

Luckies are All-Ways kind to your throat

WHEREVER the finest tobaccos grow—in our own Southland, in Turkey, in Greece—all over the world, we gather the very Cream of the tobacco Crops for Lucky Strike. And that means only the center leaves. Not the top leaves—because those are under-developed—not ripe. Not the bottom leaves—because those are inferior in quality—they grow close to the ground, are coarse, dirt-covered, sandy.

The center leaves are the mildest leaves—they taste better and farmers are paid higher prices for them. These center leaves are the only ones used in making Luckies. Then "It's toasted"—for throat protection. And every Lucky is fully packed with these choice tobaccos—made round and firm, free from loose ends—that's why Luckies do not dry out. Naturally, Luckies are all-ways kind to your throat.

"It's toasted"

Literary Societies At Presbyterian College Were Centers Of Activity In Days Gone By; Now Out of the Picture

(By Robert C. McLees)

Some time ago, Dr. John McSween, president of the college, found it his distasteful duty to announce that for the first time since the South Carolina Intercollegiate Oratorical contest was organized, Presbyterian college would not be represented. Lack of interest in the activity was cited as the reason; no student, in the whole 290, had cared enough about it to put out the hours of work and preparation which were necessary. This is the culmination of a growing indifference. Fifty years ago, aside from baseball, literary activities were the only outlets for the student's self-expression. As the openings for surplus energy became more diverse, as football, basketball, tennis, fraternities, and publications gradually assumed an important place on the campus, interest in oratory and its kindred parlance waned.

Up until 1924, there existed on the campus two literary societies: the Eukosmian, and the Philomathean. Membership in one or the other was compulsory, but, much the same as fraternities, the novice generally "went the way" of his most intimate friends. For a long time the Philomathean Literary society outnumbered the Eukosmian, but as the years went by, the Eukosmian slowly closed the gap, until 1923 saw them overshadowing their rivals, 73 to 70.

The Eukosmian Literary society was founded in 1885—five years after the college first opened its doors. Its colors were purple and old gold, and its motto read "Aude Sapere"—"Here to be wise." Among the better-known alumni included on its roll were: W. P. Jacobs, and his two brothers, J. F. and Thomas Jacobs, H. M. Brimm, W. G. Neville, H. S. Fewell, L. C. and F. W. LaMotte, L. S. McMillian, R. M. Lynn and A. E. Galloway. J. H. Hunter was also a "Euk," and there is an "R. G. Haney" listed, but unclaimed by our Joe. The Eukosmian society held its meetings for a long while in what is now the haunt of Doctor Kennedy. "Peck" Cornwell, of this city, was the last president.

The Philomathean Literary society, with colors gold and black, had a badge which resembled a black-centered pie which had been bitten, with mathematical exactitude, at three points on its edge by Joe E. Brown. Its motto was "Scienta pulchra et sempertermia est"—"Science is beautiful and everlasting." Among its members was Professor R. L. Coe, and, strangely enough, he now conducts his classes in what was "Philomathean Hall." Other members were: A. W. Brice, of this city, H. L. Eichelberger; M. C. and S. W. Dendy, M. A. Durant, and a prominent member named Boggs, who bears a certain resemblance to Doyle Boggs, although no relationship has been certified. In 1923, Frank Kennedy Clarke, a Philomathean, won the S. C. Intercollegiate Oratorical contest.

Yearly dues for the compulsory membership were approximately $14, $10 of which went to the PaC-SaC fund—$4.00 untraceable. The literary societies were the backbone of the annual. In its pages there is evidence of the interest displayed by the student body in their activities, and pictures of debaters, declaimers and orators, sheets devoted to such events as "Inter-Society" and "Inter-Collegiate" debates and oratorical contests. Wofford and Newberry were favorite opponents on such queries as "Resolved: That the Negro race in America should be Colonized." Instead of photographs of hirsute, brawny maulers and football players, the features of society presidents and debating teams formed the most bulky section of the PaC-SaC.

In the spring of 1924, interest in the societies had reached low ebb — and the tide did not turn, despite spasmodic efforts of the more active of the two, the Eukosmian. They died a natural death. Since then, student propensity to argue outside the class room has steadily failed, until this year we fail even to have an entrant in the state contest. But praise be! There has been quite a little interest shown during the recent debates! Or was it in the curious, intriguing Pennsylvanian accent of the opponents?

Dr. Austin Leader In Chemistry Field

Presbyterian Graduate, Professor At Loyola, Reads Paper Before National Society.

At the recent meeting of the American Chemical society, in St. Petersburg, Fla., an alumnus of Presbyterian college, Dr. W. C. Austin, presented a paper entitled, "The Preparation of Crystalline Beta-l-Atrose, a New Alohexose, from l-Ribose by the Cyanohydrin Reaction." This paper was well received and one prominent chemist made the remark that it formed another mile post in the history of chemistry.

Theoretically, there should be 16 of the aldohexoses and for some years 8 of these have been known. Chemists, specializing in sugar chemistry, have been striving for some time to prepare the two remaining members of the series, but Dr. Austin is the first to succeed. He was able to carry out this work because of a method of preparing l-ribose which he had previously worked out and published.

Dr. Austin has been interested in the chemistry of the sugars for the last few years and has to his credit the preparation of several other forms than the two he described at the St. Petersburg meeting. Among chemists he is considered an authority on the sugars.

Dr. Austin received his A. B. degree from Presbyterian college in 1915 and followed this with an M. S. a year or two later. He then went to the Medical college at Charleston as an assistant professor of chemistry and at the same time took a course in medicine, graduating as an M. D. Later he entered the University of Chicago and received his Ph.D. He is now professor of chemistry at Loyola university, in the school of medicine, Chicago.

Dr. Austin is a native of Laurens county and lived in Clinton where he grew to manhood. His father, the late Dr. J. D. Austin, was a practicing physician in Clinton for a number of years.

Alpha Lambda Tau Honors Brigmans

The Alpha Lambda Tau social fraternity entertained Mr. and Mrs. Frank Brigman, Jr., at a reception Saturday evening, March 31. Many of the newly-married couple's friends were present as were also the bride's parents. The rooms were attractively decorated with spring flowers.

During the course of the evening refreshments, consisting of a salad course with ten or coffee, and followed by a dessert of ice cream and cake were served. Mrs. B. O. Whitten, the bride's mother, was assisted in serving by Mrs. C. C. Giles.

The climax in the entertainment of the evening was a pleasant surprise for the couple when the fraternity presented them with a kitchen shower. At this time the bride was awarded an engraved rolling pin by Henry Wilson in behalf of the members of the fraternity. The inscription, consisting of directions for use and when to use it, was most amusing and instructive.

Mr. and Mrs. Brigman are both well known to the college group. Mrs. Brigman is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. B. O. Whitten of Clinton. She attended Columbia college, where she was a popular member of the student body. She is a member of Tau Sigma Kappa sorority.

Mr. Brigman is a member of the class of '32 at P[illegible] college. He is the son of [illegible] of Bishopville, and has many friends among the student body and is a member of A. L. T. fraternity.

The couple are making their home in Charleston, where Mr. Brigman is connected with the Lance Candy company.

Cameron Beck In Clinton Recently

Cameron Beck, personnel director of the New York stock exchange, who is making his annual tour speaking at schools and colleges throughout the South, spoke last Thursday to the students of the Clinton high school. His schedule did not permit him to make an address at the college this year.

Busy Week For P. C. Trackmen

Wofford and Clemson Contests Face Presbyterians On Wednesday and Saturday.

With a contest against Wofford coming up Wednesday, and a meet with Clemson Saturday, the Blue Stocking track men face the most strenuous weekly schedule of the season.

Clemson was defeated two weeks ago by Georgia by approximately the same margin that Georgia gained over P. C. This seems to point to a rather close battle on Saturday. Very little is known of the strength of the Wofford aggregation since they have had only one encounter this season.

Germany May Now Take Lessons From Blue Hose Students

Schlaeger and Curtain Rod Supplant Time-Honored Saber As Weapons In "Affair of Honor" When Winget and Viser Meet.

Das ist echtes studentenleben! But don't come to your correspondent for the pronunciation. He is all fired up with zusammerhang and enthusiasm for witnessing a real student duel between the flaxen-haired cadet, Viser, and the fiery Winget, who fought like a true wachsfigur.

Republican Germany no longer boasts a monopoly on these wettstreits. They are sehenswuerdigkeit—or am I incoherent? Pardon my dialect.

The circumstances were dramatic. Cadet Winget locked Cadet Viser out of his room. Aghast at this impudence, Viser ran around and climbed treacherously in through the window. A schlag! A blow was struck! Himmelherrgottkreuzemilliounndonnerwetter! Winget stepped back. The two seized their weapons. In the moments vorbereitungszeit, Visor bent over and seized his schlaeger. Winget seized his trusty curtain rod. Winget seized the opportunity. Winget struck! Aroused, Viser whirled and struck. Viser had the advantage. Winget wore only pajamas, while Viser wore pants. Round one! The two combatants rested panting. Viser panted; Winget pajamered. They glared at each other. Gong! They sprang into the fray. Winget was barefooted; he danced his toes out of the path of the nicking blade. Winget struck! First blood for Winget! Hurrah! Winget pointed triumphantly at a blister. Viser was scornful. Wunde und schmiss! Viser pointed to the welt on Winget's arm. Viser backed before the enraged Winget. No quarter. Curtain rod and schlaeger flashed. Viser's back is aganist the door. With the eigentriemlichkeit of many doors, it opened. Winget fenced like a wild cat. Viser fenced like two wild cats — he has finger nails. Winget closed the door.

Viser sucked his thumb stoically. Viser meditatively uttered a word. Your correspondent, perched upon the stairs, took the vorsichtomassregal to go up a flight. Viser murmured a second word to the closed door. Your correspondent left.

With the score tied 4 to 4 in the 12th, Austen reached first and went to second on Mellinger's error. A few minutes later Baker drove one to short for Erskine and Austen came home when McCracken muffed the play.

Baker, twirling for the Seceders, allowed only two hits out of 13 times at the bat. Holliday pitched for Presbyterian and kept the hits down to 9. Presbyterian's first and only run came in the first inning, when Holcombe crossed the plate. Erskine scored in the 4th and finally in the 12th.

P. C. Nine Trounces Wofford By 10 To 4

The Presbyterian college baseball nine came through in the sixth inning of a nine-inning game with Wofford, to win by a score to 10 to 4. The game was played at Spartanburg Friday.

At the end of the fifth inning the score stood 2 to 0 in favor of P. C., but in the sixth the Blue Hose really got down to the business of the day. When the smoke had cleared away, seven more runs had been chalked up. Wofford's first run came in the seventh. The score then stood, P. C. 9, Wofford 1. Wofford's other three runs came in the ninth, and P. C.'s other in the eighth.

The game was clearly Presbyterian's from the 6th, and Wofford used three pitchers trying to stop the impending avalanche. Mooneyham, who was pulled from the outfield, finally stemmed the tide. Holliday, P. C. twirler, pitched an excellent game and walked only two men. The Wofford pitchers walked a total of 15.

P. C. Debaters In Tilt At Winthrop

The P. C. negative team had its first encounter in debating two Winthrop lassies in Rock Hill last Wednesday afternoon.

H. M. Wilson, Jr., and A. V. Martin, Jr., represented P. C. in the non-decision debate with the two members of the Winthrop society.

The next forensic engagements will be with Erskine, when both teams from each school will meet.

S. C. Historical Society Attended

Dr. Jones, Dean Brown and Students Go To Charleston For Meeting On Week-End.

Dr. F. D. Jones, Dean M. W. Brown and several Presbyterian college students went to Charleston Friday to attend the fourth annual meeting of the South Carolina Historical society. The meeting was held in two sessions on Saturday at the College of Charleston chapel and attended by professors of history in high schools and colleges from all parts of the state.

The 1933 number of the proceedings of the association has just been issued. Among the five articles written by South Carolina historical authors is found one entitled, "The Grimke Sisters," by F. D. Jones of Presbyterian college. Dr. Jones, who teaches a course in South Carolina history, has long been active in the historical affairs of the state, and along with Dean Brown was one of the charter members of the society. In connection with this organization he is chairman of the committee on the preservation of manuscripts. Several years ago Dr. Jones began collecting South Carolina history material, and this collection, which has been presented to the Presbyterian college library, now contains approximately three hundred volumes of miscellaneous material.

Dean Brown, who is regular professor of history here, is vice-president of the society.

While in Charleston the party from P. C. visited Magnolia gardens. They returned here on Sunday.

McLees and Patrick Meet McInnes and Dabney In Friendly Argument. Duet Sings.

The program for last Thursday's Y. M. C. A. meeting was in charge of the freshman cabinet, headed by Jim Collings. A debate on the query, "Resolved: That Bible should be compulsory in colleges" took up nearly all of the meeting.

Collings and Nelson gave a preliminary number in the form of a vocal duet, rendering the hymn, "How Long Must We Wait."

Robert McLees, first speaker, for the affirmative, brought out the need of a counter balance for the distracting influences of college life. The student should therefore have this training in the word of God, he said, so as to offset the worldly attractions that might lead him away from God.

G. F. McInnes, for the negative, laid stress on the variety of interpretations that can be made from the scriptures and the prejudice of many professors in favor of their own particular ideas.

Joe Patrick, for the affirmative, showed the necessity of Biblical knowledge to general culture. Therefore, he asserted, unbelievers would not be forced to learn something useless; and, besides, some might be converted to Christianity.

James Dabney spoke for the negative. He dwelt on the pet ideas of some teachers which, he said, were being forced on thousands of Bible students so that during the formative period their minds became warped and prejudiced.

Blue Stockings Fall Before Georgia U.

Bulldogs Succeed In Overwhelming Presbyterians, 81½ To 41½ Here Saturday.

After overwhelming the Gamecock track team here last week, the outclassed Blue Hose tracksters allowed the Georgia Bulldogs to take eleven first places to defeat them by a score of 81½ to 41½ on the home track Saturday afternoon.

Batchelor, of Georgia, was high scorer with 13 points to his credit by virtue of two first places and a second. But the menacing Bulldog was forced to yield to Freeman, of P. C., in the javelin throw when the latter, throwing against the wind, hurled the spear 184 feet, 5 inches to soar above his own record of 182 feet.

The Georgians brought a well-rounded team with talent distributed evenly between the field and track events. Displaying remarkable endurance, Majors, Georgia distance man, won both the mile and two-mile races, defeating Hudson, of P. C., in the two-mile by a great spurt on the last lap. Maddox, of Georgia, won both hurdles in good time.

The most exciting event of the day came in the 440 when the smooth-striding Clark ran a 51.5 quarter to defeat Calhoun, of Georgia, passing him on the final straight-away. In the concluding event of the meet the Presbyterian relay team upheld their supremacy. Bradley, lead-off man for P. C., ran a beautiful 51-second lap, and Winget, gaining 12 yards on his opponent, passed the baton to Clark in the lead, which Clark held, to break the tape a few paces ahead of the Georgia anchor man.

This is probably the hardest team that Presbyterian will have to meet, and in the races won by the Blue Stockings they were called upon to give every ounce of energy they could muster.

Summary:

One-mile run: Majors (Georgia) first; Gibbs (P. C.) second; Estes (P. C.) third. Time, 5 minutes, 8 seconds.

440-yard run: Clark (P. C. first; Calhoun (Georgia) second; Baxter (Georgia) third. Time, 51.5 seconds.

High jump: Sims (P. C.) and Baxter (Georgia) tied for first; Wilbanks (P. C.) third. Height, 5 feet, 8 1-2 in.

Pole vault: Fleming (Georgia) first; Underwood (P. C.) and Carothers (P. C.) tied for second. Height, 11 feet, 6 inches.

Shot put: Batchelor (Georgia) first; Green (Georgia) second; West (Georgia) third. Distance, 43 feet, 9 1-2 in.

100-yard dash: Johnson (Georgia) first; Hendrix (Georgia) second; Yearout (P. C.) and Moore (Georgia) tied for third. Time, 10 seconds.

Javelin: Freeman (P. C.) first; Batchelor (Georgia) second; Green (Georgia) third. Distance, 184 feet, 5 inches.

120-yard high hurdles: Maddox (Georgia) first; Waldrep (P. C.) second; Guerard (P. C.) third. Time, 15.5 seconds.

880-yard run: Patillo (Georgia) first; Forehand (P. C.) second; Harwell (Georgia) third. Time, 2 minutes, 7.3 seconds.

220-yard run: Johnson (Georgia) first; Yearout (P. C.) second; Bradley (P. C.) third. Time, 22.8 seconds.

Discus throw: Batchelor (Georgia) [illegible] (Georgia) [illegible] banks (P. C.) third. Distance, 135 feet, 7 1-2 inche[illegible]

Our Own Business

Do we throw shoes at light bulbs at home, or toss plates ringing down the slick floor? No, not at our own private homes or at any to which we are invited. It would be pure nonsense in our own homes, but we do just such things in our college home—and it's still nonsense.

Just imagine any of us heaving a stove down our own front steps in ———ville, and how likely we would be to so destroy our father's or brother's house and goods. But we do unscrew a radiator and slide it like an avalanche down our college steps. It may be college humor — as such it is a little crude.

Now, there are two reasons why we do not act like vandals at home. We do have a faint sense of respectability. We also have enough of a business turn to know that anything we waste at home will cost us directly. If the family treasury has to dig in to buy new sets of window panes and light bulbs and steps, it can not stand to set forth quite such good meals and finance such pleasant vacations. We stick together on the family budget because we realize that money saved from careless waste will be handy for real pleasures. In our college home we could very well figure that all the broken bulbs and panes, steps and dishes, must be paid for some how. So even if the cash isn't figured out of the breakage deposit, it will come out somewhere when they count out how much dessert we will get and whether the glee club will be able to go to Charlotte or the boxers or track team to Florida.

So just for our own interests, let's stick together in not wasting anything of value—lights, hot water, furniture, and all—and let's make it just "not the thing to do." —C. M. H.

At Rest?

According to a rather general opinion the Southern college is a backward institution, living somewhat on moulded tradition, and sleeping peacefully in the depths of conservatism. That opinion can not hold true in every respect. It is biased, perhaps, and grounded too much on assumption rather than actual knowledge, but sadly enough, it is not without its basis. It may hurt to admit it, but it is very far indeed from being an exaggeration. The Southern college is steeped in traditions of a sort, bound up by conservativeness, crushed by a deadly narrowmindedness, and sleeping far too peacefully.

Those same conditions come home to us. We can not shrug and tell ourselves that we are not guilty, that the situation may exist somewhere but certainly not here. We students are usually content to stay on the campus four years, study a little, or a great deal, accept what conforms to our limited ideas, and to blare out in loud derision at what is new. We may study, we may take our courses ever so seriously, but we seem bitterly opposed to thinking. We rarely bring ourselves to investigate, and to find out, and then to sanction [illegible] for ourselves. [illegible] tion the happenings last year in regard to the comprehensive examinations. Led by a spirit of narrow-mindedness, we revolted against something we knew nothing about, and seemed not to care to find out about.

But the student is not wholly accountable. The professor, too, shares considerably in the indictment. We do not often find him in the purely lamentable state, but sometimes we do. He, like the student, has the almost inevitable inclination towards stagnation, with his ideas and beliefs neatly arranged in rows, gathering the dust of a great many years. Safe from the doubts of too much thinking or acceptance of broader ideas, he often lives content. He fails to remember that the only way one human being can attempt to influence another is by encouraging him to think for himself instead of thrusting ready-made opinions upon him.

It is for us to bring ourselves and our college to the fore by casting aside the little and the narrow ideas. We must broaden the horizons of our minds, and investigate, and think. It is not right to blindly accept new things because they are new, but to accept and embrace things that will carry us forward. Let us open our eyes to see beyond the goal posts of a football field. Let us broaden our minds, and come out of the waste places of narrowness, and intolerance.

Youth — Immoral or Intellectually Honest?

We hear from many sides, "Youth is going to the dogs," or the devil, or something similar. Most of this comes from the present day "moralists" who don't seem to mind going a bit out of their way to tell the world that youth is immoral. And all this clamor and banging and slamming must have some basis. It is true that the younger generation is not exactly like the older one. Easily can we imagine them looking around, and with indignation saying, "Them ain't the chillun we used to be." Yes, those were the good old days, we hear, the good old days that may never come again because of our "sin" and "shamefulness."

Before finishing our self-condemnation let us see if it is well-founded; perhaps we shall find a way of escape. It is possible that we of this generation have come a little nearer to real truth than has been approached before? Is it a bit too boastful to ask if we may be a mite more truthful and honest with ourselves and our associates than were those of a past era? And if we are, is it possible that the increase of "immorality" may be a passing phase of a greater "intellectual honesty"?

Imagine a savage tribe. They worship the sun, the moon, some carved pole, perhaps. When a person becomes ill a hideous witch doctor is brought in. There are certain times for fasting, feasting, marriages, planting of crops, tabus, which can not be broken away from. Something disastrous is supposed to occur if a tabu is not kept absolutely "sacred." Then, by accident or intention, some youthful warrior breaks a "law of the tribe" and suffers no ill effects. He finds that if he does not bow to the sun at the appointed time each day he will still find his daily food; he finds that if he is sick the open air and green herbs are a better cure than the witch doctor. These things he knows to be true; he has tried them. He communicates them to others of his tribe, and soon he is found out by the chief, the council, the "public," and is condemned as a "sinner," a transgressor of the "moral" laws of the sun-god and moon-queen. Th savages refused truth and freedom for the bondage of superstition and tradition.

We wonder sometimes if our modern "civilization" is not comparable to those savage tribes with their war dances and infantile religions. Too often we are tied down to old traditions and "moral" laws which were made to aid a physical need that does not now necessitate those laws. A few people there are in the world who have realized this and have tried to tear down those ancient barriers to freedom. And yet religion and education and society as a whole condemns them as being "immoral"!

Youth is not any worse now than it used to be. It is better. It is more truthful, more natural, and freer. That the present generation is "going to the devil" is the most damnable lie ever uttered by human tongue. Of course we are not the exact replicas of our ancestors. We wear different kinds of clothes, we talk differently, we act differently, we think differently, our relationships are different. We are living in a phase of life which has for its corner-stone intellectual honesty.

Present-Day Science

THE ALL-SEEING EYE

An all-seeing eye which guards us from harm, watches for burglars, sends in fire alarms, assorts cigars, opens garage doors—this ever-watchful eye is the result of the photo-electric effect.

There are certain metals, such as caesium and potassium, which emit electrons when in the presence of light. This emission of electrons is what is known as the photo-electric effect. Now, if we place a positive metal in front of caesium (for example) and bring a light near, the negative electrons which are given off will quite naturally be attracted toward the positive pole. Suppose now we increase the number of electrons on the caesium by using a battery, we increase their flow to the positive pole. Since an electric current is thought of as essentially a flow of electrons, and since we have increased the small flow made by the light on the caesium, we actually have produced an electric current. This is the principle of the photo-electric cell. The plus pole is standing in the center of what appears to be an ordinary radio tube, and the minus metal is on the inside surface of the glass tube, leaving a clear place at one side for light to come through. A battery is attached to the leads from these two in such a way that a complete circuit will be made by the emitted electrons when light is around.

Let's see some of the ways the cell is useful. As a fire alarm: if a fire should break out in its vicinity, the light would be sufficient to complete the circuit and ring an alarm. If put over a garage door, the light of a car would produce a current which would open the doors as the car arrives. The circuit may be arranged so that the electric contact will be made when the light is removed. Thus if a beam of light is placed on one side of a doorway, and the source of light on the other, a number of people entering or exiting the building can be counted by the number of times the beam is broken by the passing of persons through the path of light. An important feature of this cell is that it can be made sensitive to ultra-violet light which cannot be seen by the natural eye. Using this light we can make burglar alarms and other devices with which apparently anything is desired.

We can hardly begin to mention the numerous ways in which the photo-electric cell is used at present. Its operation is so simple and yet so great that it is worth knowing something about. Of all recent electrical discoveries and inventions it is probably useful in the largest number of ways. —Chas. E.

The tests for the best-drilled freshman will take place on May 1st. The only rule governing this event is that no freshman who has had military training other than at Presbyterian college can compete for the money prizes which will be awarded to the three most militaristic rats. These prizes are: 1st—two bones and a half; 2nd—one and a half in currency; 3rd—one of the same substance. It is hoped that this prospect of hearing the old-timey jingle in the pocket will increase the interest of many first-year men in the precision of both their footsies and their rifles.

Although this may be changed before the time, it has been hinted that the men who will rate the 1st Year Advanced next year will be selected and notified on or before May 12th. And that is not May 12th, 1935; so if one wants to be in this army any more, it behooves that one to get busy and show that he has absorbed something in the past two years—that is, in the way of military, at least.

———

The state rifle match which has for the past month or so furnished food for thought in this column will actually be staged at Clemson on the 12th of this month. Ten men from our team will be selected later to compete in this meet. These men will leave for Clemson at nine o'clock of that day and firing will begin at 2 that afternoon, continuing until all have finished. Practice will continue here until that time and it is hoped that no attraction will be present that day to detract attention from that disk on the wall.

The P. M. S. and T. is pleased to note that there has been a tremendous improvement in the health of certain members of the corps, since the inauguration of the new policy in regard to absences from drill. These aforementioned men maintain that this new desire to drill was brought about by the coming of spring weather, but Captain knows better—it was the dislike of that private drill which takes place each Monday at 4. But, speaking of the matches on drill—Captain Blanton says that if, in any event, he has spectators at this exhibition, he will extend the invitation to these men to participate of the good thing. The only catch is that the invitation will be in the form of an order.

The following amendment to the regulations of the ROTC department became effective this morning: Any student who comes to drill unprepared for the movements to be taken up that day or any student who, by his unpreparedness or awkwardness, causes any disorder in the drill, will be admonished, reprimanded or required to attend the make-up drill, according to the nature of the offense.

It is hoped that this practice will improve the efficiency of the corps considerably, and that anyone who is inclined to be fumble-fingered will bring a supply of glue along to be assured that the rifle will stay put. However, if the glue is all used up, it would not be a breach of etiquette to cover the palms with the discharges of expectoration (that is, provided no strong wind is blowing during the administering of the substance).

A full drill schedule has been in effect for a week or more now and will be continued until the inspector arrives on the 24th. Considerable progress has been shown in the drill of A company; and the others are some better than before; but room for improvement is still in abundance. In connection with the close order drill, corporals have been given special instruction in extended order and they in turn will pass their information to their squads when time is available to take the whole battalion to the pasture back of Smyth for the working out of a tactical problem.

ENTERTAINMENT

On Monday and Tuesday Max Baer, Myrna Loy, Primo Carnera, and Jack Dempsey are starred in "The Prizefighter and the Lady" at the Casino theatre. The oft-told story shows Mr. Baer starting as a barroom-bouncer, being recognized by Walter Huston, former trainer of champions, and then falls for the charming Miss Loy. With Jack Dempsey refereeing the big fight, which is the climax of the movie, Mac and Primo sock each other through the ropes, down for the count of nine, and all the rest. Of course, they took care to bring the story out right, but you'd never guess it by watching.

"The Last Round-Up," which obtained its title from the popular song, plays the Casino on Wednesday. Monte Blue, as a cattle stealing, stage coach robber, assisted by Fred Kohler and Fuzzy Knight make this western rather entertaining. Randolph Scott and Barbara Fritchie complete the Paramount cast.

MGM's "Fugitive Lovers" is the feature for Thursday. This film is a story of a continual chase of an escaped convict (Robert Montgomery) by the authorities, and his love for a girl (Madge Evans) whom he meets when he boards the transcontinental bus as it passes the penitentiary. Nat Pendleton, as Madge's unwanted companion on the trip, does well, as do C. Henry Gordon and Ted Healy. The moments of high suspense almost make up for occasional dull lapses.

"The Lost Patrol," which will be shown Friday is one of the outstanding shows of the month. A group of thirteen British Tommies, in the Mesopotamian campaign of 1917, is lost in the desert. Arab snipers, artfully concealed, take off one after another. Sergeant Victor McLaglen is the only one left when a relief patrol arrives. The dramatic performance of the entire male cast is the finest seen in many a day. Boris Karloff, Wallace Ford, and Reginald Denny complete the cast.

Saturday's bill is "Frontier Marshall," with George O'Brien, in an unusual western.

CAMPUS NOTES

The members of Alpha Psi Delta, co-ed sorority, enjoyed a smoker Tuesday evening.

The friends of Joe E. Brown will be happy to know that a new post of honor has recently come to him. Joe E., not satisfied with becoming known as the best track and baseball trainer in these parts, went after new laurels. Now his host of friends are congratulating him on his appointment as trainer for the co-ed rifle team.

The many friends of Wild Bill Cody will be sorry to learn that the charming lass in Oklahoma with whom he was planning to elope some time in the not too distant future, wrote him that, alas, she loved another, and furthermore, was planning a June wedding. She said, however, that she wanted to be a sister to him, etc. Wild Bill's condition is reported critical.

Henry Cranford, varsity track manager, attended track practice last Wednesday.

The members of the freshman class were guests at a tea given Tuesday afternoon by the sophomores.

State Rifle Meet Held At Clemson

Tigers Win Contest, Though Outscored By Ten-Man Presbyterian Team.

The Presbyterian college rifle team closed a successful season Thursday with a sort of "believe it or not" affair at Clemson.

The P. C. team made a higher score than Clemson, yet Clemson won the state championship. The truth is, that two separate teams were firing in the contest. One team of five men fired against Clemson and The Citadel for state honors, and the score of these five men was added to the score of five others, who fired at the same time for a separate contest with a similar team from Clemson. The final check-up revealed that the five-man team from Clemson had a total score of 797; the one from P. C. had 788, and the quintet from The Citadel had 730. In the ten-man team P. C. had a score of 1571 points, while Clemson came close behind with 1558.

Considering the disagreeable wind which kept both spectators and participants shivering during the contest, all men fired extremely well. T. Upshur of P. C., and Stone of Clemson, carried away scoring honors, each having a score of 175 from a possible 200. Several others trailed close behind with 160.

The Presbyterian team has improved continually throughout the season and has no regrets for the showing of the year. While Captain Wingate and C. Gregg, both valuable men to the team, will be lost by graduation, it is hoped that Sergeant Young can round up a bunch of freshmen to take their places.

Following are individual scores of the ten members of the P. C. team for prone, sitting, kneeling and standing positions:

Morrow 161, Upshur 175, E. Gregg 160, Wingate 157, Carothers 135, Reames 162, Tiller 160, F. Gregg 150, Anderson 151, Belk 160.

The first five named fired in the state contest and all scores counted for the Clemson match. The highest score in any one position was a 49 out of a possible 50, shot by F. Gregg in the prone position.

I. R. C. Discusses Japan And Russia

The meeting of the International Relations club was taken up with a discussion of the situation in the Far East. Preston Charles gave a talk on "Japan in Manchuria." He told of the internal improvements made in the new state of Manchukuo by the Japanese government. Hugh Holman talked on the probability of war between Japan and Russia, and the probable effect of victory by either side.

The remainder of the meeting after the conclusion of the formal program was given over to discussion by the members of the club, together with Captain Blanton and Dean Brown, faculty sponsors for the organization.

Alabama Studes Take Politics Very Seriously

Wounding of one candidate and the abduction of another caused University of Alabama authorities to postpone until fall the election of an editor-in-chief for The Crimson and White, student weekly newspaper.

Frank Muscal, of Bayonne, N. J., opponent of Andrew B. Manning, of Birmingham, who was shot by an unidentified man, reported that he had been forced into an automobile by two masked men, one night last week.

The campaign of the two students has been marked by intense bitterness, and rival forces worked late into the night to muster votes. The "sectional angle," students said, had contributed to bitterness in the race, which always is marked by intense rivalry.

Special Tests For Monday, Tuesday

Comprehensive Examinations To Occupy Sophomores and Juniors Today and Tomorrow.

Comprehensive examinations, which were given to the sophomore class here last year for the first time, got under way this morning at 9 o'clock with both the sophomore and junior classes participating. The two classes were divided into four groups, in order to make accommodations easily. Dean Brown and Dr. Coe presided in the dining hall, Dr. Jones and Dr. Huntley in Dr. Woodworth's classroom, Dr. Kennedy and Prof. Sturgeon in the chemistry lecture room, and Dr. Davis and Prof. Lothery in the reading room at the library.

The schedule which extends through today and tomorrow, is as follows:

Monday, 9:00—English Usage; Literary Acquaintance.

Monday, 1:30—General Culture.

Tuesday, 9:00—Foreign Language; General Science.

Tuesday, 1:30—General Mathematics; Contemporary Affairs.

The content of the examinations is the same as that of last year, with the addition of a new test covering contemporary affairs.

Four Fraternities Pick New Leaders

Elliott, Potter, Dunlap and Belk Will Be Head Men Next Year. Other Officers Also Elected.

Several of the social fraternities on the campus have announced the election of new officers for the coming school year. The results are as follows:

Alpha Lambda Tau announces that C. B. Elliott, of Gainesville, Ga., will lead her destinies, assisted by Ralph Holcomb as deputy regent; Joe Bradley, secretary; and Hank Wilson, treasurer.

Beta Kappa appointed R. R. Potter as archon for the coming year. Potter is from Atlanta, Ga. His assistants will be George Oliver, as deputy archon; Jean Barrett, secretary; and Ed Andrews, treasurer.

Kappa Alpha elected to her highest office George Dunlap, of Rock Hill, S. C. To assist him, Bob Hamer was elected vice-president, and Billy Nexsen secretary.

Pi Kappa Phi gave her destinies into the hands of Ralph Belk of Monroe, N. C., and named as his helpers, H. L. Mixson, secretary; and Bob McLees, treasurer.

Pi Kappa Alpha and Alpha Kappa Pi have not yet elected their new officers.

Brown Heads History Group

Dean Marshall W. Brown of Presbyterian college, was elected president, and J. H. Easterby, of the College of Charleston, vice-president of the South Carolina Historical association, which held its fourth annual meeting in Charleston on Saturday, April 7. Miss Fannie Bell White of Columbia high school, was reelected secretary and treasurer. Other members of the executive committee are: Prof. C. E. Cauthen of Columbia college, and Prof. R. L. Meriwether of the University of South Carolina.

Dean Brown has taken an active interest in the society, and was one of the charter members. He served in the position of vice-president during the past year. An article entitled, "The British South Africa Company," written by him was published in the 1933 copy of the proceedings of the association.

McSween To Speak At G. M. C. June 3

Dr. John McSween has accepted the invitation of Colonel George S. Roach, president of Georgia Military college, Milledgeville, Ga., to deliver the baccalaureate sermon there on June 3.

The commencement exercises will begin May 31 and come to a close June 5.

Thornwell Handles Last "Y" Program

Group Comes From "Across the Street" To Return Visit. Arnold Announces Cabinet.

The Thornwell Orphanage Christian Endeavor society gave a program before the Y. M. C. A. Thursday evening at the latter's regular meeting. Houston Frowein, president of the Thornwell C. E., was the leader of the program.

The topic for the program was expressed in the sentence, "Friendship is the highest perfection in life." The first number was a reading, "Friendship," in which was told about Dorcas, how she proved a friend to those about her, and how she was raised from the dead by Peter so that she could continue her great work. J. B. Jacobs made a talk on friendship between human beings, stressing the great value of a bond of love existing between two persons. Miss Annie Bagwell gave a talk on Jesus as a friend and helper to mankind, in which was brought out the help and guidance that only Christ can give.

After the meeting, Van Monroe Arnold, new president of the "Y," gave his selection of cabinet members, or committeemen. They are as follows:

Program: Hank Wilson, chairman, Colin Hudson, Ernest Arnold.

Freshman Work: E. L. Nelson, chairman, J. E. Ratchford, George Cody.

Deputations: Tom Plaxico, chairman, James McClary, James Dabney.

Religious Activities: Thomas Carothers, Tom Talmage, Charles Steenbergen.

Publicity: Doyle Boggs, chairman, Robert McLees, Bill Chalmers.

Hi-Y: Twyman Fowler, chairman, Leonard Elmore, G. F. McInnes.

Social: Charlie Carson, chairman; John Rhodes, Ralph Belk, Allen McSween.

Music; L. A. McCall, chairman; Woodrow Tisdale, Jim Collings.

These appointments are tentative, according to Arnold, and are subject to change whenever the need arises. Cabinet meetings are to be held every two weeks.

Officers of the Y. M. C. A., named in the recent election, are: Van M. Arnold, president; Chalmer McCutchen, vice president; Richard Potter, secretary-treasurer. E. L. Nelson is student adviser.

Clemson Outslugs Hose Batsmen

Seven Errors Also Account For Part of Large Tiger Score. Plate Peg Catches Troutman.

The Presbyterian nine allowed Clemson to outslug and outfield them to win 15 to 8 on the local field Monday afternoon. The feature hit of the afternoon was made by Troutman. Clemson first baseman, who sunk a drive to deep centerfield for one of the longest hits ever made on Young field. Wood, by excellent fielding, managed to peg the ball home and Troutman was caught as he tried to stretch the hit into a homer.

For P. C., Forehand and Holcomb were the leading hitters. In all, the Blue Hose got 9 hits to Clemson's 13. Durham, for the Tigers, hit safely three times out of six at bat.

It seemed that the principal fault of the Hose was the number of errors. Clemson made no errors, but Presbyterian accumulated seven. At times it seemed that it was almost impossible for the infield to hold the ball.

Holiday pitched the entire game for Presbyterian, while Croxton twirled for Clemson.

Dr. Jones Attends Washington Meet

Dr. L. D. Jones, professor of Presbyterian college, who for several years has held the position of vice-chairman of the Laurens County Red Cross organization, was sent to Washington, D. C., to attend the national convention, which met April 9-12.

Dr. Jones secured for the state of South Carolina a junior Red Cross worker who will be particularly active in rural schools. This work among rural districts, Dr. Jones said, will aim to utilize the social and humanitarian possibilities of young people.

Reward Offered By Chi Beta Phi

High Scorer In Natural Science of Comprehensives Is To Be Recognized By Fraternity.

The Eta chapter of Chi Beta Phi, honorary scientific fraternity, will present a certificate of recognition to the sophomore or junior who makes the highest grade in the natural science section of this year's comprehensive examinations. This section of the tests will include physics, astronomy, geology, meteorology, chemistry, and biology.

Other than this no award of any kind has been offered for superior marks on these examinations. The comprehensive tests come nearer showing the students' abilities than any other form of tests in use here, and it is appropriate that something be given to the student who shows the best score. There has been a greater interest shown in science this year than in some years previous, and it is with a view of still further increasing that interest that the local chapter of the national scientific fraternity is making this award.

The recipient of the award will be announced as soon as the scores are compiled, and the presentation will be made at the graduation exercises.

Debaters Divide Two With Erskine

Wilson and Martin Win Here, But Seceders Defeat P. C. Affirmative At Due West.

The two P. C.-Erskine debates held Wednesday night ended one-all, both negative teams staying at home and defeating the invaders who argued that the president's powers should be increased.

H. M. Wilson tangled with Ransom of Erskine in a fine battle of words, especially in the rebuttals, while the visiting affirmative made its encounter here. He and A. V. Martin, Jr., came through very well in refuting the assertions of their opponents, and won the judges' decision.

P. C.'s affirmative, represented by R. R. Potter and C. M. Hudson, drove to Due West and were defeated, two to one, by H. G. Patton and J. W. McCown while an April windstorm howled outside.

Prof. H. T. Swedenberg, Jr., presided at the home contest and made short introductory remarks and announced the speakers.

Bird Sluggers Defeat Hosemen

Visiting University Diamond Stars Win By Heavy Hitting and Many P. C. Errors.

The Presbyterian baseball team suffered its second defeat of the year when it bowed to the Carolina Gamecocks on Young field Wednesday, the score being Carolina 14, P. C. 2.

Bolick, Hose catcher, started on the mound for P. C. In two innings Carolina scored 8 runs and Bolick was replaced by Wyatt. Wyatt fared slightly better, but was unable to hold the Gamecock sluggers down. Bolick allowed three hits in two innings, and Wyatt allowed eight in seven innings.

For Carolina, Kneece allowed nine hits in nine innings. The Carolina batting festival was led by Ouzts, Hamilton, and Hambright. Alexander brought in two runs with a home-run drive deep into centerfield in the 7th, for his only hit of the afternoon.

Johnson, who replaced Wood in rightfield, led the Hose in batting. He was credited with two hits out of four times at bat.

Out or In

The C. W. A. might be called a Ditchdiggers Association, but quite often, finding nothing else to do, they cover up the dicthes they dig. It's a continual round of activity, slinging dirt one way or the other, either out or in.

o

The Unemployment

There are eight or ten millions of people in this country who would rather go hungry occasionally in Detroit, Chicago or New York, than to have full bellies in Cau Cau Township, and that is the main reason for unemployment.—The (Charleston, S. C.) News and Courier.

o

Examinations

They went today, two classes strong, to find out what they know, or to prove how much they don't know. Some of them went hopefully, some gladly, a great many dubiously, and a few stragglers in muttered protest, martyring themselves for an unworthy cause. But they made no loud opposition. Perhaps they feel resigned to an unalterable fate, but it may be they're coming around at last.

The Free Individual

The Value of the Free Man—that is the title of a lecture Prof. Albert Einstein delivered before a London audience. He opened it by saying, "Modern life is worthwhile because the individual is guaranteed the possibility of free development, free communication, free religion, and, as far as the well-being of human society permits, free initiative of action."

In our civilization today we hear so much of the necessity of group action, of cooperation, of a pulling-together attitude. We need a stronger central government, we are told, evidenced by the socialistic trend. Power we desire, and power we must have. And the best way to get it is to band together. Granting that all this is true, even to the desirability of a more socialistic government, we cannot help asking this question. What is the object of it all?

It should be obvious to all that the object of the group is to satisfy the individual. Do we build machines just to see them run? Do we oil them and keep them in shape so they will go faster and require more oil? Analogously, do we form institutions and build governments for the sole purpose of watching them run, or being run by them? It is the individual who is important; the group is merely for his benefit.

Einstein says, " . . . only the individual can really create what is new and worth while." And that is certainly true. The group may be a wonderful working unit, but if it makes anything [illegible] it creates anything. [illegible] the individual [illegible] "The [illegible] [illegible] a [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Racqueteers Lose To Appalachians

Defeat, 4-3, Administered By Visitors. McCutcheon, Copeland, Norment Win Singles.

Appalachian college took two out of five singles matches and both doubles to defeat the net team of Presbyterian college, 4-3. For the Hose, McCutcheon, Copeland, and Norment turned in victories. The matches were played on Wednesday afternoon on the local courts.

Earlier in the week, on Tuesday, the netmen lost heavily to Clemson at Clemson. The score was 7 to 0 in favor of Clemson.

Summary of the Appalachian matches:

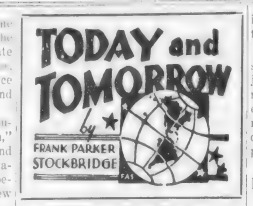
Singles — Sawyer, Appalachian, defeated Gregg, E., P. C., 6-1, 3-6, 6-3; McCutcheon, P. C., defeated Stuckey, Appalachian, 6-3, 6-4; Sawyer, T., Appalachian, defeated Levi, P. C., 5-7, 6-1, 6-3; Copeland, P. C., defeated Flack, Appalachian, 7-5, 3-6, 6-4; Norment, P. C., defeated Nesbit, Appalachian, [illegible]

Doubles — Sawyer and Sawyer, T., Appalachian, defeated McCutcheon and Levi, P. C., 4-6, 6-4, 4-6; Flack and Stuckey, Appalachian, defeated Gregg, E. and Gregg, F., P. C., 4-6, 8-6, 6-3.

ENTERTAINMENT

MOVIES

"Flying Down to Rio" comes to the Casino theatre on Monday and Tuesday. Girls performing on wings of planes and the South American dance numbers, especially the "Carioca," make this a decided change from the run of recent musicals. Gene Raymond falls for Senorita Dolores Del Rio, only to find, upon his arrival in Rio de Janeiro, that she is the fiancee of his chum. Paul Roulien. Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers contribute some good comedy and better dancing. The supporting cast is as follows: the late Blanche Frederici, Walter Walker, Etta Moten, Roy D'Arcy, Maurice Black, Armand Kliz, Paul Porcasi and Reginald Barlow.



Wednesday movies a play by Eugene O'Neil, "The Constant Woman," which features Conrad Nagel and Leila Hyams. If you are a Conrad Nagel fan, you will probably enjoy it because this picture is one of the few he made the past year.

"Lady Killer," starring James Cagney, plays the Casino on Thursday. If you're a Cagney follower, you'll probably like this film, in which James, trying a new technique, drags Mae Clark across the room by her hair. The story is unconvincing, but there's lots of action and fast comedy. It's Cagney's film, but Mae, Margaret Lindsay, as a famous movie star, and Leslie Fenton do good work.

Paramount's "Bolero," which stars George Raft, is the feature for Friday. Ravel's haunting "Bolero" and the magnetic team of George Raft and Carole Lombard make this one for your "must" list. The team becomes the dancing toast of the continent. Then George goes to war, losing Carole to a British lord. Returning, shattered, they dance one more triumphant Bolero, before George leaves life for "a better joint." Reminiscent of "The Four Horsemen." Sally Rand's fan dance is lovely and be sure and watch Frances Drake, who makes her first screen appearance as the first partner of Raft. She is headed for stardom.

"Wild Boys of the Road," a First National picture, is the attraction on Saturday. Frankie Darro, Edwin Phillips and Dorothy Coonan join up with other youthful "depression outcasts" to roam the country. Frankie is arrested and accused of a robbery; the big climax comes in the trial, where his plea wins acquittal and a job. A strong and timely drama, excellently acted.

FAITH — Makes Business

Years ago I heard the classic anecdote of the little girl who, when asked in Sunday school what was meant by faith, replied: "It's believing what you know ain't so." Faith, of course, is belief in what cannot be proved. And it lies at the bottom of all human relations.

All business is done on faith; that is, on the belief that a dollar invested here will somehow, sometime, come back, bringing a few cents with it. That sort of faith is based on so much experience that the probabilities can be reduced to almost a mathematical certainty.

Just now we are going through a period when almost everything must be based on faith. There is no experience to fall back on, to calculate the chances of the success of the enormous efforts of the government to stimulate the return of prosperity. Humanly speaking, the majority of people have faith that we are going to come out all right, but owners of dollars are still waiting to see the figures.

I think that complete recovery will come when the actual figures of business being done give grounds for renewed faith, and not before.

RECOVERY — And Burnt Fingers

I may have too high an opinion of the intelligence of the human race, but it is my belief that it will be a long time before we get into another such era of free spending as we went through from 1922 to 1929.

Those of us who laid up nothing but debts are certainly going to be more thrifty for a long time to come, even if our incomes are restored to what they were.

The wasteful ones will be the youngsters who will be holding the good jobs five years from now. Having money to spend will be a new experience for them. If I were a business man I would try to produce and sell chiefly merchandise that appeals to people under thirty.

GRIER TALKS TO LOCAL GROUP

Faculty and Sigma Kappa Alpha Members and Guests Hear President of Erskine In Address Here Thursday.

The faculty of Presbyterian college, members of Sigma Kappa Alpha, local scholarship fraternity, and students in the upper five per cent of the freshman and sophomore classes attended a banquet given by the college in Judd hall Thursday night. Dr. R. C. Grier, president of Erskine college, delivered the address. This was the second affair of its kind to be given at the college, the custom having been inaugurated last year.

In the absence of Dr. McSween, Dr. A. E. Spencer, vice-president of the college presided, introducing J. W. Combs, president of Sigma Kappa Alpha. Combs welcomed the guests and spoke a few words about the history of the fraternity.

Dr. Spencer introduced Dr. Grier, who spoke on the "Re-Creation of America's Hero." In his brief foreword he said that in these days we have been expecting recovery from without rather than from within, but that all knowledge must be cojoined with a high morality before it can have use for society. "We have been living," he said, " in a time when we have unwittingly divorced all knowledge from the source of all knowledge, and in recent years we have crowned as national heroes men whose objectives have been perishable." He stated that today we find ourselves crawling among the ruins of our economic endeavors seeking someone to lead us out.

Dr. Grier said that man's ability depended not so much on his inventive powers but upon his ability to accept what was taught him two thousand years ago. "Do we appreciate our heritage of faith?" he asked. He said that the things most eternal are not logical, that he doubted whether faith, hope and love are logical, but he would rather have confidence in all men and occasionally be picked up than to have an attitude of suspicion against his fellowman.

Dr. Grier said that there should be, also, in the American hero a revival of the ideal and the romantic in life, that the element of wonder is delightful and that it is far more interesting to know less than to know all. In closing, he said, "Let us bear in mind as we search after knowledge to season our search with that sweetness that revolves around the heart."

Negative Outtalks Mercer Debaters

Wilson and Martin Defend Positions Against Proposals of Georgia Law Students.

Mercer's visiting debaters went down in defeat before the ready tongues of the Presbyterian negative last Wednesday night.

A. V. Martin, Jr., took his time chiefly to show that the general proposal to give the president a substantial increase in power as advocated by Messrs. Land and Curry, for Mercer, would strike at the very roots of the Constitution and would be contrary to the principles upon which this nation is founded.

The second speaker for the negative, H. M. Wilson, Jr., argued that such a step was unwise because our presidents have by no means all been capable or worthy of greater responsibility.

The rebuttal was chiefly an interesting duel between Wilson and Curry over the practical means of putting the proposal into effect. The Mercer law student stated that he did not consider it necessary to do more than prove that the change was desirable, and Wilson, opposing him, argued that pretty theories were quite useless unless they could be put into effect.

YOW PLEDGED TO AKP

Boggs A. Robinson, president of Alpha Kappa Psi social fraternity, announces the pledging of A. [illegible] R. R. Yow, of the freshman class. Yow is from Martin, Ga., and is circulation manager of The Blue Stocking.

Dunlap Heads Pan-Hellenic

Forehand Will be Vice-President of Frat Council, Clarke Secretary. Spring Finals Planned.

The Pan-Hellenic council, which is composed of one representative from each of the six social fraternities on the campus, was installed Tuesday night. The new members are as follows: George Dunlap, K. A.; Joe Bradley, A. L. T.; Roy Forehand, B. K.; Bob Hannah, P. K. A.; Paul Todd, A. K. P.; and Bill Clarke, P. K. Phi.

The new council, upon its installation, elected for its leader George Dunlap of Rock Hill, S. C., a member of the junior class. To assist him in the duties of the council will be Roy Forehand as vice-president, and Bill Clarke as secretary-treasurer.

Mr. Dunlap announces that the council has set the week-end of May 11-12 for the final dances. This date is only tentative, however, since on orchestra has not yet been engaged. There will be three dances in the same manner as those of the mid-term.

The Pan-Hellenic council puts on about three dances each school year for the benefit of all fraternity men. It also acts as a high court for setting fraternity regulations on the campus. The council for the current school year was presided over by Charlie Graham.

Tennis Men Lose Recent Contests

Clemson, Carolina, and Erskine Win Over Presbyterian Net Players Last Week.

The Presbyterian college tennis team dropped three matches during the past week. The first of these was to Clemson. The games were played here on Monday, and the score was 6 to 0, in favor of the visitors. The second was lost to Carolina, 5 to 2, on Wednesday at Columbia. The third and last was lost to Erskine Thursday afternoon on the local courts.

In the Carolina matches, Levi, P. C., defeated his opponent, and Gregg and Copeland were victorious in one of the doubles. Against Erskine, here, Levi was the only Hose player to turn in a victory.

On Thursday, April 26, the netmen meet Carolina in a return contest to be played here. The only other team to be met this week is Clemson, the action to take place here on Saturday, the 28th.

Riflemen Choose Jeanes As Captain

At a meeting of all members of the rifle team who made the trip to Clemson last week, J. G. Jeanes, rising senior, was elected captain of that body for th season of '34-'35.

Jeanes has been a valuable man to the team during his three years in school, and is worthy of the honor given him. Besides his constant high scores, he has taken special interest in the training of new men for the team; and the present efficiency of the group shows the fruits of his labor. With practically the whole team coming back next year, a successful season is expected under his leadership.

Two Juniors Back From R.O.T.C. Meet

George Dunlap and L. A. McCall, Jr., are back safe and apparently sound from a trip to Washington to an R. O. T. C. convention, in spite of the fact that a Communist youth slipped into the hall and made a few radical proposals before he was squelched.

The two juniors report that the conference was very exciting and the trip sponsored by Captain Wysor quite a success. The gathering of a small number of R. O. T. C. students from all over the country [illegible] which is trying to abolish all national defense.

Wofford Wins By One-Point Margin

The Presbyterian college baseball team dropped a close game to Wofford here Saturday by the narrow margin of one point. The final score was 7 to 6, in favor of Wofford.

At the end of the eighth inning, P. C led, 6 to 5, but costly errors in the last frame gave the visitors the two winning runs. The feature hit of the afternoon was Mooneyham's homer in the second. For the Hose, Millsap and Horne were each credited with two-base hits. Presbyterian made seven errors to Wofford's two.

Holliday was on the mound for the Hose. In the nine innings he fanned two men, walked one, and allowed ten hits.

As in most of the other games played by the Hose, the predominant fault was the number of errors. No one person can be blamed for these, but had it not been for the numerous blunders the game would clearly have been Presbyterian's.

PLAXICO PLEDGED TO ALT

C. B. Elliott, regent of Alpha Lambda Tau fraternity, announces the pledging of Tom Plaxico. Plaxico is from Sharon, S. C., and is a member of the sophomore class. He is on The Blue Stocking staff, the Y. M. C. A. [illegible] astically and is popular on the campus.

Blue Key Discusses Number Of Matters

Control of National Body, Intramural Baseball and Election of Officers Before Group.

Blue Key, national leadership fraternity, held its regular monthly meeting Tuesday night in Dr. Kennedy's classroom. President R. D. Lynn read a lengthy letter from the organization's new national president—an office only recently established. This letter explained the formation of a national council for the government of the order. In the past the fraternity has been entirely under the control of its founder, Col. B. C. Riley, of the University of Florida. Due to its growth to such a great size, the election of a group of officers has become necessary.

The matter of intramural baseball for the campus was also discussed. It was decided that the group would sponsor this activity as soon as the regular baseball season ends. Basketball, which was sponsored by this group, proved a success, and it is hoped that the same cooperation will be shown by the student in making this new endeavor a success.

It was decided that the new officers of the chapter will be elected at the next meeting, two weeks from the last meeting. They will be installed at the annual banquet.

CAMPUS NOTES

Students who dance will be interested to learn that since the announcement came out that there would be no refund from the assessment for the Pan-Hellenic dances, some members of the Pan-Hellenic council have stepped out in new suits. It is rumored that the fraternities will be assessed sums of money sufficient to provide the council with underwear, socks, ties and such incidentals that help make up a complete wardrobe for the well-dressed man.

Wild Bill Cody, the man of the wide-open spaces, attended a theatre party several nights ago, escorting a tiny sophomore co-ed. Henry Cranford, lethargic varsity track manager, and Miss Jamie Little, the obstreperous co-ed social light, went along as chaperones.

The friends of L. E. Mahaffey, corpulent super-business man of the college, are wishing him success in his new venture of transporting the R. O. T. C. juniors to camp at Anniston, Alabama, this summer. It is hoped that he will not attempt to drive the bus himself, judging from the report of one who rode with him on one of his numerous trips.

As was noted here in a recent issue, Henry Cranford, the varsity track manager, has started attending track practice more or less regularly now. It seems, however, that the rat team and junior managers have deprived [illegible] week. It is hoped that the two men, W. G. [illegible] and Leonard [illegible] [illegible]

Columbia Sem Prexy Speaks

Dr. J. M. Richards Addresses Chapel Service. Accompanied By Former P. C. Students.

Members of the student body last week had the opportunity of hearing one of the most brilliant scholars in the Presbyterian church when Dr. J. McDowell Richards, president of Columbia Theological seminary, spoke in chapel and twice at the First Presbyterian church.

Coming with him for the week-end from Decatur were two former P. C. men who found many old friends on the campus. The returning alumni were W. M. Frampton, of Charleston, who was an active member of the student body for the last two years, and C. W. Sessions, who finished in '31.

The former P. C. students met with the present members of the Ministerial club and several visitors in the afertnoon, and led a discussion. Several students also had talks with Dr. Richards during his free time.

Dr. Richards, a Davidson graduate and Rhodes scholar, made a clear and interesting address in chapel on how real Christians should live. In the morning and night services at the First Presbyterian church, he told why the seminary was so vital, and brought messages to fairly large congregations.

Jones Speaks To Scientists' Body

Retiring President of S. C. Academy of Science Speaks At Session Held At Clemson.

Dr. F. D. Jones, retiring president of the South Carolina division of the American Academy of Science, spoke Saturday morning at the meeting of that organization. The gathering of this body was held at Clemson college in conjunction with that of the South Carolina branch of the American Chemical society. Professors Sturgeon and Davis, of the Presbyterian college faculty, also attended the meeting.

Dr. Jones' speech was entitled, "The Limitations of Psychology." His term as president of this group now expires; therefore his speech at this time was in the nature of a farewell as leader of the group. He continues as a member of the executive board. Dr. Jones is one of the charter members of the South Carolina Academy of Science, which is affiliated with the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

PRESBYTERIANS TRIM FURMAN

Varsity Track Team Wins Dual Meet At Greenville Saturday, 84 to 42. Freshmen Lose To Baptists, 63 to 54.

The Presbyterian college speedsters took the Furman track team by storm Saturday afternoon in Greenville with a final score of 84 to 42.

Powell Freeman, P. C.'s undefeated spear man, took only two throws to break the state javelin record by a few inches but did not reach his own record of 184 feet.

The Blue Stockings made a clean sweep in the 880-yard race, with Gibbs taking first place, Forehand second, and Clark, third. Hudson, P. C.'s long-distance runner, came out with an easy victory in both the one-mile and two-mile events. Yearout, fast dash man of last year, came somewhat into his own again when he took first place in the 220, but he lost the 100 to Clarence Scott of Furman.

The P. C. freshmen were defeated by the Baptist yearlings by a score of 63 to 54.

Summary:

100-yard dash: Scott, Furman, first; Bradley, P. C., second; Yearout, P. C., third. Time, 10 seconds.

Pole vault: Underwood, P. C., first; Carothers, P. C., second; Dennis, Furman, third. Height, 10 feet.

Shot put: Tranyham, Furman, first; Anderson, Furman, second. Distance, 39 feet, 11 inches.

One-mile: Hudson, P. C., first; McDonald, Furman, second; Babb, Furman, third. Time, 4:57.8.

220-yard dash: Yearout, P. C., first; Scott, Furman, second; Clark, P. C., third. Time, 23 seconds.

High jump: Simms, P. C., first; Miendel, Furman, second; Wilbanks, P. C., third. Distance, 5 feet, 7 inches.

120-yard high hurdles: Waldrep, P. C., first; Guerard, P. C., second; Miendel, Furman, third. Time, 17:1.5.

Discus: Wilbanks, P. C., first; Anderson, Furman, second; Hardy, Furman, third. Distance, 112 feet.

440-yard dash: Wingate, P. C., first; Bradley, P. C., second; Boney, Furman, third. Time, 54.6 seconds.

Two-mile run—Hudson, P. C., first; Devault, Furman, second; Charles, P. C., third. Time, 10:39.2.

Broad jump: Caroliness, P. C., first; Miendel, Furman, second; Guerard, P. C., third. Distance, 20 feet, 10 inches.

220-yard low hurdles: Miendel, Furman, first; Wilbanks, P. C., second; Fisher, Furman, third. Time, 27 seconds.

Javelin: Freeman, P. C., first; Wilbanks, P. C., second; Miendel, Furman, third. Distance, 177 feet.

880-yard run: Gibbs, P. C., first; Forehand, P. C., second; Clarke, P. C., third. Time, 2:13.3.

Church Schools Seeking Aid

Presidents of Presbyterian College, Erskine and Converse Ask For Federal Funds.

Washington, April 17.—A group of denominational school leaders were in Washington today to press for action by congress on legislation which would enable them to borrow from the government in order to keep their institutions open.

In the party were Dr. John McSween, president of Presbyterian college at Clinton; Dr. R. C. Grier, president of Erskine college at Due West, and Dr. E. N. Gwathmey, president of Converse college at Spartanburg.

Several bills calling for federal aid to denominational schools as well as to public schools are now before congress. There has always been serious opposition to extending any kind of government aid to denominational schools on the ground that it violates the well-established principle in this country of complete separation of church and state.

After Comprehensives — What!

Now they are over. Though taken reluctantly by some, nevertheless they were taken. Ten to twelve hours, cramped over printed pages, we went through the ordeal—or was it a pleasure? Anyway, they are over, those comprehensives—come and gone. And now what? What good have they done us?

True it is that the school has got a measure which can be used for comparative purposes, and the faculty, we have heard some professors say, something to influence their grades. This last, thank goodness, does not apply to many of the faculty. But what have we got?

Let us make a suggestion—that the faculty allow us to see our papers, to read them over if we like, to find out what we missed. Of course copies can be bought for forty cents, but it is much more interesting to look at one's own work. It would take up very little time, and we believe the students would appreciate the privilege. Actually seeing the errors we made may make us more interested in those subjects and possibly produce an incentive to more careful thought and study.

Fear — Or Happiness

Basil King has recently written a book entitled "The Conquest of Fear," and not very long ago Bertrand Russell published "The Conquest of Happiness." These two themes, Fear and Happiness, play the most important parts in our lives. In fact, our lives are built up around and upon them. Would it be too hedonistic to say that Pleasure, or Happiness, is the aim of life? The one thing for which we strive? That life is a struggle for Happiness? Whatever we may think of that, it is obvious that enjoyment is a goal we seek, whether sensually physical or mentally spiritual.

Fear and Happiness are the very antithesis of each other. He who is not happy is afraid—afraid of himself, afraid of other people, or afraid of the supernatural. Fear produces Unhappiness. Conversely, human experience shows that the man who has no Fear is the Happy man. He enjoys life, and in so doing he is better able to make it more pleasant for his friends and companions.

These two elements in our brief span of living, then, bring to our mind several things. Fear carries with it a sense of sin and shamefulness, and Happiness, a sense of truth and beauty — and Springtime. Fear is the sense of sin—or is it the other way around? If we could only get away, far from the dejecting idea of shame and sin; if we could emancipate ourselves from that ego-centric sphere; if we could lift our eyes above our surroundings into the heights of the universe; if we could look out from ourselves and include God's green earth made beautiful by the goddess of Spring: perhaps, then, we might enjoy true Happiness, that gift of Nature which always comes in from without, and can only dwell in a lodging free from the association of Fear.

Rat Chasing

We need a renaissance! The treatment of freshmen [illegible] Several decades [illegible] form of hazing consisted of [illegible] progress?

lizing the natural, God-given greenness of rats to scare them into jibbering wrecks. It is a mystery why upper-classmen, with an alleged familiarity with psychology, do not make use of it as a more efficient way to "keep the freshman in his place" than a paddle. The superiority of the use of psychology is recognized by all fraternities in their initiations, and only in the more primitive and rowdy ones does "rough stuff" predominate as the prime feature of the occasion.

Back to the "renaissance"; for many years, an annual "wild man" scare caused a panic in the current crop of rats. The customary procedure, roughly sketched, was as follows:

1. A victim was selected—some freshman of an unusually deep hue of emerald.

2. An apparently solicitous individual would attach himself to the unfortunate, and proceed to regale him with the peculiarities of a certain character. It appeared that, due to some accident, it had been necessary for the gentleman in question to have inserted into his skull a silver plate. It further seemed that, on occasions of stress and worry, the silver plate became heated, expanded, pressed upon the brain, and presto!—the poor man became murderously insane.

3. The solicitous individual concluded by recalling some previous casualties, and horrible mutilations of unhappy by-standers, perpetrated by the silver-bearing personage in his irresponsible moments, and left the now-nervous rat with a final caution.

What could be sweeter? Psychology incarnate. Of course, by the time the indicated "mad-man" stalked into the fitfully dozing victim's darkened room, froth (Palmolive) foaming from between the teeth in which was clenched a bread-knife, the rat was ready to give one shriek and depart via the window, with the sash. More than one rat, pursued by bellows of "I'll cut out his heart and fry it in butter!!' has leapt out onto the ledge around the third floor of Spencer dormitory, anxiously seeking a fire escape which, in some inexplainable way, had hidden itself.

Change

Change is the key of progress. It has been the vital element in the development which has taken place in this old world since time began. This has been the necessary ingredient in the making of nations, civilization, industry, and generally everything. Without change the world, or at least those parts rejecting it, becomes stagnant, out-of-date, ignorant, and steeped in a stubborn worship of and reverence for the past. Such elements might well be compared to the turning to a pillar of salt as a result of looking backward as mentioned in the Bible.

Japan and China, and all the Far East for that matter, are good examples of what the prohibition of change can do. And especially through the example of Japan can be seen the profits to be derived by accepting the changes of the rest of the world and getting into line to help this game of change and revolution to continue.

Without a doubt, that item concerning the rejection of change which affects most of the world is the tenacity of business to so-called "economic laws." When England was undergoing the industrial revolution, industry and business of the age accepted the opinions of Adam Smith as law, and law it has been since that time. In "Wealth of Nations," Smith asserted that the world must have a depression every so many years and nothing can be done to prevent it. He opinioned, and the rest of the world affirmed. Now the world refuses to see the rut it has fallen into and refuses to climb out by changing its methods of economics.

Where would England have been without her industrial revolution in the eighteenth century? This is a change which affected the whole world. Everywhere we see a kind of meatmorphosis going on in most objects.

Some colleges have taken a lesson from change. For some social and moral customs of yesteryear are things not to look back to. However, others of our institutions profess to be modern and up-to-date in every way. Some of the social modes of the modern student body are not being permitted free development on some campuses. But the really progressive institutions are allowing full development of modern student social life.

Where is Presbyterian's place in this march of progress?

Present-Day Science

TIMING LIGHT

Have you ever tried to see light move? Travel, I mean, through the atmosphere? Of course its speed is much too fast for our eyes to actually register the motion. On the comprehensives there was a question asking for the name of the person first to measure the speed of light, for though we can't see its move, we have ways of knowing it moves. Among the persons suggested as the answer was the Danish astronomer, Romer, who, two hundred and fifty years ago, came remarkably close to the correct figure. And it was an interesting method he used, too. You remember last week I mentioned Jupiter's four brightest moons. It happens that three of these satellites are eclipsed at every revolution. Romer noticed that these eclipses occurred at regular intervals, and he soon began predicting their recurrence. He observed also that during the six months the Earth went away from Jupiter in its flight around the Sun, the eclipses occurred increasingly later than he had predicted. And that as we approached the planet during the other six months, the time changed back to normal. From these facts Romer concluded that this change in time was due to the farther distance the light from Jupiter must travel across the Earth's orbit. In this way, by timing the eclipses at six-month intervals, at the position nearest the planet and the most distant, he worked out the speed the light would have to move to account for the difference of time.

Recent experiments are made using mirrors to reflect light back and forth, and timing the trips. Between 1924 and 1926, Michelson conducted extensive experiments with plane and rotating mirrors. He set up on Wilson a rotating octagonal [illegible] which sent a beam of light 22.5 to Mount San Antonio where it reflected back to the adjacent side of the octagonal mirror. That is, first mirror had moved during travel of the light, making the reflecting beam strike the second of sides instead of the first from it left. This caused the reflected to be again reflected, but this time an angle, which was measured this angle, and knowing how far mirror was turning, and the dis the light traveled, its speed calculated. That velocity worked to be 186,284 miles per second. It rather complicated process and cult to explain without a dia Much work has been done on mining the velocity of light, astronomy, but in other fields ence as well.

One of the squads of C company is ping every morning that the weaer will be bad enough to compel the lling to be on the street beyond umni. The reason for this vain hope the fact that one morning one of eir town friends presented each mber of the squad an orange for an hibition drill; and these men who re once kids think he might do it in.

The personage of our army who was mentioned last week in this paper as being a fellow with a limited vocabulary wishes to say to those benefactors who seem so interested in his cultural development, that after considerable research and some conference with various notables, he has discovered a new word to describe the drill of the battalion. He was accused of using only "rotten"; but now he intends to use the more dignified synonym "putrid," to put over the same idea. If the inspector sees fit to use an adjective of the nature suggested in the editorial, we hope to have another article in an attempt to imbue him with our well-known culture.

"After inspection" is becoming a kind of retrospective expression on the campus now, as everyone tries to think of the joys which come then rather than the trouble which will come before and during that event; but really, after inspection a squad of sophomores will be selected from each company to put on any kind of drill that may be preferred—straight, fancy, rotten, putrid, or what not. The only requirement for winning is that this squad impress the one who is judging the event. The squad which is judged to put over the best impression is to receive as compensation for its merit an excuse from drill the remainder of the year. The squad will be chosen most likely by the company commander and will be placed in charge of one of the sophomores in the company and a few days will be allowed to prepare for this drill before the actual exhibition.

In regard to the choosing of the men who will represent the various companies, it is hoped that every man will understand that the men who do this are doing it with the idea of winning and that nothing will be on a personal basis. Therefore, if you are not chosen, don't say the commander was sore at you; but rather that he showed rather poor judgment.

The freshmen's part in this "after inspection" role will be, as has already been announced in this column, a competitive drill in which all men who have had previous military training will be barred from competition. It is hoped that many first-year men will take an interest in the drill and not merely in the bait offered to entice them into the trial.

Also, "after inspection" the juniors will put on an exhibition with the machine gun. They will show the details of operation, stripping, assembling, and what not; that is, if the time is available.

The make-up drills are still as efficient as ever; but after Captain increased the number of culprits from the group of spectators, very few men, except the participants, know the drill is going on.

After this week, the seniors of the corps will no longer be seen parading around the campus with the flashing sabers by their sides, for their military careers will be finished as far as this school is concerned. However, we expect to see the juniors exhibit their new Sam Browns at every opportunity.

LUCKIES
are All-Ways kind to your throat

"It's toasted"

so round, so firm, so fully packed—no loose ends that's why you'll find Luckies do not dry out

We think you'd be impressed if you saw Luckies being made. You'd see those clean, silky center leaves—and you really wouldn't have to be a tobacco expert to know why farmers get higher prices for them. They are the mildest leaves—they taste better.

You'd be impressed by Lucky Strike's famous process—"It's toasted"—designed for your throat protection. And we know that you'll be truly fascinated when you see how Luckies are rolled round and firm, and fully packed with long golden strands of choice tobaccos. That's why Luckies "keep in condition"—why you'll find that Luckies do not dry out—an important point to every smoker. And you'll get the full meaning of our statement that Luckies are always in all-ways kind to your throat.

MOVIES

Monday and Tuesday: The much-discussed and long-awaited "Dinner At Eight" has finally been booked here. Billie Burke, John Barrymore, Lionel Barrymore, Jean Harlow, Wallace Beery, Lee Tracy, Edmund Lowe, and Marie Dressler are starred, and Phillips Holmes, Madge Evans, Karen Morley and the late Louise Closser Hale are featured in this picture. This movie offers some of the greatest characterizations that have yet been brought to the screen. Be sure and see it.

Wednesday: First National's "Goodbye Again" with Genevieve Tobin, Warren William, Joan Blondell, Hugh Herbert, Helen Chandler, and Wallace Ford is one of the most sophisticated comedies of the season. The story concerns a tour of a famous author and his secretary through all parts of the country. In one city he runs across an old flame of his. Of course, she is married, and this fact causes all the hilarious situations.

Thursday: "Miss Fane's Baby Is Stolen" is the title of Paramount's second picture featuring Dorothea Wieck. This picture, reminiscent of the Lindbergh kidnaping case, is a powerful presentation of what actually happens when a child is seized for ransom. It offers thrills, terrific suspense and will bring a sob to your throat. Dorothea Wieck, as "Madeline Fane," famous star, is madly devoted to "Michael" (Baby LeRoy). In the night the baby is kidnaped and then a struggle arises as to whether the mother shall inform the police or make contacts herself with the kidnapers. She keeps a rendezvous with the "snatchers"—Alan Hale, Jack La-Rue, and Dorothy Burgess. But the plan goes astray. Alice Brady, as a farmer's wife, intervenes at the critical moment. Dorothea Wieck, Alice Brady and Baby LeRoy are superb. A film you will long remember.

Friday: "Six of a Kind." This is the howl you've been waiting for. Charlie Ruggles, Mary Boland, W. C. Fields, George Burns, Gracie Allen and Alison Skipworth are six of a kind—all ace comedians. And if it's action you crave, stop right here. Bill Fields almost stops the show with his pool table pantomime, but the others are not far behind. Mr. and Mrs. J. Pinkham Whinney (Charlie and Mary), not having had a vacation in twenty years, drive to California on a sort of second honeymoon and, of all things, take George Burns and Gracie Allen along to share expenses.

6 about Cigarettes

As to the cigarette paper on Chesterfields

THIS reel of cigarette paper is sufficient to make 42,000 Chesterfield Cigarettes. It is of the finest manufacture.

In texture, in burning quality, in purity, it is as good as money can buy.

Cut open a Chesterfield cigarette. Remove the tobacco and hold the paper up to the light. If you know about paper, you will at once note the uniform texture—no holes, no light and dark places. Note also its dead white color.

If the paper is made right—that is, uniform—the cigarette will burn more evenly. If the paper is made right—there will be no taste to it and there will be no odor from the burning paper.

Other manufacturers use good cigarette paper; but there is no better paper made than that used on Chesterfields. You can count on that!

Elmore and Ratchfortd represented he chapter at the state meeting in reenville Saturday.

Negative Debaters End Good Season

When H. M. Wilson, Jr. and A. V. Martin, Jr., P. C.'s negative debating team, won the decision over Textile at Spartanburg last Friday night, they closed a season in which they had not lost a single debate. Meeting Mercer, Winthrop, Erskine, Clemson, and Textile, they won all encounters. This is the first time in several years that P. C. has had a successful debating team. And it is hoped that this year's record will further the interest and support of debating.

The query that has been used throughout the season is, "Resolved: That the powers of the President be substantially increased as a settled policy."

New Books At College Library

Latest Addition To Shelves Cover Many Fields and Will Interest Students.

Among the new books added to the Presbyterian college library within the past few weeks are several of universal interest. Frederick Lewis Allen's "Only Yesterday" is an informal review of the post-war America in fads, personalities, and things that made the news. With a humorous touch and a keen insight, Mr. Allen has caught the spirit of the past decade.

Hindus' "The Great Offensive" jumps to the other side of the world. Following his very successful book, "Humanity Uprooted," in which he gave a picture of the changed conditions of Russian social life, "The Great Offensive" is a narrative of the gains and achievements of the Russian people under the rule of the Soviets.

Duffus' "The Santa Fe Trail" is a vivid portrayal of the exciting Southwest in the days when it seemed that a nation was moving westward. It begins with the Spanish days.

Few remember Prince Philip Eulenberg-Hertefeld, who died an exile in 1921. He was an ardent personal friend of Kaiser William II of Germany, and on his head was placed the blame for many things. The translation of Johannes Haller's "Philip Eulenberg, the Kaiser's Friend" into English makes available an amazing amount of information of this misunderstood man and many of the other outstanding personalities of pre-war Germany.

"Tales of the Monks" are stories taken from the "Gesta Romanorum," that great collection of stories enjoyed by the monks of the Middle Ages.

Other titles added include: "The Middle Ages," by Fr. Wilson Named Head Of College Y Group

Retreat Held At Camp Barstow. Wilson, Carson and Arnold Are P. C. Delegates.

At the annual retreat of the South Carolina College Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. associations, held the past weekend at Camp Barstow, near Columbia, H. M. Wilson, of Presbyterian college, was named president for the coming yaer. Other officers are as follows: Jacqueline Emerson, Carolina, and Lillian Hogarth, Winthrop, vice-presidents; Jo Graham, Columbia, secretary; Perry Langston, Clemson, treasurer-registrar; Harris Blair, Erskine, and Victor Hickman, Wofford, executive board members.

The Presbyetrian Y. M. C. A. was represented by Van Arnold, Charlie Carson, and H. M. Wilson.

The purpose of the retreat was the general gathering of members of the Christian organizations at state colleges, in order that they might discuss problems arising in college relations, and out of the discussions get clearer views as how best to work with these problems.

Several excellent leaders were in charge of the discussions and lectures. W. D. Magginnis, of the education department of Winthrop, led the entire group in the subject of "The Importance of a Christian Organization on the Camps." Rev. Smith, of Clemson, spoke on "Qualities of Christian Leadership." The gathering then separated into four sub-groups in each of which a person competent in that particular field took charge. The after-supper meeting was led by Mr. Bell, of Carolina, who spoke of the practical side of religion.

Three meetings Sunday morning concluded the retreat.Mr. Vaughan, who has charge of the 4H clubs in the state, gave a talk followed by a discussion on "The Boy and Girl Relationship." The second assemblage was led by Claude Nelson, on the idea and work of the Student Volunteer movement. The sessions closed with a worship service.

Along with their seriousness, the young peopl eenjoyed recreation, stunts around the log fire in the evening, games, swimming and canoeing.

Carolina Downs Blue Hose, 9-0

The Presbyterian nine came out of a rather one-sided mix-up with the Carolina Gamecocks on Monday in Columbia on the zero end of a 9 to 0 score. Only four Hose players reached first base and Wolf, Carolina pitcher, walked one of these.

Wyatt, who was on the mound for P. C., held the Birds fairly well except for a rather disastrous fourth inning, when he allowed six hits. Shorty Horne, at third, probably turned in the best performance for the Blue Stockings. Ouzts, Carolina first baseman, took batting honors, ringing the bell three times out of four at bat. Yonce turned in a stellar fielding performance for the Birds.

Although the Hose were practically swamped, a decrease was shown in the number of errors. Only four were made this time, while seven were chalked up during the last game. Carolina was charged with one error.

MILITARY UNIT RECEIVES HIGH RATING IN SPRING INSPECTION

Grade of "Excellent" Is Again Earned By Presbyterian College R. O. T. C. Unit When Put Through Paces Last Tuesday and Wednesday.

The Presbyterian college R. O. T. C. unit again received the rating of "excellent" by the United States war department in the annual spring inspection. Col. J. H. Brockman was the inspecting officer.

According to schedule, the inspection was conducted on last Tuesday and Wednesday; and the smoothness and order in which the whole affair went off was sufficient to even surpass the expectations of those in charge. The final judgment of the inspector gave all branches of the work a rating of "excellent" save one senior subject, tanks, which received "satisfactory." This was considerably better than any other Presbyterian unit has ever made.

The inspector gave his personal opinion of the corps when he said this was the best R. O. T. C. unit he had ever inspected; and also, when he spoke of the attitude of the cadets to military training. "Each man in the battalion seemed to put all he had into the proper execution of the movements given him," he said.

According to the custom in all inspections, the unit assembled early Tuesday morning on the drill field, marched in review and was then inspected by Col. Brockman and the regular officers of the unit. Following this, a company from the battalion, a platoon from each company, and a squad from each platoon exhibited various company, platoon and squad movements. Then a war strength platoon from all companies went through a combat problem. All these performances went off excellently.

On the next day, representatives from all the R. O. T. C. classes took tests made out by an officer of the regular army, which covered all class work of the year.

First Year Track Men Trim Davidson

Winning their second meet in four days, the Presbyterian freshman track team came from behind in the last events to defeat the Davidson rats, 61 2-3 to 55 1-3, at Davidson Saturday. P. C. took nine of the twelve first places.

Jacobs, P. C., was high scorer with 18 points, taking three firsts and one second. The outstanding single performance of the day was Thompson's broad jump of 22 feet. Peeler turned in his usual excellent cinder work to win both the 440- and 880-yard runs.

Dickson was high scorer for Davidson. He took first in the 100, first in the high hurdles, and second in the broad jump, with a distance of 21 feet, 9 1-2 inches.

Blue Hose Return, Bitten By 'Gators

Presbyterian Tracksters Lose Dual Meet To University of Florida, 72 to 59.

Shades of Turk Osman ran with the Presbyterian college track team in the beaming Florida sunshine Saturday at Gainesville, but the University of Florida sweeps in the shot, discus and high jump tallied enough points to spell defeat, 72 to 59.

Six of the seven running events fell to the speed of the blue-clad Presbyterian runners, with several seconds and thirds to help out. Yearout was high scorer of the meet, with wins in the 100 and 220 and a pretty lap in the relay that led Florida's four by a long and safe margin. Bradley was just behind on both dashes and also took a lap on the relay.

Captain Powell Freeman easily won the javelin toss, but did not reach the Florida state record of 184 feet which he set last year. Incidentally, both he and Turk Osman hold state records in Florida equal to or better than the South Carolina marks which are held here by other men for the javelin and 440. The sunshine state counts all collegiate performances within the state, but South Carolina counts only records of the state meets, where men are handicapped by having to run for the team's points. Thus Osman does hold one state record, even if not any of those in his own state.

Forehand and Gibbs broke the tape for the half, holding hands, and Hudson came back to win the two-mile after being outsprinted to the tape on the mile jaunt.

The pole vault, which last year resulted in a tie, was again a draw between Underwood and two of the home vaulters when the trio missed out at twelve.

Following are the results:

One-mile run: Jim Crews (Fla.) first; Hudson (P. C.) second; Howe, (Fla.) third. 4:47.8.

Shot put: Brown (Fla.); Moore (Fla.); Gunn (Fla.) 42 feet, 7 1-2 in.

440-yard run: Clark (P. C.); Burnett (Fla.); Winget (P. C.) 51.5 secs.

100-yard dash: Yearout (P. C.); Bradley (P. C.); Upham (Fla.) 10.4.

High jump: Bill Crews (Fla.); Har-

Freshmen Trounce Wofford Tracksters

The freshman track and field men almost doubled the score of the Wofford college rats to win by an 86 to 44 margin here Wednesday.

Probably the most spectacular race of the afternoon was the 880, in which Robinson, of Wofford, defeated Peeler, of P. C. Peeler allowed his man to set the pace for practically the entire distance, passed him on the home stretch, and then was passed himself in the last 60 yards of the race. Earlier in the meet Peeler won the 440 in [illegible] seconds.

Thompson took both the 220- and 100-yard dashes with ease. Jordan and Jacobs took the Wofford hurdlers in their stride, and the P. C. field men came through to turn in additional victories. The P. C. relay team defeated the Wofford quartet to close the meet.

CHAPMAN J. MILLING, PRESBYTERIAN ALUMNUS, MAKING NAME FOR SELF IN FIELD OF POETRY

To escape the hum-drum activity of his own profession, or motivated perhaps by the strangeness, the irony or the pathos of a "bedlam house," Dr. Chapman J. Milling has turned poet. And this interest in poetry has led him far, even though it has been somewhat of an off-hand diversion. As a spare-time writer he is attaining the goal of accomplished authorship, and has had his work published in magazines [illegible] poetry periodical called "The Harp" [illegible] chronn."

Dr. Milling is an alumnus of Presbyterian college, a graduate in [illegible] class of 1923. His interest in literature was not an absorbing one during his college days, and the only poetry he wrote was the product of freshman immaturity. Two of these, however, won a prize given by the editor of The Collegian. The Collegian, Dr. Milling says, was at that time a campus joke, so he turned his thoughts and his energy to the more fertile field of newspaper work, and as a senior became editor of The Blue Stocking. Its editorial columns served as the medium for the fiery expression of his opinions. Being a liberal-minded, outspoken person, he made a reputation as a "Bolshevik," when the [illegible] I don't mean to imply that [illegible] He [illegible] a few [illegible] lent thrusts, and stirred up a rather invigorating resentment against the type of student government then in existence.

Dr. Milling finished P. C. in 1923, and during a year at Rock Hill found out for himself that he was [illegible] er. Deciding to study medicine, he went to the Medical college in Charleston where he received his degree in 1928. That summer he interned at the State hospital in Columbia, and finding there what he felt was a permanent interest accepted the position that was offered him. Since that time [illegible] fort to be published appeared in 1929 in "The Literary Lantern," a syndicated newspaper column. Life at the hospital among the unfortunates whom he has called the "damned unseen" gave him the substance of

It Still Has Its Value

We cancelled our membership this year in the State Oratorical Association for the very simple reason that no student was interested enough to write an oration. And there was a ten-dollar prize in the offing to be given by the college. Still displaying a decided lack of interest, only three students have registered for the Freshman-Sophomore Declamation Contest. And there, too, is a ten-dollar prize in the offing. The Administration has tried to encourage public speaking but to no avail. Oratory, the art of declaiming, has lost its appeal to the college student. It no longer strikes a responsive note.

Those people reared in the old school deplore the fact and fail to understand. But the reason is not a deep-seated one. Students have not changed an appreciable amount; they are merely confronted with more interests, with more activities. And these have pushed oratory and declaiming to the ranks of the near-forgotten, and almost to oblivion and death. Social fraternities, honorary fraternities, newspaper, magazine, and athletics have all arisen to demand time, energy, and interest, and oratory has been left alone, forsaken in the rush. The vigorous literary society with its debates, its orations, and its declamations once reigned on the campus. But its glory faded, it gradually died, and ten other things have grown and thrived in its stead.

Two decades ago public speaking was considered an invaluable part of any person's education from start to finish. Every rebellious little boy passed through the Friday afternoon orgies of "Twinkle, twinkle little star," through the valiant sentiments in puberty of "Curfew shall not ring tonight," and rode bravely with "The Black Horse and His Rider" in secondary school days. Finally he came to college well prepared for the "Eukosian Literary Society" and its accompanying speeches and debates. But those things now are only memories of an older person's "When I was a boy—"

However we are inclined ourselves to regret somewhat the total failure of students to interst thmselves in and to realize the merits of public speaking. And it does have its definite merits. Public speaking, more than anything else, is capable of giving a person poise and self-confidence, and in those two attributes the average student is sadly lacking. Public speaking, if practiced enough early in life, enables one to stand on his feet before a crowd without shuffling, and to say a few sentences straightforwardly without afflicting his audience with "and-ers" and "erruhs." We would like to encourage a revival of interest in public speaking. We must realize that it is not an out-moded thing. It still has its value.

"There Is No Monotony Except In the Minds of Men"

In certain American universities there have been made in recent years sweeping changes in methods of teaching and of stimulating student interests in college work. Outstanding in this connection is the University of Chicago, largely because of its young president, Robert M. Hutchins. On being chosen for the presidency of this great institution while still in his thirties, Mr. Hutchins immediately went about setting up a changed system of higher education. He left the first two years of college for general foundation work and so-called "cultural" duties, claiming that two years is entirely sufficient for this purpose, although, heretofore, four years have usually been devoted to it. He then changed the entire method of teaching, abolishing the grading system and required class attendance. He attempted to build student initiative to study and resarch; his ideal, as he says, was to "inflame minds," not in the sense of arousing mass emotional responses, but in that of opening in the student mind a vision of man's potentialities, of his possibilites of future progress. He wished to tear loose the college man's brain from its moorings of complacent contentment with things as the immediate past and the present have shown them to us—to open to the student the long story of life, with civilized man merely a flaming-up, an incident, here in the forefront of it;—to show them that there is no monotony except in the minds of men.

The idea is fast coming to the fore that modern times and the changes occurring and impending in it demand a revamping of higher educational methods. This reconstruction is deemed necessary in order to build in college men and women the ability to think through the increasingly complex problems of civilized existence, so as to maintain and accelerate man's progress and to reach out to new heights and new achievements for humanity.

The remarkable thing about Mr. Hutchins and his University is that they seem to be succeeding. Student interest in college work, say closer observers, has increased astoundingly; class attendance, instead of dropping off as might have been expected, has actually become more regular. One significant feature of the plan is the raising of standards; there is to be nothing of the diploma-mill in this neterprise. Mr. Hutchins says that he and the faculty have been trying simply to make of the institution a real university in the true sense of the word; a place for genuine scholarship and research.

No one can gainsay the fact that our educational methods are at least immature. Many prominent educators in America and other countries hold virtually the same ideas as those which this young president has put into practice. And it may be a matter of a little time until these "radical" changes may be effected in all institutions of higher education.—The Crimson and White.

Friendship

"O love that passes the love of woman!
Who that felt it shall ever forget,
When the breath of life with a throb turns human,
And a lad's heart is to a lad's heart set?
Ever, forever, lover and rover—
They shall cling, nor each from other shall part
Till reign of the stars in the heavens be over,
And life is dust in each faithful heart!"

What a picture of real friendship these few lines from Woodberry's "Comrades" bring to the mind; a glimpse of that love which must have been the love of Damon and Pythias. Such comradeship most men desire and strive to attain.

There is nothing so valuable as friends. To have one real friend, or even many, is worthy to be called a life goal. To have someone who likes the things you do, someone who understands you, someone who likes to knock about with you, someone to whom you may turn for advice — this is what constitutes a real friend.

Many have stated that the main good to be derived from college life lies not in how much one may get from the study of books, but in the making of friends. Some people are lucky enough to have been bestowed with natural talent for making friends. Others have to develop this art. Through analyzing the personalities of those who have real friends and comparing them with his own personality, the individual may find the point toward which he should develop his characteristics.

In this compound of fraternity there are many elements to be considered to make a true compound. Each one of these must be measured and used in the right proportion. Of these ingredients some of the most important are unselfishness, patience, consideration, discretion, sympathy, sacrifice, cooperation, frankness, and a quantity of brotherly love. With the formula properly compounded an invaluable substance, friendship, should be the result.

R. O. T. C. News

Beginning this week and continuing to the end of the year, rising seniors will assume the duty of keeping the chair of the O. D.'s office warm; and the rising juniors will be the new errand boys for the college at large on certain appointed days.

These offciers of the day and their orderlies for the week are (with their approximate rating for the remainder of this year):

Monday, April 30—Lt. W. R. Holcomb, with 1st Sgt. Morrow, W. B.

Tuesday, May 1—Lt. W. J. Clark, with 1st Sgt. Potter, R. R.

Wednesday, May 2—Lt. L. O. Elmore, with 1st Sgt. Forehand, R. W.

Thursday, May 3—Lt. P. W. Yearout, with Sgt. Bradley, J. B.

Friday, May 4 — Lt. J. McCaskill, with Sgt. Wyatt, J. K.

Saturday, May 5—Lt. C. E. Carson, with Sgt. Plaxico, T.

The present seniors, having seen they will never get rich in a ditch, are now resting up preparatory to their return to the pow; and their younger brothers will take charge of the companies. The rising juniors will for the remainder of the year assume the duites of the sergeants.

The sophomore squads which will represent their companies in a drill contest have been practicing for the past few days with the hope that they will be excused from drill the rest of the year, and probably forever, if they win out. Interest in the contest, which will be held tomorrow, is high; but it seems that either confidence or do-ra-me is lacking, for thus far we have heard of no cases which tend to give the affair weight.

One of the more easily excited bers of the corps says he co have told the inspector whether was the number of his rifle number of children in his famil he asked him. But don't tell the well-informed wits of the for it appeared in a joke book has been worn out now, and might consider it an insult to memories.

Ballad of Bedlam House," which was irst printed in 1929 in the mgaazine Interludes" and later reprinted in The Literary Digest." Dr. Milling's nterests have been divergent and he as found the leisure time to study arolina Indian folk-lore, and to beome somewhat of an authority in that ield. This study of Indian folk-lore as afforded the inspiration for many f his poems. The following one, which ppeared in "The Harp," he considers is best work:

The Indian Trader

ar up the ancient trading-path he dwelt
Among the people that he loved and fleeced.
He shared the hunt, the dance, the game, the feast;
For he was half a savage, half a Celt.
He wore a matchcoat and a beaded belt
When in the spring his pack-train journeyed east
Bearing the winter's cargo; man and beast
Laden with goodly freight of fur and pelt.
And so, in after time rich Gaelic names
Made their appearance on the tribal roll
And wampum sometimes bore St. Andrew's cross.
With tomahawk uplifted, Hugh and James
Danced in their turn around the painted pole,
And chiefs might be McGillivray or Ross.

In 1932, the poem "White Trash" appeared in the "Poetry World and Contemporary Vision." It is as follows:

Beyond a sandy field the cabin stood,
A crude unpainted mockery in pine;
Adjoining it a shed room to confine
A sack of soda and a cord of wood,
A saddle-tree, a plow that once was good,
A wagon and a family of swine.
The home itself accommodated nine—
A sallow, unhygienic brotherhood.

No roses blossomed by the sagging door;
Beside the walk no yellow jonquils grew;
Instead a tub, neglected and forgotten,
Held stunted flags, the lilies of the pool;
For rows are long and daffodils are few
When every foot of earth must furnish cotton.

The same year a prose article, "I Am Going Back to Church," was printed in "Forum" and was later reprinted in the same magazine because of its particular merit.

This month another of Dr. Milling's poems appeared in "Holland's Magazine," and "Cinquain for a Bookplate" won the monthly prize in "Kaleidograph."

WHEREVER the finest tobaccos grow—in our own Southland, in Turkey, in Greece—all over the world, we gather the very Cream of the tobacco Crops for Lucky Strike. And that means only the clean center leaves. The center leaves are the mildest leaves—they taste better and farmers are paid higher prices for them. These clean center leaves are the only ones used in making Luckies. Then "It's toasted"—for throat protection. And every Lucky is fully packed with these choice tobaccos—made round and firm, free from loose ends—that's why Luckies "keep in condition"—why you'll find that Luckies do not dry out—an important point to every smoker. MOVIES

Monday and Tuesday — "Carolina," starring Janet Gaynor and Lionel Barrymore, and featuring Richard Cromwell, Henrietta Crosman, Robert Young, Mona Barrie, and Stepin Fetchit, promises to be one of the most important movies of the season. The locale of the story is three miles from Florence, S. C., and the plot concerns the family life of the old aristocratic Connelleys.

Wednesday—After two years of retirement, Rod La Rocque returns to the screen in the highly dramatic "S. O. S. Iceberg." The scenes in this picture are truly magnificent and the photography is something to marvel at. The entire cast, with the exception of La Rocque, is composed of foreigners.

Thursday — "Mary Stevens, M. D." the Warner film which features Kay Francis and Lyle Talbot, is dramatic and affords Miss Francis one of her best roles to date. In this film she plays the part of a surgeon who desires to live and love as other women. See it and watch the surprise ending.

Friday — Edward G. Robinson returns in his latest First National starring picture, "Dark Hazard." In this movie, which is a tale of a gambler's life, Robinson has two leading women, Genevieve Tobin, who will be remembered for her delightful performances in "One Hour With You" and "Goodbye Again", and Glenda Farrell, who adds fun to any picture. The title of the picture concerns a dog that sticks by Robinson when the blondes give him the air.

Present-Day Science

By Chas E. Carson

DRUNKENNESS DETERMINED BY BLOOD TESTS

In Norway and Nazi Germany sobriety and inebriety are legally measured scientifically. Dr. Hansen, University of Oslo, Norway, has discovered that drunkenness can be determined by the amount of alcohol in the blood. The mtehod is very simple. The lobe of the ear is pricked, and a specimen of the person's blood (only a drop) is taken to the laboratory. Tests are made, and the report is brought back that he is legally either sober or drunk, and to what degree of either, according to the number of milligrams of alcohol per cubic centimeter of blood. Perhaps it would be an excellent plan to have such a system in this country, eliminating as it would many of our court squabbles and the wasted time of testimony. Then it would be not "Did he act as if he were intoxicated?" but "How alcoholic was his blood?"

The way tobacco is cut has a lot to do with the way Chesterfield burns and tastes

There are many different ways of cutting tobacco.

A long time ago, it used to be cut on what was known as a Pease Cutter, but this darkened the tobacco, and it was not uniform.

The cutters today are the most improved, modern, up-to-the-minute type. They cut uniformly, and cut in long shreds.

The tobacco in Chesterfield is cut right—you can judge for yourself how Chesterfields burn and how they taste.

Everything that science knows is used to make Chesterfield the cigarette that's milder . . . the cigarette that tastes better.

"ALL FOR P. C." P. C. FOR ALL"

VOLUME XV PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE, CLINTON, S. C., MAY 7, 1934 NUMBER 26

SUMMER TERM STARTS JUNE 11

Low Tuition Offered Those Who Take Work In Six Weeks' Session At Presbyterian. Dr. Coe Is Again Director.

Summer school will be held again at Presbyterian college from June 11 to July 21, according to notice in the new catalog and announcement by Dr. R. L. Coe, who will be in charge.

Students may attend one or both of the ninety-minute classes for a credit of three or six hours in any subject for which a class can be arranged.

Tuition is only $15, except for additional laboratory fees in science courses, which is really less than the tuition charge for a course during the regular session. Board will not be provided at the college, but room and meals can be secured for $30 close by.

Last year a number of students began their college careers in the summer school, and entered in September with freshman math already off. Quite a number of others pulled up credits in order to be eligible for football or general standing, and about ten teachers took advantage of the opportunity to have their certificates renewed.

This year courses will be offered in practically any subject for which as many as six register, professors being drawn from the regular faculty for courses in which they are qualifed. One may enroll even up to 9 a. m. of June 11, when the first class meets, but it is safest to register now and deposit the $5 fee to make certain that the subject will be offered.

Lothery's Position Filled By Cooke

Graduate of William and Mary, Who Received Ph.D. From U. of Illinois, Highly Endorsed.

It was announced last week by Dr. John McSween, president of Presbyterian college, that Dr. F. W. Cooke, of Urbana, Illinois, will come here next year to take the place of Professor T. E. Lothery, Jr., of the physics department, who has been given a year's leave of absence to resume his studies.

Dr. Cooke is a native of Gloucester, Virginia, and secured his A. B. degree at the College of William and Mary where he graduated in 1915. He later studied at the University of Chicago, and in 1931 received his Ph.D. from the University of Illinois. He taught physics at North Carolina State college from 1921 to 1923, was assistant in physics at the University of Illinois from 1923 to 1931, and was on a temporary appointment as science professor at Agnes Scott college from 1931 to 1933. At present Dr. Cooke has a position with the State Geological survey of Illinois.

Dr. Cooke comes to P. C. highly recommended both as a man and as a professor.

Freshmen Netmen Drop First Tilt

The freshman tennis team lost its first match of the year to the Furman frosh here Tuesday by a score of 5 to 2. The team has just been organized and no intercollegiate matches have been played heretofore.

For the Sox, Parham won a singles match, 12 -10, 6-4; and Crew and Daniels won their doubles match, 8-6, 6-4. The first set of the singles match won by Parham was probably the hardest of the afternoon, 22 games being necessary to decide the winner.

Others playing for P. C. were: Steenbergen, Duckett, Talmage, and Bolick.

Chi Beta Phi Elects Officers

At the recent meeting of Chi Beta Phi, local scientific fraternity, Chas. E. Carson was elected president of the organization for the coming year. Paul Todd was named vice-president; Frank Carothers, recording secretary; E. R. Andrews, corresponding secretary, and C. G. Chapman, marshall.

Hudson Makes Top Science Score

Certificate of Recognition Given By Local Society To Student Standing Best Examination.

Colin Hudson, member of the sophomore class, is the recipient of the certificate of recognition given by the local chapter of Chi Beta Phi scientific fraternity to the student who made the highest score on the science seciton of the comprehensive examinations recently held at the college.

Hudson led his class in scholarship during the last semester, is managing editor of The Blue Stocking, a member of Kappa Alpha social fraternity, and is active in other phases of campus activity.

L. A. McCall, Jr. Heads Blue Key

Other Officers Also Named At Recent Session of Group. Plan For Intromural Baseball.

L. A. McCall, Jr., was elected to head Blue Key fraternity for next year, succeeding R. D. Lynn as leader. He has shown outstanding qualities of leadership in campus affairs and in South Carolina Christian Endeavor circles.

D. W. Boggs, president of the student body, will be vice-president, and G. W. Dunlap, treasurer and recording secretary. Secretarial work in correspondence and with the alumni falls to H. E. Bolick and R. M. Perrin.

The fraternity had some discussion as to the election of new members, but is not ready to announce any action.

Intramural baseball is in the offing as a result of further plans of the fraternity to provide sport for everyone, just as do the intramural swimming meets which already have been planned.

The Collegian In Printer's Hands

Final Number of Year To Be Delivered Soon. Is Well-Rounded Magazine, Editor States.

The final issue of The Collegian, Presbyterian college literary magazine, will appear at an early date, J. W. Combs, editor of the publication, states that the coming number will be a well-rounded magazine. It will contain twenty-eight pages. The material presents a variety of short stories, essays, poems, and jokes. It will be illustrated with block prints made by Robert McLees,a member of the freshman class.

Outstanding is a story, "The Glory Path," by W. I. Nexsen; an essay, "Pockets," by Cliff Johnson, and stories by Hart Odom and H. M. Wilson, Jr.

Newberry Nine Takes Two Games

On last Thursday afternoon, the Presbyterian college baseball team closed its season with a 14-0 loss to Newberry. The Calvinists, having an off day, made twelve errors to allow Newberry to convert eleven hits into fourteen runs. P. C. made seven hits off Ingram, the Indian pitcher. Holliday twirled the first six innings, being relieved by Wyatt. Wyatt made the longest hit for the Blue Hose, a two-bagger, while Ingram made the longest for the Indians, a homer. The Redskins, playing errorless ball, scored in every inning except the fourth.

Earlier Game Here

On last Tuesday afternoon the Newberry baseball team defeated the Presbyterian swatters here by the score of 11-7. The Redskins built up an eight-run lead in the first four innings, and the Blue Hose were never able to equal it. They had their big inning in the last of the fourth when they scored five runs. One run in each of the two succeeding innings accounted for their seven runs. Presbyterian hopes soared high in the last of the ninth, when what appeared to be a Blue Hose rally began, but a strikeout and a double play ended the game.

Clemson Annexes Freshman Title

Tigers Nose Out Furman In State Track Meet, 48 to 47 1-6. P. C. Third With 41 1-3.

The Clemson college freshman track team nosed out Furman, 48 to 47 1-6, to win the state freshman track meet here Friday. Presbyterian was a close third with 41 1-3 points.

Five state records were smashed, three by Furman and two by P. C. Stevens, of Furman, lowered both high and low hurdle records, and King, also of Furman, put the shot 40 feet, 1 1-2 inches to set another new record. Prather, of P. C., tossed the discus 129 feet, thee inches, to smash the old mark of 117 feet. Thompson jumped 21 feet, breaking the state record by 8 inches, and tied the 220 record time of 23.4 seconds.

Stevens, of Furman, was high scorer with 14 points, and Thompson, of P. C., and King, of Furman, each piled up 13 points to tie for second honors.

The only other first place taken by the Sox was in the high jump, in which Jacobs tied with Bryce, of Clemson, at a height of 5 feet, 6 1-2 inches. Although Presbyterian's middle distance man, Peeler, had previously run the 440 in 53.9, he failed to place in Saturday's race which was won in 54.2 seconds.

The state meet closed the season for the track men. In spite of the fact that they placed third in the final meet, the Sox have had a fairly successful season, winning three of the five dual meets. The rats will furnish next year's varsity team with many excellent men, such as Thompson, Prather, Jacobs, Peeler, Jordan, and others.

Pan-Hellenic Finals For Next Week-End

Series of Dances To Be Staged By Fraternities May 11-12. Music By Harold Underwood.

The series of dances known as Pan-Hellenic Finals, is to be held Friday and Saturday of this week at Copeland hall, announces George Dunlap, president of the recently elected Pan-Hellenic council. Harold Underwood and his Commanders will play for the event.

The orchestra, one of the best-known in the South, hails from Knoxville, Tenn. It has been a feature on radio programs of station WNOX. The group has made tours over Virginia, West Virginia and North Carolina, besides playing for dances at the University of Tennessee and numerous other universities and colleges.

This group of dances will be the first under the regime of the new Pan-Hellenic council. A new custom has been instituted to give the rising frat representatives a chance to strut their stuff for the last dance of the school year.

The first dance will be a formal Friday night, from 10 till 3:30. Saturday afternoon there will be a tea dance, 4 to 6. The Saturday night event, lasting from 9 till 12, is to be informal.

It is thought that this series of dances will be the best of the school year, in view of the orchestra's superiority and the large crowd expected. A larger number of girls than usual will probably come down for the dances, since Winthrop college has a holiday Saturday of this week.

Erskine, Wofford Win In Tennis

The Blue Hose tennis team lost its last match of the year to Erskine at Due West on Wednesday. The score, 7 to 0, was a clean sweep for the Seceders, but four of the seven matches had to be carried to three sets to determine the winner.

This match closed the season for the team. An intercollegiate tennis tournament will probably be held at Greenville, however, to which two of the P. C. racquetmen will be sent. The date for this has not yet been announced.

The only other match of the week was played on Monday against Wofford. The Terriers won, 5 to 2. Copeland and Law each won a singles match for the two points.

CAROLINA AND CLEMSON TIE IN "MINIATURE OLYMPICS"

Two State Colleges Share First Place In South Carolina Track and Field Meet Here Saturday. Presbyterian Is Next, Followed By Newberry and Furman.

"Mountain Goat" Lynn, great dash man from Clemson, went down in glorious defeat before the record-setting running of Bryan Hutt of Carolina, who flashed out of comparative obscurity to aid the mighty Craig in tying the state track and field meet held here Saturday. Hutt bettered Lynn's 100-yard record of 9.8 seconds by cutting it one-tenth. He tied the 220-yard record which Lynn had set in the preliminaries, 21.9 seconds.

Presbyterian accounted for three of the eight records which fell. Bill Clark clicked off the 440 in 50.5, bettering the state record by three-tenths of a second. Powell Freeman tossed the javelin the amazing distance of 184 feet, one inch, bettering the former record of 177 feet, 9 inches. The relay team set a new record of 3 minutes, 27.2 seconds, cutting two-tenths of a second from the old record, also held by P. C.

Other records falling were: the low hurdles, by Lambeth of Newberry, 25.5; the shot put, by Craig of Carolina, 45 feet, 7 1-2 inches; the discus, by Craig of Carolina, 135 feet, 8 in.

Craig of Carolina, won the Clinton Lions club trophy for being the most valuable track man of the year in South Carolina.

Craig was high scorer of the meet with 18 points, and Lambeth was next with fifteen.

The meet was the most colorful ever witnessed in this state, being modeled along Olympic lines. The competing athletes marched on the field, four abreast, the captain bearing the school colors."K" Mills' band led the parade. When they had reached their positions before the stands, the flag was unfurled with the proper ceremony. Dr. John McSwen, president of Presbyterian, made a short welcoming address, and the tenth annual state track meet was in full swing. Another Olympic touch was the crowning of winners on the "victory stand" between events. The winner was placed on the pedestal and presented with the medal while his alma mater was being played. Second and third place winners were placed on either side of him.

The summary:

Two mile: Hudson, P. C.; Altman, Clemson; DeVault, Furman; Babb, Furman. Time, 10 minutes, 24.2 secs.

High jump: Craig, Carolina; Sims, P. C., and McMahan, Clemson, tied; Lipscomb, Clemson. Height, 5 feet, 10 inches.

220-yard low hurdles: Lambeth, Newberry; Folger, Clemson; Craig, Carolina; Perrin, P. C. Time, 25.5 seconds. New record.

Pole vault: Beck, Newberry; Lipscomb, Clemson, and Farnam, Carolina, tied; Parks, Clemson, and Carothers, P. C., tied. Height, 12 feet.

Broad jump: Lambeth, Newberry; Robinson, Clemson; Lipscomb, Clemson; Guerard, P. C. Distance, 22 feet.

880-yard run: Gibbs, P. C.; Forehand, P. C.; Yarborough, Clemson; Cook, Carolina. Time, 2 minutes..

Shot put: Craig, Carolina; Dillard, Clemson; Traynham, Furman; Taylor, Carolina. Distance, 45 feet, 7 1-8 inches. New record.

220-yard dash: Hutt, Carolina; Lynn, Clemson; Yearout, Presbyterian; Ford, Clemson. Time, 21.9 sec-

Florence Alumni Hold Luncheon

Group of Presbyterian Graduates Hear McSween and Johnson. Sturgeon Also Present.

On last Tuesday evening Presbyterian college alumni in Florence and the surrounding towns met at a dutch supper which was held at the Y. M. C. A. in Florence. They had as their object that of getting prospective high school students interested in P. C.

About thirty alumni were present together with several high school students. Dr. McSween and Coach Johnson were the principal speakers at the meeting. They were accompanied by Professor H. E. Sturgeon.

Psychology Class Hears Dr. Whitten

Head of State Training School Tells of Sterilization and Its Advantages To Society.

Dr. B. O. Whitten, superintendent of the State Training school, of Clinton, spoke last Wednesday to the class in abnormal psychology at Presbyterian college on the subject of sterilization. Dr. Whitten for a number of years has been engaged in work with mental defectives, and recently has advocated strongly the passing of a state sterilization law.

Dr. Whitten gave briefly the reasons for sterilization, and stated the methods, the advantages and the technique of using the process on some varieties of mental defectives and criminals.

Swimming Meet Be Held This Week

Wednesday and Thursday Set For Intramural Events Sponsored By Blue Key.

The Blue Key, honorary leadership fraternity of Presbyterian college, is sponsoring an intra-mural swimming meet to be held at the Leroy Springs pool on Wednesday and Thursday of this week. This is an event that should prove of interest to the many swimmers on the campus. Seven events are scheduled as well as the regulation diving.

The teams participating will consist of one from each fraternity and a team from Spencer and Laurens dormitories and one from Smyth and Alumni. Day students will be allowed to swim for either their fraternity or a dormitory.

The rules, which are posted on the bulletin board, state in the main that no person who has been on the varsity or freshman swimming teams will be allowed to participate and that no team will be allowed more than two entrants in each event.

The preliminaries will be run on Wednesday night, beginning at 7:30, and the finals on Thursday night at the same time.

McFadden To Get Scholarship Key

Award To Be Made By National Chapter To Oustanding Man In Local Organization.

Dossey McFadden is to receive the Chi Beta Phi scholarship key this year. The key is given by the grand chapter of the national scientific fraternity to the most outstanding man in the local chapter. The award was given by the vote of the chapter on the basis of scholarship and interest in science and the organization.

McFadden served Eta chapter as recording secretary in 1932-33, and has taken a great deal of interest in other campus activities, being president of the senior class, captain of the swimming team, members of Kappa Alpha social fraternity, Blue Key and Sigma Kappa Alpha honor and scholastic fraternities. Also he has been for three years student assistant in chem-

New Officers For Honor Committee

Members of the voluntary honor committee some weeks ago elected E. J. Arnold to preside over their brief meetings and Colin Hudson to act as secretary, succeeding H. Wyman and D. W. Boggs.

Last Wednesday the new president explained again the purpose of the vountary organization: to stop cheating at P. C. regardless. He also asked that all who are interested should not fail to stay a few minutes after chapel each Wednesday so that the group may keep united.

The purpose is to take in a few of the freshmen next fall and get interest of those upper classmen who also are

Our Pet Theory

We have a pet theory. It is that an individual's most intimate character is revealed by his taste in pictures. At college, away from the restrictions and repressions which naturally exist at home, his inmost personality crops out unashamed, protected by numbers, for on every side the same reaction is occurring.

The average student has eight walls upon which to express his individuality. Even the most primitive races delight in color, variety and show—and seldom is the student, in the natural state, completely civilized. Greeted by bare, empty walls, with here and there, perhaps, an irregular fragment of fast-glued paper bearing mute evidence of the vain attempts of the administration to efface the "expression" of earlier occupants, the new arrival hastens to clothe the naked walls. In the myriad ways chosen, he unconsciously lays himself open for analysis.

There are some, coming from stalwart homes, who bring their pictures from home. Generally, such subjects selected give little indication of the individual's character, other than perhaps a "snail-like personality; he brings his house with him." Other students from equally conservative homes, sally forth to the local ten-cent store, and there chose, sans taste, sans judgment, such cheap-framed specimens as "The End of the Trail" and "Horses in the Storm." With bourgeoise ruthlessness, they select badly executed engravings of mediocre paintings, with widely varied merit.

Some, brought up in cultured, or at least, well-to-do homes, bring autographed copies of lithographs and etchings.

By far the most prevalent is the whimsical touch, which leads otherwise Puritan students to purloin the most extraordinary signs and advertisements. It is not unusual to see propped against the wall on which is tacked "Do not tip the waiters," a junior bill-board proclaiming in flaming letters the advantages of becoming a citizen of some thriving metropolis in Florida. "Boxers Only," "Detour Seven Miles," "Thirsty?—Try a Lemon Fizzle!!" "Employees Entrance" are samples. They are not definite indications of character. They are too popular.

There are those who are too radical to be content with "Scene in Konigsburg," or silhouettes of someone's ancestors. One notable instance is a life-sized portrait of Mae West, carefully scissored, and occupying the upper surface of an entire wall.

And then, the average student. It is upon his gallery of pictured pulcritude, cut from every imaginable type of periodical, papering the wall, that we base our theory.

A few, tastefully chosen pictures of dogs, or a carefully selected crayon of a thorough-bred, blue-blooded horse, leave an impression of cleanliness and sportsmanship. Equally so does a matted collection of dozens and dozens of paper pennants, felt and leather penants, team photographs, sport-page headlines concerning a victory, seem to indicate a truly collegiate spirit. It is a curious fact that seldom are items concerning debating teams, or successful literary publications, clipped and pasted with the same avidity as those concerning athletics. Some carry their whimsicality into the clipping field also. Upon one wall is pasted a story heading: "Women Are Such Fatheads." I should like to read that story. The author would probably be that mythical, prolific character, Mr. "Anonymous."

Lastly, there are some exhibits which require only one glance to make a sensitive soul to writhe inwardly. Nowhere does a misled or debased character more racously proclaim itself. Some, milder, leave an impression of dissatisfaction.

"As Environment Changes, So Changes Life"

Why is there so much antagonism between Youth and Age? Why do the morals and traditions of yesterday conflict with those of today? Or perhaps there is no real difference; just a pretention made by the younger generation in order to cover up a feeling of inferiority. But even so, that in itself is a conflict. Is there, and must there be, an inevitable conflict?

Dr. Williams, professor of sociology at Clemson, rendered a very clear explanation of this at the recent South Carolina Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. retreat. There should be expected, he said, a difference between the two, a disagreement of right and wrong, and even of the purpose of life itself. To explain his conclusion he used a chart which may be described in some such manner as the following:

A heavy black line is drawn horizontally across the chart. A time line, we'll call it, representing the last sixty-five years. Above and parallel we draw another line, which we call the life of a man now sixty-five years of age. On this second line let us mark off that portion which equals the first fifteen years of the time line; this will be the man's youth. On the right end we have a third line, representing the man's son, now fifteen. On the time line itself, running from 1870 to 1934, we locate important inventions, changes of customs. Our picture is complete: the man's youth cuts out the period of time before the airplane, automobile, and numerous other scientific improvements; the son's youth is the time of today, radio, talking picture. And what a pathetic picture we have, the father trying to compare his own youth with that of his son's. Life is merely an adaptation to environment; and as environment changes, so changes life.

The two youth periods do not fit, and the father cannot understand why. It was his own life that changed the attitudes and morals and brought a different environment to the birth of his son. Yet he seems not to be able to realize it. He would rather lay the "blame" at the feet of the present generation who were not here even to watch the change, much less able to influence it. Such is the picture of the conflict of life, of the struggle between youth and age. Judging from the past, it is to be expected.

All men are born into a world of values, of attitudes, and customs; in short, we are born into an environment. It is not ours to order; it is given to us. If it is not exactly the best there is, we are not to blame. But we will be responsible for the future. And if our predecessors have made such a mess of us as their adjectives describing us seem to imply, perhaps we may do well to profit by their experience and prepare a better environment for those who are soon to succeed us.

Present-Day Science

HAVE YOU SMOKED YOUR SUGAR TODAY?

By Chas. E. Carson

In an article on "Why Smoking Is Liked," the writer tells us that at last the answer has been found. No, it is not to see the smoke rings, as pleasing as it is to be able to blow them better than someone else, nor is it always to appear nonchalant in the face of peril. It is because it produces sugar in our blood, and most of us have a "sweet tooth." Haggard and Greenberg, of Yale's Laboratory of Applied Physiology, were attempting to find out how often human beings should be fed, when they came unexpectedly upon the sugar-nicotine riddle. It seems that after a meal the blood sugar increases, only to fall in a short while. In many adults the blood sugar would increase again before the next meal. Upon investigating the reason, they found a high correlation between the increase and cigarette (or cigar) smoking. In fact, tests showed that immediately after smoking, sugar in the blood rose very quickly.

Glycogen is stored up in the liver and muscles, and as the result nicotine is converted into sugar. This will for a while appease a desire for food. In the words of the experimentors, "Tobacco smoking, by inducing hyperglycemia (production of an excess of sugar in the blood) temporarily relieves these (hunger) conditions." So the next time you're hungry and haven't got a dime, light a cigarette and imagine you've just finished a delicious steak. And then, too, you might let it take the place of a bar of shey's chocolate for dessert.

A NEW BUSINESS

Berlin has within the last adopted a policy of "paying to be born." To be exact, the pa went into effect April 20, whic Hitler's birthday. A kind of bon seems, is given to "hereditarily healthy children selected by the fice of Race Culture."

The children to whom payme made cannot be either the first, ond in any family, the idea of being to produce larger families. first year of the child's life he paid 30 marks a month, and fo next thirteen years, 20 marks a Besides this he will be given consideration when he begins ing around for a career.

This is a result of the fight many for eugenics. The purp both to increase the populatio more important still, to come to the "superman."

For the past week juniors have been in charge of the various companies and sophomores have been in the guide and sergeant positions; but it would not be far wrong to say that the majority of these men have either got the vacation fever, the spring fever or the fever of nonchalance, for no noteworthy ability has been shown yet. This lack of efficiency may be attributed to the fact that many in the corps think the drill is over for the year when they have passed the inspector's examination; but this year any men in this category have two more thoughts coming (first, the drill is not over; and second, there is more drill to do). Captain Blanton is trying to guard against such an opinion in the ranks; and is carrying a full schedule on until nearer the end. This is being done mainly to determine the ratings in the corps for next year. It should be understood that what knowledge one has exhibited so far may not mean so much, for the main characteristic which will get one above the crowd is the ability to readily adapt himself to new conditions, and to show a reasonable amount of thought for the unit as well as for himself. All must be on their guard now, or else they will be on their own next year.

After watching some of the juniors give squads right when it should have been squads left, Captain Blanton has decided to try out a new orientor. He plans to tie a white handkerchief on the right arm of any man who is thus inclined to tell him immediately that is right. Then he will tie another handkercheif on the left hand to show him that is left.

Beginning this week the freshmen will have practice in rifle marksmanship on the new outdoor range, provided some of the more hearty ones can be induced beyond the doors of the dining hall. All men on the campus and strangers who may be here at that time are warned to maintain a distance from that sector; for those gentlemen are not responsible for their actions during these maneuvers.

In connection with the appointment of officers for next year, there will be an exam on all drill through the school of the platoon, given to sophomores during this week. All men should know this drill already; but this is given to weed out from the prospective list for next year those who do not. This list is in the making now; but it is larger than the final one can be. As announced before, this list will contain one list of 27 men and another of some 70 or more to fill the vacancies which will naturally appear. Any man who does not care to be in the service if he is chosen, and one who may not be back next year are requested to talk to those in charge before the permanent choices are made.

Changing fashions have spelled the death of one industry after another since fashions originated. But there's one that may be revived by the current trend to long hair and curls—switches. There's one firm in New York that has held a stock of human hair in storage for years. They value it at a million dollars!

New York sight-seeing is vastly improved during the summer by the revival of the 'round Manhattan boat trips. They leave on a two-hour schedule all day long and do nothing in the world but make circles around the island of Manhattan. And for a complete idea of what is on this little island, no two hours of a hot summer day can be more comprehensive and restful.

Luckies are always in All-Ways kind to your throat

so round, so firm, so fully packed—no loose ends that's why you'll find Luckies do not dry out

We like to tell about the finer tobaccos in Luckies—the choicest Turkish and domestic, and only the mild, clean center leaves—they taste better—then "It's toasted"—for throat protection. But we're just as proud of the way Luckies are made. They're so round and firm, so free from loose ends. That's why Luckies "keep in condition"—that's why you'll find that Luckies do not dry out—an important point to every smoker. Luckies are always—in all-ways!—kind to your throat.

Letters to the Editor

I am writing back to tell all my friends on the P. C. campus that I enjoyed my visits and morsels from the dining hall to the fullest. I really think P. C. is a doggy place.

On those rainy week-ends when things were so lonesome and quiet, I did my best to liven things up a bit. It was great fun tugging at pants legs, and dodging books and chairs that seemed to answer back when I yapped just a time or two down the hall.

And after bedtime I found in almost every closet piles of clothes that had the nicest smells about them, all fixed for me to sleep on. I didn't have time to spend a whole night in each one, so I usually visited two or three for a short nap each. And there were the most tasty shoes and slippers to gnaw. I liked almost all the flavors.

In my absence I have been unjustly blamed for what happened on one of those pleasant nights, I hear. I am accused of pushing a radiator downstairs, and while I admit many misdemeanors, I brand those rumors as malicious slander. I was on perfectly good behavior in a closet chewing a glue and pasteboard slipper, the first I ever tasted, when I heard the radiator go thundering down the steps. Soon afterward I felt terribly sick from the glue and tried to get out, but the door was shut. It was those boys' own fault for having such slippers and keeping the door closed, and I can prove by them that I was in the room. So please don't let anyone think I helped smash the radiator.

I spent afternoons in playing out on that field where everybody was running around a whole lot without much clothes on and not seeming to get anywhere. They laughed at me for chasing my tail, but they ran round and round all afternoon and didn't catch anything either. Some of the rest were jumping over long rows of white board things when they could have dodged them much more easily. And I couldn't see why some of the biggest fellows would strain and pull to throw some of those queer looking objects as far as they could, and then go bring them back right away. But they think it is comical when I start digging away in soft dirt just to have my fun.

I saw a great many other things I did not understand, but I say again that I like the fellows very much and hope I can wobble over to visit you again.

Ever your pup,
SIMON.

—they age good grapes to make rare wines

—and they do something like that to mellow good tobaccos

WHERE THE RARE WINES come from they know that the two most important things in wine-making are the selection of the grapes and the long years of ageing in the wine cellars.

IT'S VERY MUCH THE SAME in the making of a cigarette. You have to get the right tobaccos, then put them away to age and mellow in wooden casks.

You can't make a good cigarette like Chesterfield in a day. It takes over two years to age the tobaccos for your Chesterfields—but it adds something to the taste and makes them milder.

Everything that modern Science really knows about is used to make Chesterfield the cigarette that's milder, the cigarette that tastes better.

Rising Junior Class Nominates Leaders

On last Tuesday at a meeting of the sophomore class, officers were nominated for the rising junior class. The election will be by secret ballot on the coming Tuesday, May 22. The nominations follow:

President: Johnny Chapman, Cliff Johnson, Frank Holliday, James McClary, Alan Guerard.

Vice-president: Colin Hudson, Rex Wilbanks, Roy Forehand.

Secretary: Joe Bradley, Tom Plaxico.

Treasurer: Hank Wilson, Phil Adams.

Perrin Elected Senior President

R. M. Perrin, of Union, was unanimously elected president of the rising senior class as it met to nominate officers. The new chief is alternate captain of the Presbyterian football team and an officer of Blue Key and Pi Kappa Phi fraternities.

The choice for vice-president will be made between P. W. Yearout and T. B. Waldrep at the ballot box next week.

Other off ices were elected without opposition: George O'Cain, secretary-treasurer; W. I. Newton, historian, and W. F. Guess, poet.

Pan-Hellenic Finals Program Successful

Series of Dances By Greek Letter Organization Feature of Last Week-End.

The new Pan-Hellenic council was initiated last week-end when it staged one of the most delightful social events of the school year, Pan-Hellenic Finals. Harold Underwood and his Commanders played for the occasion. The dances were held in Copeland's hall.

The first dance of the group was Friday night from 10 to 3:00. The tea dance, lasting from 4 till 6, was held Saturday afternoon. The Saturday night dance started at 9 and closed at midnight. The dances had four, two and three no-breaks, respectively.

The orchestra was generally considered the best heard here since last year's finals. Besides the regular orchestra numbers, there was a special attraction in the form of a torch singer, Miss Marlene Hurt, who sang very effectively with the aid of an amplifying apparatus.

A large number of girls spent the week-end in Clinton attending the dances.

The Pan-Hellenic council did an excellent job and deserves commendation for its excellent work.

College Receives Flash From Africa

Amateur Radio Man In Pennsylvania Relays Message From Congo To Dr. McSween.

On Wednesday morning an incident occurred here that was new in the experience of the college. A message to Dr. John McSween, president of the college, which was sent from Africa via short wave radio, was picked up at amateur station V3QV in Roslyn, Pa., and forwarded to Dr. McSween.

The message, which was sent from station ON4CSL, Belgian Congo, was a reply to a letter from Dr. McSween to Rev. Hoyt Miller informing him that the board of trustees of P. C. had awarded him the degree of doctor of divinity and asking him to pay the college a visit while on his furlough. The message as received was "Degree gratefully accepted. Greetings to all. Impossible to be present. Letter follows."

Mr. Miller was a member of the class of 1916 and played on the first football team that P. C. ever had. He is now a missionary from the Southern Presbyterian church to the Belgian Congo field.

State Tennis Meet On In Greenville

Presbyterian Is Represented By Gregg, Levi and McCutchen In Singles and Doubles.

A series of intercollegiate tennis matches were to be held at Greenville, beginning today and continuing through Wednesday of this week, in which every college in the state will be entered. Presbyterian is entering three men: Gregg, Levi, and McCutchen. Each of the men will enter the singles, and the team of Gregg and McCutchen will enter the doubles.

Under the rules of the meet, each college is allowed three singles teams and one doubles team. Although the past season has been rather an unsuccessful one for the Hose racquetmen, the three men who are representing P. C. today will probably come through to turn in several victories. By their work in various matches they have proven themselves to be the outstanding trio of the squad.

Clark Captains 1935 Track Team

Bill Clark, the Presbyterian crack middle distance man and 440 record holder of South Carolina, will captain the 1935 Blue Hose track team.

Clark is a rising senior and one of the mainstays of the team. His performance this year has been particularly brilliant. He was high scorer for the Calvinist team this year, ending the season in a blaze of triumph by setting a new quarter-mile track record at the state intercollegiate meet. In addition to running the two middle distances, Clark is anchor man on the new state record-holding mile relay team.

Tracksters Enjoy McMillian's Stew

Coach L. S. McMillian and his friends for the third time entertained the Presbyterian college varsity and freshman track squads with their dates at a fish stew on Lake Murray.

Coach Johnson, J. H. Hunter, Dr. J. H. Davis and Prof. H. E. Sturgeon took cars to the outing and the bus carried a load.

A large pile of fried fish and a pot of fine stew were made ready by L. E. Hatton and Louie Thornley. After the swimming and boating (which came almost together for those who went out in the sieve-like boats), everyone was ready for the feast.

Pi Kappa Alpha Wins Tank Meet

Fraternity Crew Victorious In Intramural Contest Arranged By Blue Key.

On last Wednesday night the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity won the finals of the intramural swimming meet that was sponsored by the Blue Key, national leadership fraternity. The Alpha Lambda Taus were second and Smyth-Alumni third. The Pi Kappa Alphas took five firsts and the remainder were divided, one going to Spencer-Laurens, one to Pi Kappa Phi, and one to Alpha Lambda Tau.

The summary follows:

100-yard break stroke: Millsap, Spencer; Daniels, Pi K. A.; Plowden, Pi K. A. Time, 2:50.

80-yard back stroke: Estes, Pi Kappa Phi; Waldrep, A. L. T. Time, 1:10.4.

40-yard free style: Daniel, Pi K. A.; Bradley, A. L. T. Time, 25.2.

160-yard relay: Pi Kappa Alpha, Smyth, Pi Kappa Phi. Time, 2:47.3.

Diving: Bolick, Pi K. A.; Worrell, Smyth; Millsap, Spencer.

100-yard free style: Viser, Pi Kappa Alpha; Millsap, Spencer; Clark, Pi Kappa Phi. Time, 1:22.3.

200-yard free style: Correll, Pi Kappa Alpha; Plowden, Pi Kappa Alpha; Estes, Pi Kappa Phi. Time, 3:56.6.

120-yard medley relay: A. L. T.; Pi K. A.; Smyth. Time, 1:36.3.

A. V. Martin, Jr. To Head I. R. C.

A. V. Martin, Jr., was elected to succeed J. W. Combs, Jr., as president of the International Relations club of Presbyterian college at its final meeting of the year. The election was held Wednesday. A junior on entering P. C. last fall from Hampden-Sidney, Martin has taken active interest in debating and in current history.

Hugh Holman was at the same time chosen vice-president, and E. R. Andrews, secretary-treasurer.

The I. R. C. is fortunate in that almost all of its members are juniors and sophomores and will be back in September under the new officers.

Beta Kappa Frat Pledges Carson

The local chapter of Beta Kappa, national social fraternity, announces the pledging of Charles E. Carson.

Carson is a member of the junior class, assistant editor of The Blue Stocking, and president of Eta chapter of Chi Beta Phi, national honorary scientific fraternity.

All the varsity men who won letters are members of the Block "P" club, which holds its annual banquet Friday night in Judd hall.

P. C. Racquetmen Lose To Erskine

The Presbyterian freshman tennis team went down in defeat before the first-year men of Erskine here Friday aftrnoon by a score of 5 to 2. For the Sox, Daniel won his singles match and the team of Daniel and Parham a doubles contest.

Probably the most contested match of the afternon was the one in which Spurrier, Erskine, defeated Parham, 8-6, 6-8,, 6-1. The doubles match won by Daniel and Parham was also carried to three sets. In this they defeated Gettys and Orr, Erskine, 4-6, 8-6, 6-4.

Earlier in the week the freshmen defeated Belton High, 4-2, at Belton. P. C. made a clean sweep of both doubles matches and two of the singles. Parham and Daniel each turned in wins in the singles, as did the team of Crew and Steenbergen in the doubles. The other doubles was won by Daniel and Parham.

THE ADMINISTRATION BUILDING, OCCUPIED IN 1907, HAS SEEN MANY CHANGES IN LIFE AT THE COLLEGE

April Fool's day. An expectant hush broods over the reverently bowed heads of a group of students in the back of the chapel. Suddenly the monotonous prayer of the professor conducting morning services is drowned out by the brazen clatter of an alarm clock; it peals in static alarm, and all eyes are raised to where the instrument of the disturbance hangs chattering, high in the air, upon a nail driven into one of the beams that slash the chapel ceiling. How the enterprising wag ever managed to reach the nail is an unsolved problem. And there is the buggy which some boisterous group dismembered one night and reassembled, a pathetic spectacle, upon the chapel platform. These are among the myriad incidents connected with the Administration building.

The familiar "Ad" building is the first structure to catch the eye of the new arrival, and has been for the past 27 years. Far-sighted Mr. Newton Young gave part of the land, and included a "75-foot street" on plans that the projected Administration building would face his own home . . . as it does now, viewing the plaza which is 35 feet wider from curb to curb than the original gift. The old "street" may be traced, vaguely. The one-way street which runs along in front of Dr. Spencer's home inside and side, while the several cars some [illegible] of the [illegible] which [illegible] with that definite idea in mind may be recognized as the [illegible] most boundary of the avenue Mr. Young planned. The past 12 years have seen the one paved street which led directly from the highway to the Administration building replaced by the plaza and the two narrow roads on either side paved and outlined with trees.

The Administration building, built after the plans of C. C. Wilson, architect of Columbia, and set upon the land given by Mr. J. W. Copeland of this city, and Mr. Young, was erected with peculiar luck. In all of the operations only one man was hurt; a Negro scraped his foot while assisting in the placing of one of the massive Indiana limestone blocks which top the projections on either side of the front steps.

In March, 1907, the college family took possession. Dr. Spencer still holds classes in his original stronghold, next to the little room which then served as president's and business manager's office, for at that time he combined the latter responsibility with his professorial duties. Still later, not long before John Holland Hunter's day, the president transferred to what is now the registrar's office, and the "library and reading room" which had hitherto occupied the room was moved to where Dr. Dudley Jones now [illegible]. The president's [illegible] to [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Pig Philosophy

Off they go! The whole bunch chasing the pig with the ear of corn in his mouth. The crib is full of other ears, but it's an old piggish custom to follow the crowd. Pigs must conform! Are we humans different? Or do we exemplify the pig-pen instinct in flowing with the mob current?

We are bewitched by glamor in that we are prone to pursue gaudy nothings. We must be like so many machine-made, pattern picked, robots, else we fear rejection at the hands of our fellow man. We must be uniform in our shape and style, form and fashion, creed and code, ideas and beliefs — in fact, in all aspects of modern life. We must conform! Individualism has broken down to human welfare, and mob instinct now prevails.

The centripetal force of the mass, the gang, the bunch, tends to concentrate, accumulate, all the shallow-rooted would-be strongholds of character. The respectable, popular, deadly, sinister, desperate, destructive, uncondemned crowd sweeps on with an applaudation of a sort of super-poise. The currents of evil and degradation of the surge-driven masses seem to make easy prey of us. Vainly do we seem to believe, in our rush and riot of life, with a hazy expectation, that somewhere in the dim future we'll swim ashore out of the maelstrom to the solid rock of safety. What a pity our vision goes not beyond our nose!

Are we not like sheep—jumping over a fence; like ducks—flying with the flock; like pigs—chasing after grub? Can't we pull aside? Must we always stay with the group and sublimate into it our own individuality? Will we play the part in life of hog—or human?

Food For Thought

Is too much attention paid to athletics in the modern university? As a rule, the paler the brow, the softer the palms, the more near-sighted from eager study late at night, the firmer the conviction of the man of the fact that scholarship is being grossly neglected. It is to his interests to be. A good part of the argument rests upon utility: when the crack halfback and the honor man of the senior class venture out into a Missourian world, the smarter man will naturally end up on top. The question is: which is the smarter man? Which are most valuable: the traits of leadership developed under gruelling physical contest, or the trained and cultured intellect developed by association with the accumulated knowledge of the world. The one who was captain of the team in his last year, or the student who, exempt from senior examinations by his high average, contemptuously watches the athlete struggle through neglected studies with a bare C average—which will rise highest? Which is the most important: physical, social or intellectual leadership?

In an April Fool edition of a college paper appeared this facetious notice: "Football Men! The contracts have come from the printers. Same as last year." Is it so much of an exaggeration, when athletes are actually "bought on the hoof" by scholarships which are totally disproportionate to the value of services rendered outside of the gridiron, diamond or track. Much might be said on the subject. The bestowal of athletic-scholarships is a sore subject to non-athletes; again—it is only natural to see a question from your side of the fence. Which is the best said: "Poor but brawny boys, securing an education through the benevolent patronage of the athletic director" or "Scholarship prostituted to commercialized sport." Fanatics rave on either angle.

To what extent should a denominational institution carry its patronage of sport, when the same limited budget must suffice for the encouragement of both appears to the ministry, doctor's degrees, the little red school-house, and the scholar's study, and athletics carried on by splendidly physiqued, but alas, too often mentally mediocre men. One grows only at the expense of the other. There are happy instances in which a brilliant mind manifests itself in a powerful frame—"A sound mind in a sound body." A truly well-balanced brain can exist only in a healthy organism—and there you have the chief argument of the athletes. This is food for thought—for those with strong digestive systems.

Zip — The Student's Friend

In the last month The Blue Stocking staff has received numerous (literally, numerous) requests for editorial comment about the meals being served in the college dining hall. In order to live up to our policy of voicing the opinions of the students, we must make some mention of it. However, we do not at present wish to take any sides in the matter.

Then there came to us the other night the thought that there is one item in our mess hall that deserves special commendatory remarks. That item is Zip! Good ole Zip! Served in the morning with delicious toast, at dinner with an occasional roll, and at night with hot (usually) biscuits. What could be better?

Imagine coming to supper after a hard game of tennis, or a long swim, when you want something to fill up that hollow space; or before going to a big football game or track meet, when you need something to make you feel like cheering; or when the somewhat over-done meat doesn't appeal to your taste, and you don't care for spinach, though you must have something to increase your strength (oui, oui, ask Pop-Eye); it's times like these that make us appreciate that good ole Zip! Nothing can (or does) take the place of it.

Zip is in a class by itself. It is an appetiser, a fil ler, and a dessert. The more we eat, the more we want; and the more we want, the more we eat. If there is anyone who has not yet tried this delicious meal in itself, don't hesitate. Get a can at your nearest dealer—at the next meal, we meant to say. Then you will complain no more. Yes, to everyone we commend—Zip, the student's friend.

The College Christian Organization . . . Should We Have It?

Sometimes we are asked the question, "What is the use of having a Christian organization on the campus?" Of course such a question usually comes from a person who never attends such an organization. Nevertheless, it is a good cause for wonderment, especially the way those groups are carried on in many colleges. Dr. Maginnis, of the faculty of Winthrop, a short time ago made a statement something like this, "The value of a Christian organization on the college campus depends upon what it can do better than any other organization." This, we think, is very true. And now we ask, "Is there anything it can do better than any other group?" Our answer is yes. Just as we have ways of improving ourselves physically, and courses of study to make us more mentally fit, so we need that which will train those higher emotional forces within us which as yet only a type of religion has been able to do. This, we think, is a true justification of the college Christian organization.

Present-Day Science

Did you know that the average person radiates enough heat each hour to raise three pints of water from the normal room temperature to the boiling point? That's what recent measurements have shown. The human body is actually a living stove, and it would literally cook itself were it not for evaporation, radiation, and convection, processes which carry off the excess heat that we do not need.

Did you know that of all people tested, draftsmen, musicians, athletes, etc., riflemen are the steadiest? Not only of athletics, but of all forms of work and play, experimenters have found that it takes a steadier person to be a sharpshooter. And besides requiring steady shooters, rifle training produces steadiness. Coordination of hand and eye is included in the tests.

Did you know that the efficiency of an electric light bulb depends largely upon its dryness? The better the vacuum, the better the light. Just one little drop of water is enough to ruin sixty-eight thousand bulbs! As far as is possible every trace of moisture must be taken from the filaments, requiring the best of vacuum pumps. Referring to these pumps, one writer said, "Thanks to them there is a dry-ness within the glass bulb that makes Sahara seem dry in comparison."

Did you know that there teria that live to be thou years old? At least that of Dr. Lipman, who are comment when he said he got living bacteria in meteorite 600-year-old adobe bricks Arizona pueblos, from thous old pre-Aztec pyramids in M from pre-Inca pyramids in P are 1,400 years old, Dr. Li discovered bacteria still al a bit of investigation is bein on to very definitely to prov prove these discoveries.

Writing of eugenics, Dr. ing said, " . . . if I had the breed men and women as could, in about five centuries a race of men whose average of life would be two hundred years, and another race th die of senility . . . at the a teen." But in order to do that we must "disregard love, physical attractiveness" and "any smug and tacit prem marriage in the vast majori stances is entered into for else than to beget progeny."

R. O. T. C. NEWS

The juniors have begun to fire the 30-calibre rifles in preparation for the firing they will do this summer in camp. For the first few days they have fired on the outdoor range on the campus; but as soon as they have got the feel of the gun they will go to the range out of town. So far there have been no mishaps except one lacerated lip, and what's a lip in the course of a day's firing? Also the targets have come through in fair condition. Some of them may even be suitable for use the second time.

Freshmen have been firing the 22-calibre rifle the past week and will continue to fire this week until all men have fired all positions. Some have shown up very well so far, and it is hoped that material can be developed from these men to fill the vacancies in the rifle team. However, no men can be cited now; for, at this writing, only prone and sitting positions have been fired; and rifle team men can not be chosen on the showing on one position. The standing will show up the real shots; and it may even show up the bad ones. In anticipation of this bad showing which he might make, one freshman said he might punch one hole in his target and say all bullets went through the same hole. He figured he would be considered good then, whether the first shot was in the bull or not, for he would at least be consistent.

Following a new plan this year, there will be a parade on the college plaza during commencement in connection with the awarding of commissions to the seniors. The officer who will award the commissions this year will be Major John T. Rhett, the professor of military science and tactics at Davidson college. The parade will take place immediately after the awarding of the commissions on the afternoon of May 28. Incidentally, this means that any men who have planned to go home for that weke-end have another thought coming; for absences on those days will incur double demerits if Captain Wysor sees fit to give them. Now, possibly it wouldn't be a bad idea to invite the folks over to see you that week-end. That is, if you haven't painted too militaristic a picture of yourself during the past year or so.

When Captain told Buck Marks to place his buttons on the arm of the guide during the parade last week, Buck was about to pull the buttons from his sleeve before he understood.

At the contest for the best drilled freshman in the battalion, Cadet E. E. Stanton was judged first; Cadet Dill Ellis second, and Cadet Ernest Evans third. For this distinction these men were awarded money prizes; and now they are pestered by the host of friends who continually say to them, "There's a mighty good show on today."

In the contest for the best drilled squad of sophomores, the bunch from B company was chosen to be "most impressive" and received for this showing an excuse from drill the remainder of the year. But almost every morning since, some one of these men has come back to drill with the others, until it looks that all of them will be back before the end. We guess this means that army life is so enticing that a man once in it can't be satisfied anywhere except under a rifle. If this explanation is not satisfactory, just ask Captain for his version of the matter. But take notice now, he thinks differently.

Officers of the day and their orderlies for the week are:

Monday, May 14—Band Dir. K. F. Mills, with Cpl. Hudson, C. M.

Tuesday, May 15—Sgt. H. S. Odom, with Cpl. Gregg, F. M.

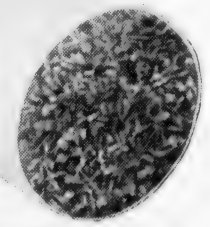
Here's why-Luckies do not dry out

why-Luckies are All-Ways kind to your throat



The difference between cigarettes is the difference between what goes into them and how they are put together.

Luckies use only the clean, center leaves, for these are the mildest leaves—they taste better. That's why farmers are paid higher prices for them. And Luckies get the benefit of the famous process—"It's toasted"—for your throat protection.

And every Lucky is round, firm and fully packed. That's why Luckies "keep in condition"—that's why you'll find that Luckies do not dry out—an important point to every smoker.

Yes, Luckies are always in all-ways kind to your throat.

MOVIES

Monday and Tuesday — "Only Yesterday,"A real star blazes forth in the cinema heavens this time, and no mistake! After seeing this simple, but intensely moving play, you'll always have a place on your movie-going program whenever Margaret Sullavan is billed! It's the simple story of how Margaret loves John Boles, not wisely, but too well, with the consequences to be expected when he goes to war without knowing what has happened. She won't tell—not even years later when their love is rekindled, in spite of his marriage—until she is dying. Then a letter reveals it, in time to give him new incentive for living after the stock market crash. That's the story, but the exquisite work turned in by Margaret Sullavan, the superb feeling of John Stahl's direction, give it utter, compelling charm.

Wednesday — "Bombay Mail." A baffling murder mystery aboard the Bombay mail train, with Shirley Grey, Onslow Stevens, Ralph Forbes, Hedda Hopper and others under suspicion. Inspector Dyke (Edmund Lowe) outsmarts the culprit and, after many puzzling experiences, gets his man. A strong cast, including John Davidson, Tom Moore, Ferdinand Gottschalk and John Wray. If you like mysteries, here's your meat.

Thursday—"Myrt and Marge." If you have followed the experiences of Myrt and Marge over the radio, you will want to see them on the screen. Myrt is trying to run a musical show that seems perpetually about to fold up. Eddie Foy, Jr., is the very funny comic; Ted Healy is Ted Healy and there wasn't enough of him. Myrt and Marge have good picture personalities. Amusing little musical with the following cast: Thomas Jackson, Ray Hedge, Grace Hayes, Trixie Friganza, J. Farrell MacDonald and The Colinette Ballet.

Friday: "Ever Since Eve." A lively little story with laughs galore. Wealthy mine owners, George O'Brien and Herbert Mundin, go to New York, George falls in love with Mary Brian, a gold-digger, takes her back home and all sorts of misunderstandings and comical situations arise. Betty Blythe, Roger Imhof, Russel Simpson. Different for its lack of sophistication.

Saturday — "The Invisible Man." Now you see him, now you don't—which is good for some shivers in this pseudo-scientific H. G. Wells tale, hardly as effective on the screen as in print. Claude Rains (a screen newcomer) makes himself invisible, but in the process loses his reason. Imagine what an invisible maniac could do and then multiply by ten. Result — some strong horror. But not up to "Frankenstein." The cast includes: Gloria Stuart, William Harrigan, Henry Travers, Una O'Connor, Forrester Harvey, Holmes Herbert, E. E. Clive, Dudley Digges, Harry Stubbs and Donald Stuart.

According to their annual custom, Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity at Presbyterian college presented a program in the charter rooms Sunday afternoon to commemorate Mother's day.

Talks on the program, which was in charge of H. E. Bolick, president of the fraternity, were made by L. A. McCall and Cliff Johnson, A poem, "Mother Mine," was read by Alan Levi.

Refreshments were served to the assembled guests, including: Capt. and Mrs. R. E. Wysor, Mrs. L. B. Dillard, Mrs. John McSween, Mrs. L. R. Lynn and her guest, Mrs. McClister of Brighton, Tenn, Mrs. D. J. Brimm, Mrs. H. E. Bolick, and Mrs. A. C. Daniel of Irmo.

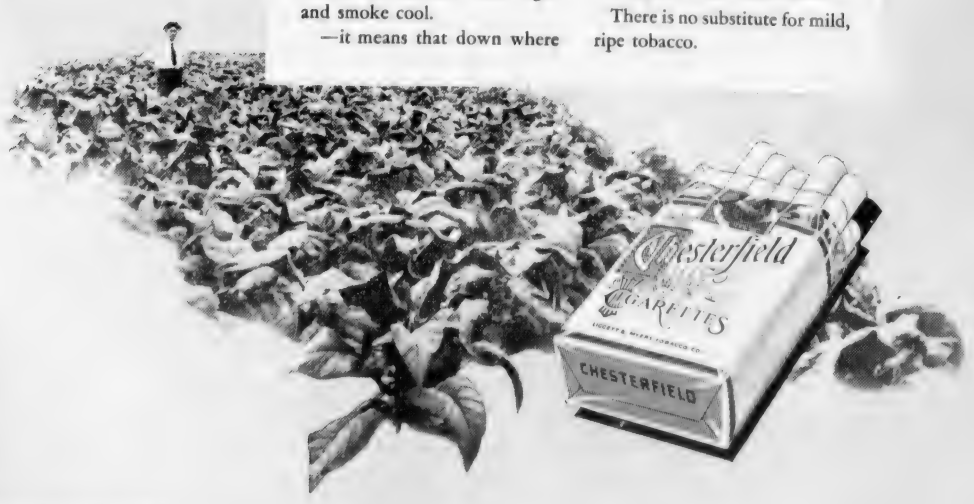
Down where they grow tobacco.. in most places Chesterfield is the largest-selling cigarette

—what does that mean?

—it takes good things to make good things.



—the mild ripe tobaccos we buy for Chesterfield mean milder better taste.

—the way they are made means Chesterfields burn right and smoke cool.

—it means that down where they grow tobacco folks know that mild ripe tobaccos are bought for Chesterfields.

And because Chesterfields are made of the right kinds of tobacco, it is a milder cigarette, a cigarette that tastes better.

There is no substitute for mild, ripe tobacco.

Students and Faculty Make Regulations

Students Alter "Magna Carta"

Group Favors Change of Policy As To Cheating Rules; Disfavors False Statement, Off-Campus Regulations, and Other Amendments.

The student council has suggested during the past year, four changes in or additions to, the student constitution. Last Friday, these were presented to the student body for their approval. After some discussion, two were passed and two were rejected. The issues involved were false official statements, cheating, monetary measures, and conduct of students off the campus, of which the second and third were accepted.

The action on the last question also expressed the student body's dislike for the faculty ruling on the subject. The faculty and the students are diametrically opposed over the issue.

The new rules were read in chapel by the president of the council are as follows (quoted from the secretary's record):

Article I, Section VI. "Any student found guilty of making a false official statement such as answering for an absentee in classes, or misquoting purposely the administration or Student Body, shall be considered as violating the honor system and dealt with accordingly." (Rejected)

Article IX, Section I. "Penalty for cheating: First offense, expulsion for student who has been in attendance more than one semester. First offense two weeks suspension, indefinite, or expulsion, as the case demands, during his first semester in school. Second offense expulsion shall be a mandatory penalty." (Passed)

Article XVI, Section II. "Any motion involving a change of policy or monetary expenditure shall lie on the table for a period of two days before a vote is taken." (Passed)

Article XVII, Section II. "Any student in attendance at an athletic contest in which P. C. is a contestant shall be considered as representing the college." (Rejected)

The first of these was rejected on the ground that the meaning was vague and arbitrary. There would be difficulty in determining exactly whether or not a statement was "misquoted," and "purposely." Nor is there a definite penalty included.

Rule number two was passed without opposition. It is really only a tightening up of the former regulation, making expulsion mandatory for those found guilty who have attended Presbyterian College longer than one semester.

The third rule is the most sensible of all, and was almost unanimously approved. Measures have been brought up in the past which seemed "pushed over" the student body. It is an atempt to prevent this in the future, by giving the students time to think over the question, that the regulation was effected.

It is the fourth and last "addition" that brings forth comment. Some

Wingate Awarded Commander's Sabre

During the ceremony this afternoon Cadet Captain T. H. Wingate was awarded the saber which is given each year to the senior of the corps who is regarded by the professor of military science and tactics as the one who, during his military career at Presbyterian college, has rendered the most outstanding service to the corps.

Wingate is from Charlotte, N. C., was captain of the 1934 rifle team as well as captain of a company for the last part of his senior year. In addition to his military attainments, Wingate was editor of The Blue Stocking, college weekly paper, for the past year, was manager of the baseball team, a member of Blue Key, Gamma Sigma, and the Y. M. C. A. cabinet, a senior class officer and a member of the PaC-SaC staff. He was voted the "wittiest" man in school, and is popular on the campus, being a member of Pi Kappa Phi social fraternity.

Oglesby Delivers Sermon To Seniors

Atlanta Pastor Tells Graduating Class What They Face In Life. Gives Remedy For Future.

The graduating class of 1934 heard the baccalaureate sermon Sunday morning at the First Presbyterian church. Dr. Stuart R. Oglesby, pastor of the Central Presbyterian church, Atlanta, Ga., delivered the message to the seniors.

The service started when the class and the faculty marched down the aisles as the choir sang an anthem as a processional. The choir's next number was "Praise Ye the Name of the Lord." The offertory sevrice consisted of a solo, "Vesper Bells," rendered by Abbott Lake. After the sermon the choir sang a recessional, "God Of Our Fathers."

Dr. Oglesby began his sermon by telling of the sense of discouragement that characterized the world of today. This doctrine of futility is the result of sin, he said. Men, in the search for material things, have lost that happiness which they sought to gain by the acquisition of the so-called good things of life. Everywhere men are trying to gain contentment by obtaining their share of the world's goods and succeed only in being more unhappy and dissatisfied.

This philosophy is entirely wrong, the speaker said. To get rid of futilitarianism we must get at the source and remove the cause—sin. Only in serving God can a person completely avoid the sense of futility which attacks and fells so many young people when they first go out into the world.

Dr. Oglesby urged the graduates, therefore, to avoid the disheartening influences of the world of today and to shield themselves from them with the gospel of Jesus Christ.

Sophomores Best Juniors In Exams

Second Year Class Scores Higher In Comprehensive Tests. Highest Marks Announced.

In the comprehensive examinations given recently to the sophomore and junior classes, the sophomores soared far above their brother class with an average score of 517.1 to 494.5. The high score man of both classes was C. M. Hudson, who mounted away above his comrades to a mark of 1440.

The scores of the five highest men in the sophomore class all rose above the 1000 mark. They are as follows:

C. M. Hudson, 1440; E. R. Andrews, 1133; W. I. Nexsen, 1080; C. H. Holman, 1064; J. P. Charles, 1021.

A. V. Martin, Jr., whose score is the highest in the junior class, ranks second of all the students who stood the examinations. Following are the five highest junior class scores:

A. V. Martin, Jr., 1212; W. F. Guess, 987; Virginia Spratt, 865; H. S. Odom, 726; R. F. Fleming, 710.

The highest three men in each of the seven individual tests are as follows:

General culture: Hudson, 451; Nexsen, 384; Martin, 379.

English Usage: Martin, 219; Johnson, C., 216; Spratt, 212.

Awards Given Campus Leaders

Recognition Made For Ability And Worthy Service In Non-Athletic Activities.

Presentation of four gold "P"s for watch charms will be made to four seniors who have, throughout their college careers, rendered outstanding service by their ability in non-athletic student activities. It is significant to note that while these awards were made without regard to athletic ability, three of the four are letter men with an average of two sports each.

Bob Sims wins one of the gold charms for his leadership of the student body as chief of the student council. Ever since his freshman year he has been a fair and impartial member on the student court, and both popular and capable in student affairs. Besides one of the most outstanding athletic records at P. C., he has a record of active participation in Y. M. C. A. and I. R. C. circles, and in Blue Key. A member of Kappa Alpha fraternity, he has risen to the rank of major in the cadet corps.

Bob Lynn receives one of the emblems for his work in guiding the Y. M. C. A. throughout the past year. A brilliant student, he has been assistant in English, and has held membership in two honorary fraternities as well a as being president of Blue Key Socially he is a Pi Kappa Alpha. He has ranged as the highest in the military corps, being cadet lieutenant-colonel of the battalion. And, as if these things were not enough, over and above senior classes, Lynn has coached a successful Thornwell football team in spare moments and has captained the 1934 basketball squad. With all these duties, he has still led the "Y" and well earned the award.

A. M. Tommins, of Savannah, Ga., is cited for the unselfish and skilled way in which he devoted his musical talent to the college units. Probably the most versatile musician on the campus, he has made music on trumpet, violin, or bass vocal chords, according to the need in the P. C. bands, orchestras, and glee clubs. When lines of music had to be improvised or changed in key, de did the job. When the R. O. T. C. band needed his services he gave them, even though he was not in the military organization.

B. B. Redmond, the fourth recipient, is having his work seen far and near in the 1934 edition of the PaC-SaC, which he distributed only a few days ago. For four years he has worked faithfully and ably in publishing the yearbooks of the college, rising straight to his post as editor this year. Even though the depression made very heavy cuts in the amount he was able to secure for the PaC-SaC, the "best business man" in the upper classes was able to edit an issue almost as large and fine as those of the past. Under the circumstances, his work has been very creditable, and for it he gains this high distinction.

McCALL LEADS G. S.

Officers for Gamma Sigma, local journalistic fraternity, were also chosen this week. The new leaders are: President, L. A. McCall; vice-president, Hart Odom; secretary, Tom Plaxico; treasurer, Cliff Johnson.

Maj. Rhett Awards Senior Commissions

Fourth-Year Class Completes Military Course. Rifle Team Awards Presented.

In a ceremony focused about the address of Major John T. Rhett, P. M. S. and T. of Davidson College and the awarding of commissions as 2nd Lts. in the Reserved Corps to sixteen seniors, the R. O. T. C. unit of Presbyterian College officially closed its work for the year with a parade on the college plaza before the assembled body of students, parents and townsfolk who had gathered to witness the ceremony this afternoon.

The seniors in R. O. T. C. assembled at the Science Hall at four o'clock this afternoon; and preceded by the colors, marched to their seats before the speaking stand. The rest of the corps formed at the gymnasium, marched to the plaza, stacked arms and took their places at the speaking stand. Then Captain Wysor introduced Major John T. Rhett, professor of military science and tactics at Davidson college, who delivered a most appropriate and inspiring address to the seniors and to the ones in the audience as well.

Immediately after the address, Captain Wysor awarded the commissions to sixteen members of the senior class who were deemed worthy of this distinction. Captain Blanton administered the proper oath of allegiance to the United States Government to those granted the commissions.

The ceremony was varied by appropriate selections by the college band such as "Auld Lang Syne," and "You're In The Army Now." Following the playing of "The Star Spangled Banner," the corps reformed about the stacks, took arms and put on an alternate ceremony parade, which showed plainly the exceptional work which the corps has done during the past year.

After this parade, medals were

Classes Elect Rising Officers

Coming Senior and Other Groups Elect Leaders. Many Runovers Necessary In Balloting.

Election of class officers for the coming year was completed this week. In all save the election of rising senior class officers the results were very close, and in many cases necessitated run-offs. The complete results are given below.

The rising seniors elected the following officers: President, Bob Perrin; vice-president, Paul Yearout; secretary-treasurer, George Oliver; class poet, Frank Guess; historian, Billy Nexsen.

All of the officers except the vice-president were elected without opposition, they being the sole nominees. Yearout was opposed in his race by Frank Waldrep.

Perrin, the new president, is from Union. He is a member of Pi Kappa Phi and Blue Key, and is a member of the track team. Perrin is also alternate captain of the 1934 football team.

Faculty Extends Field Of Rules

Gives New Interpretation To Hazing and Prohibits It; Applies Rules To Students When Away From Campus.

Much confusion and agitation among the student body has resulted from the new faculty decision that there shall be no paddling of freshmen next year. Hazing has been prohibited, but beating (provided the freshman does not object) has not been regarded as hazing. The new rule is equivalent to changing the hazing regulation in such a way that all beating is a form of hazing, and its violation will incur the penalty of expulsion.

The matter of a new "freshman code" was brought up in the first year class. The "yearlings" did not favor the code, but as the administration seemed to have them in a one-way alley from which there was no escape, there was a majority vote for it. The following morning, Tuesday, the administration brought the question before the upper classmen, who, after brief discussion, voted their disapproval. Whereupon the freshman class re-met later in the day to reconsider their previous vote. However, after the administration delivered the ultimatum that regardless of the students' decision there would be no beating of freshmen next year, the whole matter was dropped as a useless cause. As to why the matter was put before the students at all, has not yet been accurately determined.

There follows a list of the changes the faculty has made in its regulations during the present year.

Article IV, Section 4 (a), which concerns senior exemption from examinations, has been revoked. This means that all seniors will stand all examinations.

Article VII, Section 5 (b), now reads, "No student may occupy an elective position in the student body unless the ratio of honor points to semester hours for which he has registered (through the preceding semester and in the peceding semester) is at least one."

Article X, Section 4. To this rule "Hazing is prohibited", there has been added on interpretation of hazing "to mean beating, or paddling, with any kind of instrument, either in public or in private. Expulsion will be penalty for hazing as defined above."

Article X, Section 8, reads now, "Any student who marries while on the roll of Presbyterian College shall be dropped."

Besides these changes, two additional rules have been adopted.

Article X, Section 10. "A decision of the student council can be reversed only by a three-fourths majority of the faculty."

Article X, Section 11. "It shall be the policy of the faculty that when it sustains a finding of guilty in the case of a student convicted by the student council of any offense involving moral turpitude, it will impose the sentence of expulsion."

In commenting upon these changes, Dr. McSween said, "We have very few rules, but what we have are

Summer School Begins June 11

Summer school, conducted by Dr. R. L. Coe, professor of education at Presbyterian College, will begin on June 11, and continue through July 20. These dates include the Conference which is held at the college each year, both groups being in session at the same time.

All courses which have as many as six applicants will be offered. Besides the regular subjects given during the winter session, a special course in social work is contemplated. According to Dr. Coe, the prospects for a larger school are better this year than heretofore.

All who are interested in this summer work should communicate with Dr. Coe as early as possible.

We've Finished the Year — So What?

When the embryonic college student meets his first composition class, he is invariably told to write a theme entitled, "Why I Came To College." And laboriously from mental anguish comes his stereotyped answer, usually an enumeration of several stock reasons likely dictated by an upperclassman who took time to remember his first turbulent days. But no matter how he gets it written or how many of the old set reasons he will give there is the probability that he thinks, if only for a moment, on why he came to college. After that it's generally a closed matter with him. He may be ever so diligent in his work, and in rare cases turn into a thinker, but it doesn't occur to him to question "Why?" or "What for?"

With the close of the school year all of us should have a sort of accounting with ourselves. We should stop long enough to review thoughtfully and candidly our college years. Don't rationalize. Bring the real reasons out and find out whether they are sufficient reasons to be here or to stay here. Have you gotten anything of value from college, or are you floundering pleasantly but hopelessly?

A Farewell To Copeland Hall

Launching out again into the realms of dancing, we feel somewhat like we are recalling a ghost of the long-dead past. Once upon a time the matter of dancing on the campus was a vigorous issue, fought and bled for, but stifled to a premature death by even more vigorous authorities. Many times since, the ghost has been lifted from its resting place. But all efforts to revive it and give it life have been futile. Once more, then, we bring it out of oblivion. We feel forced in bidding a fond farewell to Copeland Hall, which will do duty as an office building hereafter, to make a stand for what we feel are our rights. Copeland Hall has swayed and kept time to the music long enough, and maybe it is fortunate that we must say "Au revoir!"

We students feel that it is well within our rights when we ask that we be allowed to hold our dances in the gymnasium. Dancing has for many, many years been an accepted form of social activity. Even the shocked elders who branded post-war dancing as a "syncopated embrace" have about ceased their din. On the majority of college campuses dances are sanctioned and superintended by authorities. They realize quite well that students must have social life, and that the present generation finds its social outlet in dancing, since "progressive conversation" is far beyond their stage of sophistication. In most colleges authorities long ago realized that to forbid dancing on the campus would only make students hold their dances elsewhere. They were not hypocritical enough to close their eyes to what they know would be inevitable.

We have often wondered whether those who are responsible for the ban at P. C. have ever stopped to consider that dancing is the normal activity of practically every student here. We wonder, too, if they have ever consideerd that the majority of the students come from normal Presbyterian homes where dancing is permitted and where dances are frequently held. If Presbyterian College, then, is for the purpose of developing its students in normal ways, why can it not sponsor dancing as a normal form of social activity?

For a long time we students have held our own dances and, except for a few times, have tried to maintain respect towards those eyes, closed in disapproval. But in losing the only place that we had to hold our dances, we must do something. We are asking earnestly that those closed eyes be opened, that responsible authorities will discard a misplaced prejudice.

We have danced our farewell at Copeland Hall. Where shall we go next?

Student Government—A Living Corpse?

"The back-woodsmen have won again," Dean Brown is said to have lamented Tuesday morning, after the three upper classes voted down the administration's proposal on the question of hazing. We are not taking offense at this remark; however, we think the Dean would like to see our slogan, "Where Men Are Made," changed to "Where Men Are Maid(s)."

The amount of hazing that has been done this year does not warrant the outbreak of opposition from the administration. In fact, hazing, as defined in the student constitution, "physical violence . . . against their will," has not been practiced at all, since those freshmen who objected have not been paddled, paying as a forfeit the loss of their sophomore privileges next year. Beating of freshmen is not compulsory; the hazing regulation of the constitution has not been violated.

The administration says it has made very few rules, but those few rules seem to cover practically every form of conduct and action, even to the students' behavior away from school during the Christmas and summer vacation periods. Also they contain such abstract and arbitrary phrases as "moral turpitude." Truly the student government is dead; it is wearing a wreath. But the wreath has not been placed there by the students.

The Blue Stocking does not wish to oppose any action of the administration, or of the faculty, but it desires to cooperate in every way possible. However, it emphatically supports the freedom and integrity of the students, and upholds the regulative power of the student council as it has been permitted to exercise it in the past.

We believe that the trustees, faculty, and administration have the privilege of running the school in any way they see fit, but we also believe that if they allow an honor system and student government, they should respect the wishes of the student body. This has not been done. Student government exists in name, but that is all. It is merely a farce; a fake, and a bluff. It is a soap-bubble whose life depends upon the temperament of a blower.

To those who are not perfectly satisfied with existing conditions the invitation to leave has been issued. But that is a cowardly action. If those who comprise the Roosevelt administration had left this country because they thought better plans could be devised, where would our government be now?

We are not antagonistic to the administration. But in the name of the student body we are making an appeal to the alumni, the faculty, the trustees, and to all who may be interested: help us to do away with student government entirely, or help us have a government in which "student" is not a hypocritical bluff, but a true descriptive nomen.

JOHN LAW TAKES A HAND

PRO

Editor, The Blue Stocking:

As there has been a great deal of comment on the campus recently in regard to hazing, I am taking this opportunity of expressing my views on the matter.

In the first place, let me say that I am heartily in favor of hazing in all forms, physical and otherwise. And when a freshman comes to college with that "I was a senior in high school last year, carried off all athletic honors, and had all the girls on a string" look in his face, it makes me want to grab a paddle four inches thick, and make him wish that he had a meek and humble look on his face instead of that cocky "I know it all" expression.

Those who take the opposite of this argument will probably accuse me of belonging to a wild and savage tribe, but I'd like to say right here that I am as cultured as any of my opponents and I defy them to prove me otherwise. Leaving personal feelings out of the question, I will attempt to put the whole thing in a nutshell. Physical hazing, in my estimation, is the one and only way to make a freshman realize that he doesn't own the place and also that he has three more years to go before he can get his diploma. On the other hand, if a freshman cries and whines, and writes letters home to his mother because he isn't man enough to take it with a smile, then I suggest that he be sent back to his mother where he can hang on to her apron-strings without any fear of being molested by some "big, bad sophomore." Here, however, it looks as if in the future the "big, bad sophomore" will be sent home because he made the "ootsy tootsy" freshman sleep on his stomach for a few nights.

Someone made the remark a few days ago that there were very few institutions today which permitted hazing. I'd like for that person to prove his statement in public before the student body. And then, too, if hazing is such a barbarous practice, why do the majority of students here and elsewhere persist in it? I believe that if a poll was taken of all men who have had a college education on the question, "If I had my college days to live over would I be in favor of hazing?" that only a small percentage would not be in favor of it.

Now, as to the moral side of the question: the majority of students who participate in hazing are, in my opinion, just as gentlemanly in their actions as those who do not. Also, the respect of their fellow students is not altered in the least because they put the freshman in his place instead of raising him up on a pedestal.

Another aspect of this problem is that a freshman, in my opinion, will not obey the rules set out for him if there is no physical way of making him obey them. The rule made by the faculty says that if a freshman persists in disobeying rules he will be turned over to the student council, who will either campus or suspend him as the occasion demands. If that is to be the case, then there will certainly be more complaints from parents objecting to such a foolish rule than there would be if hazing was permitted. There is no other way out of this matter, as I see it, because there are bound to be a great many freshmen who will get so cocky as the year progresses that the silly rule of making them carry rocks will be tossed aside with a haughty look of contempt on his face. By that time, he will have come to the place where no organized authority will be able to stop him.

—A PADDLER.

CON

Editor, The Blue Stocking:

Presbyterian College is a school for, and by Christian gentlemen, supposedly. Omitting for a moment the term "Christian," let us consider the conduct of P. C.'s supposed gentlemen. Gentlemen exercise authority over their inferiors by the use of dignity—a very formidable weapon when properly applied. P. C.'s gentlemen are prone to overlook this fact; however, when they assert their superiority with material weapons, namely, paddles, bats, books, and hangers. The recipients of this show of superiority happen to be freshmen. Our New England forefathers and our Cavalier ancestors used to wear a fellow's pants threaded with sundry bridles and whips, or have the pants and wear down with the hidden beneath because this happened to be a year young men wanted an education. But these young men and the backwoodsmen did. The latter rascals didn't mind serving punishment where punishment was due, and P. C. 's gentlemen have followed in the footsteps of their predecessors. They have enlarged on the footsteps and discovered new ones of their own, and have informed the world of the quality that they prefer to walk in—the murky past.

Returning to the term "Christian," it is at once evident that a Presbyterian should act kindly and respectfully toward all of his fellow classmates regardless of their class, age, or individualities. Hazing a man, to him, embarrassing and degrading him—these deeds are neither kind nor respectful. They are as far from the spirit of Christlike as is the sun from the moon. Hazing is cowardly. It is the unfair advantage of a man who is backed from the very start, and who regards certainly should have no place in a Christian school for gentlemen. The Presbyterian College catalogue is supposed to be pervaded by an atmosphere of refined culture, of gentlemanliness. Any one who uses "rat run" or the distribution of "Christmas presents" would inject the supposition into its grave. For pleasure are not to be set as a reason at all, but when it degenerates into barbarism it should be abandoned willingly. P. C. is an institution "Where Men Are Made." But why make men here with "take it" and "dish it out" with a sharp axe and a good pine log? Is a much better job?

Then the freshman must be considered. Why should he be the victim of impractical jokes and physical punishments; why should any one? A freshman is human—possibly more than many upperclassmen. Certainly the first-year man is a far more miserable being after he has completed a year of hazing.

A freshman goes to college for education. If he encounters on the campus men who were Christian gentlemen, men who were not overbearing, but were jovially serious, the freshman would be made welcome and feel his place in college. He would adapt himself to that place once. As it is, the freshman is ridiculed and dared to be "horsey." "The survival of the better" may be termed a motto for the hazer, for hazers think that it is possible that they are building up and whip a man if he is "horsey." But the juniors do not bounce contentedly off the sophomores who wag their tongues as the freshmen.

Hazing is an immoral, cowardly, degrading custom, and should be denounced as vigorously as cheating or stealing.

Presbyterian Closes Successful Year

The Sports Review

One of the professors on this campus has remarked that we students are interested only in sports and Mae West. If this is true—and who am I to doubt a professor's word—only "She Done Him Wrong" could be more interesting than this column, for this, little children, is supposed to be a resume of the Blue Hose sports year.

Our football team had a year which, viewed in any light that you care to take it, was outstanding. The pigskin-toters opened the season by giving a highly praised Clemson team a very distinct and actual fear to the tune of six and six. (This would-be columnist was offered odds of thirteen points before the game). After this fine start the Blue Hose pushed on to more and more impressive victories, until they met the strong Howard eleven before whom they went down by the score of thirteen to nothing. They seemed headed for an undefeated state schedule when they met the heads-up and hard-fighting Newberry team. Here they had an off-day after several weeks of strenuous playing. Newberry's Beck and Lambeth won the game, 16-7. Charlie Moran's Catawba aggregation fell before the Calvinists, and the '33 season was history—and glorious history at that.

SIMS

LYNN

The truth of the old maxim that "it's not whether you win or lose, but how you play the game," was proven by this year's Presbyterian college basketball team, for they had a fine season despite the results entered in the scorebooks. It was a small team and practically a sophomore one and they played gamely against opponents that were bigger, taller and more experienced than they. The season began rather slackly, but soon the boys found the basket and began "laying 'em in." They were decidedly not pushovers for anybody's five and they spent the season convincing other teams of this fact to the tune of extra periods and games lost by margins narrow enough to be painful. The best attack they had was turned loose against Newberry and the College of Charleston and here the boys brought home the bacon. The scorebooks say two victories in the season—the spirit displayed throughout the season says "What a team!"

BOLICK

The boxing team had a season that ,everything considered, was good. Not all matches were won; they lost to Carolina and Clemson, tied Citadel and the first University of Georgia match, and won the return bouts with Georgia. But many of the boys were new to the ring—Gillis, McClary, Holliday, and Mills were fighting their first varsity fights—and well they fought them! The old stand-bys, Sims, Bolick, Clark, and Seagle were there with a vengeance. Bolick lost but one fight in the season and that was to his old rival, Willard of Carolina. Sims had only a draw at Citadel marked against him. Yes, sir-ree, the boys brought honor to the school and we're justly proud of them.

WOOD

The 34 baseball team reminds me of a rather profane verse that I once read:

"Never say die, say damn;
It may not be classic,
It's probably profane,
But we mortals have need of it time and again.
So—NEVER say die, say damn!"

FREEMAN

For that is just the spirit our boys displayed. Playing against more experienced teams, playing under disagreeable circumstances, playing when victory seemed hopeless, they kept up that "never say die" spirit. Our pitchers were hit, but they never quit. Our batters struck out only to come back trying harder. They only won two games, but they won something far more important—respect!

I'll lay you ten to one that there wasn't an upperclassman in Presbyterian college this year who didn't say at least once, "I wish Turk Osman was back this year." But this is no slam at the '34 team. It was merely an expression of admiration for the man who is rapidly becoming a legend on our campus. He was not here, neither was that splendid miler, George Oliver, able to run, but their spirit ran with the Blue Hose and helped them live up to their track reputation—and few people in South Carolina need to be told what that is. They lost but one dual meet in the state and that was to the Clemson Tigers. Again the middle distances were Calvinistic to the core, and the diminutive Hudson convinced every two-miler in the state that we develop stamina as well as speed at Clinton. Powell Freeman tossed the javelin like a Greek god to go along with them in undefeated glory.

When the state meet came and it was time to break a few records, our boys did the expected—they set three new ones. Clarked pulled the 440 time down to 50.4. Freeman tossed the javelin over 184 feet. And the relay team, to redeem itself for its loss to Clemson, set the third P. C. record of the day.

To the wearers of the Block "P" I say, "We're proud of you, and we're proud of '33-'34!" Good luck to '35!

Freshman Efforts Well Rewarded

Records of First-Year Men In All Branches of Sport Are Impressive and Augur Well For Next Year's Varsity Teams.

Presbyterian freshmen engaged in 27 athletic contests during the past school year. Of this number 14 resulted in victories and 13 in losses. The five intercollegiate activities were: football, track, basketball, swimming and tennis.

The rat football team had one of the most successful seasons of the five. The Blue Sox won 3 of 5 games and amassed a total of 103 points to 19 for their opponents. They won from Citadel, Wofford, and Newberry; and bowed to Carolina by one point and to Clemson by 6.

The track team was almost as successful. Three of the five dual meets were won and a total of 319 1-2 points were made to 260 1-3 for opposing teams. In addition, the frosh cinder men placed third in the state meet.

The first meet of the season, with the Carolina frosh, was won by the score of 78 to 40. The Sox showed a brief flash of mid-season form to easily defeat the visiting Biddies. The next meet was not quite so encouraging from the standpoint of P. C. Clemson annexed 58 points to 40 for Presbyterian. The third was lost by an even closer score to Furman at Greenville. Then in the next two meets the Blue Sox got down to business and walloped Wofford on Wednesday and Davidson on Saturday of the same week.

To climax a full season, the state meet was held a week later. Clemson amassed 48 points, winning the meet and leading P. C. by 7 2-3 points. But even such a narrow margin was not enough to capture second place, for Furman came up out of obscurity to win the mile relay and place for second honors. Had the relay team been a little more successful and won from the Furman quartet, the Sox would have moved from third to second.

On the whole, the season was an excellent one. Every meet that was lost was lost by a small number of points; one was lost by 18 points, another by 9, and the state meet by 7 2-3. There were several individual stars and many of slightly less importance who will make valuable additions to next year's varsity.

The freshman basketball team finished a more or less unsuccessful season this year with 6 victories to their credit out of 13 games played. The rats played 7 intercollegiate games and lost 5, but the general percentage raised by the large number of high of the games won was considerably school games that were won.

The majority of the games lost were lost by narrow margins, the score being so close that several points often decided the difference. On the other hand, although fewer games were won, most of these were won by a large number of points.

The games played with Newberry are a typical example of this. First the Sox swamped the Papooses here to the tune of a 59 to 18 score. Then, when they went to Newberry for a return game, they allowed Newberry to win by one point, 22 to 21.

Of the eight men who earned their numerals, it is impossible to pick any man or group of men who were particularly outstanding. There were two or three, however, who played stellar ball throughout the entire season. Practically all of the others, while not playing as consistently, showed brief spurts of skill.

Duplicating the feat of last year's team, the rat tank men came through in fine style this season to win the state championship.

Due to the fact that only one dual meet was held, the freshmen went into the state meet at Greenville with almost no intercollegiate experience. In the first and only dual mix-up, they trounced the Clemson frosh by an 8 point margin. This meet was notable in that it brought to the surface the talents of several men who will be a large part of next year's varsity. W. R. Wallace, Alexander, Legare, Propst, F. T. Wallace, Langston, Kendall and others will make excellent varsity material.

In the state meet the rats barely nosed out Clemson to win by a single point. Furman trailed in third place. W. R. Wallace proved himself to be one of the foremost men on the squad by breaking two state records. He lowered the time in the back stroke and in the 100 yard free style. Alexander also smashed the state record. He set a freshman breast stroke record that is lower than the present varsity record.

The freshman net team was organized rather late in the year to obtain matches. Three, however, were played. Of these, 2 were lost and 1 won. In these three games the rats won 8 singles and doubles matches and lost 12.

The frosh sport season on the whole may be considered as a success. Three of the teams, football, track, and swimming, won more of their games or meets than they lost. All of the teams showed that next year's varsity squads will not be lacking in material from which winning teams can be moulded.

Seagle President Block "P" Club

P. C. Athletes Gather At Banquet To Receive Letters and Elect Wyman's Successor.

Letter men in all eight branches of P. C.'s intercollegiate sports were present with the coaches at the yearly banquet last Friday night, when certificates were awarded for their letters.

H. Wyman, president of the Block Letter club, spoke and had Dr. Mc-

Jimmy Seagle

Sween say a few words to the sizeable group of those who had succeeded in athletic for P. C. After that Coach Johnson presented certificates.

After the coaches had left, the club elected Jimmy Seagle, bantamweight boxer, to the presidency, and T. F. Carothers and F. B. Waldrep as vice-president and secretary respectively.

Certificates were not given to the boxing team at the banquet, much to their regret, but only because of a shortage of the blue bordered certificates. Theirs will be given later.

Several names were inadvertantly omitted from the lists published in the last issue. Freshmen Alexander, Propst, and Langston had won swimming numerals and Bullwinkle had been awarded one in basketball, but their names were somehow left off the previous announcement.

Tennis Occupies Important Place

Review of Season Recently Completed By Netmen. Five Men Make Up Team That Represented P. C. On Court.

When the annual tennis tournament was completed, Gregg, McCutchen, Levi, Copeland, and Norment composed the team. These men were ranked in the order named above, but changes occurred in some matches. The season opened on April 4 by meeting Furman on the local courts. Being handicapped by bad weather, the Hosemen showed a lack of practice. Furman won by the score of 4-3. Gregg and Copeland won their singles matches, and McCutchen and Levi played excellently to defeat Clinkscales and Stephens in a doubles match. This was the only time the Furman pair was defeated this season.

The P. C. netmen motored to Clemson for some Tiger meat, but were totally outclassed by the state champions, failing to win a match.

Our racqueteers were next entertained by Furman in a return match. The P. C. men were unaccustomed to such hard courts and did not show up well. By winning a singles match, Gregg saved the team from a whitewash.

Appalachian college was the next foe. This was the closest meet ever seen here. McCutchen, Copeland and Norment turned in victories, but the visitors tied the score at 3-all by winning the first doubles match. The responsibility now rested on the Gregg brothers, but they were defeated in three close sets.

On the wet, muddy courts in Columbia, Carolina defeated the Blue Stockings, 5-2. Levi won in a singles and Copeland and Gregg won a doubles match.

In the contest with Erskine, Levi kept the Presbyterians from being shut out by beating White.

After Clemson had whitewashed the Hosemen for the second time, P. C. gave Carolina a hard fight. McCutchen defeated Powell, who was unbeaten this season, in two sets. Gregg and Copeland won their doubles match. Carolina defaulted one match to P. C. So for the third time, the Blue Hose netmen lost by a score of 4-3.

P. C. defeated Wofford, 4-3, in a hard meet. Levi, Copeland, and Tiller registered wins in singles, and Presbyterian's first doubles team won. In the return meet, P. C. was beaten by Wofford, 5-2, Levi and Copeland again winning for the locals.

In the final contest of the year, P. C. lost every match to Erskine, even though four of the seven matches went the limit of three sets.

As a climax for the tennis season, the State Collegiate Tennis Tournament was held in Greenville. Captain Gregg, Levi and McCutchen were selected to represent P. C. at this contest. But these men were in brackets with the first three seeded players, so they immediately passed out of the picture. The doubles match between McCutchen and Gregg of P. C., and Stephens and Clinkscales of Furman, was a "honey" to behold. The Furman team was seeded No. 1, and they did become state champions. P. C. won the first set, 6-4, and after trailing 3-5 on the second, tied the score at 5-all, but lost 7-5. Furman took a 4-1 lead on the third set, but the Presbyterians again tied the score at 4-all, but were unable to gain the lead and lost 8-6.

The season as a whole was unsuccessful, but many new men acquired fine experience that will help them and the team next year.

FORTY-ONE SENIORS RECEIVE DIPLOMA

DR. JOHN McSWEEN
President of the College

To the Graduate of the 1934:

The inexorable march of time brings you to the close of an eventful epoch in your careers and to the beginning of another.

The fact that you have successfully hurdled all the barriers to this point should bring to you satisfaction and inspire your self-confidence as you face the barriers in life between you and success.

Certainly those of us who have been so intimately associated with you in the critical era through which you have passed sincerely rejoice in your success and will look with confidence to you to carry high on the battlefield of life the banner of Christian idealism which it has been our main concern to place in your hands as a student at Presbyterian college.

You are our sons and daughters in a very real sense and we will continue to rejoice with you in your joys and sorrow with you in your sorrows.

May I take this final occasion to express the "very real pleasure and sense of personal satisfaction" which I have enjoyed in association with you and in this hour of climax to your labors.

Sincerely and always the friend of every P. C. student,

JOHN McSWEEN,
President.

Rifle Team Has Excellent Season

Marksmen Win Majority of Contests With Colleges All Over U. S. A. Only Gregg and Captain Wingate Graduate.

By winning more than one-half of the matches fired and by making an excellent showing among other teams of the state, the 1934 Presbyterian College rifle team can be called the most successful team in the history of the school.

At the beginning of the season the team was handicapped by having more than one-half of its members from the sophomore class; but improved by constant practice, and elated by a victory over the co-ed team the men rounded into excellent form before the season had got on its way. Matches were fired practically every week during the season; and each week showed constant improvement, and consequently, better scores. Noteworthy victories of the year were: Mass. State, Washington U., College of the City of New York, Oklahoma A. and M., Michigan State, and New Mexico A. and M.

The result of the Hearst trophy was gratifying also; but the grand climax of the successful season came in the State Rifle Meet held at Clemson on April 12. Here our five-man team was vested by a similar team from Clemson by an amount of about ten points to earn the state title; but in the ten-man team which is normally co-ed'd a team, our team marked up 15 more points than did the team from Clemson. Thus our team beat the team from the school which has the state championship in addition to the one other team represented there, the Citadel.

Only two men, E. Gregg and Captain Wingate, are lost by graduation; and several promising men are coming up from the freshman class; so the team now looks towards next year for a team even better than the one this year. J. G. Jeanes, Clinton boy, has been elected to the captaincy of the team next year and the following men from this year's team will be back next year: Elliott, Carothers, Odom, Gregg, F., Upshur, Anderson, Morrow, Tiller, McClary, Pitman, Belk and Forehand.

Freeman Accepted For Air Corps

On no later than June 30th of this year Powell Freeman is to report to Randolph Field, San Antonio, Texas, where he will serve for ten months as a Flying Cadet. Upon the expiration of the ten months he is to report to Kelly Field in San Antonio where he will serve for three years as a Second Lieutenant in the Air Corps Reserve of the U. S. At Kelly Field the time will chiefly be taken up by combat flights and combat problems.

Freeman was the only student of P. C. to successfully pass an extremely tough physical test which is given to the young men of the U. S. by the Army Air Corps so that they may get the best physically fit men that we have.

The others that took the examination were C. W. Copeland, Jack White, and A. P. Wilson. These were all turned down because of some little defect. Freeman was well liked by the students of P. C. and all of them hearitly wish him a success in this very important field of endeavor.

Valedictorian

J. WALKER COMBS, JR.

J. Walker Combs, Jr., of Covington, Ga., will deliver the valedictory address tomorrow afternoon at the final exercises of the commencement program, having received the higher average in his class for four years. By virtue of his academic work, Combs was selected last year as a member of Sigma Kappa Alpha, and served as president of the organization during the 1933-34 session. He has also taken an active interest in other student affairs and this year edited The Collegian, college literary magazine, and served as president of Gamma Sigma, honorary journalistic fraternity. He has been a member of Sigma Upsilon, International Relations club, the Dramatic club, and during the course of his college years has found time to work with The Blue Stocking and PaC-SaC staffs.

Combs will graduate summa cum laude.

Censorship of "The Daily Cardinal" and a purging of dangerous, "radical," elements from the university administration and faculty at the University of Wisconsin has been demanded by the alumni association of that school. The group seeks the removal of all people of liberal leanings on the staff of "The Cardinal" and would like a paper handled by a "backwoods mentality."—Syracuse Daily Orange.

Exercises To Be Held Tomorrow

J. W. Combs, Jr. To Deliver Valedictory and R. D. Lynn Salutatory. Two Honorary Degrees Will Be Awarded, and Prizes Given, Bringing To Close Fifty-Third Year of College Life.

Forty-one seniors will receive diplomas tomorrow morning in the final exercises of the fifty-third commencement of Presbyterian college. For the first time in the history of the college the exercises will be held in the open. At 10:30 the academic procession will form and march to a place designated under the trees at the upper end of the campus. The senior class decided against a regular speaker this year. Dr. Henry Wade DuBose, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Spartanburg, and chairman of the board of trustees, will preside and present diplomas to the graduates.

R. D. Lynn will deliver the salutatory address and J. Walker Combs, Jr., the valedictory. The farewell address will be given by President John McSween.

The board will award two honorary degrees: to Professor James Henley Thornwell, Jr., superintendent of schools, Hartsville, S. C., the degree of doctor of literature; to the Rev. A. Hoyt Miller, missionary, Congo Belge, Africa, the degree of doctor of divinity.

Other awards to be made are the Gold "P" and the declamation awards. Gold "P"s, which are presented every year to four seniors having done outstanding non-athletic work, will go to R. D. Lynn, B. B., Redmond, A. M. Tommins and R. E. Sims. Prizes for first and second places in the annual freshman-sophomore declamation contest will be awarded to F. T. Wallace and Charles Steenbergen. D. H. McFadden will be presented with the Chi Beta Phi scholarship key, and C. M. Hudson will be given the Chi Beta Phi certificate for the highest mark on the comprehensive examinations.

Candidates for the bachelor of arts and science degrees, together with their home addresses, follow:

Norman E. Andrews, Spartanburg.
Georgia Bee Blakely, Clinton.
Allen Watson Collins, Monroe, N. C.
J. Walker Combs, Jr., Covington, Ga.
Carol White Copeland, Clinton.
Sarah Elizabeth Copeland, Clinton.
Kennerly Raymond Corbett, Wagner.

New Rules For Awarding Letters

At an open meeting of the Student Athletic association on last Wednesday morning, Prof. H. E. Sturgeon, president of the organization, announced the following rules made by the council to govern the awarding of the Block "P":

Letters will be awarded basketball men who have played 120 minutes of intercollegiate basketball.

Letters will be given in track and swimming to each man who makes a first place or five points in a dual meet, or who places in the state meet.

Baseball men will become wearers of the "P" when they have played 27 innings in intercollegiate competition, except for pitchers, whose standards will be lower.

A boxing letter will be awarded any man who is chosen by the coach to represent the school in an intercollegiate contest, provided he finishes out the season.

Salutatorian

ROBERT D. LYNN

Receiving second honor in the senior class, Robert DeWese Lynn, of Clinton, S. C., will give the welcome address at the exercises tomorrow. Lynn is a member of Pi Kappa Alpha social fraternity, the International Relations club, Sigma Upsilon, and has headed the Presbyterian college chapter of Blue Key this year. He has taken a whole-hearted interest in campus religious activities, has been a member of the Ministerial club, and during the present year has served as president of the Y. M. C. A. Lynn is a well-rounded student and has given a great deal of his time to athletics, having led the basketball team during the 1934 season. In military activities, he rose this year to the highest ranking position in the R. O. T. C. corps, that of cadet lieutenant-colonel.

PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE PROFESSORS HAVE VARIED PLANS FOR SUMMER VACATIONS

What do you plan to do with your summer? The scribe was surprised to find how large a percentage of the faculty and administration know definitely.

Dr. McSween has no vacation on his program. First, he has ahead of him five commencement sermons and six commencement addresses. He will teach "Church History" at the Senior Young Peoples Conferences both here and at Camp Smyrna, Ga. He is chairman of the program committee of the Presbyterian Education Association of the South, meeting at Montreat from June 26th to July 1st. He has preaching engagements at Columbus, Gainesville and Atlanta, Ga., and Mullins and Charleston, S. C. And during the "meantime," he will be "traveling in the interest of the college."

Dr. John H. Davis plans the first six weeks at Montreat, after which he intends to study the vegetation of Florida in preparation for a book he plans to write on the natural gardens of that state. If his plans mature, he will take a botany class on a three weeks' study of southern Florida, including the tropical hammocks and the Everglades. He also plans to work at Rollins, Fla.

Both Dr. Huntley and Willard Jones were evasive in their replies, and mumbled something about "Niagara Falls."

Dean Brown plans to spend his summer in Kentucky, Tennessee, and on Mackinac Island in Lake Michigan, with six weeks spent in Wisconsin. Mrs. Brown confirms the schedule magnanimously.

Dr. Coe plans to undertake the multitudinous duties of summer school, and so do Prof. Sturgeon and Prof. Graham. However, the latter two plan visits in Kansas and at Montreat, respectively. Dr. Spencer will teach French and Greek in summer school, and will also offer freshman Bible if any of those who sadly need a second round register.

Dr. Jones outlined a fascinating program for the summer. First, just after commencement, he intends to have some teeth pulled, after which he will visit the beach and "do nothing—as usual." Dr. Brimm intends to rest, and to "do nothing" also.

Professor Lothery, on the verge of his leave of absence, wanders like a lost soul until his actual research begins. The first part of the summer he "will probably be here," and the last part he will spend at Davidson, his home. Prof. Swedenberg also plans research, but his will only occupy the summer, at Chapel Hill, the seat of the University of North Carolina.

Dr. Kennedy is uncertain, except on the point of a trip to York, S. C. Coach Johnson will spend the summer "traveling in the interests of the college" —in other words, canvassing for students, besides a short period at Fort Benning.

Professor Martin will be in town all summer. Coach Lonnie McMillian, at his home, was as unreachable as the stars, so his plans remain "shrouded in mystery."

John Holland Hunter will spend a good part of the time in a "pop-eyed" rush, as will Mrs. Myrtle Hunter, during the two Young People's conferences, held at the college. Mrs. Hunter plans a trip to Washington.

Captain Wysor will spend the summer in his "summer home on the outskirts of Clinton," if his annual plans

The Y Survey

Dormitory Prayer Groups Planned

"Y" HEARS BETTS

The Y. M. C. A. closed its year's work on Thursday night, May 17, with an interesting message by Rev. C. B. Betts, pastor of the Associate Reformed Presbyterian church of Clinton.

After the services, the last cabinet meeting of the year was held. It was decided that each member of the cabinet should prepare at least one program during the summer and present it for approval at the opening of school in the fall. Then the chairman of each committee is to make out a report of what he intends to do during the year. In this way it is hoped that the "Y" fill be more interesting and progressive, and that more students will take part.

For the last two months the cabinet has been presenting varied programs. Several have been made up of deputations from other schools, including Furman, Thornwell, and Erskine. The local "Y" has sent deputations to Clemson and Furman. Next year there will be more of these programs exchanged.

A new feature for the "Y" next year is the plan to have a man appointed in each dormitory to be responsible for conducting a prayer group in that dormitory each night at 10 o'clock.

The reception for the freshmen next year will be the same as usual, with the cabinet members returning early in order that they will be here to greet the new men when they arrive.

Other plans for next year's work will be worked out during the summer.

HI-Y

One phase of Y. M. C. A. work is that of the Hi-Y. The Y. M. C. A. of Presbyterian College has for several years sponsored a Hi-Y at Clinton High school. For a boy to become a member he must be in one of the three upper grades of the high school, and elected unanimously by the Hi-Y Club.

The objective of the group is to create and maintain high standards of character. The correlation of the three phases of living, mind, soul and body, are emphasized. The club accepts only those whose outlook on life is Christ-like, and tries to make them leaders who will influence their companions toward walking in the steps of the Master-guide.

Their work this year has been fine. Meetings have been held weekly in the college Y room. Several of the students and faculty of the college have been visitors and speakers of the club. T. T. Fowler, assisted by L. O. Elmore, is the adult leader, appointed by the president of the Y. M. C. A. to take charge of the work.

R. O. T. C. NEWS

During the last two weeks, exams on close order drill have been given to both Basic courses in R. O. T. C. to select men for the various positions next year, and to reveal the exact amount of drill these men knew after one or two years of military training. Next year during the opening weeks of school, several tests of this sort will be given to men in the advanced course in an effort to greatly forward the knowledge of details of close order drill. Those directing the drill schedule have realized that this is the best way to make officers aware of these points which are small, but extremely essential in order to have good officers. Incidentally, the averages on these first exams were not very gratifying; but it is hoped that this average will be raised when they become acquainted with this type of test.

At last the apprehension, hopes, fears, and what not concerning the advanced list for next year is over for one more year; and except for the griping of those who did not make the list, all is peaceful on the P. C. campus. However, we wish to say that the matter of who made the list and who did not was not determined during this last week or this last month; but during the elapsed time since these men first came from the plow. Captain Wysor assumes individual responsibility for selecting these men and will be in his office any time ot explain just why he made the selection he did. He knows that due to human imperfection he may have been wrong in some one or two cases; but he can assure anyone interested that he did his level best to pick the men who would do most for the standing of the corps.

Being deprived of his favorite expressions, "rotten and putrid," by some of the more discerning observers of the corp, Captain Wysor wishes to express in this last issue of R. O. T. C. news his grateful and most sincere appreciation for the manner in which the members of the corps have executed their duties during the past year. The spirit of the corps earned for us the highest rating in the annual inspection that the unit has ever had; and Captains Wysor and Blanton are not ungrateful at all for this; so now they say that all the "putrids and rotens" and scowls which have been used during the year were " all in fun." They just wanted to make sure that no laxity should be shown by any one. So from the officers who have been directing your work for the past year, you have the best wishes for a most pleasant and profitable vacation. But please note this. If anyone in the Senior class already has too many wishes of this sort he might just give these to the present juniors. We expect they will need wishes and water too when they find themselves in the balcony of another world this summer.

KAMPUS KACKLES

Shortly after the freshman class voted to do away with hazing, someone asked how the remaining regulations were to be enforced. The answer is that, for the first offense, freshmen will be deprived of ice cream every Tuesday night for a month. Second offenders are to do without milk on Thursday nights for the same period, besides.

A collection will be taken at the end school to pay for a wreath to be placed on the bier of the recently deceased student government. All P. C. men are urged to contribute liberally as possible.

Several students have inquired about the identity of the distinguished looking gray-haired gentleman who met the South Carolina History class something over a month ago.

Stuart Campbell reports that, according to Earl Winn, Thomas Burringer, freshman society leader, escorted Miss Middie Cook to the Thornwell C. E. picnic. Other social lights were there in force.

One of our budding young writers is working on a voluminous work entitled, "The Modern Munchausen." He is now engaged in getting material from Freshman Bird.

A certain young gentleman's Pan-Hellenic Finals date was seen sitting in the window sill at Copeland Hall during the dance bestowing fond kisses on another up-and-coming fellow, whose identity, however, could not be discovered.

Lee Quarterman purchased a package of cigarettes recently.

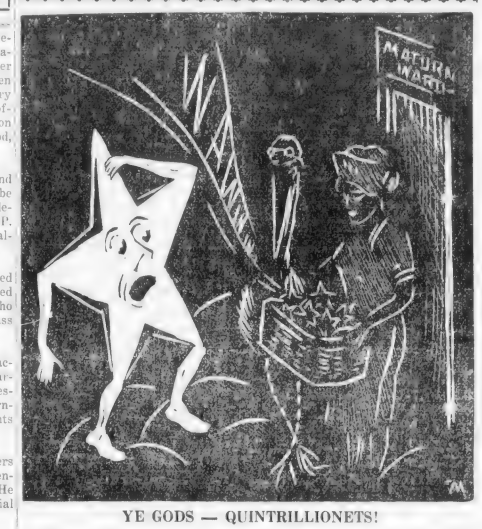
It was in just such hot weather as we are having now that a very unusual incident took place near the campus last spring. Late one afternoon a P. C. man who boarded out in town, finding the heat unbearable, removed all his garments except underwear, and stepped out on the roof of his rooming house. After acquiring a comfortable position, he amused himself by playing with his toes. Since it is not the policy of this column to mention names, no information of this nature can be given; but we feel that our public has a right to know that this man is now a graduate student here.

Freshman Belk has acquired an enviable reputation as a biscuit thrower of parts. One who ought to know has made the statement that the said freshman could hit a fly on the wall of the opposite side of the dining hall. Not only, however, has he the ability to direct the missiles into telling spots, but he also can throw one further than any one yet seen in this part of the country. We have as proof of his astounding ability in this line an attested statement that he actually hurled one over the administration building. In event of war he should be a useful man with hand grenades.

Bob Hannah outstanding rising senior, has been justly honored by his election to the presidency of I Buma Cig, local honorary fraternity. This addition to his already long list of achievements is all the more creditable, since it is strictly against the ancient tradition of the brotherhood to re-elect a man as head of the august body. His work has been so energetic, however, that no one else was able to approach his record. Which proves the slogan "practice makes perfect."

Our local Clinton Mill, it seems, is decidedly on the up and up. One of its fair daughters is now receiving the courtly advances of a scion of one of the First Families of Virginia.

And the New York Times advertises the Scotch "likker" called Long John.



All the rising sophomores are requested to return a few days earlier next year in order to help the freshmen with their trunks.

Everyone is asked to put on his best manners Tuesday at dinner, as we'll have a large number of visitors. Also, this momentous occasion (like Christmas and Thanksgiving) allows each to bring a big appetite.

And remember, the bit dog always hollers, so be careful how you bark.

YE GODS — QUINTRILLIONETS!

The Creation of the Solar System

Chas. E. Carson

We are living on this Earth, a globe, a spherical mass. We are here, you and I, treading the paths that have been trod for countless ages, and which will continue to be traveled for centuries to come. We enjoy the nature around us, the elements which are provided apparently for our benefit. The beauty and the tragedy, the loveliness and the ugliness, all are ours to behold. The Earth is immense to our small minds; but sometimes we look out and see the worlds beyond. We see those ever circling orbs called planets, the esthetically beautiful work of a master craftsman. Don't we wonder where they came from? From whence our Earth received its origin?

Several theories have been advanced, but none completely explains or satisfies. One, however, is generally accepted by astronomers today. By spectroscopic methods we find that all the planets are made out of the same material; and that that material is composed of elements all found in the Sun. Since that is true, what is more natural than to think that the planets were once a part of the Sun, that the Sun is the mother (or father, if you prefer) of the entire solar system? If not, then what reason is there for their being so much alike? The planets revolve in eliptical orbits, all of which have in the Sun a common gravitational center, showing a close relationship between the two types of heavenly bodies.

Though stars are many millions of miles apart, isn't it possible that two stars in the course of millions of years could come relatively near each other? Sometime in the distant past another star may have come near enough to our Sun to produce by gravitational pull a giant tide on its surface. (The surface of the Sun, you remember, is gas.) As the star got closer, the tide became larger and larger; then as the star receded, the tide was pulled farther and farther from the Sun's face. As a result of this pull the tide broke away, but because of the strong gravitational force of the Sun it could not go far. This bit of now separated matter was set in motion by the revolving sun and kept there by its gravitational pull, just as a rifle bullet if shot from the Earth with a high enough velocity would contiue to travel around it in an elliptical path. As soon as it left the parent-sun our tide of hot gas began to cool, contracting and breaking up into separate particles, their rotation making them spherical.

The planets are contiually moving, each in an elliptical path about the Sun, and all in approximately the same plane. If we watch carefully, we find that the planets nearer the Sun and those farther away, are small, while those in the middle orbits are large, a very noticeable difference. If we can imagine them all from Mercury to Pluto stretched out in the same straight line, we have a cigar-shaped filament, a cigar thick in the middle and tapering at the ends. Though it is no proof, doesn't this suggest the validity of our theory? Our tidal wave would necessarily be thick in the middle and tapering at the ends, broken up into droplets, each circling the parent sun.

We cannot be certain, but of all theories this one seems to be the best. At any rate, it is almost a surity that the planets, including the Earth, were once part of the Sun. The solar system is set off by itself in a small corner of the expansive universe, in which the Sun is the source of light and life. It makes all things beautiful that are beautiful; it allows us the happiness and the joy of living. More than that, it is the true ancestor of us all.

Blue Stocking Gets Typewriter Back

Machine Believed Stolen Is Returned In Few Days By Unknown Borrower.

The Blue Stocking wishes to thank the culprit for his kindness in returning the typewriter taken from the said office.

The office was cleared of the typewriter during supper a week ago last Thursday. As to whereabouts could not be learned evidence the following day. Mr. Hunter, business manager of the school, announced that if the machine were not returned immediately, it would be considered stolen. Nothing was heard of it, however, (not even a request for ransom), until Sunday when A. W. Harrison, business manager of the Blue Stocking, discovered a peculiarly shaped mass under the stairs of Spencer dormitory. This calmly reposing bundle, camouflaged by dust, appeared upon investigation to be the much sought-for typewriter, in seemingly better condition than when last used by the staff.

No proof has been obtained as to the "thief." As a motive, it has been suggested that someone not properly trained in rules of etiquette, thought a typewriter necessary to the adequate composition of term papers, which at this time of the year are required even by the most timid of professors. Not possessing one, he "borrowed" the Blue Stocking's, and after being stricken with a case of "conscience rheumatism," made an honest attempt at "returning" it.

Botany Students To Study Florida

Summer Field Trip To Be Undertaken By Dr. J. H. Davis From July 25th to August 11.

Beginning a new policy in college courses, Dr. J. H. Davis of the Biology department will offer to any student who may be interested, three hours credit in Botany for a three weeks study he will conduct this summer of Florida vegetation.

This party under the direction of Dr. Davis will leave Orlando, Fla., on July 25, and will go down the east coast towards Miami and the Keys to study the tropical vegetation found in that section. Following this, a study in the world-famous Everglades vegetation will be made; and from there the party will go up the west coast and through the central part of the state to see the representative types of vegetation there. On August 11, the trip will be concluded at Gainesville, Fla.

This course offers to the student both a pleasant and a profitable vacation; and several men will probably accompany Dr. Davis on his trip.

1934 PaC-SaC Out; New Editor Begins

Yearbook, Edited By Redmond, Delivered To Student Body. Dunlap Plans For 1935.

The 1934 PaC-SaC, released some ten days ago, satisfies the clamors of those who have been wanting their annuals and the curiosity of those who have been wondering and prying to learn what editor B. B. Redmond made of it.

Within the brown covers of the book are two hundred and two pages picturing the college simply, without delving into past history or poetry for the theme, as the editor states. The annual, while it has suffered from the heavy cut in appropriations, especially in the engraving, is a remarkably fine book.

Editor George Dunlap of next year's annual announced that final contracts are about to be let for the book. C. E. Nichols, of the local Nichols' Studio, has already begun some of the photography on the campus while spring leaves remain, and will take the individual pictures early next fall. The student staff is not yet definitely selected, but will be made up in time for work next year, the editor states.

NEW COLLEGIAN STAFF

H. S. Odom, editor of next year's "Collegian," Presbyterian's literary magazine, announces his staff as follows:

Associate editors: Frank Guess, W. I. Nexsen, George Dunlap.

Managing editor: C. R. Johnson.

Literary staff: Chas. E. Carson, Colin Hudson, Sadler Love, R. C. McLees, George Oliver, J. E. Patrick, J. J. Ranch, Jr., H. M. Wilson, Jr.

Wallace Receives Declamation Prize

Second Place and Five Dollars In Gold Goes To Steenbergen In Spaking Contest.

On Friday, May 18, Dr. McSween announced the winners of the annual Declamation contest. F. T. Wallace, of Chester, was awarded first place and Charles Steenbergen, of Point Pleasant, West Virginia, was awarded second place. The prizes were ten dollars in gold for first place, and five dollars for second place. The faculty acted as judges.

The annual Declamation contest was held at the regular chapel hour on Tuesday, May 15. It was not then decided when the winner would be announced. It was decided, upon the return of Dr. McSween, that the awards would be made the following Friday.

The contest was very close. The declaimers had good speeches and delivered them in excellent form. The Declamation contest should be one of the outstanding campus events of the year and it is desired that more interest be taken and more contestants participate next year. The contest is open to both freshmen and sophomores.

The speakers and their speeches were as follows:

E. E. Stanton, "Vengeance Is Mine."
F. T. Wallace, "National Apostacy."
Charles Steenbergen, "Professor Anonymous."
J. L. Dabney, "Crime."

"P. C. MEN IN VIRGINIA"

Rev. Frank P. Anderson, class of 1912, and a son of the man that gave the first fifty cents for the founding of Thornwell Orphanage is now pastor of the Presbyterian church of Pulaski, Va. Mr. Anderson's first charge was at Ft. Prerie, Arkansas. After finishing three months graduate work in New York he accepted the charge that he now has. Mr. Anderson was born in Greenville, S. C., and married a Greenville girl. He is also a cousin of Dr. Coe, of P. C.

Rev. James M. Dick, class of 1922, and formerly of Sumter, S. C., is now Rector of the Episcopal Church in Pulaski, Va. Mr. Dick married Miss Elizabeth Young of Clinton and after graduating from Suwanee he accepted a call to Kingstree, S. C., and it was just recently that he accepted the call to Virginia.

College Opens On September 11-13

Dr. McSween, president of Presbyterian College, announces the dates on which the school will reopen next fall. The time for the old men is September 13, and for new men it is two days earlier, September 11. This earlier date for the freshmmen allows them to become oriented to the new environment of college life, before the actual commencement of classes. Football men will report on September 3.

The 1934-35 work will comprise the fifty-fifth session of Presbyterian College.

Three On Road During Summer

Three Presbyterian College graduates will travel this summer in the interest of the college. These men, R. H. Gillespie, Turk Osman, and Ben Covington, are of the class of '33. Bob Gillespie will cover the north and west parts of Georgia, having his headquarters in Atlanta. Turk Osman, probably with Savannah as his home station, will work Georgia south from Macon. With Coaches Johnson and MacMillan, Ben Covington is to assist in canvassing South Carolina.

The college will appreciate any information the students can give regarding prospects for new men. Such information will greatly aid these men who are working for the school.

Athletic Council Officers Chosen

At a mass meeting of the students of Presbyterian college on last Wednesday morning, new officers for the athletic council were chosen. Prof. H. E. Sturgeon, president of the association, presided over the meeting. By vote of the student body, the election of cheer leaders was deferred until next fall in order that try-outs might be given those wanting the job. All other officers of the association were elected. The students accepted by acclamation the list of managers submitted by the council. The list follows:

Football manager, McCall, with Upshur and Marks as assistants; basketball manager, Rhodes, with Cliff Johnson as assistant; track manager, Elmore, with Tuttle and Green as assistants; boxing manager, Hannah; baseball manager, Patrick; swimming manager, Dunlap, with Hamp Johnson as assistant.

The officials of the council were elected by nomination and vote of the student body. Those elected were:

President, Prof. H. E. Sturgeon; vice-president, George Dunlap; secretary, Buddy Chapman.

Chicamauga, Ga., is a valuable dash and relay man on the track team, and his prowess at football won him a place on the all-state eleven.

George Oliver, the new secretary, is from Savannah, Ga. Oliver belongs to the Beta Kappa fraternity, and is a member of the track squad.

Frank Guess, editor of The Blue Stocking, belongs to the Pi Kappa Phi fraternity, and is a leader in the literary activities of the campus.

Nexsen, newly elected historian, is a Kappa Alpha from Kingstree. He has long been one of the most valuable writers for The Collegian and other campus publicaitons.

The rising junior class elected the following officers: President, Allen Guerard; vice-president, Rex Wilbanks; secretary, Joe Bradley; treasurer, Phil Adams.

The rising sophomores chose the following officers: President, Claude Cappelman; vice-president, Ben Robinson; secretary-treasurer, Raleigh Shoemaker; poet, Ben Legare; historian, Will Wallace.

The election of the vigilance committee for the coming year was held along with the class elections. Those chosen were: "Red" Abbott, Smith Buchan, Will Wallace, Carl Johnson.

Alternates for the Advanced Course: (1) Freesland, J. E., (2) Adams, P. A., (3) Chapman, J. H., (4) Denny, C. E., (5) Belk, R. N.

The ceremony was concluded by awarding the saber to Cadet Captain T. H. Wingate for the most outstanding service to the corps during his military career at Presbyterian college.

Literary Acquaintance: Nexsen, 139; Holman, 132; Hudson, 113.

Contemporary Affairs: Hudson, 187; Charles, 178; Nexsen, 177.

General Science: Hudson, 190; Tiller, 135; Fleming, 145.

General Mathematics: Hudson, 128; Andrews, 92; Todd, 88.

Foreign Languages: Andrews, 220; Adair, 212; Martin, 203.

If comprehensive examinations can be considered as an accurate means of measuring learning, the present junior class shows a decided deficiency. Discussion regarding the scores of the "contemporary affairs" test, which was not given last year, the present sophomores bettered by far last's year's average sophomore score, which was 424.

No definite announcements have as yet been made, but it is thought that the tests will not be given again next year.

time ago the council decided it should have jurisdiction over students at athletic contests, whether they (the students in question) participated or not. The faculty went further and gave themselves full control over students during vacations. This is faculty regulation X, section 9: "As long as a student is registered at Presbyterian College his conduct at all times and places shall be under the jurisdiction of the Faculty." Apparently, then, the student body and the faculty are on opposite banks of the river of "off campus" control. While the students do not even desire to be governed at an "athletic contest," the faculty wishes to exercise a note of authority at all times. It remains to be seen, therefore, whether there shall be student government, or faculty control.

NEW STUDENT ENROLLMENT REACHES 95

List of Those Entering Presbyterian Includes Fourteen Who Transferred From Other Colleges and Shows Wide Distribution By States.

Ninety-five new students swell the total enrollment to 280 at Presbyterian college this year, being about the same number registered at this time last year. And others are continually signing up.

The new students come literally from the four corners of the earth, or at any rate one hails from distant Korea. If he went "home" next summer he would travel almost a hundred miles for every member of the class on the trip out. The rest of the new students migrated in from ten states almost as diverse as the addresses of one student now a soph. In a single year he changed homes from Florida to Minnesota and then to Utah.

The freshly painted dormitories are practically filled, with more boarding students than have ever been on the campus any year in the past.

Co-eds still are in the upper twenties—in number, of course, not age. Twenty-seven of the fair sex are enrolled.

Transfers from other colleges make up a number of the new students, fourteen of whom have thus transferred their credits to P. C. They come from widely separated schools of all types, and several of them bring enviable records of work in freshman and sophomore subjects.

Gaps are still left here and there by the old students who were unable for one reason or another to return to the college, but the large majority of all last. year's lower classes have come back to study again.

The new students are as follows:
Thomas Addison, Goldville.
Louis Anderson, Lake City.
Walter Beeman, Clinton.
Abram Briggs, Landrum.
William Blackwell, Florence.
Francis Bialock, Clinton.
Julius Lee Boggs, Pickens.
Chester Orvil Bright, Columbia.

Pick Collegian Editor Tuesday

Johnson or Carson Is To Fill Vacancy Left By Odom's Transfer. Upper Classmen Vote.

Election of this year's editor of The Collegian willl be held Tuesday, Sept. 25. The two candidates are Charlie Carson, staff nominee, and Cliff Johnson.

The Collegian is the literary magazine of Presbyterian college. Hart Odom, who was to edit the publication, did not return to school, thus requiring an "off-season" vote.

Johnson, a member of the junior class, has written for previous issues of the magazine. Carson, a senior, has written quite a bit for The Blue Stocking, and also for the Chi Beta Phi record, national organ of Chi Beta Phi scientific fraternity.

Due to the fact that the new men do not sufficiently know the candidates, only those who have previously attended Presbyterian college will be allowed to vote.

Library Expands With Donations

Nearly Two Hundred Volumes Come From Collection of Major Caldwell and Seminary.

A new set of the Harvard Classics is only a part of the pile of books given or loaned indefinitely to the college library through the generosity of Major J. S. Caldwell and the library of Columbia Theological seminary, Decatur, Ga.

Major Caldwell, of Marietta, Ga., served on the Mexican border with the 118th infantry, of which Dr. McSween was a chaplain. Besides the fifty-volume set of the Harvard bookshelf, he donated two other valuable collections and several works on economics and finance.

The seminary loaned the college some eighty-five of its 30,000 volumes of uncatalogued works which W. L. Jones, college librarian, combed through for three and a half days in June. A considerable number of the volumes are bound collections of pamphlets with valuable material on South Carolina. The Caroliniana collection in the P. C. library is already one of the three best in the state and is constantly being improved.

Former Student Dies At Sumter

Louis I. Appelt, of Manning, S. C., a former P. C. student of the class of 1935, died on Friday, September 7, at a Sumter hospital. He was ill for only a short time. While in school Appelt was a member of Kappa Alpha social fraternity. He has many friends on the campus who sincerely mourn his passing.

Various Activities Occupy P. C. Profs

Some Spend Summer In Study, Others Travel, Two Were Sick, and Two Were Married.

Unfortunately, or not, as the case might be, the faculty seems to have had few exciting adventures during the summer. Once cornered, each one gave up a modicum of information. Those who escaped the interviewer are of necessity omitted.

Dean Brown carried out his projected Northern tour, and divided his time between the course in recent American history at the University of Wisconsin and the bears in the Madison zoo. So intrigued he was by the antics of one of the quaint little Malayan "honey bears," that he even went so far as to negotiate for one for Mrs. Brown at a pet shop, but a wholesale quotation of $125, to which was to be added the retailer's commission and express, for a single specimen, broke up the discussion.

Professor Sturgeon spoke of the drought-stricken regions in southern Iowa, Missouri and Kansas through which he drove. One sun-baked, dusty townaman responded cheerfully to his question of "How is the water supply here?" with the Pollyana-like remark: "Oh, fine. We have as much as two weeks supply ahead!"

Dr. Davis took his summer-school biology class touring through Florida. Among other things, they visited the Chapman field near Miami, where the United States Bureau of Plant Importation is located. There every variety of rubber, coffee, fruit, tea, cocoanut and other plants are gathered and experimented with, studying the problem of the adjustment of foreign plants to natural conditions here. Some time ago, when the British monopoly on rubber was leading Firestone to purchase large tracts of land for its culture in Liberia and other places, this bureau also was studying the acclimatization of the plant, and the resultant competition relieved the strain.

Dr. Kennedy spent his summer in York, talking local politics among other things. York county broke precedent by electing all four of its legislators on the first ballot, among whom was one Methodist preacher. Dr. Kennedy also attended the wedding of his nephew, Rev. James R. Kennedy, a graduate of P. C., Richmond seminary, '34, and at present pastor of the A. R. P. church in Spartanburg. The bride was Miss Mary Engle, of Winter Haven, Fla.

Captain Blanton patrolled the hills near Camp McClellan with his tactics class, fished in the Pamlico river, and returned to move out of the wilds at the edge of town into a house closer to the college. Sergeant Young spent most of his time visiting relatives in Georgia, his original home, and also returned to move; his move, however, leaves him farther from work than before.

Dr. Spencer spent little time away from home, due to sickness in the family and teaching in summer school. Dr. Jones spent a good part of his vacation in a Columbia hospital, and the rest in convalescing.

Dr. Woodworth visited the lower part of the state with his family, but went in the water off the Isle of Palms so seldom that we have no case of professorial sunburn to write about.

Dr. Brimm went through the mountains of North Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia, visiting the caves, and on up as far as the field of the battle of Gettysburg. Then, for a week, he stayed with his oldest son on Long Island. He saw the birthplaces of Washington and Lee, the tidewater region of Virginia, and visited another son in Richmond.

Professor Swedenberg studied at Chapel Hill, N. C., and took part in a wedding—but not as the principal, as did both Willard Jones and Dr. Huntley.

Rat Reception Held In Gym

Rain Forces "Y" Committee To Entertain New Students and Girls Indoors.

The college chapter of the Y. M. C. A. was host to the new men of the school at a reception in Leroy Springs gymnasium on Saturday night. The reception, originally scheduled to be held on the lawn of the president's home, was changed to the gymnasium because of inclement weather.

Although the reception was intended primarily for freshmen and students transferring from other schools, many upperclassmen were present to assist in welcoming the new men and help with the entertainment. The Y. M. C. A. council, led by Van Arnold, was in charge of the program.

Among those in the receiving line were Dr. and Mrs. McSween, Dr. and Mrs. Huntley, Dr. Cook, Coach and Mrs. Johnson, Dean and Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Myrtle Hunter, John H. Hunter, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Jones, Doyle Boggs, Miss Annie Lee Jackson, and Van Arnold.

After passing the receiving line, the freshmen met many of the young ladies of the town. Punch and cakes were served throughout the evening.

The College Dames, with Mrs. R. E. Wysor, Jr., as president, were in charge of the decorations and the preparation of refreshments.

College Shines With New Paint

Renovation of Dormitories During Summer Amounts To Over $3,000 Investment.

Repainting of the college buildings has been under way practically all summer with a crew of some six painters renewing the surfaces. The work involved an outlay of well over three thousand dollars, according to the business manager.

Rooms were calcimined in all dormitories except Smyth, which is still in good condition, and all toilets and shower rooms were repainted.

The dome of the administration building is now shiny with a coat of aluminum paint over the former black tar, and the faded white columns are clean with fresh white.

PRESBYTERIAN LOSES OPENER TO TIGERS, 6-0

Unexciting, Slow Game Marks First Gridiron Battle of Year At Clemson Saturday. Berry Takes Oval Across For Jungaleers' Lone Score.

A gamely fighting Presbyterian college team was given its trial by ordeal Saturday afternoon and found decidedly not wanting. Playing a heavier Clemson team beneath a broiling sun, they proved themselves to be one of the best teams that Presbyterian college has had in several years.

Some five thousand spectators were at Riggs field to watch the state race open as the Tigers defeated the Blue Hose by one touchdown.

The game was not particularly thrilling except for two goal-line thrusts, one by Clemson and one by Presbyterian. Both teams were playing a very cautious brand of football, with punting playing an important part.

Clemson's lone tally came in the first quarter as a result of a brilliant forward-lateral pass combination and a smashing line attack.

The Calvinists' one dangerous bid for a touchdown came just as the third quarter was ending. It arose as a result of Bolick's recovering a Tiger fumble, and a long pass from Wilbank's to Forehand.

The defensive work of Captain Harry Bolick, Tisdale, and Horne was outstanding for the Blue Stockings. Wilbanks' punting was a brilliant feature of the game, his longest punt being 70 yards. The longest individual run of the game was by Higbe of P. C. It was made when he returned a kick-off 26 yards.

Horne kicked off to Shores of Clemson who returned the ball to the 38-yard line. Two efforts failed to gain the needed 10 yards for the Tigers and they kicked on the third down. The ball was received on the 31-yard marker; two attempts fell short of a first down and Quarterman kicked on the third down. The kick was short, Clemson receiving it on the 48. Punts were exchanged, and then Clemson drew its "rabbit out of the hat" — a forward lateral from Berry to Kissam to Shores for nine yards. The Tigers drew a five-yard off-side penalty, but a six-yard line play gave the first first down of the game. Another triple pass gained 11 yards. Off-tackle plays by Berry, Hinson and McClown placed the ball in the shadow of the goal posts. Berry plunged over the line for the only touchdown of the game. Feller's try for goal was wide.

Higbe returned the kick-off 26 yards to the 33-yard marker. The Blue Hose failed to gain and the quarter ended as they punted.

In the second quarter neither team came within scoring distance of the goal posts, although Berry completed two passes for successive first downs. But his third air trip was intercepted by Bradley on the 27-yard line. The Blue Hose were forced to punt; Berry received and returned the ball ten yards to the Calvinists' 44-yard marker. The Tigers were thrown for a 10-yard loss; then Higbe intercepted a Jungle pass on his five-yard line. The

Pitiful Procession Makes Its Way While Uppers Mourn For The Halcyon Days

They answered the clarion call at 7:30—100 of them strong, clad in pajamas of varying colors, and designs, but most of them brightly, starchily new, for they must look their best even at the slaughter. Wih a feeble band, giivng at best only snatches of tune, leading off, the half-hearted participants catching hold of each other's coat-tails in the absence of the customary rope, and a few sneering upper-classmen who had once seen the halcyon days, the "rat-run" procession made its pitiful way down the plaza.

There were no sticks, no paddles, and "We'll ride ole Clemson on the rail" lost its lusty savor, for an angry command of "Sing louder" had nothing to back it up. Even fraternity rushing lost its usual peculiar effectiveness. There was nothing to guard them fqom, and a freshman might even have become irked at an upperclassman sticking faithfully to his side. There was one saving grace—the master performance of a buxom lad appropriately named Hipp. Drumstick in hand, and gum in his mouth, he strutted Mae West into shame.

At the square the whole affair took on the appearance of a pleasant brawl. The townfolk had gathered to watch the fun. But when tomatoes and a few eggs of a rare vintage broke forth from somewhere in the sidelines the crowd ran. Master of Ceremonies Byrd, among the first felled, slunk later with wounded spirit to a sheltering doorway to mutter, "This is a lousy rat-run." At one time the freshmen broke loose in a run and kept it up back and forth one street for about ten minutes. Finally shunted into the square around the monument, four disgusted freshmen sang "Ivory Soap," and two unable to finish onions gave up the contest flatly.

The last, breathless sprint ended finally at the picture show.

Fraternity Survey For Those Who Contemplate Pledging a Society

It is the purpose of these short article, the first of which appears below, to present an impartial sketch of each of the six fraternities on the Presbyterian campus. Any departure from this rule is unintentional. To avoid possible accusations of partiality, they will appear in alphabetical sequence, as the most logically unbiased order. Past issues of the PaC-SaC and committees from the fraternity in question furnished the information here set down.

Alpha Kappa Pi

Founded January 1, 1921, Newark College of Engineering, Newark, N. J.

In 1925, the Phi Delta Tau was established on the Presbyterian college campus as a local fraternity. Seeing the advantages of becoming a national organization, it petitioned the Alpha Kappa Pi National Fraternity for a charter, and was installed in 1928 as Eta, the first chapter of that order in South Carolina.

An alumnus of the local, D. S. Blankenship, Jr., '26, has since become Grand First Vice-President of the National organization.

It has been well represented in various sports, and also, especially, in the Chi Beta Phi (Honorary Scientific Fraternity). B. B. Redmond and W. H. Cranford, '34, P. C. members, served as Editor-in-Chief of the 1934 Pac-Sac and Vice-President of the Y. M. C. A., respectively.

Alpha Lambda Tau

The Alpha Lambda Tau National fraternity developed from the Alpha Lambda, a local fraternity founded at the reorganized Ogle[illegible] University in 1916.

In 1925, an organization known as the Rapier Club was established on Us College Boys

A freshman class has been welcomed again, this time with welcomes perhaps more superficial than usual. But, anyway, they have heard "Glad to have you with us" from quite a number of glib tongues, and we hope they do feel at home, despite the upperclassmen's inability to make them feel that way with more harsh methods than word of mouth.

Thus far, however, the freshmen have received an astonishingly small amount of advice, good, sound advice. They have received an ample number of warnings. They have been bidden by more experienced minds to make the most of their time, studying and also in contact with their fellow students, but somehow that is not enough. And so we offer more.

You have lately been hatched from those many incubators of sophistication. Many of you have all the ear-marks and all the external signs of worldly wisdom, and even in many cases, world-weariness. You, then, get your first thorough inside view of "us college boys" cutting our capers, and indulging in our puerile antics. You sneer at us, and if you have learned, look down your noses at us, smoking casually all the while. You do that; you probably can't help being disgusted at the sight. But forbear if you can,—don't make your sneer quite so obvious, and try to think a little ahead. Some day you might be one of "us college boys," you know.

But suppose you came through high school, your naivete unscathed by your fellow sophisticates. You look on us with something of awe in your eyes, and you quake a little bit at thought of our superior heights. You don't see our childish pranks. If, then, you belong in this category, try to gain a little of the confidence of your mates, and when you quake, take hold of yourself and say, "I'm not scared of them: they haven't got any more sense than I have." You can hardly be far wrong.

And last, if you happen to be one of those heaven-blessed freshmen who are tainted not too much with sophistication, yet have enough to insure themselves against a feeling of littleness, why, thank your stars you don't have to be reborn. You are already one of "us college boys."

The National Guard In the Textile Crisis

[illegible] section of these United States hears disagreeable [illegible] of trouble in another section and ever that sections says, "This can't possibly happen to us." And as so often it occurs, in a little while the indifferent people suddenly wake up to find that what has been troubling another locality has spread and that they are faced with a situation to which they had chose to believe themselves immune. And ever someone must take care of the emergency case caused by the sudden crisis.

Such is the procedure through which the textile strike has gone. At first it was sectional, concerning Northern mill centers. Next the nation heard of threatened trouble throughout the North. Then came national organized labor and with it radical fanaticism and racketeering as hadn't been seen since the day of Al Capone. But this new racket chose to glean its rakings from the pockets of laboring peoples. And the old story repeated itself as each state chose to believe that the strike would not affect her workers. But it did. The laborers were union men and as the union leaders said strike—strike they did.

The public faced a terrible situation. A few mentally unbalanced persons had succeeded in persuading the masses of textile workers that they were being discriminated against. Of course there were many who were too sensible to join such a union and many union members too sensible to let an organization deprive them of a livelihood. There were many who saw through the whole situation and perceived the difference between sections both in class of workers and problems. They perceived that these differences were too great and that labor questions could not be dealt with nationally. These were the people who appreciated their jobs and wanted to work. Nevertheless, the strike was ordered and business was threatened with total paralysis. People who wanted to work and opposed the strike were menaced, property was imperiled. Something had to be done—someone had to meet the emergency. So out marched the National Guard.

Now for many years the general public has been pointing to the National Guard — the State Militia — as a waste of public funds — a useless expenditure of money. Even in the present crisis some unpatriotic, narrow citizens have dared to mock this worthy group and its patriotic work. Especially have the strike agitators done this and at every point purposely misinterpreted the motives and acts of this organization to the workers.

Even now little does the public as a whole realize the conditions that exist in some of our cities. And to a still smaller degree does the general public understand how well the National Guard is meeting this situation.

War conditions are prevailing in the disturbed textile centers and with a fine spirit these men in the National Guard have left their homes and jobs to protect the people who want to work and see that they enjoy this blessed privilege and necessity. They have unselfishly answered the call to protect property and quell riots and prevent would-be riots. Their participation is a neutral one. Their place is to protect property of everyone involved, to protect the workers against aroused strikers, and vice versa. Through this group business has received a serum to prevent a perfect paralysis of trade. Thousands — even millions of dollars have been kept in circulation by keeping the textile mills open where possible. Thousands of workers have been kept from the list of starving and unemployed.

It is indeed civil revolution that we are now engaged in. It is a serious affair. Military camps have sprung up overnght here and there. And around them bayonets bristle, loaded rifles threaten trouble-makers, machine guns menace from the tops of buildings, tear gas bombs and steam hose lay ready for instant use on agitated mobs. Soldiers walk guard night and day.

In their leisure of a few hours now and then these soldiers may be seen happily conversing with girls working in the mills or even girl pickets. Many of these same boys are members of the U. T. W. A. In the next few hours—who knows—these young men may, in line of duty, have to wound or even kill the fathers or brothers of these same girls. There is a tragedy of war in such a scene. No one can predict just what may happen any time. And some bright person intimates that the boys are having a sort of vacation!

But the National Guardsmen are doing their work cheerfully and willingly, it might even be said that they are undergoing a great experience —an interesting experience. Yet it is not something to be desired. It is as nerve-racking as sitting on a battle-front staying on guard night and day waiting for something to happen, having to stay in reach of a rifle when eating or sleeping. Yet there is no lack of courage or coolness or discipline in these groups of militia. Some of America's finest citizens.

In the majority of places where these soldiers have been mobilized peace reigns. And peace reigns only because they were there. Without their presence mob rule agitated by "flying squadrons" would have reaked destruction and caused a retrogradation of business.

Now the mills are rapidly reopening and a calm has settled over the turbulent textile centers. The National Guard has met the situation and stands ready at any time under competent leadership to meet any emergency. It is for the public to appreciate this and extend its full backing to this branch of the service.

And occasionally there is a slip between the hip and the lip.—The Greenville News.

Museum of Educational Progress

Above is a cartoon drawn by Robert McLees, giving a picture of the typical freshman looking over the implements of war used by sophomores of days gone by. We say of days gone by, because P. C. no longer holds to those traditional (and in many cases necessary) methods of orienting yearlings into the society of college life. No more can upperclassmen demand their rights by means of a strong, stern paddle. Nor still can they coil a soft, yet firm, strip of cowhide, worn from past years of dutiful service, about the now soft and tender body of a horsey "rat." Not even can a coat-hanger be bent into the artistic form of a carpet beater for the purpose of straightening out some of the kinks and curves of the new arrivals. We are becoming civilized; we are becoming a real aid to humanity by taking these little fellows into our bosoms and shielding them from hurt and harm.

But what is happening to the freshmen while we are laying on the top shelf these weapons of medieval time? With all the emotions and impulses of human nature they avidly take advantage of the generous-hearted sophomores. They impose upon their kindness, and then ask for more. The "weaklings" and "toughies" alike (the latter illustrated above) are beginning already to forget that there are such things as senior and upperclassmen privileges. They are more egotistical, more self-centered; they are becoming the very opposite of what we had hoped to make them by our gentleness.

Truly, educational progress for the freshmen nowadays is suggested only by the "primitive weapons" kept as ancient relics in the museum of past history.

It seems to be the unanimous opinion of juniors and seniors that getting back to school isn't so bad after all. We were expecting no better than to see a freshman class of about the same caliber as last year's rats, and, lo and behold, how much better they turned out. Judging by appearances, the new bunch of freshmen looks about ten times better than their predecessors. Here's hoping they don't disappoint us.

The upper classmen who have returned report a summer spent in various occupations. Some, for instance, tell gory tales of working in strife-town cotton mills. Others went to C. M. T. C. camps or to Camp McClellan, at Anniston, Ala. Pug Perrin, who generally spends his summers on the Union county chain gang, managed to stay off this time and was numbered among those at the latter encampment. Still others went to the Chicago World's Fair, as in the case of Roy Forehand, who rolled logs in a swamp the remainder of the summer. Pug Perrin, Robert Higbe, Tom Estes, Bill Clark, Roy Forehand, and several others played quite a bit of baseball during the vacation period. Tom Estes also worked in a furniture store, but decided to quit the job and play baseball after he unfortunately ran the elevator through the roof. Finally, quite a number attended the P. C. summer school, including Robert Higbe, Phil Adams, Joe E. Brown, Woodrow Tisdale, Frank Waldrep, T. Upshur and Shorty Horne.

The writer of this column, while at the Young People's conference held here on the campus this summer, had a date with a girl whose idea of conversation seems to run in terms of T. Upshur. The social lion spoken of was on the campus at summer school during the conference. He happened by that night and stopped to talk to the would-be journalist's date. After he left, the charming lady, evidently finding her company too boring, suggested that the two of them go down and talk to Upshur a while. Since very little enthusiasm was shown by her escort, however, she dropped the matter. But from then on she continued to make highly enthusiastic comments concerning her new interest, such as, "I think T. is just darling, don't you?"

We notice that Captain Blanton has come out with a true Hitler-style mustache. It was thought last year that Librarian Wee Willie Jones' lip-covering looked weird enough, but—well, what do you say?

Had you noticed how unusually genial our librarian has become since his marriage during the summer? One boy went by to see him during vacation and tendered his congratulations. After a moment of light conversation, the young man added, "By the way, I owe you a twenty-cent fine on some books and—"

"Oh, forget it," interrupted Wee Willie, and the delinquent student went on his way rejoicing.

ENTERTAINMENT

MOVIES

Monday and Tuesday—Marlene Dietrich in "The Scarlet Empress." This Paramount film is high-lighted with scenes of wondrous beauty but the story of Catherine of Russia is a dull presentation of the life of the German princess (Marlene Dietrich) brought to Russia by the Empress (Louise Dresser) to marry half-wit Grand Duke Peter (Sam Jaffe). Embittered at the horrible termination of her romantic ideals, she favors the army officers who succeed in making her Empress. John Lodge is effective and Dietrich always fascinates.

Wednesday—"Kiss and Make Up." This Paramount production has plenty of laughs. Beauty specialist Cary Grant, his patient, Genevieve Tobin, Edward Everett Horton, the husband whom she divorces to marry Grant, and Helen Mack, the latter's secretary, are all involved in this merry romantic mix-up. Grant's taxi chase after Helen and Edward Everett will have audiences rolling in the aisles.

Thursday — Irene Dunn's starring vehicle for RKO-Radio, "This Man Is Mine," is a delightful society comedy-drama. The sparkling dialogue, excellent taste and casual naturalness are a joy. A grand girl named Tony (Irene) is happily married to Ralph Bellamy. Fran (Constance Cummings) his old flame, comes back to town, and can't tolerate the thought of her old beau married. She goes to work on Ralph. Success. But Tony handles the situation masterfully. Kay Johnson deserves a big share in the honors as the sees-all, knows-all sister, with pertinent remarks from the sidelines. Sidney Blackmer, whom Fran brought along for the ride, is perfect.

Friday — "Murder in the Private Car." This M-G-M film is a riot of thrills, laughs and nonsense which covers up any weak spots in the plot. Things happen when Mary Carlisle discovers she is a missing heiress and, with Una Merkel, sets out in a private car to meet her father. Charles Ruggles, a "crime deflector," and Russell Hardie add to the confusion. Climax is reached when the car is uncoupled and starts back down grade.

Saturday — "Friends of Mr. Sweeney." This Warner production is a comedy without one guffaw. Weak gags, stale situations and slap-stick antics handicap Charlie Ruggles, who puts forth noble efforts as a once rowdy college lad who becomes a brow-beaten editorial writer. Eugene Pallette, a college chum, shames the old fight back into Charlie. There are gaming tables, false fire alarms and a crooked politician. Ann Dvorak, Berton Churchill, and Dorothy Burgess are in the supporting cast.

the Presbyterian campus, with L. D. Stribling, H. G. Prince, W. K. Thompson, S. A. Wilson, and Willard L. Jones as charter members. In 1926 it was admitted to the Pan-Hellenic Council, with Wilson as its representative.

In January, of 1927, these five, with nine others, petitioned the Alpha Lambda Tau fraternity for a charter, and on the 12th of November, 1927, Iota, the first chapter of that fraternity in South Carolina, was installed.

William Randolph Hearst, and his son are prominent alumni brothers.

In the faculty of Presbyterian College, the fraternity is represented by charter-member W. L. Jones. Prof. S. M. Huntley is also affiliated with the chapter.

The end of the year 1933-34 saw the Alpha Lambda Tau at the top of the list of fraternity scholastic averages. It is well represented in the Student Government, Glee Club, debating teams, Y. M. C. A. cabinet, International Relations club, on the staff of the various publications, and in the various honor fraternities.

Beta Kappa

Founded 1901 at Hamline University.

In 1923, the Omega, a local club on the Presbyterian campus, petitioned Chi Tau National Fraternity for a charter and was installed as Epsilon chapter on January 26th, 1924. In 1928 the National Fraternity became hopelessly disrupted, and on February 25th, 1929, Epsilon Chapter voted to submit its charter to the National Secretary of Chi Tau, and to assume the temporary status of a local with the name of Chi Tau Epsilon. On the 19th of April, 1929, the sixteen members of the local petitioned the Beta Kappa Fraternity to grant them a charter. The petition was successful in view of the excellent standing of the local as a member of the Pan-Hellenic Council, heading the list of fraternity scholastic averages at the time, and in other extra curricular activities in which members were prominent. In 1930, Alpha Eta Chapter of Beta Kappa was installed at Presbyterian College.

T. E. Lothery, Physic's Professor now on leave of absence, was taken into the chapter some time ago. In 1933-34, it had men in the Glee Club, Orchestra, Student Council, International Relations Club, Chi Beta Phi (Honorary Scientific Fraternity), Delta Chi Alpha (Christian Leadership Fraternity), and on the debating team.

Presbyterians were forced to punt. Henry Woodward, all-state back, entered the game for Clemson, ran two plays, gaining 15 yards on one of them, and placing the the ball on the 15-yard line as the half ended.

Clemson received the kick-off and opened the second half with a series of gains over the line, but the Calvinists, and in particular Tisdale, soon put a stop to that. Clemson punted deep into Blue Hose territory, and it was then that Wilbanks made the longest punt of the day, 70 yards—from his goal line to Clemson's thirty. Clemson advanced the ball to the 41-yard marker and Bolick recovered a Jungaleer fumble to give P. C. the ball. A pass an a penalty gave a first down. A long pass, Wilbanks to Yearout, was ruled complete when Robinson, of Clemson, interfered with the receiver. Line plays failed to gain and a well-executed punt by Wilbanks went out of bounds on the nine-yard line. The Tigers punted to the 44, then a superb pass, Wilbanks to Higbe, put the Calvinists within 18 yards of their Mecca. Bolick and Abbott placed the ball on the five-yard stripe. A forward pass by Wilbanks was grounded in the end zone, as one man covered the passer while the remainder guarded the receivers. The Blue Hose started another passing attack late in the half, but it was checked by the Tigers and the game ended as Clemson received Presbyterian's punt.

P. C. gained 78 yards from the line of scrimmage, while Clemson gained 193. The Blue Hose made five first downs to their opponents' nine. Clemson attempted nine passes, completed six for a gain of 55 yards and had two intercepted. The Calvinists attempted 11 aerials, and completed four for a total of 42 yards.

R. O. T. C. NEWS

The Presbyterian college unit of the Reserve Officers Training corps began a new year on the past Monday after the indiviuals of the unit has a most pleasant or otherwise (mostly otherwise if you are talking to a senior) vacation at their various abodes, resorts, hangouts, girls' homes and what not. The number in the unit seems to be practically the same as that of last year, though no definite data can be got from the office of the P. M. S. & T. at the time of this writing. Although the unit is the same in numbers, the present organization is fortunate in having a considerably larger force to instruct it this year. If you care to know further just ask Captain Blanton to step on the scales once. The assistant P. M. S. & T. has added about fifteen pounds to his person during the summer. Evidently it was something he "et." And more than this, we often see another new face in the vicinity of the office of the Commandant. It is none other than a little bunch of hair, one-third poodle and two thirds dog, which Captain Wysor has dubbed "Absolom." Other than these (and Captain Blanton's brand new mustache) the officers of our unit are same as last year.

Following out a new plan in regard to the schedule that will be pursued on the drill field each day, this year the P. M. S. & T. will issue each week a "training directive" for the work of that week .Then from that directive the company officers will make their own schedules. This is to be done in an effort to develop initiative and a sense of responsibility in the company officers, for this after all is the main purpose of this course in military training. The soldier who can do the reasonable and logical thing in an emergency is the soldier who will earn the dollars that Uncle Sam has paid him during his period of training.

Freshmen will be given special instruction in the fundamentals and scope of the drill schedule before they are placed in ranks with the other members of the battalion. It is hoped that by the time they have all drilled separately for a couple or three weeks they will have become so obsessed with the hopes of having a brand new uniform that they will have forgot the old characteristic cornfield walk that is so prevalent among them at present. That's one home training that freshmen have perfect liberty to forget.

Sophomores will take notice that tryouts for the advanced corps of next year began on Monday past. If any sophomore desires to be on the payroll of the Eagle next year he had best be on hand at all of those tryouts. It might be well to bring along a hatful of wits too, for they are never out of place in a place of that kind. Note, however, that if no wits are avialable, half-wit will not be taken as a substitute.

GLEE CLUB HAS FIRST PRACTICE

Three Dozen Singers Assemble Thursday To Work With Dr. Huntley and L. A. McCall for Autumn Concerts.

Glee club rehearsals got under way Thursday with about 35 tested voices making the melodies for Dr. S. M. Huntley, director. Most of the old men are back, since very few of the club members were seniors last year.

The first tenor section has six veterans back in Plunkett, Forehand, Collings, McAlpine, Hudson, and Clecklar, but apparently they will have to fight hard for places against the competition of L. Jones, Seawell, Newland, and others.

The second tenors inciude McCall, Valley, Guess, Horne, Weeks, Dunlap, and Seawright, with a host of other singers trying for berths.

Baritones Lake and McDonald are back, and Winn and Johnson are shifted to first bass, but the rest of the volume must be from new men in the club, such as Barringer, Anderson, Charles, and others.

Underwood and Tiller are returning to the depths of the real second bass and have Wardlaw, Heath, F. Johnston, and Singletary, as part of the group to go it with them.

Several of the new students, especially those from Lake City, show results of excellent voice training.

Popular and classical pieces will be used, besides several sacred numbers and one or two light ones. "Sylvia" and Handel's Largo are almost sure to be used, and others are being selected.

Trips are already being talked, even at this stage in the game. The club and orchestra are likely to get "all-aboard" on the "dream train" just after Thanksgiving for a three or four days round of concerts.

Steenbergen Wins Pi K. Phi Cup

At the end of each year, the Pi Kappa Phi social fraternity presents a cup to the freshman who attains the highest scholastic average during the previous school year. Due to the fact that commencement week came before the under-class examinations last spring, the cup could not be presented then. It was announced that it would be presented at an early date this year.

At chapel last Tuesday, Doyle Boggs, the leader of this fraternity, presented the cup.

It was won by Charles Steenbergen of Point Pleasant, W. Va. Steenbergen was complimented very highly by both Boggs and Dr. McSween, president of the college. Steenbergen is also a member of the student council.

Legare Elected Cheer Leader

At the chapel hour Tuesday morning the election for head cheer-leader was held.

The election was finally narrowed down to Ben Legare and Jack McAlpine, who were the two competent cheer leaders from the freshman class last year. Legare was finally chosen by a very close margin.

At an early date, three assistant cheer-leaders will be chosen by the student body to help Legare with the college cheers for this year.

Next Game With Howard Saturday

The next game for the Blue Stockings comes on Saturday, Oct. 6th, with the Howard College team, the contest to be played at Birmingham.

The following week ,Oct. 13th, the Presbyterians have an open date.

Alexander Holds Water Trophies

Blond Sophomore Says Little About Silver Cups and Medals Won For Expert Swimming and Diving.

By Hugh Holman

He walks around the campus day by day as if he were just another student, and to the innocent freshmen of this year he is another sophomore and not very athletic because he doesn't play football. But the freshmen are wrong for the gentleman in question is Alan Alexander. To us old boys that name is synonymous with extraordinary swimming and diving. But the other day I began wondering if we knew just how good the boy was, so I interviewed him.

The past summer he won the men's fancy diving contest and the 50-yard free style swimming race in the Atlantic City meet, and two trophies on his reading table bear mute testimony to the fact. Press reports from the Atlanta Georgia, The Constitution, and The Journal spoke of "difficult dives which he executed with ease," "the most interesting event of the entire meet," and "the most exciting dash." In winning the men's fancy diving event he defeated Vernon Brown, captain of the Georgia Tech team, Southeastern intercollegiate diving champion, and the only man to best Furman's superb Sacco last year.

These were not Alexander's first victories. For two years he was on the Atlanta Boys' high team and won the City Prep championship both years. He was Georgia State Y. M. C. A. diving champion in 1933, and Atlanta low board champion the same year. Last year, while representing P. C., he earned the South Carolina freshman intercollegiate diving championship.

When I asked him how he came to be a "merman" he modestly replied, "Oh, I just took it up!"

We're looking for great things from him this year. He should put the Blue Hose on the map—or, rather, on the water.

Fraternity Survey For Those Who Contemplate Pledging a Society

It is the purpose of this article, the second and last on the subject, to present an impartial sketch of each of the six fraternities on the Presbyterian campus. Any departure from this rule is unintentional. To void possible accusations of partiality, they appear in alphabetical sequence. Past issues of the PaC-SaC and committees from the fraternity in question furnished the information here set down.

Kappa Alpha

The Kappa Alpha order was founded at Washington college, (now Washington and Lee), located in Lexington, Va., in 1865, immediately after the close of the Civil war. At present there are 67 active chapters. Probably the most famous living K. A. is Admiral Byrd.

Beta Pi chapter of Kappa Alpha was installed on January 19, 1924 (Lee's birthday), after being chartered on the 29th of the preceding December with charter members: J. F. Mason (first president, first man initiated into the new chapter), P. S. Bailey, Ben F. Knowles, T. M. Robinson, P. H. Bomar and W. O. Player. The Aesir club, a local association which had been in existence for a number of years, was absorbed.

It was the third Kappa Alpha chapter to be established in South Carolina.

Beta Pi chapter has been prominent in the life of the college since its inception. Seven of its twelve presidents since 1924 have also been presidents of the Pan-Hellenic council. Two of its alumni were collegiate boxing champions of South Carolina, Rev. W. S. Scott of Bamberg, and R. E. Sims, '24, of Chester. James Witherspoon, all-state and all-S. I. A. A. football man, was a member of the chapter.

At present, Beta Pi chapter numbers in its roll the editor-in-chief of the 1935 PaC-SaC, and men active in all branches of extra curricula activity.

Pi Kappa Alpha

Founded 1868, University of Virginia.

Pi Kappa Alpha was one of the first two fraternities to install chapters on the Presbyterian campus, Mu chapter of the order being established on December 9th, 1890, with three charter members: W. R. Owens, Darby M. Fulton, and Samuel G. Hardin.

The other was the Phi Phi Phi fraternity, which had been organized at some college in Texas, had only two chapters, and remained active only until shortly after 1900.

For several years Mu chapter had no regular meeting place, assembling in the rooms of various members. In 1894, a room was secured in a private home for a time, but the nomad existence of the group was resumed later, to continue until fraternities were banned by the administration of the college in the spring of 1909. On the 12th of October, 1921, the ban being lifted, the chapter was reestablished.

Over 24,000 men have been initiated into the national fraternity since its foundation, and 82 chapters now exist.

Dr. Thornwell Jacobs, president of Oglethorpe university, was initiated by Mu chapter into the organization. Eleven alumni of the chapter served in the World war, one being decorated. For the year 1925-26, it received the Rexall award given by the national fraternity.

At present, the chapter ranks include: Editor-in-chief of The Collegian, president of Sigma Upsilon, president of Blue Key, president of the glee club, and vice-president of the

Grid-graph Shows Progress Of Game

Local Crowd Follows Play-by-Play Presentation of Mercer Game In College Auditorium.

The so-called "grid-graph" installed last week by Coach Johnson was pronounced a nuge success by the spectators who saw it work Saturday during the Mercer game. P. C. fans in school and in the city of Clinton were enabled to see the game going on almost as well as if they were right there on the field in Macon. According to Coach Johnson, P. C., is the only school of its size in this section of the country that has installed one.

The machine is in the form of a rectangular board eight or ten feet high and somewhat longer, set on the stage of the auditorium. In the center of the board at the top is a screen. In the classroom below is a telegraph instrument, operated by a Western Union representative. As play-by-play reports of the game came over the wire from Macon the operator sent the messages up to the auditorium where a point of light flashed on the screen, showing the position of the ball.

On each side of the screen is a line-up for the respective teams, giving the name of each player. When a player makes a tackle or run with the ball, an electric light bulb next to his name flashes on. Also there are various plays such as "punt," "pass," "kick," touchdown," etc., which are indicated at the proper time by a flashing on of lights. Then, too, there is an adjustable arrangement for showing what team has possession of the ball, the number of the down and yards to be gained. And of course there is a score board.

Quite a bit of excitement was manifested by the crowd when Perrin unexpectedly went in the game, and when the team threatened to score several times in the third and fourth quarters. Naturally, the grid-graph brought a storm of applause when Higbe scored the winning touchdown and Horne made the extra point good.

BLUE STOCKINGS COME FROM BEHIND TO WIN IN LAST PERIOD

Higbe Takes Ball Over For P. C., and Horne Kicks Goal To Cinch the Game. Seventy-five Yard Run For Touchdown By Bloodworth of Mercer Is Feature of the Day.

The blue-clad warriors from Presbyterian college came from behind in the closing minutes of the fourth quarter and gained sweet revenge against the Mercer Bears for a 52-0 slaughter year before last. With a varied running attack they put over a touchdown and an extra point which won the game for them by a score of 7 to 6.

The tide began to turning toward the Presbyterians late in the third quarter when Perrin entered the game for the first time this season. Apparently, his presence put new life into the Calvinists, for almost immediately they started a series of marches toward the goal line, which, although halted temporarily, finally gave the Blue Stockings their one-point margin of victory. On the third of these marches Higbe carried the ball over, and Horne kicked the extra point.

In the latter part of the third quarter, P. C. got possession of the ball after Forehand grabbed a Mercer fumble on the Presbyterians' 34-yard marker. From then on it was a question of how long Mercer could hold the blue-jerseyed gridsters. After two tries at the line failed to gain, Perrin went in at quarterback, and then things took on a different complexion. On his first run of the year Perrin gained six, and Higbe made it a first down. By a combination of passing and line-plunging, the P. C. backs carried the ball to the Mercer 27, only to lose it on an intercepted pass.

Allen soon punted out to midfield, and Higbe brought it back to the Bears' 40-yard stripe as the quarter ended. Two incomplete passes and a loss by Higbe left the ball on Mercer's 43, but on the last down Holliday flipped a long aerial to Yearout, who lugged it to the 10-yard line. Here again, however, the Blue Stockings were denied a score. Thrown back to the 13-yard line and failing in two attempted passes, they completed one pass, however, on the last down; but it was good for only two yards, and the ball went over.

Bloodworth punted out to his own 48, where the ball rolled dead. Helped along by two penalties, Higbe and Bolick led the team in making two first downs and carrying the oval to the 13-yard stripe. Another penalty helped Bolick and Holliday take it to the 2-yard line with first and 10 to go. Bolick again went through the center of the line and put the ball on the one-foot line. Higbe was then thrown for a yard loss, but on the next play he breezed through right tackle for the touchdown. Shorty Horne made a beautiful placement kick of the extra point. Mercer was passing as the game came to a close, but one was intercepted and the whistle blew as Bolick took the ball to the Mercer 42-yard stripe.

Mercer's first threat came in the first quarter when Presbyterian lost the ball on downs on their 42. Lee and Allen together made it a first and 10 on the Calvinists' 17-yard ribbon, but were forced to punt on account of a heavy penalty. Early in the following quarter, however, after an exchange of punts, Bloodworth, diminutive substitute quarterback, received a kick on his own 40-yard line and dropped the ball in front of him but scooped it up and, with wonderful interference, sidestepped his way down the sideline for a touchdown, making the prettiest run of the afternoon. This same man, however, failed to convert the vital point after touchdown.

As a whole, the boys from P. C. played heads-up ball, and showed marked improvement over the form exhibited against Clemson. No weak spots were evident in the defense. Boggs, Horne and Tisdale were especially noticeable in stopping line thrusts, while Thompson in the back field showed up unusually well in both offense and defense, especially the latter.

On offense Perrin seemed to be the spark-plug in the fourth quarter drive that led to the touchdown. Bolick, the dynamic driving fullback, showed power that was reminiscent of his spohomore year when he scored so many touchdowns through just such smashing line plays. Wilbanks played his usual steady, dependable game, featured by good punting.

Bloodworth was Mercer's outstanding star of the game. Besides making the score, he bore the brunt of much of the Bruins' ball-carrying, and made some nice gains. Robert E. Lee, phenomenal star of last season, ran well until he was hurt early in the second quarter and Bloodworth came in to take his place. Allen, the Bear fullback, also did some good running. Nesmith, the Mercer right end, stood out in defensive play. Curry, Lichter and Altonen also did good work in breaking up P. C. plays.

The starting line-up:

Presbyterian (7)		Mercer (6)
Yearout	le	Warlick
Tisdale	lt	Williamson

McCutchen Runs Tennis Tourney

Fall Contests Being Played By Frosh and Upperclassmen. Keen Competition Develops "Just For Fun."

Those newly-strung tennis rackets and those tight muscles are being put in shape for the forehand drive and the overhand smash. The courts near the Science hall are now places where only those who fear not the flying ball dare venture. For the annual fall tennis tournament is well under way.

The directors of the affair, Chalmers McCutchen and Doctor Cae, have posted a list of players that contains forty-two brackets for the "varsity" and sixteen for the freshmen, and already several of these matches have been played off. Some of the tennis "sharks" are already talking about "when I get to the finals."

This tournament has no effect on the tennis team. It is in no sense a try-out for that select body. It was arranged merely for the "edification and pleasure" of the student body.

Carson Is Named Collegian Editor

Charles E. Carson, of Atlanta, Ga., was elected editor of The Collegian, college literary magazine, to fill the term of Hart Odom, who did not return to school this year. Carson's appointment was Olee Johnson.

The new editor has been active in literary work at P. C. He has been interested especially in writing for The Blue Stocking. He is a member of Chi Beta Phi, honorary scientific fraternity, the Y. M. C. A. cabinet, and Beta Kappa social fraternity.

Is This Civilization?

We were reminded the other morning in chapel of some of the queer customs and superstitions of the Congo Africans. It was intensely interesting to hear of these "dark-age" beliefs, and most of us could not conceal an occasional smile. There was the instance of a man who received corporal punishment because he was thought to have hurled a ball of lightning, killing a fellow native. We are amused by these things; we even laugh outright.

But we wonder if the native is afraid of toads, daring not to touch one for fear of receiving warts; if he is dubious about walking under a ladder; frightened when he breaks a mirror (assuming he has one to break); or if he mumbles the words "bread and butter" when going around the wrong side of a tree. Does he count his beads as he prays to the sun-god; or does he tell his children of "Santy Claus," and scare them half to death with stories of the "bugger man"? Perhaps the African native, barbarous and savage as he is, would have a hearty laugh if he were told of our civilized American traditions and customs.

Something New In the College Line

We received this week the first copy of a new publication called "Formal, The College Magazine." Introducing itself on the first page, it says that it is created to present an interesting college magazine to modern college men and women of America. There is a list of the kind of material it will print — fiction, articles by business and social leaders, sophisticated humor, glimpses of campus life, etc.—and a statement to the effect that it favors all things harmonious with the art of fine living.

The intentions seem serious enough, and certainly it is a right-about-face from its only predecessor in the field, the once vigorous "rah-rah" and now-extinct College Humor. The last-named exploited the poor college student in its collegiate jokes and John Held, Jr., illustrations. It probably did a great deal to create the "collegiate" type of undergraduate. But in its heydey college undergraduates were in a somewhat lesser degree "collegiate." But according to current opinion a new college student has been evolved, presumably born of the depression and the New Deal.

And "Formal" sets out to be the champion and the official representative of this new college student and his school. It is apparently a good idea. It aims to offer a medium for expression of ideas by college students. It may present intelligently material which will concern the American colleges or be of particular interest to the American undergraduate. It may fill an empty niche in the field. We do not know that it will. But meanwhile we watch its beginning with interest.

Crime Never Pays

As daily we follow the Lindbergh kidnapping case and daily we see new developments in the maze of evidence that is being untangled, one thing emerges very clearly and that is the fine work being done by the police and operatives of the federal government. The ingenuity with which the Federal authorities and State and municipal officials have sought for so long to find the answer to the mystery. At the beginning there was very little for them to act on, save for the ransom money. In addition to the latter there were a few footprints on the nursery floor, still more footprints outside the nursery window which disappeared in rocky soil near the Hopewell home, a makeshift ladder, the memory of an eerie rendezvous of an intermediary, and scraps of handwriting in the ransom notes. With so little to start with, the officials have followed these thin threads of evidence to their source and left no stone unturned on the paths which led from these origins. Step by step and piece by piece they have fitted these details into a coherent outline of the case which has been used as the base in their pursuit of the criminals.

In their patient study of the case no bit of evidence was too small to be disregarded. The ladder was examined and by building a facsimile it was possible, by testing it, to determine what weight it would carry and by the spacing of the rungs the approximate height of the guilty one. Each one of the ransom notes was examined minutely under microscope and in test tube by a toxicologist for any clue to the identity of the person who had passed them. Bits of glycerine were present on some of the money. This suggested that the man distributing the currency was a mechanic who ground his own tools. Much of the money was also found to have a musty smell, from which the authorities drew the conclusion that it had been buried long or hidden where the air could not reach it. The latest developments in the uncovering have borne out this last conclusion to be unerringly correct. Picked men kept untiring watch for each tell-tale gold certificate and traced each one with bull-dog tenacity. The handwriting of the ransom notes has been compared with that of the suspect and seem almost identical.

The fullness and completeness with which the investigation has been conducted, even long before a suspect was arrested, and the rate at which new developments are being achieved, indicates that a complete revelation will be attained. In this thoroughness there lies a distinct warning for any who might be contemplating a life of crime or any the execution of one single misdemeanor. A warning that will not be ignored . . . CRIME NEVER PAYS. And there emits fresh assurance to the public of the competence and fidelity of enforcers of the law.

College Bristles With New Paint

The shining dome of the "Ad" Building was probably the first glimmer of Presbyterian College to strike the eager eye of the freshmen. Far down the Greenwood road the silvery top can be identified above the greenish trees, brilliantly designating the position of the Alma Mater. To the freshman it was a star of new and budding hope; to the upperclassmen it was a beacon light calling them home.

This aluminum "top-not" is one of the many improvements made on the campus during the summer. Previously a coating of tar, with a rather repelling look, adorned the building top. But now we can glance with pride on its sparkling beauty. And not to be outdone, other edifices on the grounds acquired new clothing. Spencer and Alumni dormitories were repainted inside completely. The dining hall is the most noticeable, excepting the Administration building dome, having received several new fixtures as well as paint. Even the floors were scraped and polished.

It gives one quite a sense of satisfaction to return to a college campus and find so many improvements. It shows an interest of the administration in making our system of learning just as pleasant as possible.

Student Opinion

FIRST OFFENSE

A spirit of discontent with the first two lines of Section 1, Article IX, of the Student Government Constitution has been manifest in the student body. Expulsion as the penalty for a first offense in a moral lapse such as cheating seems an exhorbitant measure, even though the culprit may have had a semester's residence in which to familiarize himself with the Honor System.

So many individuals take the puritan attitude of "If thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out." The analogy of Hell fire as the alternative need not be carried into this question of degrees of guilt. Expulsion for a single slip may mean the blasting of some boy's future prospects—a stigma carried for the remainder of his life. A little indulgence, a little charity, should be allowed for the well-known imperfection fo human nature.

On the other hand, society is gradually drifting to an avoidance of extreme penalties as useless and wasteful. Warden Lewis E. Laws, of Sing Sing prison, with opportunities for the close observation of those who slip, and a vast store of sympathetic understanding, is one of the chief opponents of capital punishment. A death penalty for reckless driving, for instance, would do little to stamp out the evil. Witness the thousands of murders committed annually, in the face of the universally known laws of the Chair and the Rope. Then why, with this precedent, is the fear of expulsion — the extreme penalty under the College Constitution—expected to do away with a first offense, and therefore, cheating. The result has outgrown the cause.

Monday and Tuesday — Claudette Colbert and Clark Gable in "It Happened One Night." This Columbia picture is a romance garnished with lots of laughs. The love story concerns Ellie (Claudette), an heiress, and Peter (Clark), a newspaper reported out of a job. They meet on a night bus. Ellie traveling incognito, is running away from her father (Walter Connelly) to join a worthless young man she has recently married. For financial reasons, the journey of Ellie and Peter, from Miami to New York, finally resolves itself into hitch-hiking. They stay in tourist cabins at night, and Peter properly hangs a blanket (which he names "the walls of Jericho") between them. While Ellie sleeps Peter leaves her to rush ahead to New York and sell the story of her adventures to his ex-editor for $1,000. He returns to help Ellie with his money, but she, believing he has deserted her, brings about a complication in which her husband figures. However, in the end, the conniving father rescues the romance, and the picture winds up hilariously with "the walls of Jericho" being blown down. Clark Gable's at his best, yet in winning new honors for himself, he steals nothing from Claudette. The picture has a rare quality of comraderie with the audience—permitting those watching it to share the experiences and fun of the players. Skilfully directed.

Wednesday — "Sing and Like It." Not a dull moment in this devastating RKO-Radio mirthquake in which soft-hearted kidnap king Nat Pendleton devotes his gangster power to making stage-ambitious Zasu Pitts a Broadway star. This, much to the distraction of Producer Edward Everett Horton and disgust of jealous ex-chorine Pert Kelton. But all ends well. Loaded down with all the aisle-rolling humor of this quartet, and Ned Sparks.

Thursday — "She Was a Lady." Helen Twelvetrees is miscast in the first part of the film, but seems more at home as the gambling-den "come on" in the latter half. She is the daughter of Ralph Morgan, who marries his mother's maid, Doris Lloyd. After his death, Helen fulfills her father's wish that she go to England and be a "lady." Snubbed, she takes the gambling job and Donald Woods. This Fox picture is just so-so, but fine work by Doris Lloyd.

Friday—Chester Morris in "Embarrassing Moments." Having played one too many jokes on his sweetheart, Marian Nixon, and on a friend, Walter Woolf, Chester Morris has the tables turned on him, with the result that he believes himself a murderer, escapes to Mexico and endures harrowing experiences. Grand work by Morris is offered in this Universal film and it never affords a dull moment.

Saturday—"Here Comes the Navy." Punches! Thrills! Climax piling on climax, laid against the background of battleships and dirigibles in one of the best Cagney films to date. Jimmy, a hard-headed riveter, sets out to satisfy a grudge against petty officer Pat O'Brien by joining the navy and eventually O'Brien's ship. Then he falls in love with the officer's sister, Gloria Stuart, and the war is on. Transferred to the aircraft division, Cagney comes to the rescue of his enemy, O'Brien, who has been accidentally carried aloft on a dirigible rope. Of course Jimmy wins Gloria and a promotion, but his cockiness is never conquered. Frank McHugh adds to the fun as his buddy. Warners.

ALUMNI

REMEMBER HOMECOMING DAY, WOFFORD GAME, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 24

William P. Jacobs, '14, and Coach Walter Johnson, while in New York uring the month of August, attended a meeting of the New York chapter of the P. C. Alumni association. The alumni secretary has a letter from Mr. Jacobs in which he says: "We had an interesting meeting in New York. We were rather proud of the fact that we had a banquet at the Pennsylvania hotel, and all their bulletin boards carried announcements of the dinner of the New York chapter of the Alumni Association of Presbyterian college." And from J. P. Young, '26, now junior sales manager of the Literary Digest, comes this news of the meeting: "A temporary organization was formed and J. G. Miller was elected president. The writer was honored with the position of secretary and the two of us were authorized to draft a constitution and other necessary things . . . Present . . . Paul Carson, '26, and F. G. McHugh, '29." Joseph Graham Miller, '24, is a prominent lawyer in New York. He is now a district attorney and was an assistant to Judge Seabury during his investigations into the city's juicial affairs.

The alumni secretary has been receiving dues daily for the past week from members of the alumni association in almost every part of the United States. Prospects for the collection of more dues this year than ever before now seems almost certain. Dues include subscription to The Blue Stocking.

The Blue Stocking is to be mailed regularly this year to all alumni in the class of 1934 as complimentary subscribers.

Plans are being made to have a big day at the Wofford game, Saturday, Nov. 24th. In addition to the meeting of the alumni association that day there will be special class reunions for the classes of 1914, 1919, 1924, 1929 and 1934. The alumni and their guests will have a reserved section of the stands during the game. Between four and five hundred alumni present is the goal that has been set.

J. Isaac Copeland, '31, received the M. A. degree from Peabody this summer. He also received the Algernon Sidney Sullivan award at that time. He is assistant librarian at Peabody.

Send the alumni secretary news about yourself and about other alumni. It is especially important that changes in address be sent in, that the mailing list may be corrected.

An event of interest to Presbyterians of the state was the ordination and installation of Rev. Thomas M. Johnston as pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Greer, S. C.

After graduating from P. C. in '31, he attended the Biblical seminary in New York for the past three years. His brother, Frank, of Jefferson, Ga., is a member of this year's freshman class at P. C.

K. R. Corbett, Presbyterian college alumnus, of the class of 1934, has recently married and is now living in Augusta, Ga., where he is employed by the Kress company. Mrs. Corbett is the former Miss Winnie Seigler, of Wagener, S. C., and is a graduate of the Edisto academy. The ceremony was performed Sept. 6, in Aiken.

"Ken," as he was popularly called on the campus, was a science student, receiving a B. S. egree. He also was a member of the Block "P" club, as a result of his work on the boxing team.

senior class. It is represented in almost every activity on the campus, and in the faculty, Dr. McSween, Dr. Brimm, Dr. Jones, and Capt. Wysor are brothers.

Pi Kappa Phi

The Pi Kappa Phi is the only native South Carolinian among the fraternities on the Presbyterian campus, being founded at the College of Charleston in 1901. Contacts and friendships developed through intercollegiate relations resulted in the installation of the Beta chapter of the fraternity here on March 16, 1907, by two of the original founders, L. H. Mixson, Sr., and Andrew Kroeg. The fraternity became a national organization to accommodate the expansion. Pi Kappa Phi now numbers 44 chapters, and approximately 6,300 men have been initiated since its foundation. In 1900, fraternities were abandoned at Presbyterian college.

In June, 1920, the ban was removed, and through the efforts of J. P. McMillan the chapter was reinstalled on the 5th of February, 1921.

At present, Beta chapter has the following honors: Editor-in-chief of The Blue Stocking for the last two years, secretary of the Pan-Hellenic council, president of the senior class, business and art editor of The Collegian, president of the student body, corps commander and two company commanders in the R. O. T. C.

It has men active on the staffs of the various publications, and in the glee club, orchestra, Sigma Kappa Alpha, International Relations club, Blue Key, and in most of the honorary fraternities.

At the end of last year it ranked second on the list of fraternity scholastic averages.

KAMPUS KETCHUPS

Since rushing season for fraternities got under way, eligible freshmen have been enjoying an even greater amount of attention than is usually the case at this time of the school year. Many are the methods of rushing outstanding rats. Socials, smokers, informal trips to the picture show (paid for of course by the fraternity man), and week-end excursions, are just a few of the methods used to attract new men. Some freshmen are never seen on the campus without a bodyguard of rushing committemen escorting them around. One frat man complains that certain members of a rival club actually sleep with prospective pledges, in order to guard them from evil influences.

Bull-rat Pike has been giving Christine Peake the big rush lately. As a result she was aptly dubbed "Pike's Peake."

Last year an athlete made the suggestion that The Blue Stocking be done away with, and instead block P sweaters should be given to members of the various athletic teams. In that case, the owner of the sweaters would have to sell advertising space on their sweaters, in order to make up the deficiency in funds which is bound to occur in the event any such scheme is put through.

Thomas Barringer, outstanding social leader of the sophomore class, is loudly bemoaning the fact that Middie Cook, his weakness of last year, did not return for this session. Most any time now he can be seen sitting in front of the picture of his fair lover in rapt admiration. He says, however, that she did not depart without making the promise, "I'll write you every day."

Bo-rat Pike, the social lion referred to above, is not by himself in the possession of social graces. His own room-mate, the incomparable Jack Dempsey (Pitman, to the unitiated) was sporting around the other night at the Casino with a certain auburn-haired co-ed.

The sign on the wall just outside The Blue Stocking office advertising the College Pressing club, is, we admit, a nice-looking affair. However, we were unable to figure out whether the person depicted there was Yearout or McInns.

Colin Hudson Speaks To 'Y'

Continuing the General Theme of Vocational Guidance, Talk Is Based on "Scientific Research As a Life's Work."

Last Thursday night approximately thirty-five college students attended the thirty-minute "Y" meeting. Colin Hudson, pinch-hitting for Dr. J. H. Davis, brought out several interesting points in a brief discussion of the topic, "Scientific Research A a Life's Work." This was a continuation of a series of subjects dealing with the general theme—vocational guidance.

The speaker pointed out that all modern conveniences are a result of scientific research. The fact that the one who can keep one notch ahead of his fellow scientists will be the pacer of the field was brought out by directing the mental eyes of the audience upon the man who put ridges on paper clips, thereby smothering the smooth-edged clip makers into oblivion. Touching on the spiritual side, the speaker reminded his hearers that no matter how deep they might go into science they could and should still find truth in "the heavens declare the glory of God and the firmament showeth His handiwork." He cautioned that should one forget God he would become lost, as none of God's great laws are repealed. The short talk was closed with these words of warning and advice, "the science field is great, but don't neglect God in going into it."

R. O. T. C. NEWS

WANTED: Musicians for the college band. Anyone who can twist or otherwise turn his mouth in the shape of a saxophone mouthpiece and say "Ah" at the same time, apply to C. B. Elliott, band captain, immediately if not sooner. A hearty welcome awaits you, for you will be first and maybe last, too. (From all indications the present freshmen took physics instead of music in high school and learned that certain articles get very cold during cold weather, since they change temperature so quickly. However, the need for men of this calibre is so pressing that all men interested will be assured that the Leroy Springs gymnasium is steam-heated. Also, these men can take notice that certain parts of the old army rifle is made of metal too).

The following change was made effective in regard to freshmen in R. O. T. C. this week: These new soldiers are directed to move the wrinkle from thir abdomen and place in on their forehead or in their pockets, as they may see fit. From now on until they have lost the wrinkle these men will be required to brace in ranks in order to correct improper posture. And this doesn't mean that they are to brace on the fellow next to them; but that they are to push their chest out in front and suck everything else back the other way.

Rifles will be inspected and graded on Tuesday, Oct. 2nd, at 2 p. m. Freshmen are directed to learn how to do this cleaning well by practicing up on some of the seniors' rifles.

At present "A" company is progressing a little faster than the other two companies with its drill schedule. Someone has suggested that this is due to the fact that a certain company commander (we don't say which one) has turned over a new leaf. But still it may be that the men in this company are affected by the psychological reaction due to being in "A" company. But all training is progressing very staisfactorily from the standpoint of the whole battalion. The seniors evidently are profiting from their acquirements in summer camp.

HOWARD BULLDOGS UNCORK VERSATILE ATTACK TO WIN

Alabamans Succeed In Bowling Over Presbyterian Saturday, 42-19. Higbe, for Blue Stockings, Takes Punt On 45-yard Line and Races Across Line To Furnish Feature Run of Game In Birmingham. Baptists Successful In All Departments of Play.

A great Howand football team, presenting a versatile attack of smashing line play and an array of hard blocking and fast-stepping backfield aces, defeated Presbyterian college Saturday at Birmingham, 42 to 19.

In the early minutes of the first quarter it was evident that the Blue Hose defense had completely collapsed. Howard scored with ease. Only one time during the entire game did Howard lose the ball on downs.

Before the cash customers had settled down in their seats Howard had drawn blood. Stuart dropped back to P. C.'s 18-yard line and with a highly educated toe, placed a field goal squarely between the uprights. Two touchdowns, one in the first and the other in the opening minutes of the second period, the result of the pile-driving ground play and the fine passing attack which the Birmingham Bulldogs had at their disposal, made the score, Howard 15, P. C. 0.

This seemed a comfortable lead but in this, the second quarter, the Blue Hose rose to heights of real glory. The Howard team relaxed behind this lead, but they had yet to contend with a new passing combination, Holliday to Yearout, the power of Captain Bolick and the elusiveness of a certain Mr. Higbe.

After Howard's second touchdown, the Blue Hose kicked off to Howard. The Bulldogs were forced to punt and the ball was grounded on P. C.'s 45-yard line. A pass, Holliday to Yearout, netted 40 yards and placed the ball on Howard's 11-yard line. In three plays the aforementioned powers of Captain Harry Bolick carried him across the goal line for a touchdown. Howard 15, P. C. 6.

The high light of the game from a Presbyterian viewpoint came a few minutes after Bolick's touchdown. Garrett punted to Higbe, who received the ball on his own 45-yard line. After catching the punt he brought his speed and elusiveness into play and headed for the sideline, turned a right angle and, behind great interference by the entire Blue Hose team, scored standing up. This was easily the prettiest run of the game. It put P. C. back into the running and it seemed that the little team from South Carolina had taken on new life and, with the score 15 to 12 were going to give the Bulldogs a run for their money, but Howard opened the second half with an assortment of power plays, end runs and a very effective passing combination that scored any time they so desired. Howards end run was especially distructive for the Presbyterians. This play was led by a bevy of interferers that blocked out Blue Hose would-be tacklers with tremendous effectiveness.

The game became a track meet in the second half, with Howard doing all the running except in the closing

'Y' Group Hears Dr. F. D. Jones

Presbyterian Professor Speaks On "Calling of the Gospel Ministry" To Students.

Dr. Frank Dudley Jones, one of the most unique speakers in South Carolina and member of our faculty, revealed his own personal views of the gospel ministry to a large Y. M. C. A. attendance last Thursday night. Dr. Jones, the second of outside speakers to bring a mesage on vocational guidance at the thirty minute meeting, spoke on the subject—"Calling of the Gospel Ministry."

In the opening Dr. Jones admitted his stage fright but excused himself in that he wasn't in his class room. After an introduction in which he made clear the fact that he couldn't be fair because many preachers made him sick, the speaker laid down four great difficulties in preaching the gospel.

First of these hardships was the fact that the preacher must be of some contributing spiritual value to his people, not only by what he does but also by what he is. Second the minister must be willing to give himself to the study and interpretation of the art of presenting consistantly good sermons. Third among the hardships given was the fact that the pastor must face a changing social order and adapt himself to meeting the various types of people and to handling the heterogeneous work. The last of the difficulties given was that the man of God must consider the stupendous wideness and profound depth of his calling and can only find a sufficiency to meet this in God and not in self. "These are barriers," Dr. Jones said, "that will make us hesitate."

The talk was sprinkled with personal, and often humorously expressed, opinions of the speaker. A few excerpts which were gems in the talk may be quoted. "One out of three radio sermons are fair but one is doing well when he hears one good one out of eight." "People are greatly interested in the church—more go to church than to the picture show. They go to worship, not on account of the sermons—but in spite of them." "Good preaching is rare because lots of preachers can't preach." "A man seeking the ministry because of rank will be disappointed." "Preaching is based on the knowledge of the truth and a skilfull presentation of it but this is too difficult for most of us." These are some of the remarks that made Dr. Jones' talk both interesting and helpful. He closed by saying, "I would like to mention some things on the other side too."

Are We Snakes-In-the-Grass?

EDITORIAL

"He who tooteth not his own horn, the same shall not be tooted." This usually is quite true. We therefore do not condemn a tooter. But when this same tooter cannot produce a loud enough noise of his own merits, and he is compelled to drag in his neighbor and show up his alleged shortcomings that he may increase the noise, we object. Especially when the degraded victim was at one time a friend of the tooter.

A very unhappy situation arose at the South Carolina synod meeting last week, a situation which is greatly regretted by the student body. A graduate of Presbyterian college, an alumnus, painted a rather dark picture of his Alma Mater.

Present conditions necessitate all social activities, which include dancing, to be held away from the campus. Believing that it would be much more convenient, and at the same time improve the type of our socials, including the dances which are to be held anyway, we attempted to bring these events to the campus under the direction of our faculty. Their presence and influence, we think, would aid in bettering the character of these functions. Therefore we petitioned the synod to allow the trustees and faculty to supervise and control our social activities. This action was a natural one, and done in no spirit of antagonism, yet a member of the synod, a lawyer, an alumnus, openly called us insubordinate, and insolently implied that our trustees and faculty are not able to handle such a situation.

Dancing is a social function and therefore obviously included in the request, yet this lawyer—alumnus, remember—ostentatiously insinuated that we are a bunch of snakes-in-the-grass!

This action by Mr. Henry E. Davis is regretted by the students of Presbyterian College.

Controlling Body Says No Dancing In College Confines

Recent Session of Church Court Featured By Debate On Request of Local Group To Allow Activity On Campus.

At a meeting of the Synod of South Carolina last week, the petition sent from the student body asking that the trustees and faculty of Presbyterian College have jurisdiction over all social activities of the school was rejected. By a vote of 3-1 the Synod kept this matter in their own hands. The petition was signed by Doyle W. Boggs, president of the student body.

The Synod convened two days, Wednesday and Thursday, October 4th and 5th. Wednesday morning the request was read and referred to a committee on educational matters. At the suggestion of Dr. McSween, however, the question was taken out of this group's hands and given a special committee, composed of Mr. H. E. Davis, Rev. J. W. Davis and Rev. Ray Riddle.

Report was made at four-thirty in the afternoon of the same day. The petition would be granted provided no law of the church or ruling of the general assembly be contravined. This decision was in contradiction to itself, since the assembly had previously determined that there would be no dancing on the campus, thus not allowing the faculty and trustees to have full control even under the grant. The report, it seemed, was merely a roundabout way of refusing. Discussion ensued until five o'clock, the time for adjournment, when Dr. McSween requested an extension of time. It was allowed, and discussion continued until five forty-five, when the session was adjourned for the day, with a vote on the report deferred until the following morning.

The question of dancing, although not mentioned in the petition, was freely discussed. Mr. Henry Davis accused the student body of P. C. of trying to bring dancing on the campus under the guise of an innocent petition. In commenting, he said it was "nothing short of insubordination," though just how, he failed clearly to show. Such a thing in a military school, he said, would be considered a shipping offense. In return, Dr. H. W. DuBose, chairman of the board of trustees, said he thanked God this was not a military school. Mr. Davis added further, "It means a request to make the college a dancing hall." His insolent remarks that the trustees, faculty, and students of Presbyterian College are not capable of mature and sound judgment was not very pleasantly received, though it seems to have had some influence with the Synod.

Mr. Davis is a graduate of P. C., but regardless of that fact, he used as much pressure as possible against the wishes of the college.

'Quiet Hour' On For Freshmen

No Upperclassman Allowed To Approach Freshmen In Regard To Fraternities.

Beginning Monday at noon, "quiet hour" for all the fraternities begins. This is the time when no freshman can be approached on the subject of fraternities. Freshmen are then supposed to be at peace in order to think over this all important factor of college life. They are not at that time to be nursed and petted by any upperclassmen that wish them to become members of their fraternity. As is known, some freshmen will already be signed up by fraternities but there are some men who wish to consider their bids.

Quiet hour ends at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon and then all freshmen receiving bids will be called together to make their choice. From this time on, the freshmen are allowed to wear the pledge pin of a fraternity but still cannot join until the first semester is over and they have acquired a certain scholastic average.

Sophomores Jailed For Frosh Hazing

Ohio Wesleyan Students Divest Frosh of Raiment and Sheriff Attempts Rescue.

Delaware, O.—Threatened seige of the Delaware county jail by Ohio Wesleyan sophomores was averted last week by upper classmen after Sheriff C. E. McKinnie, trying to free a disrobed freshman, had taken two students to the jail.

McKinnie said that when he saw the freshman, clad only in nature's vestment, being taken down Sandusky street, main street of the town, he attempted to take the chilly youth home.

At his first move, the sheriff said, sophomores advanced on him in a manner which he took to be hostile. The sheriff admitted he slapped one ringleader and took him and another to the jail office for questioning.

A crowd of sophomores followed and gathered outside the jail to jeer.

Proficiency In Activities At McClellan Again Brings Trophy To Presbyterian

Six weeks' residence in that well-known "balcony of hell," Fort McClellan, Alabama, are written as history in the memories of the boys of the present senior class who were selected a year ago to make up a part of the advanced course in our school's R. O. T. C. unit. Once more the sons of old P. C. have showered their Alma Mater with renown; and once more lovers of the Garnet and Blue have shown the people of the Southland that the quality of P. C.'s three hundred students make up for the apparent shortage in the numbers on the enrollment cards of the school; for once again representatives of our school have been weighed in the balances and found equal to the biggest and best of them all.

It is common knowledge that all advanced course men in the R. O. T. C battalion are required to spend six weeks in summer camp in order to receive their commissions and consequently their diplomas from this institution. However, we venture to say that very few P. C. men know that for three times in the five years that Captain Wysor has commanded this unit it has won the trophy offered each year to the school in the Fourth Corps area whose representatives at McClellan average highest in rifle marksmanship, military knowledge and discipline, and whose men enter more wholly into the program of camp activities.

To this camp thirteen schools, many of them boasting a more extensive military program than does P. C., send their contenders for the "general proficiency" award. These 13 schools includes all colleges and universities in eight Southern states which have a government unit of the Reserve Officers Training corps, and the contin-

Governor-Elect To Speak Here

Hon. Olin D. Johnston To Make Address At Meeting of Blue Key On Homecoming Day.

Olin D. Johnston, South Carolina's governor-elect, will be the guest of the Presbyterian college chapter of Blue Key, national honorary leadership fraternity, at home-coming day, November 24, announces L. A. McCall, president of the chapter.

Johnston is a graduate of Wofford college. After doing postgraduate work at the University of South Carolina for his M. A. degree and earning his law degree, he began his career as a lawyer. He was a member of the legislature from Anderson county and Spartanburg county and in 1930 ran for governor. He was defeated in the second race by one of the smallest majorities ever recorded for the office. In the primary being the closest

Review Of Presbyterian College Social Life Covering Long Period Of Years

Now is an appropriate time for a review of Presbyterian college social life.

As a church college, the first score of the college's years saw scarcely anything more Bacchanalian than banquets, parties and hay-rides in the way of a spree. What dancing done, was done in Copeland hall, which had been the skating rink, church bazaar center and public dance hall of the town for at least three sets of the "younger generation."

Every year, each of the two fraternities, the Pi Kappa Alpha and the Phi Phi Phi, held a magnificent five or six course banquet. These young ladies who were astute enough to avoid identification with either one of the two attended both affairs. The banquets were generally held in the chapel on the third floor of the old building on the Orphanage campus, facing out on Broad street, across the Bailey cottage and Townsend Memorial church on the corner. For a long time a [illegible] from one side of the chapel to the other, accommodated the guests. The old building WAS really Presbyterian college, and all classes were held in it, for Alumni dormitory was the only building standing at that time on what is now the college campus.

The Alpha Psi Delta, and to say, must surrender all claims of being the first sorority upon the campus. The Anthesophian society—jokingly called by the boys the "Ethesians," was organized. Mrs. Ruth Copeland (then Simpson, now connected with the Orphanage) was elected president, and the society debated and banqueted its way through at least two years of existence around 1900. The girls had also an auxiliary to the Phi Phi Phi fraternity, called "The Sisters of the Triple Phi."

The Phi Phi Phi fraternity had evolved, and the Pi Kappa Phi had taken its place (here) by the time the [illegible] in the [illegible] in the autumn of 1905.

Freshmen and Fraternities

Tomorrow some forty or fifty freshmen, if conditions are average, will formally pledge themselves to the six social fraternities on the campus. Today, during what is commonly known as "quiet hour," some of these forty or fifty, unhampered by the more eager members of A.B.C. or X.Y.Z., will sweat out with themselves or their classmates the ultimatum.

There are possibly six reasons why A.B.C. or X.Y.Z. wants a man—they like him, he's a good football player, he dresses sportily, he has money, he comes from a "pretty good" family, or in rare instances because he is intelligent. However, these rules ar not infallible; there are several other less practiced reasons. It may be a case of necessity, and the members resign themselves to pledging a man they don't want. Jealousy on A.B.C.'s part because X.Y.Z. is rushing a man the A.B.C.'s liked "only fairly well" may arouse them to white heat over getting him. But whatever reasons the fraternity has, the rushee seldom knows them, and it's safe to say that his ego expands. If two or three of the lodges are seeking him out and ushering him about he feels himself looking down from no less a height than the Mount of Olympus.

There are any number of unknown reasons why a freshman joins a fraternity, or more particularly, A.B.C. fraternity. He may have been overwhelmed with favors and attention, and not have the heart to disappoint them. He may honestly like the members of the fraternity he has chosen, and on the other hand, he may go blindly in because some other freshman has led the way.

Up until now the whole procedure of rushing has had about it an artificial air. The freshman, unless he is a departure from the average, has made no careful study of fraternities or of A.B.C. He does not know exactly why he wants to join or why he is joining. He really knows surprisingly little about the boys with whom he is aligning himself, and it works both ways. Relationships up until now have been the essence of politeness. We can be fairly safe in saying also that it does not matter a great deal. If a freshman feels that he can find needed companionship "within the fold" let him join, but he could probably find the same companionship outside. The relations in a fraternity are pleasant enough, we admit. The social life can be made enjoyable, and unless a freshman is unusually susceptible to the "our group is the best" idea, a fraternity will do him no harm.

Signatures Not Necessary In Student Opinion Column

Frequently on the editorial page of The Blue Stocking we publish the verbal thoughts of students under the caption, "Letters," "Open Forum," or "Student Opinion." This section of the paper is for the sole purpose of providing a means of expression for the members of our campus group. To such articles usually we do not attach a signature.

There have been instances where these "open-ions" have been [illegible] and commented by some members [illegible] of the student body. While riding along at the rate of a mile a minute [illegible] Colorado examples 70 miles an hour."—Greenville Piedmont.

are the article last year on the subject of starch and an opinion in our last issue on the question of cheating. In clearing up the matter, let us say that both of these were signed when given to the editor, as are all articles of this type.

It is the policy of The Blue Stocking to reserve some space strictly for the opinions of the students, and in order make this as open as possible we withhold any signatures unless otherwise requested by the writers. Let it be noted that other college publications employ this same method. It is our intention to give each student an opportunity to freely express his thoughts. In carrying out this idea we wish to adhere to our former policy.

A new yell has sprung up on the campus. We suspect it of being a species of "hog-call" introduced by some freshman farmer-boy. Others contend that it's only the natural aftermath of Joe E. Brown in "The Circus Clown," just as the Tarzan call lingered long after the picture several years ago. Whatever the origin, it's certainly nerve-shattering.

Words Mispronounced By Faculty

Members of the faculty often make mistakes too (it's taken for granted the students do). During the past week it has been reported that various ones of our professors have incorrectly pronounced the following words. We can't tell tales and names too, so we'll leave off the names. The pronunciation we give is that preferred by Webster's Collegiate dictionary.

Ap"pa-ra'tus . . . first a as in am, second as in ask, third as in ale, u as in circus . . ap-pa-ray'tus.

Me-dul'la ob"lon-ga'ta . . . e as in event, u as in up, a as in sofa; o as in odd, second o as in odd, a as in ale, second a as in sofa . . . ob-lon-gate'ta.

Pro'gram . . . o as in old, a as in am . . . accent always on first syllable. Sometimes spelled "programme," but has same pronunciation.

Nas'cent . . . a as in am, e as in recent . . . the a is never long as in ale, but always short.

E"co-nom'ic . . . e is long as in eve, with accent on third syllable. Short e is permissible, but not preferred.

Status . . . a as in ale, u as in circus. Stay'tus.

Data . . . first a long, as it is in status. Both of these words are sometimes pronounced in the Latin form, but never with the English short a.

Industry . . . accent is on first, not second, syllable.

LORENZO THE MAGNIFICENT

Truly named is that most glamorous figure of Florentine history, of whom David Loth has rendered a brilliant account — Lorenzo de Medici. The work is well written, presenting fully this complex character in all his versatility and exploitations. The author has done well what many have tried to do—to present a vivid personality so that it pervades the whole movement of events. The reader glimpses many figures in this historical episode, and many of these have found prominent niches in the ever-growing temple of lasting fame. But they have histories all their own and it is the son of the Medici that the reader follows throughout the chronicle. His rich and varied personality pervades the entire story.

Lorenzo was born in an "age of bastards and adventurers" but he was neither. He was of remarkable descent, and at the death of his father became heir to the second largest fortune in the world in the second richest city. When he became head of the Medici family, he did his best to follow the traditions of his fathers. As far as was possible he lived the precepts of his ancestors, who were supposed to have received wonderful powers from the Queen of Witchs. She had left to her heirs the key to an enchanted garden where would be found spells of successful sorcery with these words: "Thus you can do all the evil and enjoy all the crime that a great ruler can desire; spare not man in your vengeance, nor woman in your passion, for he lives best who wishes for most and gets what he wants." And as his predecessors had found that banking was a far more useful key than either medicine or sorcery to the enchanted garden of power and wealth, Lorenzo set out to obtain all he wanted.

He figured in politics, he fought wars, he bought everything that he could possibly desire for his family including a cardinalship for his son. He was a patron of the arts, an author of many brilliant letters and verses of poetry. He figured as a lover, a young man about town, and a follower of the chase. But still greater than any of these, he figured as a lover of beautiful pageantry. During his career Lorenzo took every chance for some magnificent celebration. He always enjoyed festivities and tournaments and no one outdid him in generosity of brilliant display. When he turned his talents toward producing a show, the populace was always sure that even family traditions of splendor would be excelled. On perhaps the greatest of these occasions, a tournament in honor of Lucrezia Donati, it is said of him, "So much splendor concentrated in one person had never been seen in Florence until that day."

Normally, this man's face was arresting in its homeliness. He was perhaps the ugliest youth in Florence. But the plainness of his features was blotted out by the dazzling brilliance which surrounded him always and one forgot his physical unattractiveness in his glamorous personality which impregnated the atmosphere of his life.

He lived, he loved, and he gave. After his dramatic passing Ferrante exclaimed, "His life has been long enough for his deathless fame, but too short for Italy."

Higbe, Bolick Star Saturday

Sport Shots

The sports writers of South Carolina are thanking their lucky stars that journalism is one vocation where it is no disgrace to be wrong occasionally And "Scoop" Latimer is probably breaking his arm patting himself on the back. For the general concensus of opinion—the cunning Mr. Latimer excepted — was that the Blue Hose had new and striking uniforms this year—and not much else. On the twenty-first of September those who thought they knew conceded them one game this year. But on the late afternoon of the following day, there was quite a different tune.

P. C. has it on the ball this year—don't let anyone tell you differently—and few will try to! A Clemson team that this columnist—reserving to himself the right to be wrong—believes is headed for something that at least looks like a state championship, was held to a very slim one-touchdown lead, and they almost lost that. A Mercer team that was supposed to beat "us" by many touchdowns (said various writers) took a neat little licking at the hands of the Presbyterians.

We began the year as the underdogs; we are called the underdogs before every game, but we haven't been so far under yet. The hardest game of the year, ,probably, is coming up Saturday (this is written on Thursday). All the dope has it that we will lose. Perhaps we will, ,but one good thing to remember about the Calvinists is that they simply love to upset dope, and that underdog has the moral advantage.

Coach Johnson is to be congratulated on the purchase of the gridgraph that now graces the chapel rostrum. It might not have been a financial success on last Saturday but it was certainly a mechanical success. Next to actually seeing the game, there is nothing that can compare with it. And believe me, the excitement runs high. I may be wrong, but I'm betting that a far larger crowd sees the Howard game vit gridgraph than saw the Mercer encounter. To Coach Johnson sincere thanks for the personal interest and "school spirit" that its purchase displays.

There is one aspect of athletics that is usually overlooked — that is the physical training and pure enjoyment side. We all go out and yell our heads off for the varsity teams—and rightly we do. But there is another side. The sports that are engaged in for pleasure and physical development within the school itself truly deserve mention and praise. Intra-mural contests such as we had last spring, ,and the "just for fun" tennis tournament that is now going on are splendid and wholesome school activities that we feel have been rather neglected. One of the policies of this sports page this year is to report and attempt to stimulate a deeper interest in these sports.

If the professor dismisses his one-thirty class at one thirty-five, and the student answers the question, "Mr. Bromide, who made the greatest contributions to modern civilization?" with "Dizzy Dean," just forget it—for, in case you haven't heard, the world series is going on. And the world series, little children, is the only sporting event that I ever heard of that could overshadow football to any extent whatsoever. May the best team win, but personally, it looks like the Dean boys "have the situation well in hand."

And now for a few bouquets before that darn bell rings: "We're passing out a great big bunch of carnations to "Coach" for the gridgraph. We're handing the nicest roses we can find to "Scoop" Latimer of The Greenville News for the very favorable publicity he has geivn us this year. As for the team—well, they can take their choice, "everything we have is theirs." And to the man who picked P. C. to win but one state game, a lily in hopes that he can use it soon.

Howard Bulldogs Uncork Versatile Attack To Win

moments of the game when a series of bullet passes from the hands of Rex Wilbanks pushed the powerful Bulldogs far down into their own territory. Finally, Harry Bolick, standing on the goal line, reached into the atmosphere to snag a pass for a touchdown.

When Howard turned on their attack at the beginning of the second half, the Blue Hose defense completely folded up. The line was greatly weakened by the injuries of Shorty Horne, Doyle Boggs, Alfred Plowden and James Millsaps. These men played but were greatly hampered by their hurts.

Although beaten beyond a doubt, the Blue Hose fought bravely on, taking the ball from Howard in the waning minutes of play and fought their way to another score.

The Blue Hose were gallant in defeat. The game proved that they have scoring power, and this power should be a menace to the other teams on their schedule.

In the Presbyterian line Roy Forehand, the tall, powerful right end, played great ball. Forehand made many tackles, some of them behind the line of scrimmage.

Two sophomores of great ability came to light in the game Saturday as potential bulwarks in the Blue Hose line. Jim Collings and Julian Freeman performed nobly, to stand out in the line. These men will be heard from later in the season.

Captain Bolick and Robbie Higbe were the chief ground gainers for the Blue Hose, while Holliday and Wilbanks flipped passes for neat gains.

The entire Howard team played good ball and it would be hard to pick a star, unless it was Stuart, an end. Stuart kicked off for Howard and would boot the ball across the goal line with ease. He played a great defensive game as well as offensive. He was especially good at covering punts.

NEW SPORT, SQUIFF BALL, TO MAKE DEBUT ON CAMPUS

Plans Go Forward for Inauguration of Game Exclusively For Freshmen. Sergeant Young To Coach New Branch of Athletics, With Assistance of Several Managers. Schedule Arranged.

According to an announcement made last Monday by Walter Johnson, head coach, a new sport, squiff ball, will be added this year for freshmen exclusively. This game is undoubtedly new to many students here, especially freshmen, since the game has not been prominent in Southern athletic circles. It will be remembered that plans were made two years ago for a team of this kind, but funds proved insufficient at the time. It is entirely new in the South, having been played mostly in Canada and the north central states. Two other schools in this section are to have squiff ball for freshmen; namely, the Universities of South Carolina and Georgia. Coach Johnson stated on his return from Columbia Monday after conferring with officials of the two named universities that if the experiment is successful the three schools, and probably some others, will feature the new game in their varsity programs next year.

Freshmen will be glad to learn that the coach of the new athletic department will be none other than the genial uniform outfitter, Sergeant Sterlin Young, who also presides over the armory. Sergeant Young is eminently well qualified for this position, since he participated quite a bit when he was a member of the soldier team put out by his post of the regular army when he was located in North Dakota two years ago. Another man on the campus who knows the game is a new student, Degener, who attended the University of Wisconsin last year. Wisconsin put out a rat team last year of which Degener held down the post of left squiff. He will not be able to help with P. C.'s freshman team, however, since he is at present working for a position on the varsity football team.

Little is known here about the nature of the game of squiff ball. Sergeant Young said, however, that it was originated in Canada and is now rapidly spreading to the leading schools and universities in the States. He added that brainy and agile men are needed and that weight is not a factor. Another good feature of the game is that there is practically no danger of sustaining injuries. Many leading sports authorities of the country have acclaimed it as the coming thing for college students. For instance, Howard Jones, head coach at the University of Southern California, said, "I consider squiff ball the ideal game for the average college and high school boy." Then, too, Grantland Rice, nationally known sports writer, made the prediction, "In ten years, squiff ball will be a part of the athletic program of almost every college and high school in the United States." Other authorities have made similar statements.

Coach Young issued a call for all freshmen who are not out for football to come out for his team. All have the same chance, since no first year men have had any experience whatever. Little men need not be discouraged, for small size is an advantage in some positions. Freshmen who are interested in going out should turn in their names to Seargeant Young at once as equipment has arrived and practice will begin in the next day or two. Two or three managers, to be selected from the sophomore or junior class, will also be chosen. Candidates for these positions should also report to the coach and he will give careful consideration to their qualifications.

A schedule has been arranged by Coach Johnson. It follows:

October 13—Carolina at P. C.
October 18—Georgia at Athens.
October 27—Carolina at Columbia.
November 1—Georgia at P. C.
November 8—Carolina at Columbia.
November 15—Georgia at Athens.

There are not a great many electric trucks in New York, but perhaps the largest fleet belongs to the Railway Express company. Large, sluggish trucks, they're much in the way of traffic in the garment district in the late afternoon, picking up the shipments of the day marked for stores from Walla Walla to Tampa.

The funniest little electric trucks, though, belong to Tiffany & Company. And they're, oh, so very clean and so very, very old, with four very solid rubber tires. And one of them is driven by a very respectable looking old gentleman with a very respectable looking Van Dyck beard—very!

Hugh Layne, editor of the American Detective magazine, tells me that in his opinion, not one fourth of the Dillinger case has yet been solved. He gave as his authority Eamuel Cowley, one of his writers who is the U. S. Department of Justice agent who is reputed to have killed Dillinger.

Saw the much publicized "Prince Mike" in the bar of the Weylin the other day. Posing as a Romanoff, Prince Mike, a personable little man, has been entertained by all classes of society. After one more week of drill (there are only about ten more before Christmas) "A" company still seems to have the edge on the other two from the standpoint of military proficiency, even though "B" has shown great improvement and "C" has been making some noticeable progress since the last issue of this strip. Evidently, the upperclassmen in this first named body still have a large supply of the new leaves that were mentioned in the last issue of this paper. But we do not intend to discourage the fellows in the other two companies,, for the old maxim says, "The race is not always to the swift." The spurts don't count — it's the consistent improvement that will earn for anybody the praise of his superiors when the final reckoning day comes around next spring.

The band has begun its yearly practice, but all practice so far has been behind closed doors since those directing the playing decided the music was not suitable for delicate eardrums of which we have a few on our campus. Captain Wysor promised the unit last year that he would find a new word for his "putrid"; so he used that new word the other morning in describing the music the band was rendering. "It sounds like green grapefruit," he remarked when he heard the tremendous amount of volume that escaped from the room where the band was locked in. So now we are advertising for fellows who have "quality" instead of "quantity." De luxe, if you please.

Tuesday's rifle inspection seems to denote that the present sophomores and juniors have exercised very poor judgment in selecting the freshmen who were to learn the art of cleaning rifles by practicing on theirs. This year no threats or promptings can be given delinquent rifle-cleaners; so these instructors had best pick their students with extreme accuracy.

Since the coming of cooler weather the regulation uniform of the corps will be "with blouse." This advice was welcomed by the seniors because they could get a good chance to exhibit the medals they won at summer camp. The juniors were glad because they could wear their new chevrons, and the sophomores were made happy because they could—well, wear one shirt more than a week if they so desired.

The annual "awkward squad" has been assembled for the work at hand under the supervision of Cadet Sgt. E. R. McAllister. The men have been collected from the various parts of the whole unit and all seem to fill the requirements for such a degree excellently. At least, all come to this squad highly recommended by their officers. In fact, some of the men have even been rated in the superlative degrees of their order. But now to be serious. We intend the above to be taken very lightly by the fellows in this squad; for we can assure these men that several of the cadets in authority in our unit came up from ranks such as these. It's like being from the country. It's no disgrace to be in the awkward squad; but it is a disgrace to stay in it for any considerable time.

To date all unauthorized absences, in fact all kinds of absences, are about fifty per cent lower than they were for the same period last year. Perhaps new doctors who don't have the enticing red, white and blue pills that the boys liked so well last year can be taken to account for this difference. But then the dread of the long march to the hospital may have had its effect too.

Did you know that:

There are five captains and three first lieutenants in the P. C. faculty.

That all our major wars have been declared in April. (Thus disproving the poet's statement that in the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love).

That the United States army stands seventeenth in strength among the armies of the nations of the world.

That a certain officer on our campus says "Squads right, woof."

That some of our officers are planning to change the present command, "Rest," into a command with a preparatory phrase, namely: "At ease, rest."

That Captain Wysor is firmly disapproving of the proposed change.

That the above change will not be made.

That some of our men in the advanced course have given the men reporting the absences from chapel the command, "Post," after receiving their reports.

That some of the sophomores who are trying out for next year's advanced course still think that "platoon" is spelled "pontoon." Has someone made a bridge out of these fellows' noses?

Of the total of 1,046 applicants for admission to the St. Louis University Medical school, only 148 were allowed to register.

KAMPUS KETCHUPS

Social items of the week:

Five charming ladies from Lander college drove by P. C. Sunday, but they were sadly disappointed on learning that Frowein, the object of their visit, was not at home. Their disappointment was somewhat alleviated, however, as they were entertained by Yow and Dean, ably assisted by a few lesser social lights.

Ben Covington, former campus political leader, returned to P. C. this year in the form of his cousin, Joe Commander.

John Todd, outstanding freshman from Laurens, spent several nights with George Dunlap last week.

Christine Peake was escorted to a fraternity social a few days ago by Rat Liddell. Roland Pike please note.

Harry Bolick suffered a severe fall on the floor of Smyth dormitory when pushed by a freshman. Coach Johnson expressed hope that he would be well in time for the Howard game.

Strange and interesting facts every P. C. man should know

Dr. Kennedy does not especially enjoy riding in motorcycle side cars.

It has never been proved that Robert Higbe listens to grand opera over the radio.

Dr. Brimm has never been seen wearing shirts with sport collars.

Buster McIntosh has a nation-wide reputation as a weight-lifter.

Dr. McSween once delivered his morning lecture at chapel without first clearing his throat.

John Rauch one time walked thru a dormitory and did not yell, "Royal Dry Cleaners!"

The following poem is reproduced here to show the marks of genius present in some members of our student body. The author of this monumental poetic work transferred this year from another school to P. C., presumably on account of the tremendous literary advantages our school offers in comparison with those of the college he formerly attended. Here his genius will be given free rein, and he is expected to turn out some outstanding pieces of prose and poetry.

The poem here reprinted is a typical example of the modern school of realism in poetry, with its touches of humor and pathose mingled throughout:

Into a cafe
One day
Rushed a man.
Waiter, said he,
I would like
A cup of coffee
Without cream.

I am sorry, sir,
Quoth the waiter,
But you will
Have to have it
Without milk;
We don't have
No cream.

Several malicious critics of this column will no doubt try to delude its readers into thinking that this is a subtle method of creating dissatisfaction with Judd hall fare. Nothing could be further from the truth. The authors of this contemptible untruth are merely ones to whom public censure has been directed after their becoming exposed in their various misdeeds thru the enlightening paragraphs of this column.

What's this we hear about Hick and his tight-lipped girl at Winthrop? Snip! Snip! Snip! Guess we'd better cut this out right away.

Weather report for this week: Rain on Pike's Peake.

Free dancing lessons were offered to Loyola University (Chicago) freshmen so that none of the newcomers would have an excuse for staying away from student social functions.

Henry L. Green, 83, of Chicago is the oldest living graduate of the University of Wisconsin. Class of 1872.

Monday and Tuesday—Will Rogers in "Handy Andy." Will at his very best makes this standard formula picture a real knockout hit. It's all Will—but that happens to be plenty. As usual, Will is an uncouth husband—an apotheeary this time—of an ambitious wife. She badgers him into selling the store for social relaxation, grooms their daughter for a wealthy marriage, forces Will into golf and finally a social excursion to the Mardi Gras, all against his wishes. But it's funny how Will manages to win out with his passive resistance. Will is seconded by good situations, clever comedy lines and believable burlesque. Supporting cast with Peggy Wood, Frank Melton and Mary Carlisle splendid. Sophisticate or softie, sixteen or sixty, you'll enjoy this Fox film.

Wednesday—Myrna Loy and George Brent in "Stamboul Quest." A spy story that is equally as great as Greta Garbo's "Mata Hari." As compatriot of Mata Hari, Myrna Loy is excellent. George Brent is the man. He is a most ingratiating American doctor who gets mixed up in German-Turkish intrigue. Lionel Atwill is his menacing best as head of the secret service. C. Henry Gordon is perfect as the villain. The oriental background in this MGM production adds much to the glamour of the plot.

Thursday—"Finishing School." This expose of one of those ultra-ultra debutante "Corrals" wavers between comedy, a preachment and drama. But you will like Frances Dee who flaunts the school's snobbery to love poor interne Bruce Cabot, and then — well, girls will never learn. But marriage solves it. Frances and Bruce are excellent, Ginger Rogers steals her usual scene quota, and Billie Burke is the fluttery society mother in this RKO-Radio production.

Friday — Marion Davies and Gary Cooper in "Operator 13." A Southern extravaganza, with Civil war background, which is more musical than historical. Marion Davies is attractive either in her natural color or in the octaroon make-up she wears as "Operator 13," a Northern spy. Gary Cooper, spying for the opposite side, falls for his enemy. Jean Parker is top-notch. Katherine Alexander, Ted Healy, Sidney Toler and the Four Mills Brothers complete this MGM cast.

Saturday—Warner Oland in "Charlie Chan's Courage." This Fox picture is certainly the least amusing of the Charlie Chan series, with Warner Oland doing nothing much besides tiptoeing around in a cook's costume. The story, involved and sleepy-eyed, concerns a string of pearls and the trouble Chan had to deliver them. There is a near murder, a real murder, four crooks, a moving picture company on location and a romance between Donald Woods and Dorothy Lovett.

Chesterfields are milder
Chesterfields taste better

Ripe home-grown tobaccos

We begin with the right kinds of mild ripe Domestic tobaccos. Then we age and mellow them like rare wines for flavor and taste.

Aromatic Turkish tobaccos

Next we add just the right kinds and the right amounts of Turkish tobaccos to give Chesterfield the "seasoning" that helps to make them taste better.

Blended and cross-blended

Finally we "weld" these tobaccos together the Chesterfield way—different from any other—to make Chesterfield a milder better-tasting cigarette.

Proficiency In Activities At McClellan Again Brings Trophy To Presbyterian

[illegible] for the cup is getting more rigid as each year comes around. In fact, it is a credit for any school to win this award one time in ten years; but when we, being one of the smallest of all the 13, win the cup for three times in five years, it seems that it is time to tell the world just how it is accomplished.

Of course no direct factor can be cited as the one which won the cup this past summer; but perhaps the most potent one was that this year's Cadet Major, D. W. Boggs, acted as student representative for all P. C. men in camp, keeping always alert to see that every man was doing his best at whatever he was allotted to do, and that every opportunity was seized to get things done for the whole unit. But lest we convey the idea that Major Boggs was the only man in camp, consider some of the things the other fellows did down there.

For instance, when the training directive said "four days on the rifle range" our men conducted themselves in such a manner that they returned to camp at the end of the period with a cup which had been offered to the school whose men made the highest score on the range; and, of course, they brought along a whole box of minor awards. These last include the "marksmanship" medals which were earned by every P. C. man there save five, and three "sharpshooters" awards which were bagged by Clark, Carothers and Jeanes. Then, in athletics our men won the cup offered for the most representative boxing team, while Bolick and Clark won the camp championships in their weights, and two others were in the finals of their bouts. The school's baseball team got into the semi-finals of the tournament, and four P. C. tracksters won a cup by forming the fastest oral message relay team in camp.

However, not all our military attainments were in Anniston this past summer, for C. B. Elliott, P. C.'s representative at the chemical warfare school, took a course in this phase of military training and after taking an exam at the end of six weeks along with men from all parts of the United States, came home with a medal saying he had made the highest record of any man in the school

Yep! It seems that honors continue to pile on this man's school in the foothills of South Carolina as the years roll by and as she sends more and more men into the battle of life. Some gripers may call it "luck," but we call it "pluck." Some of our feminine friends may call it "grand"; but we call it "grandiose."

Review of Presbyterian College Social Life Covering Long Period of Years

thean Literary societies were two other organizations which had banquets. How long they made it a practice is undetermined, but during the years between 1909 and 1921 they were THE social organizations on the campus, as well as the literary.

In 1921, the ban being removed, both the Pi Kappa Phi and Pi Kappa Alpha fraternities were reorganized, followed by the establishment of other societies: Kappa Alpha (1924); Chi Tau (1924-1929), becoming Beta Kappa in 1929; Alpha Lambda Tau (1927); Alpha Kappa Pi (1928), and the Alpha Psi Delta sorority (1934).

In 1927, after the departure of Dr. Douglas, and while Dr. Spencer was acting president before the arrival of Dr. Parkinson to take that position, the presbytery instructed the board of trustees to instruct, in turn, the faculty of the college to prohibit dancing on the campus. As it had been a faculty rule prior to this time, very little was said about it. In 1932 the synod repeated the ruling—that no society dances should be held on college property. Last week when the student body's petition was presented, a substitute motion was made and passed that the synod adhere to its position of two years ago.

Present-Day Science

TRANSMITTED CHARACTERISTICS

The question of the inheritance of acquired characteristics is still haunting the scientific world. Work is continually being done in the field. Instead of human beings, lower animals are used in the experiments because of their high birth rate. In the case of rats, which are used most frequently, one experimenter can observe many generations of the species.

The latest report has come from Prof. William McDougall, who believes acquired characteristics to be inherited. Prof. McDougall, formerly of Oxford and Harvard and at present at Duke, has closely watched and recorded the actions of thirty-seven generations of ordinary rats. He puts the rodents in a tank of water from which there are two pathways of escape. One, however, is charged with electricity. Each generation, after numerous trials, learn to take the non-charged path the majority of times. The question is, will their progeny learn any quicker than they? Will the trait of using the unelectrified path, lighted to distinguish it from the other, be transferred to the newborn rats? Prof. McDougall's trials show that they will. The latest, thirty-seventh, generation chooses the correct way a larger majority of times than did their predecessors.

These tests are not conclusive, but they weigh heavily in favor of inheritance of acquired traits.

—Chas. E. Carson.

HARDWICK TO LEAD SERVICES

Y. M. C. A. Secures Outstanding Leader For Special Services Monday Tuesday, Wednesday. Has Varied Experience.

Jim Hardwick, all-Southern end of V. P. I. and former assistant coach at Ames university, has been secured by the Presbyterian College Y. M. C. A. to lead special services on October 15th, 16th and 17th.

Mr. Hardwick will speak at special exercises on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday and will also conduct services in the chapel at 7:00 p. m. on Tuesday and Wednesday. The visiting speaker opened his work in Clinton, however, on Sunday, Oct. 14, at the Thornwell Memorial church at a special gathering of young people at 6:30 o'clock.

Mr. Hardwick was a lieutenant in the army during the World war, was captain of the V. P. I. football team just previous to the war, in 1916. He was also secretary of the student Y. M. C. A. at Vanderbilt university, and later freshman coach and student counselor at Ames university. He re-received his degree at V. P. I. and did graduate work at Southern Y. M. C. A. college, Vanderbilt and Yale universities.

While at Ames university, Hardwick was assigned by the faculty as the faculty advisor for the Pan-Hellenic council and specialized in work with fraternity men. During the last four years he has spent all his time in visiting the colleges of America, working largely in the South and middle West.

Mr. Hardwick is probably a stranger to the majority of the students here but is familiar to those who have had any experience in Y. M. C. A. work. It is the desire of the "Y" that as many students as possible make appointments for personal interviews or group conferences with him, as he is thoroughly versed in problems of college life.

The Y. M. C. A., under the leadership of Van M. Arnold, is indebted to Wade Perry, former state Y. M. C. A. president, for securing this outstanding leader for these meetings and a hearty response in attendance and interest is anticipated by the "Y" council.

Mr. Hardwick arrived from Columbia Sunday and will probably stay on the campus during the time spent in Clinton. He has, for the past week, been conducting a series of services and conferences on the compus of the University of South Carolina.

Arnold Addresses 'Y' Meet Thursday

"Challenge of Foreign Missions" Is Theme At Weekly Session. Newland Presides.

"The Challenge of Foreign Missions" was the general theme of the Y. M. C. A. program last Thursday night. The meeting was presided over by Tom Newland, a new member of the sophomore class, whose home is in Korea. E. J. Arnold brought the message of the evening. He drew much of his subject matter from the retreat of the Student Volunteer conference which he had attended the previous week-end.

After a few remarks about this movement, the speaker brought out the fact that there is a tendency of more young poeple giving their life to Christ by going to the mission fields. He cited several illustrations as evidence of this changing attitude. Finally, the speaker discussed the need of more missionaries in such places as China, Africa, India, and many others. The challenge was revealed to the students in the Y. M. C. A. and they were urged to think over this chance to render service to Christ and mankind.

Holman Elected To Lead I. R. C.

Was Former Vice-President. J. J. Rauch Named To Fill Place. Meeting Was First of Year.

The International Relations club held its first meeting of the school year last Wednesday evening. A number of vital matters came up for consideration.

First was the election of two new officers for the coming year. Since Venable Martin, the former president, is not back in school, a new head was elected. Hugh Holman, formerly vice-president, captured the office. J. J. Rauch wa sselecetd to fill Holman's old place as vice-president. E. A. Andrews is secretary-treasurer of the organization.

Another matter that came up was the election of new members. Nine places in the club are vacant at present. Five of these were filled by vote of the club. The other four places will be filled by competitive examination. The men who have accepted bids are Charlie Carson, Abbott Lake and Tom Plaxico. The other two have not yet been heard from.

As stated above, the four remaining places will be filled by examination on everyday happenings in international affairs. All men, whether freshmen or upperclassmen, are eligible for membership. The exam is short and not at all tedious, as no questions requiring answers of more than one or two words are asked.

One of the best features of the club is that it is supported by the Carnegie Peace Foundation. This organization makes gifts of books on international politics to International Relations clubs throughout the cuontry. In the past few years a great many books have been added to the P. C. library through the channels of the local club.

Last year several members of the society journeyed over to Rock Hill to attend the Model League of Nations, held at Winthrop college. The club hopes to send at least ten men this year to represent P. C. Another interesting meeting at which the college will be represented is the Southeastern Conference of International Relations clubs which will convene at Davidson college, the North Carolina Presbyterian institution.

Court Tournament Now In Final Stages

The battle to the death on the Science hall courts is rapidly narrowing down. The going has proven too hard for all but two of the men. Elimination matches have removed some from the race, and fear of the speeding ball has given several men matches by default.

The semi-finals are over. Levi beat Tiller to qualify for the finals, and McCutchen defeated Gregg for the privilege to play Levi. The match between these future Tildens will be played some time this week.

Many New Books For College Library

About Two Hundred Added So Far This Fall. Many of Special Importance Now Available.

The Presbyterian college library has acquired about two hundred new books this fall. Since school opened one hundred and thirty have been catalogued and are now available for circulation. Other books have been ordered, and it is estimated that the library will acquire several hundred new books in the course of the school year.

Some of the titles now available are:

"Encyclopaedia of the Social Sciences, volume 13." This brings this valuable set down through "Service." The work should be complete sometime during 1935.

"Stars Fell on Alabama," by Carl Carmer, a Yankee professor at the University of Alabama, who gives his impressions of Alabama. This is one of the most talked-of books of the year.

"Dictionary of American Biography, volume 14." This reference work, published by Scribner, is now complete through the biography for "Samuel Ball Platner." It is hardly possible that this set will complete the alphabet before 1936.

"Sherman, Fighting Prophet," by Lloyd Lewis. A biography of "War Is Hell" Sherman, well written and carefully compiled by Mr. Lewis,, who sees much military genius and broadmindedness in his hero. However, it is doubtful that this interesting account will remove the stain from his name in the minds of South Carolinians.

"Man of the Renaissance," by Ralph Roeder. "The asceticism of Savonarola, the expediency of Machiavelli, the conviviality of Castiglione and the sensuality of Aretina, taken together, compose the man of the renaissance."

"Marie Antoinette," by Stefan Zweig. A new biography of the unfortunate queen of the stupid Louis XVI.

"Who's Who in America, volume 18." The volume for 1934-1935.

"Arrow of Lightning," by Beatrice Ravenel. A small and attractive volume of verse by a South Carolinian.

"Man Nobody Knows," by Bruce Barton. A biography of Christ.

"House of Adventure," by Warwick Deeping. A novel by the author of "Sorrell and Son."

Several books of travel are very good: "On the Stream of Travel," by James Norman Hall; "Where Strange Gods Call," by Harry Hervey; "In Barbary," by E. Alexander Powell; "Hot Countries," by Alec Waugh, and illustrated with woodcuts by Lynd Ward; and "City of the Sacred Well," by T. A. Willard.

THE LAND OF TIGERS AND MOUNTAIN GODS

By R. C. McLees

"It's been raining so much in the last few days that I feel almost as if I were back home in Korea!" It was the remark of Tom Newland, from the island where nature either gives rain enough to drown the crop, or maintains an arid indifference and burns it up. Sometimes there is a veritable "rainy season" for about ten days about the middle of the year, and sometimes drought seizes the eastern heavens and locks in tight all of the moisture so necessary during the summer for the flooding of the rice transplants. Newland remembers the occasion of an unseasonable dryness, threatening the destruction of the young plants in the green rice paddies. Up the sides of the mountain, Moodie San, climbed a horde of women, about four hundred, each armed with a homo—a small hand-hoe, and each filled with a grim determination to find and drag from his peaceful grave the evil person whose interment there had angered the mountain spirit. Over the inclines they crept, scratching in the soil with their little implements. Resting on the serene slopes of Moodie San were the remains of ten old priests. The women attacked each mound with vigor, and strewed the air toward the valley with the dust. They probably "got their man." It was also customary to carry up to the two highest peaks of the mountain bundles of wood, for a bonfire to propitiate the god whose vindictiveness stayed the rain. Once when the superstitious Koreans were bringing up wood, the Newlands told them that tigers were about. The natives inside, found several tiger cubs, and slit the faggots while it was yet day, so as to be able to be back down the mountain before night fell. Similar bon-fires could be seen, points of light, on other mountains as far as sixty miles away.

Newland says that until he arrived in Richmond, Virginia, he had never eaten "chow mien" . . . that oriental of all oriental foods. Attending a boarding school in Korea, four hundred miles from home, he lived much the same as a boy here in America. Once every week there was served, alternating, a Chinese, a Japanese, and a Korean meal. Suykiaki—"sk'yahki" could be obtained at a native restaurant in town. Labor is cheap in Korea, where a moderate income can easily maintain the menage of a capitalist in America. The Newlands' family cook was a yarner of the old school. "A story-teller is a big-shot in the village." Among the tales he told, there is the one about the men, going back home from market through the mountains. The leading man felt a shower of dust in his face — then again. Realizing that it was caused by a tiger, he promised it his best dog if only he were allowed to reach home unmolested. The tiger desisted from his dirt-throwing activities. Reaching the edge of the village, the men were met by all of the dogs. First came the pet of the promiser, and as he neared his master, the tiger bounded out of the darkness, seized the dog, and made off as had been agreed. Another that the cook told was of the adventure of a native woodchopper. The men saw a tigress leave a crevice in a rock, near where he was working. After the animal was gone, he crept he saw the mother crouched, snarling, in the mouth of the cave. With great presence of mind, he put the cubs back down, and began to stroke their tawny fur, and to praise their beautiful eyes and claws. With maternal vanity, the tigress lapsed into a pleased smirk, purring and gently waving her tail in the air. Sliding along the wall, the man [illegible] and ran down the mountain.

Tom Newland was born in Mokpo, Korea. In filling out his card, Sergeant Young was puzzled as to what he was . . . not a naturalized citizen . . . not born in America, until Newland explained that his parents were Americans and missionaries. They are required to carry an American passport, however, in order to prove themselves citizens of the United States.

According to plan, his family spends seven years in Korea, and then comes for a sabbatical year in the States before another seven. He made his first trip to America shortly before the end of the war, in 1918. He does not remember the voyage, but has been told by his mother about how the Japanese vessel zigzagged without lights over the waters made treacherous and dangerous by submarines and raiders. He went back again in 1919, and arrived on American shores again in 1925, only to turn around and head back to Korea in 1926. Since 1933 he has been in America attending college . . . but the rain makes him feel at home!

P. C. FRATERNITIES ADD 52 AS RUSHING SEASON ENDS

Kappa Alpha Leads List With Thirteen Pledges; Pi Kappa Phi Second. Majority of Men From This State.

Fifty-two freshmen and new students signed up with the six campus fraternity chapters when the annual rushing season was concluded with pledge day on Tuesday, October 9. Several whose bids were extended beyond that time have pledged since.

Kappa Alpha headed the list with 13 new men to her credit, and Pi Kappa Phi ran a close second with 12.

Most of the men are from South Carolina and Georgia, though several other states are represented.

Following are the fraternities with a list of their pledges:

Alpha Kappa Pi: J. C. Johnson, C. H. Holman, M. W. Bird, C. M. Cappelmann, R. B. Dean, E. L. Jaillett, J. D. Latimer, W. M. McConnell, Jr., R. S. Pike.

Alpha Lambda Tau: E. R. McAlister, Wm. Blackwell, W. R. Craig, W. S. Darby, M. A. Hipp, E. M. Jennings, T. C. Liddell, Jr., J. B. Penland, G. C. Sewell.

Kappa Alpha: Lynn Jones, T. E. Addison, H. P. Brown, Jr., J. S. Caldwell, H. B. Carpenter, N. O. Creech, B. H. Dreyfus, M. M. Hemphill, C. W. Isom, M. C. Patterson, J. W. Todd, W. R. Williams, J. A. Witherspoon.

Pi Kappa Alpha W. P. Burns, W. T. Caviness, E. C. Frierson, Jr., E. A. Johnson, R. C. Jones, W. A. Moore, W. B. Peeksen.

Pi Kappa Phi: J. C. Gasque, W. M. Degener; J. C. Hutchinson, O. C. Luey, C. L. Anderson, H. F. Bialock, E. F. McLeod, J. N. Mishoe, J. W. Steenbergen, Joe Seawell, Joe Commander, Billy Jones.

Beta Kappa: T. W. Newland, R. K. Burns, G. W. Collett, J. M. Hollis, J. L. Lyle, J. C. Townsend.

P. C. Men Attend Retreat At Adger

Presbyterian college delegates attending the state Y. M. C. A.-Y. W. C. A. retreat at Camp Adger in the mountains above Pickens bring back reports of inspiration and a good time.

The three-day assembly found 50 representatives of at least ten colleges in the state hearing chosen leaders and joining in an intimate discussion of college questions.

H. M. Wilson, Jr., was vice-president, and assisted Miss Lillian Hogarth of Winthrop, president, in leading the conference. The other P. C. men, all attending for the first time, were L. O. Elmore, E. J. Arnold and Colin Hudson.

Jim Hardwick, who is now visiting on the P. C. campus, was the chief speaker, with Prof. H. C. Brearly and Rev. J. O. Smith speaking at other times.

Carson Announces Early Magazine

New Editor Plans To Put Out Four Issues of Collegian. More Interest Being Shown.

The first issue of The Collegian, according to Chas. E. Carson, editor, will appear about the 25th of this month. An attempt is being made to give as wide a variety as possible of interesting and readable material in the form of stories, essays, and poetry. The magazine will be illustrated throughout with linoleum cuts by Robert McLees.

Except for the associate editor, W. I. Nexsen, Carson has not chosen a literary staff, desiring rather to let it be composed of those who show an interest by their work. Students whose writing has been received to date are: H. W. Calvert, J. C. Gasque, W. F. Guess, H. C. Holman, F. S. Love, R. C. McLees, and W. I. Nexsen. Helpful criticism and suggestions have been made by Doctor Jones and Professor Swedenberg.

More interest than usual is being shown in The Collegian this year, and plans are being made for four issues, rather than the usual two. In later editions, work from freshmen and other new students will be solicited.

FERA Gives Work To 34 On Campus

Thirty-four students are now working under the Federal Emergency Relief Administration on the Presbyterian college campus. Seventeen of these are old students and seventeen are new. This is a considerable increase over the number employed during the latter part of the past school year.

Students are employed in various types of work—as library and faculty assistants, and in general campus cleaning and beautifying.

A Modest Proposal

"The song is ended but the melody lingers on"—it's an old and a very trite saying but it still has a meaning. With apologies we refer again to rushing season, which has so recently ended. We refer particularly to the gnashing of teeth and the jealousy that its end has precipitated. Somebody sits back with superior satisfaction while somebody else mutters and gnashes his teeth. Somebody's jubilance rouses a jealous gleam in somebody else's eye. And all of it has come about because some luckless freshman had his mind changed for him, forcibly or otherwise. The same thing has happened before and will happen so long as rushing is carried on.

We venture a remedy. It will mean doing away with basic rushing entirely. We believe that some such plan as the following could be used effectively, though we make no guarantees. At stated times every night or afternoon, for a period of two weeks, let each fraternity form its members into a squad or platoon with the acting as lieutenant. Then let the freshmen wander at will, stopping where they wish. The lieutenant will answer all general questions, but will speak only when spoken to. If a freshman desires further information he may review the troops, asking questions of whom he wishes. The whole period will be known as "silent time," and an upperclassman seen speaking to a freshman under any pretense will be expelled.

When the foregoing has been carried out the freshmen will pledge.

Mail vs Recitation

The postoffice, which quite naturally contains the boxes which harbor what is known to some as mail, to others as letters, to others as news (from home, lady love, or otherwise) creates a greater interest, a more fervent spirit of fellowship, than any other thing in our campus. Witness the daily hilarious egression from chapel to gymnasium or the eternal, never-forgotten warning and command of the company commanders every morning after drill, "Don't stop for mail!" Without doubt, the postoffice is the center of attraction on the campus.

All day long there is a stream of students pouring in and out of the gym, and among the greetings shouted back and forth may be heard expressions such as these: "Boy, I got it this time!" "She sends her undying affection! Huh — that's not what I call it!" "Better luck next time." "If I don't get a letter soon, I'm going to write it!" "Two whole days and not a line — she must be dead!" "That's the last time I'll ever write that girl! Such insults!" "Another letter like this one and I'll be in heaven!"

If we could only arouse among the students as great an interest in scholastic endeavors as is daily manifested in the local postoffice, this school would break more records in one day than were broken in the entire World Series this year. Imagine students rushing into classrooms with the same excitement over lessons as is shown over letters! We can't. Still, it is a glorious thought.

S. O. S. Smyth!

"Hey, cut out throwing that water" was a cry very frequently heard last year in Smyth dormitory. There was just cause, too, because the water-throwers on the second and third floors seemed to take great delight in soaking the unsuspecting enterers. But the council soon put a stop to this, so that now one can be reasonably assured of getting to his room without running into a rainstorm.

However, there still remains one hole in the cloud that provides a protecting covering over the students of Smyth. That is the flood that presents itself in front of the dormitory each time there is a rain. Smyth, although the newest and best of our dormitories, occupies an extremely low position topographically. So much so that water falling around the Administration building, in front of Laurens, and the intervening ground between them and the building in question drains down upon it. The result is that during a heavy rain Smyth is inaccessible without wading through inches of water.

This past week, for several hours during the downpour, the entire concrete walk along the front of the students' building was literally flooded. It was not just wet; it was under inches of running water. The ground around was a swamp, and one could not possibly go in and out of the building without having his feet soaked.

Winter is coming on; rains and occasional snows will produce a very unsatisfactory situation unless something is done. It is not so much a question of comfort as a matter of health, for damp feet will result in severe colds. In the past, dirt drains have been made to turn off the water to one side, but these are now ineffective. We think the administration should take some steps to remedy the situation, and suggest that those working for the F.E.R.A. could be employed. Thus, at a low cost, the school could provide better conditions for the students, and at the same time give government work to those wishing it.

Cannon Fodder

(Reprint from The American Campus)

Stern objection was raised by the more sentimental Oxford graduates when the Oxford Union after a debate voted a refusal to fight "for king or country";—but their protest resulted in a reaffirmation of the decision by a larger majority than before, 750 to 138. White feathers sent to the campus in derision were eagerly sought and worn as a mark of distinction. Similar trends have startled authorities in Manchester, Glasgow, Leicester, Nottingham, and at University College in Wales.

In the face of the present European tension and the diplomatic conversations, college papers throughout the United States have been filled with pacifistic comment. A recent C. C. N. Y. Campus deplores R. O. T. C. participation in their Founder's Day late last spring. The Brown Herald has been a leader in the anti-war movement, and an investigation of its activities conducted by the Rhode Island legislature and a federal district attorney has helped to increase the agitation.

Moreover, discussion has been aroused by ballots on the question of war quoted upon by college students throughout the country. As a result of interest expressed at the meeting of the New York State Intercollegiate Conference in October, the National Council for the Prevention of War circulated a questionnaire in New York State colleges. In this poll the number of Rochester students who declared that they would refuse to take any active part in furthering any war was three times that of those who voted they would volunteer.

Last spring the Intercollegiate Disarmament Council circulated another ballot in which students voted on three declarations of their attitude toward war. One pledged them never to participate in any war, while a second made an exception if the mainland of the country were invaded. The third statement declared willingness to "participate in any war approved by the President and declared by Congress." Probably the tabulation at Wesleyan is a fair indication of what national results will be. In this poll 75 students signed the first pledge, 119 the second, and only 55 the third.

But our nationalistic friends need not be disturbed. When sleek brass-buttoned generals begin waving the flag at the start of our next war, the colleges will vomit forth their traditional quota of cannon fodder.

Book Review

By Chas. E. Carson

"Years Are So Long"

Josephine Lawrence

One of the most interesting books published in recent months is Josephine Lawrence's "Years Are So Long." Although it does not make a bid for a chair in the House of High Literature, it has an appeal that even literary critics cannot understand. Simple writing, easy reading, it has been a Book-of-the-Month Club choice. The social problem of what will happen to old people in an individualistic age is the theme that runs through the entire book.

The very first page presents a crisis in the lives of six families. Old Barkley Cooper has called together his five children, three sons and two daughters, all married. With his wife, he informs them that he has lost his position, on account of age, and can no longer earn enough for the two aged parents to live. He now expects his children's help. Through long years he and Lucy, his wife, have toiled and struggled to give their sons and daughters the best of everything; he has been a respectable citizen, faithfull in his work, but has not saved a cent. Now he cannot work; he must depend upon his children. For them he and Lucy have labored without grumbling, have even spent their lives for them; now it is their turn to even the score. "I've reached the end of my rope. From now on it's up to you children."

Not a bomb dropped from the heavens could have caused more surprise to the old people than the children's immediate murmuring, their piercing attacks on such a suggestion. What did they owe their parents? Had they asked to be brought into the world? They had families now to look after. Old Bark may have taken care of his mother and father, and he had, but that was the custom then. Now, people were more individualistic; it was "Look after yourself or nobody else will." They had no time or money to care for two old foggies. Why hadn't they saved some of their money? It had been twenty years since the youngest daughter had married. For those twenty years, old man Cooper had made good money, and now what did he have to show for it? Nothing!

And thus the argument went. The parents had cared for their parents, had raised their children and had been good to them, and in old age expected aid. The children thought differently: they had their families now, they were trying to save that they might have something later. The most Addie will do is pay the entrance fee into a Home; Richard, horrifying the old folks, suggests separating them and having them move around from one family to another, staying at each place a few months; George is too busy with his business; Grace is trying to buy a home, and cannot bear the expense; and Nellie is too engrossed in contemplating the arrival of another baby.

This all takes place in the few opening pages; the remainder of the book relates the outcome. All the way through it is a moving story, intensely interesting. The younger people are not always likable, but the reader is made to realize that here is a real social problem to be met, and they did the best they could. And although he may know the problem will never be one for him, he cannot help thinking, "What would I do?"

Student Opinion

First Offense

A Reply

If a spirit of discontent with the first two lines of Section I, Article IX, of the Student Government Constitution has been manifest in the student body, this discontent must have been aroused by those when who have cheated in the past or who intend to do so in the future. Only the guilty fear punishment and strive to remove it.

A Christian college is no place for moral lapses, whether they occur as cheating, stealing, or otherwise. There is such a thing as precedent. If P. C. men have been accustomed to moral lapses as concerns cheating in their local high schools and in their homes, they will undoubtedly continue their unfair ways in college. Certainly P. C. does not desire men of this type among her student body, and expulsion for first offense is a most excellent method of removing them.

Expulsion for a single slip will not darken the glow on a boy's horizon so that all of his future hopes are forever shattered. Indeed, the heavy blow which expulsion deals out to a boy who has cheated for the first time in college drives home a stark truth—that cheating is woefully wrong, that honesty is gloriously right. Permitting a boy to cheat twice or thrice without the extreme penalty arouses in that boy a pride in his ability to be unfair, to shun his duty. This false pride creates a more fearful stigma than would be caused by expulsion.

There will always be reckless driving; there will always be murders in spite of the far-famed Chair and Rope; but there will be no cheating at P. C. when the cheaters are removed by expulsion as the penalty for the first offense and when parents fulfill their duty as initial moral instructors. It is obvious that the honorable majority has no fear of Article IX of our Constitution. Why, then, should the dishonorable few be permitted to prolong their stay in our midst?

MOVIES

Monday and Tuesday — Joan Crawford in "Sadie McKee." A canny bit of film production — Joan Crawford in her real dramatic metier, a semi-tragic Cinderella role. Running away from a servant's palce in the household of Franchot Tone, Joan tastes her first love tragedy when Gene Raymond deserts her to team with a blues-singer, Esther Ralston. When drunken Edward Arnold, a millionaire, picks her out of a night club and marries her, she first incurs the disgust of his friend, Tone, and then wins his respect by saving her husband from a drunkard's end. But her love for Gene won't die, so she asks for freedom, comforting him before he passes away. Then Franchot brings Joan happiness. It may sound heavy, but comedy characterizations of Jean Dixon and Zelda Saers, and brilliant scenes of Arnold make this an interesting MGM picture.

Wednesday — Diana Wynyard and Clive Brook in "Let's Try Again." In spite of the efforts of Diana Wynyard and Clive Brook, this film about a ten-years married couple falling out of love can be catalogued only as "fair." It is much, much too talkie, and moves along at a slow pace. Helen Vinson does well as "the other woman." Irene Hervey, Theodore Newton, and Arthur Hoyt complete the cast of this RKO-Radio production.

Thursday — Irene Dunne and Richard Dix in "Stingaree." Action takes place on Henry Stephenson's Australian sheep ranch in the latter part of the 18th century. With Richard Dix swaggering bandit lover, and impresario Conway Tearle both aiding Irene Dunn in attaining fame as a concert singer. After triumphing in European capitals, she escapes with Stingaree (Dix). Irene sings beautifully. Mary Boland, Una O'Connor and Andy Devine provide hilarity in this RKO-Radio film.

Friday — Ann Harding and John Boles in "The Life of Vergie Winters." Louis Bromfield's story of a lingering illicit love sacrificed to a political career is at times deeply moving and at other times rather dull. Excellent acting by Ann Harding and John Boles in the principal roles. Capable cast includes Helen Vinson, Molly O'Day, Betty Furness, and Wesley Barry. The ending of this RKO-Radio production is bitter-sweet, and there are times when it is unworthy of the stars. Authentic atmosphere and settings help.

RADIO NEWS

The radio season is now in full swing. Many of the old programs have been resumed and other ones have been inaugurated. The following are outstanding programs for this week:

DID YOU KNOW THAT?

The new Chesterfield series will cost the sponsors $18,000 per week.

Gladys Swarthout plans to keep her figure this winter by doing figure eights on a Manhattan skating rink.

Helen Hayes is being sought for a weekly series on the radio.

Joan Crawford's new picture, "Forsaking All Others," is the vehicle in which Tallulah Bankhead made such a hit in on the New York stage last season.

Jeannette MacDonald sang two songs at Marie Dressler's funeral.

The Casino theatre probably will not show "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" because "it is a costume picture."

Lawrence Tibbett is giving a concert in Atlanta on the ninth of November.

Claudette Colbert was bitten by a live asp in the movie version of "Cleopatra."

The life of Florenz Ziegfeld is to be enacted by William Powell in a forthcoming movie. Billie Burke, Ziegfeld's wife will play her real life role in the version.

Katherine Hepburn has started work on "The Little Minister" with Douglas Montgomery in the title role.

"Biography," the successful New York stage play, has been made into a movie with the title changed to "Biography of a Girl," with Ann Harding and Robert Montgomery.

Bing Crosby says he can't read a single note of music.

The Presbyterian College glee club boasts of a very beautiful bass voice this year.

STARS THAT ARE MADE OUT OF NOTHING

One of the most amazing things to the beginner in the study of astronomy is the immense distances of the stars, ranging from 93 million miles (the Sun) to a distance so far that light, traveling six million miles a year, requires a million years to reach us. Another interesting fact is the range of sizes. Representing the Sun by a pea, some stars are so small that 80 of them would be required to cover the dot of an "i," while others would be as large as automobiles.

To me, neither of these seems as curious as their densities. We compare substances with water, calling rocks and metals heavy, the air and other gases light. The densest material we have is platinum, and the least dense substance with which we come into contact daily is the inside of an electric light bulb. These two are at opposite ends of what we consider a wide range.

There are a number of stars whose material is so closely packed that it is much heavier than anything existing on Earth. The Companion of Sirius is the best-known example. The star has its atoms stripped of their outer electrons, which makes the atoms smaller and allows them to remain closer together. In other words, more material can crowd into less space. The density of the star is 60,000 times that of water, over 2,000 times as heavy as platinum; a cubic inch of it would weigh a ton! Almost unimaginable, because we have nothing with which directly to compare it.

But if all this seems astounding, listen to the rest of the rest of the story. There are also light stars, so light that beside them the weight of our atmosphere appears crushing down upon our heads. Betelgeuse, the most notable of the low density celestral bodies, is lighter than our gas-inflated balloons. Its density, one-millionth that of water, is less than the inside of an electric light globe which has "all" the air pumped out! Can you picture the existence of a bundle of matter composed of "nothing"? Almost incredible, but true according to our best methods of measurement and calculation. If we could fly through the heavens in an airplane, we probably would ride through Betelgeuse hardly aware of its existence, except for its heat. This star, incidentally, is one of our largest, measuring about 300 million miles in diameter; so large it is that if the Sun were placed at its center, the Earth would be only two-thirds of the distance out. The orbits of Mercury, Venus, Earth, and Mars would be completely inside.

Frosh Lose First Game To Carolina

Sport Shots

Now that Howard is over we can heave a sigh of profound relief. They gave what I believe will be the worst beating that we will experience this year. But that doesn't mean that the Calvinists looked particularly bad against their last week's opponent—they didn't! The Howard game showed several things and not the least of them was the Blue Hose's scoring ability. No Presbyterian student will soon forget that they scored three touchdowns against that heavy and powerful team.

It seems that the famous Mr. Higbe has returned to his old methods of playing the gridiron sport. The Juniors and Seniors still talk of these long kick-off and punt returns that he made as a freshman. And he showed Howard that he still had the stuff of which long runs are made. All last year Bobbie was a marked man—entirely too many teams remembered him as a freshman—"he never had a chance." We're giving a little warning to all P. C. opponents now and that warning is "Watch that Blue Stocking backfield and particularly that Mr. Higbe."

Well, Wake Forest is next in line. And if the demonstration that they gave against Furman was any indication of their strength, they're going to be a hard nut to crack. You will remember that they lost that game 3-2, and while you're remembering that you might also think of the fact that Furman lost to the University of Georgia by but one touchdown.

The rats have started their season off now. This is written before the Carolina game, but I'm sure that the entire student body is backing them to the limit. Even if that RAH RAH RAH RATS we gave in chapel Friday morning did sound like it might be derisive, the team and boys knew that it wasn't.

There is considerable disappointment on the part of Sarg Young because of the apparent lack of interest that the freshman class has demonstrated toward his squiff ball project. Squiff ball is an excellent sport, and worthy of the recognition of the entire student body. Let's all talk to the freshmen whom we know and have them go out for this team.

The football team is having a much needed holiday today. Two of the players spent their time out chasing butterflies—no, no, it's not their heads; blame Dr. Davis' zoology for this strange action.

An injury jinx seems to have been trailing this years team since early in September; now Red Abbott in on the hurt list. One very amusing incident occurred about Red's injury. He had been given ether to ease the pain, and just as he was regaining consciousness someone said: "Red, you're in heaven." Red looked up, saw Captain Wyser and said, "D—— if that's so, cause I see The Captain."

The battle to the death on the Science Hall courts is rapidly narrawing down. The going has proven too hard for all but two of the men. Elimination matches have removed some from the race, and fear of the speeding ball has given several men matches by default.

The sem-finals are over. Levi beat Tiller to qualify for the finals, and McCutcheon defated Gregg for the privilege to play him. The match between these fututre Tildens will be played some time this week.

On last Tuesday afternoon "Red" Abbott received a severe injury to his elbow as he was practicing football. It was thought for a while that the bone was broken but such was not the case. Red will not be able to play against Wake Forest unless this injury improves greatly.

That's all this week, but now that the Frat war is over the "sports for pleasure" should progress a little.

ALUMNI

REMEMBER HOME-COMING DAY,
WOFFORD GAME,
SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 24

At a recent meeting of the Anderson (S. C.) alumni, which Dr. McSween, Professor Sturgeon and Coach Johnson attended. L. W. Jackson was elected president for the coming year. The Anderson chapter is the most active of any in the association and is composed of approximately 40 members. At this meeting they decided to meet every month and to carry out a definite program toward the improvement and development of their alma mater. If every chapter would try to create the interest that Anderson is doing then P. C. would progress by leaps and bounds. Other chapters have been formed and are working very nicely.

Bob Moore, '31, is now connected with the Pacolet Manufacturing Co., Pacolet, S. C.

O. W. Jones, '27, is superintendent of schools in Spiro, Oklahoma. His younger brother, Lynn Jones, is now in the class of '37 at P. C. The Jones boys are from Pontotoc, Mississippi.

J. W. Walkup, '31, is now teaching Bible in the Crossnore Mission school, Crossnore, N. C. Walkup is also supplying the pulpit of the church there.

John F. Marsh, '16, is taking graduate work at Tulane university, New Orleans.

Joe S. Anderson, '29, originally from Honea Path, S. C., and a graduate of the Army Flying school, Randolph Field, Texas, is now in Mt. Clemens, Michigan, working with the Texas Oil company.

Two Touchdowns Is Victory Margin For University

Two First-Year Kickers, Hollis and Mishoe, Show Up Well and Give Promise of Developing Into First-Rate Men.

The newest additions to Presbyterian college's football coterie played their first intercollegiate game on last Friday. By brilliant defensive playing, the '34 edition of the Blue Anklets held a strong Carolina aggregation to a two-touchdown margin.

The offensive play was almost completely Carolina's, the Biddies crashing through the line for touchdowns and extra points in the second and fourth quarters. The first touchdown came as the result of a 52-yard drive that ended in a line drive over the goal line by Spinger. Stillwell crashed the forward wall for the second tally.

The most outstanding feature of the game from the Blue Sox standpoint was the punting of Joe Hollis and Mishoe, which was largely responsible for the closeness of the score. Averaging better than 40 yards a kick, they proved themselves to be rising stellar booters, and men to be coped with in South Carolina football.

All who saw the game expressed satisfaction with the way in which the rat team conducted itself in its trial by ordeal.

ALL SOUTH CAROLINA TEAMS TO SEE ACTION THIS WEEK

With Three Outfits Idle Last Last Week-end, All Palmetto State Elevens To Return Coming Week. Presbyterian Takes On Deacons At Wake Forest.

With Presbyterian, Erskine, and Furman idle last week-end, not an intra-state game was played. Clemson invaded Kentucky to lose a hard-fought game to the University boys by a score of 7-0. The University of South Carolina journeyed up to our sister state to lose to N. C. State college, 6-0. The Citadel invaded the national capital only to lose to George Washington, 26-0. The Newberry Indians roamed in Florida only to be sent back home by the Rollins crew, the score being 18-0. It was a bad week for South Carolina football.

The coming week-end is no set-up either. Presbyterian college invades North Carolina to tackle the Wake Forest Deacons. The Citadel will attempt to curb the crowing Gamecocks. Furman goes to Macon to meet Mercer. Erskine meets Wofford at Spartanburg.

Error Made Last Week In Giving Squiff Ball Menu

As Schedule Was Quoted, Not Enough Time Was Left For Signing Up Players and Practice Period.

A number of boys have asked The Blue Stockings sports editor about an apparent mistake which was made in last week's write-up of the forthcoming freshman squiff ball team. The author of the story which appeared in that issue made an error in quoting the schedule. The schedule as it appeared had a game slated for less than a week from the date the article appeared in print. Naturally this was entirely wrong, as the team will have to have at least two weeks for preparatory drill before the first engagement. The staff of this paper wishes to apologize for making this error and give its assurances that the misquotation was entirely unintentional. The corrected schedule reads as follows:

Oct. 27—Carolina at Columbia.
Nov. 1—Georgia at P. C.
Nov. 8—Carolina at P. C.
Nov. 15—Georgia at Athens.
Nov. 20—Carolina at Columbia.

Sergeant Sterlin Young, coach of the rat team, is a little disappointed at the number of men who have turned ou thus far. After Wednesday, October 17, no more will be added to the squad. He urges all who are thinking of engaging in the sport to turn in their applications at once.

Only one man has applied for a managerial post, and two more are needed. All interested upper-classmen and freshmen who wish to be understudies please remember that none will be considered after Wednesday.

THE WIND BAG

Now that pledge day is past and gone, the difference in attitude of fraternity men is noticeable to a marked degree. In R. O. T. C. drill, for instance, the officers took a "please"-pull-up-on-that-rifle attitude. Now it is "Pull up on that d— rifle!" So one new pledge complains.

The excitement during the last few days of rushing was intense. "Anything to get a freshman" seemed to be the motto. The rumor went around that one fraternity was several hundred dollars in debt and had a mortgage on their furniture. Another supposedly clever way of putting last-minute pressure on a freshman was to get a good-looking girl around town to drive by and take him to ride. During that time she, of course, took particular care to impress upon him the advantages of a particular fraternity.

From another school we hear a story of the intense rivalry between fraternities. One fraternity, it seems, was pledging a great number of freshmen and, so the rival frats preferred to think, was not very particular about the men they took in. One day in the dining hall a member of the rival group had a rat get up and announce, "All freshmen who wish to join ——— fraternity will please hand in their names at the registrar's office."

Last year when the honor council plan caused a great deal of discussion among the student body, one hot-headed youth said, "I wouldn't turn up a man even if he was a Pi K. A."

Another sarcastic young man, Buddy Chapman by name, said, on learning that a man had pledged Pi Kappa Phi, "I didn't know he drank."

The tendency for fraternities to borrow almost any kind of article from the one whose club room is most convenient is illustrated by an incident in one of Dr. Kennedy's classes. Uncle Jim Boyd asked Tom Estes who had the record for something or other. The bright young fellow answered, "I don't know, but the Beta Kappas got ours."

Speaking of Dr. Kennedy reminds us of another incident in his classroom recently. There was a very heated discussion about Communism as opposed to Americanism. Just about that time Pluto Ross awoke from a deep dream of peace and said, enthusiastically, "Dr. Kennedy, don't you think Dizzy Dean'll give 'em hell this afternoon?"

The author of this column was appointed chairman of a Y. M. C. A. committee to investigate the lewd literature traffic that has been the scourge of our campus for more than a year. Imagine our surprise when we found that Ervin Green, the supposed "good boy" of the campus, had been engaged in distributing this nefarious reading matter that has poisoned the minds of some of our best men. The Y. M. C. A. officers, headed by this columnist, will endeavor to appeal to the better self (if any) of this depraved Jekyll-Hyde, and thus induce him to give up his iniquitous activities. So far, however, our efforts have met only with contemptuous sneers on the part of this infamous bane of the campus.

A unique event in the history of the PaC-SaC, P. C.'s year book, has just taken place. George Dunlap, the editor, announces that it will be dedicated to a freshman, John Todd.

Rowland Pike, the social success from Carolina, has just met with another rebuff at the hands of Clinton's young womanhood. Chris Peake, the lady he had designs on, has another date tonight (Wednesday), to his intense grief. In his endeavor to seek new fields for conquest the other night, he had the going rough and soon found himself looking down the wrong end of a shotgun. Now, as a fitting punishment for inconstancy to his former love, the fair Christine, refuses all his passionate pleas for reinstatement.

All old students will remember the touching incident of the marriage of Buffalo Bill Cody's Oklahoma cowgirl last year. A depressing affair of the same nature occurred here the other day. The way it all started, Freshman Cross wrote to his one and only love soon after he got to P. C. Several weeks passed and he received no answer. Finally, a letter came the other day from the girl's mother stating that the girl was at the moment on her honeymoon, but that the fair one would arrange to drop by the college with her husband in a few days on the way back. The visitors are expected here any day now.

A new club has appeared on the campus. It is called Le Cercle Francais, and is to be devoted to the study of French. One of the most interesting features of the club is the fact that teas will be held at which only French is spoken. Several members of last year's Saturday Afternoon Pink Tea and Opera club are scheduled for membership in this august group.

This week's weather report: High pressure area on Pike's Peake.

New-day sign for a bar room seen in one of the better restaurants in Greenwich Village: "We reserve the right to refuse to serve that one drink too many."

Newspapers called chief radio operator "Sparks" Rogers a hero of the Morro Castle fire. He was featured six times a day one week at one of Broadway's big movie houses.

Perhaps the "rubberneck wagons" that tour New York's Chinatown weren't far wrong when they announced the district of opium dens. Nine Chinese were arrested in Mott street recently and four opium pipes, five lamps and four scrapers were seized.

Summer's over, according to several developments in town; restaurants are putting the windows back in place—many of them were removed entirely to make open-fronts for the summer; straw hats are gone; saw a bowler on Fifth avenue today; air-conditioning signs on restaurants are disappearing. . . . Those are just a few of the ways New Yorkers tell about the seasons—in the absence of trees and flowers and plants that most of us knew as children. Sometimes I wonder if they still grow.

A "blessed event" for munitions makers that Walter Winchell must have missed is forecast by Doc Wizard in a new magazine called Lucky Systems. Doc, basing his forecast on numerology predicts that America will be at war in April, 1937, and that our president in 1940 will be assassinated. And these are just two of the predictions. Nice figures?

Rain-coated to the ears, sitting on an open bus-top in the rain going down Fifth Avenue at night; Central Park is shiny and green; that electric sign on Central Park south that spells one word after another as though it were a huge ticker-tape, takes an interminable length of time to get over the advertising to the point where it spells out, "The Time Is Now 10:42." Incidentally, the news flashes spelled out in lights on the Times Building in Times Square, go completely around the building. . . . Back to Fifth avenue. . . . They're still working on the fountain in the Plaza at 59th street; the lighted top of the Empire State building barely visible through the rain; travel agency windows have an unusually high average in artistic posters; the library at 42nd looks very grim and cold when the lights are out; it could do with a little cleaning, for the soot of the city has made its granite very black; the top of the Empire State building is beautifully hazy now, like a changing, soft-focus moving picture you've seen when the photographer wants you to see things through the heroine's tears; neon lights in purple and red and violet, and white lights next to them to reflect a myriad of beautiful changing colors on the wet pavements, changing with the motion of the bus; how dreary those sidewalk cafes look in the rain—just canopies, bare tables and vacant chairs; doormen with huge umbrellas escorting the "cliff-dwellers" from curbs to their homes; with hat streaming, I walk into my own doorway and watch my bus disappear.

R. O. T. C. NEWS

This year the military department is putting on more exhibitions of various phases of military life. Several weeks ago members of the corps under the supervision of Lts. Arnold, Fleming and Jordan gave the first act of this kind when they showed the rest of the corps the proper and improper ways to smoke. The proper way followed the improper to show the men just how these phases of military courtesy should be carried out. The high light of the morning came when the proper way to lean on the desk of the P. M. S. & T. was ably demonstrated (with both arms, you understand). However for fear that someone's face might get red the Captain's part of this exhibition was omitted. The second show of this sort was this past week when the members of the corps were shown the equipment and organization of a regular squad and of a war strength section, platoon and company. The company organization of headquarters was explained also. Cadet Wilbanks was in charge of the cats.

We have just observed that the members of this year's freshman class as a general rule seem to be unusually patriotic, for since the arrival of their uniforms they have insisted that they wear red,, white and blue ties with them. At least, that is just what these budding soldiers are doing at present. Some of these men have not caught the spirit yet though and still wear green ones. Maybe we have some Irish in this heterogeneous bunch?

And while we are on the subject of freshman uniforms, let us say that most of them are already in the hands of the freshmen and that the others will be along in a short time. These men are cautioned to keep their uniforms neat and cleaned if not pressed at all times for that is one thing which helps determine the way one gets along with military life. By keeping the uniform in tip-top shape all the time, one shows his respect to his unit and to his government which this uniform represents. And then, if you keep them real nice some nice little dame might think you are "cute" when you go home for Christmas. The authorities on such matters always said that a uniform was a girlie's weakness, but we are sure that they meant to say that a well kept one was this. A baggy one might serve the other way. But the latter might be best, after all.

Uniform inspection will begin for all members of the ROTC next week and will continue for the remainder of the year. All men are advised to use their buttons as a mirror on the morning of inspection and to keep all grits, zip and other foreign matter off the uniform for that drill period at least. And too, remember to stand rather close to your razor that morning if you are he-man enough to sport a beard.

1st. Lt. Johnny Rhodes, acting as military stenographer this year still puts on more bay window and the PMS&T is contemplating having all chairs in the military office strengthened to avoid any catastrophe to Johnny's person some morning when he seats himself at his daily work. Two resorts have been suggested to remedy this serious situation—one to make Johnny take setting-up exercises each morning before and during breakfast, and the other to put him in charge of the make-up drill squad for the exercise. The objection to the latter is that he might make the squad dizzy marching it around and around in the same vicinity. That is to say, his vicinity.

The seniors in ROTC are now learning the method of a military court-martial by conducting a mock trial. Members of the senior and junior classes will recall the public exhibition of two years back when (Miss) Gonzales Barron created such a furore in the court room by her insolent remarks to the judge. It might be said however that this year's class seems to have been cut out more for culprits than for prosecutors.

The other day when Cadet Abbott was coming out from the influence of the anaesthesia given him when he was hurt in football, one of his ministering angels told him that he was in heaven, and about the same time the P. M. S. & T., who happened to be on hand, spoke a word to him in consolation for his accident and the Cadet made the remark, "Oh, no! I ain't in heaven. That's the Captain talking." Query: Whose face was red?

TODAY and TOMORROW

by FRANK PARKER STOCKBRIDGE

BOOKS—The New Deal

People are not buying so many books, these days; but good books are selling more than they did. There was a period of several years in which any book would sell if it were only nasty enough, and a great number of prurient-minded would-be authors, who never had mastered even the rudiments of writing, broke into print with volumes which irresponsible publishers put out and which seemed to find a ready market.

That sort of "literature" is fading from the scene. In its place are serious discussions of important and vital questions, which people who are eager to know what all the economic troubles are about are rushing to buy.

To my desk come many books. In the past ten days I have received not less than six books discussing the New Deal from different angles, all of them worth reading, although I don't agree with all of the authors.

HOOVER—His Ideas

Liberals, whether they call themselves Democrats or Republicans, ought to read Herbert Hoover's book, "The Challenge to Liberty." Mr. Hoover is not a literary stylist. He writes plainly, directly and often bluntly.

It is hardly necessary to say that he doesn't approve of the New Deal. Many of its objectives, he agrees, as all sensible-minded men agree, are not only worthy but necessary. What Mr. Hoover fears is that, in trying to arrive at economic security, by a short cut, the American people may be sacrificing liberties which they can never regain.

What Mr. Hoover has to say about the tendency of bureaucracy to perpetuate itself and expand its functions arises from his own experience and observation. And what he says about the control of business by Government and what its consequences may be provides food for deep thought.

WALLACE—An Honest Thought

I have long maintained that the most perfectly-functioning grain in the Roosevelt Administration is that of Henry Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture. Mr. Wallace is capable of seeing both sides of any subject and of thinking things through to their logical conclusions.

Now Mr. Wallace has found time to write a book, entitled "New Frontiers." It is not a compilation of speeches and public statements, but a fresh record of events and issues as they have appeared to him as a member of the Roosevelt Cabinet.

Mr. Wallace, naturally, approaches his subject from a different angle from that from which Mr. Hoover views the Washington scene. I get the impression that he is not entirely satisfied with the way things have worked out for the farmer, and if he had the shaping of a new Agricultural Adjustment Act it would be quite a different piece of work.

IMPARTIAL — Non-partisan

Another Wallace—Professor Schuyler C. Wallace, who holds the chair of public law at Columbia university—has written a book which gives to the average reader a clearer and more understandable picture of the New Deal than any single volume I have seen. Professor Wallace, while sympathetic, seems to have preserved a non-partisan, impartial point of view. To the facts about the various phases of the efforts of the administration he adds his own comments and interpretations, which I would hesitate to indorse as a whole but which are plainly and fairly stated.

For the average reader, this is perhaps the most generally useful book of the lot on my desk.

CONTROVERSIAL—From Ranks

James P. Warburg, who was one of President Roosevelt's economic advisers until they parted company over the administration's monetary policy, has written "It's Up to Us," a highly entertaining book on a little understood subject — money and banking. Jim Warburg knows his subject. He says that the New Deal is like a calf with five legs, but that is because the American people wanted a five-legged calf.

David Lawrens, as profound a thinker as there is in the ranks of journalism, in his "Beyond the New Deal," tries to follow through to the ultimate consequences of the more important efforts that are being made to achieve recovery.

Did You Know That:

During the civil war 7000 soldiers died from small pox; that in the Spanish-American war 258 died from it; and that in the World War only 14 were victims of this disease. (This shows the wonderful progress of medicine in the past few years.)

The army located, built and ran the first railroad in this country and that it projected practically all of our transcontinental railways, and that the U. S. Army has always been in the front with any sort of improvement in this country.

That army engineers built and now operate the Penama Canal.

That it took about one hundred thousand bullets to kill a man in the last war. (Then you don't think war is so dangerous? If not, you go first and have your body sent back to show us that you were wrong.)

That the freshmen on our campus have suddenly lost all their clothes except their uniforms.

That the various drill regulations in print on our campus are designed to be read occassionally by the owner.

That Captain Blanton had threatened to conduct a night class to show the various officers and non-commissioned officers in our unit the proper way to report for squads, platoons and companies, to a superior officer or an Officer of the Day.

. . . and while we're talking about cigarettes

I don't suppose you were ever in a warehouse where they were storing hogsheads of tobacco. Anyway here's something interesting: Liggett & Myers, the people who make Chesterfields, have about 4½ miles of storage warehouses where they age the tobacco.

Down South where they grow tobacco folks say . . .

It's no wonder so many people smoke Chesterfields. The tobaccos are mild and ripe to start with, and then they're aged the right way to make a milder, better-tasting cigarette.

Columbia Alumni To Meet Tuesday

McSween and Johnson To Address Gathering In Capital City. Many Invited.

More than 50 persons of Columbia and vicinity are expected to attend the Presbyterian college alumni rally and dinner at the Jefferson hotel at 7:30 Tuesday night.

Dr. John McSween, president of the college, Coach Walter Johnson and others will be present to deliver talks on the work at P. C.

Willard L. Jones, secretary of the Alumni association, reported nearly 50 local alumni listed on his records. The list, however, is subject to revision.

The incomplete list of Columbia P. C. alumni, follows: C. B. Adair, Robert Adams, Jr., R. A. Abrams, Thomas Taylor Aiken, Dr. J. M. Austin, M. Barnwell, T. C. Brown, Dr. W. P. Beckman, Dr. Glenn B. Carrigan, Sam Clarke, J. C. Copeland, Jr., Jim Davis, J. W. Dillard, J. M. Doster, Bernie Dunlap, Dr. Irene Dillard Elliott, Marion Evans, W. P. Ferguson, W. C. Flanagan, C. H. Girardeau, A. R. Hafner, Tom Hopkins, H. D. Jackson, Hugh James, Charles W. Johnson, Patterson B. Johnson, R. A. Johnson, McQueen Keels, Mrs. James Keith, Elliott Ketchin, James Turner Key, Gregg King, Yancey King, Frank W. LaMotte, Mrs. Brent Latimer, Fred Little, Otis W. Livingston, George Raymond McElveen, Franklin P. McGowan, M. Murray McLendon, Dr. Sol B. McLendon, Fleming Mason, Dr. C. J. Milling, J. A. Montgomery, Miller Montgomery, Albert Roy Register, Charles Rigby, J. L. Rosborough, W. P. Sullivan, Fant H. Thornley, Ernest M. Walker, Lewis A. Wallace, T. McC. Watts, Marion E. Wilds, J. W. Wilson and Dr. Hugh E. Wyman.

Other P. C. alumni listed from Richland county are: Donald F. Kirven of Eastover, Benjamin Boyd and William B. Westbrook, Edgewood.

All P. C. alumni who attended the college one year or more have been urged to attend the dinner. It will be the first gathering of former P. C. students in Columbia in the last several years.

Low Grades Show Large Decrease

The recording of D's and E's for the first month of this school year show a substantial decrease over those of last year. While the total number of D's was practically the same, E's showed a marked falling off. The D's total 199, while E's come to 87. For the same period last year D's were 197, and the total of E's reached 127.

Following is the list of D's and E's by classes, compared with last year:

	1934		1933
	D	E	D	E
Seniors	22	4	17	6
Juniors	26	19	22	10
Sophomores	74	39	59	31
Freshmen	75	33	87	75
Special students	1	2	1	3
Graduate	1	0	0	2
Totals	199	87	197	127

Since fraternities are making an effort to improve in scholarship, a listing by fraternities for this year might be interesting to many frat men. The classification is as follows:

	D	E
Alpha Kappa Pi	15	18
Alpha Lambda Tau	19	9
Beta Kappa	10	4
Kappa Alpha	19	8
Pi Kappa Alpha	25	9
Pi Kappa Phi	22	13

Pledge Dance Be Held Nov. 2 and 3

Pan-Hellenic Council Announces Date of Fall Activities To Be Given In Copeland Hall.

The Annual Pledge Dance will be held on Nov. 2nd. and 3rd. in Copeland Hall, according to George Dunlap, president of the Pan-Hellenic Council. Several other locations were considered, but eventually the old standby, which has neither been cut up into office space nor fallen down under the weight of years as was expected, was settled upon.

There will be two dances. On Friday night, November the 2nd, the Pledge Dance proper will be held, which is free to all men newly pledged to fraternities at Presbyterian College. However, there will also be a dance Saturday night which may be attended at the cost of one dollar About two hundred bids will be sent out. Freshmen football men will be back from Clemson in time for the Friday night dance. As only one "Pan-Hellenic Holiday" is alloted by the faculty each year, it is probable that the Council will decide to postpone this holiday until the more important Pan-Hellenic dances which will mean that Friday night frolickers must bear in mind Saturday morning classes.

The Council is attempting to secure the services of Joe Roman and his orchestra.

Ned Sprunt Hays Now Convalescing

Members of the student body regret to know of the illness of Ned Sprunt Hays, member of the sophomore class. Hays has been confined to his bed for nearly two weeks with influenza and pneumonia. His friends will be delighted to know he is convalescing nicely.

Smyth and Jones Collections Occupy Important Place In P. C. Library

Not very long ,ago the freshman class underwent a baptism of "SC's," "JSC's," "EDL's" and other classifications in learning (supposedly) the Dewey Decimal System, which should enable them to track a furtive volume to its lair deep in the shadowed aisles of the Library Stack Room. Beyond the fact that "SmC" deciphered reads "Smyth Collection," and that "JSC" indicates that the book so marked is an item in the "Jones" Collection of Carolinia," the casual peruser of the library knows little about what lies behind these cryptic letters.

Captain Ellison A. Smyth in 1929 expressed the wish that the collection which he had been making over a period of over forty years might be well-housed and cared for during his life-time, and gave it to the Presbyterian College. Captain Smyth was also the largest donor of Smyth Dormitory, which was named after his father, Rev. Thomas Smyth, who was for fifty years pastor of the Second Presbyterian chuch of Charleston, and for whom the Smyth Lectures given at the Columbia Theological Seminary are also named. Captain Smyth, a Confederate veteran said to have fought in the last battle of the war—a skirmish near Piedmont, S. C., has been active in building up the textile industry in the state. At one time he was president of the Pelzer Manufacturing Company, and was interested in constructing mills at Greenville and Belton, S. C. He now owns and operates a small plant at Balfour, N. C., near his estate at Flat Rock.

The collection consists of about four hundred books and many pamphlets, and is one of the most notable private collections on the subject of South Carolina ever brought together.

Some of the most notable items are: "History of the American Indians," by James Adair; London, 1775; unusually fine copy, with beautiful leather binding and gold-tooled back.

"Atlas" and "Statistics" of South Carolina, by Mills.

"The Natural History of Carolina," by Mark Catesby; the first edition, tion, bound in leather, with gold-tooled coat-of-arms on each. Catesby manufactured by hand both the paper and the plates used in thes books.

"South Carolina Miscellanies"—Christopher Gadsen's notes and copies of his letters ranging from January, 1761 to September, 1778. This valuable book consists of bound sheets in Gadsen's own handwriting.

"History of the Campaigns of 1780 and 1781 in the Southern Provinces of North America," by Lieut.-Col. Tarleton, printed in London in 1787.

Several first editions of Doctor Ramsay's works.

An early edition of William Bartram's "Travels through North and South Carolina, Georgia, and East and West Florida," (London, 1782) is especially interesting when one remembers that it was from this intrepid explorer's description of Southern reptiles, in this book, that Coleridge drew the water-snakes which play about the "painted ship" in "The Ancient Mariner."

"Bevil Faulcon: A Tradition of the Old Cheraws," by "Crayon Rigmarole"; Mr. Gittman, authority on the subject in Columbia, said: "Few South Carolina collectors have ven seen this book—this copy with wrappers is unique. There is a copy in the Charleston Library, and a mutilated copy in Columbia—these two are the only ones I have ever seen." It was one of the first novel printed in the state of South Carolina.

"JSC" — the "Jones Collection" is due to the interest taken by Dr. F. D. Jones in the scattered items of Caroliniana that he found in the library, which were added to the collection, made over many years and given by him to the college. His interest in South Carolina history has led him to teach a class on the history of the state through the War of the Revolution. This class, in lieu of purchasing text books, has contributed yearly to the funds used to eninrge this collection. Many friends of the college have helped with gifts of valuable [illegible]

One of the most interesting [illegible] Ramsay's "History of the American Revolution," printed in Paris, 1787. There are also the first three volumes of a magazine—"The XIXth Century," bound, published in Charleston just after the war between the States, on some early Carolina theological works. There are copies of Grimke, Cooper, and James "Laws of South Carolina," and several regimental histories of South Carolina units during the Confederate war. To top it off, as such South Carolinians as Julia Peterkin, DuBose Heyward, and Ball publish a book, copies are secured.

There is the slightly ludicrous contrast of James statute (Pg 388, XXI) authorizing any person who might find a garment "Finer, or of greater value, than negro cloth . . . calicoes" in the possession of a slave to appropriate it for his own use, only a few inches of paper and leather from Marshals grandchild, Lissa: "She was clad briefly in dark blue tailored silk. The colour was a concession to Mamie, the brevity to Heaven. A scarf of [illegible] and was knotted loosely [illegible] and a small [illegible] [illegible] Dr. [illegible]

Retired Tennis Player Speaks

J. Potter Stockton, Who Still Maintains Interest In Game, Lectures To Local Group.

P. C. tennis enthusiasts were given a treat last Tuesday afternoon when J. Potter Stockton, nationally known tennis mentor visited the college. He gaxe a half-hour lecture and demonstrated various shots against members of the tennis team.

Stockton has been active in national tennis circles for the past quarter of a century. He was just at his peak at about the time when Big Bill Tilden was making his rapid rise into national prominence. At this point in his career, Stockton left active amateur tennis play in order to go into the cotton buying business. He is at present in the city on a business trip to Clinton and Lydia mills, for each of which he is selling agent.

Mr. Stockton left a brilliant career behind him. Twenty-five years of association with the game has made him one of the foremost experts in the country on the subject. He was once rated fifth among the nation's racket slingers, and probably could have been national champion, but he retired more lucrative occupation. He is the from the game in order to take up a teacher of young Frankie Parker, the boy who won the Springe Lake tournament for the past two years. He is a member of the West Side Tennis club, the most outstanding society of its kind in America.

It is interesting to note also the breadth of his experience in playing against the greatest tennis geniuses in the world. All the well-known American players have opposed him, in addition to numbers of foreign athletes. He has crossed rackets fourteen times with Big Bill Tilden, America's foremost tennis man, and came off victorious in eleven of these battles.

Local tennis fans, including Dean Brown and Dr. Coe, say they found the talk, and especially the demonstration, very helpful. It is expected that Mr. Stockton will be back in Clinton again within the next few months.

College Military Training Fought

U. S. Supreme Court Asked To Rule On Soldiering In Land Grant Institutions.

Washington, Oct. 18. — A plea that may break down the practice of making military training compulsory in land grant colleges was made before the United States supreme court today.

Albert Hamilton, student at the University of California, contended that, as a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, his conscience would not permit him to take part in drills and sham battles staged by the student corps.

John Beardsley, his attorney, said that in 1930 the attorney general handed down an opinion that the Morrill land grant of 1863 did not require compulsory military training.

The court is not expected to rule for several weeks.

Conscientious objectors have carried their cases to the supreme court twice before and lost both times. Roszika Schwimmer, internationally known pacifist, lost her plea against being deported. The Bland-MacIntosh decision, involving two applicants for citizenship who refused to swear to bear arms in defense of the United States, also was a legal blow to conscientious objectors.

State Temperance Group Meets Here

Three-Day Session Features By Addresses of Dr. Mary Harris Armor, Who Is Widely-Known.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of South Carolina held its annual meeting here last Friday, Saturday and Sunday, convening daily at the Thornwell Memorial church. Workers and delegates from all parts of the state attended the session which was interesting and helpful.

The initial meeting of the convention on Friday morning was presided over by Mrs. J. L. Mims of Edgefield, state president. Mayor Silas Bailey welcomed the delegates on behalf of the city of Clinton, with the response of Mrs. J. M. Smith, of Saluda, following. Dr. L. R. Lynn extended a welcome in behalf of the Thornwell church, and Mrs. Olin D. Johnston, wife of the governor-elect, responded. The program throughout Friday and Saturday included reports from the various departments and a number of inspirational addresses.

The guest speaker of the convention was Dr. Mary Harris Armor, internationally known lecturer, of Commerce, Ga. Dr. Armor concluded the sessions with a stirring address at the Sunday evening union service held at the First Baptist church.

Students Hear James Hardwick

College Y. M. C. A. Arranges Special Meetings. Topics of Interest To Students.

Mr. James Hardwick, one of the most inspiring speakers to visit the P. C. campus in recent years, held a series of meetings in and around P. C. which, from all reports, seem to have been very successful. Mr. Hardwick arrived on the 14th and was kept rushed until he left on the 17th. Aside from his group work the visiting speaker did a great deal of personal work among students who brought their problems to him in private conference.

Mr. Hardwick spoke at a special chapel hour on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday and at a special meeting on Tuesay night. He discussed the following topics: "Honesty—Courage to Follow Our Convictions"; "Way in Which I've Exeprienced God"; "Place of Christ in Human Life"; and "Boy and Girl Relation." These messages were buried deep into the hearts of those present by the vivid and sincere delivery of the speaker.

In commenting upon the heart of all his talks the visitor remarked that we live in an age of the aftermath of the world war in which the young people must spend the most formative years of their life. He pointed out that the man who follows the crowd is lost. He advised all young people that one "needs purpose and ideals way beyond crowd if he is to make any real contribution to mankind or to society." The speaker also prophesied that things are moving toward an upheaval and cautioned that we need more moral fiber in the young people. As a conclusion to his remarks on the heart of his messages Mr. Hardwick said, "Christ is adequate to pour out into life the spirit that will make possible the solution to all of our problems—but the real problem is to find channels for the Spirit in young men and women."

During his brief stay Mr. Hardwick also spoke at a union meeting of the young people societies of Clinton, at Thornwell orphanage, at Clinton High school, and to the P. C. football squad. His subject to the young people was, "Prayer" while his discussion to the football squad was "Place of Spirit in Athletics."

This outstanding speaker and personal worker was secured by the P. C. Young Men's Christian Association and his work while here was also arranged by the local "Y." Van M. Arnold, president, was in charge of the negotiations. Mr. Hardwick left immediately after his last talk in Clinton in order to fill engagements at several South Carolina colleges before spending a week at the University of Georgia in Athens.

Military Class Holds Mock Court-Martial

In a mock court martial held recently George Dunlap was convicted of desertion. The trial took place in the class room of Capt. Wysor and was a part of the regular senior military class period. Paul Todd acted as judge advocate, and Charlie Carson was lawyer for the defense.

Dunlap, whose name was Walker in the military group, was arrested some distance away from the army post a number of days after his disappearance without permission. The question for the court to determine was whether the accused intended to desert, or was merely absent without leave. The various witnesses for both sides were brought up, the most interesting of which was Miss Mamie Taylor, in the person of Bill Clark, to whom Walker was supposed to be engaged.

The court not only found the accused guilty, but imposed upon him the hardest sentence possible. It apparently had it in for George; and rumor has it that the court had decided the sentence before the trial even started!

A Much-Needed Revision

There are many revisions which need to be made in the curriculum of the average Liberal Arts college. There are many phases which cry out to be modernized. It is possible that the whole structure needs to be, in a sense, rejuvenated. We do not attempt a summary or even suggestions about these needed revisions. They will occur eventually, but it will take long years and the combined efforts of a great many educators. We do, however, make bold enough to suggest the remedy of one evil—the abolishment of one year of compulsory mathematics for all students whether they are working towards the B. A. or B. S. degree. To have even this thing changed we conceive to be an Herculean task. Our attack will be only one arrow shot at a stone wall.

But someone must always start agitation.

We realize that our own school follows current practice in curriculum-making. The inclusion of mathematics as a required subject is tradition. It is following a precedent set many years ago during the period of the rigid and compulsory course of classical study. It was considered necessary and is today by the exponents of that old idea. But why is it?

Certainly everyone understands why arithmetic and mathematics should be given in elementary and secondary schools. A person must be able to handle money, and his personal accounts. He must also get a good ground-work in algebra and geometry since before he goes to college he usually has not decided what course of study he shall follow.

But no one can easily justify mathematics as a required subject for all college students. A student whose interests are centered in Liberal Arts courses (and he is not to be blamed for displaying more interest in one thing than in another) finds only that being forced to study mathematics detracts from his other studies, and often holds him back for two or three years. His attitude is justified. He knows as everyone else should know that his disinterested, half-hearted efforts at college algebra will stand him in no stead in later life. Neither will it give him any good brain exercise or develop to any degree his brain power. The individual's learing capacity is fully developed by the time he has reached college age. Thorough disinterestedness in and dislike of one subject tends to corrupt a studious attitude, and can easily breed discouragment.

There are too many of us who waste valuable time repeating first-year algebra, and this repetition is for the sole purpose of passing something which is required for graduation.

Students should by all means have the opportunity of studying mathematics. But driving them into it does not have its place in modern education. The situation has existed too long both here and in other schools. Its remedy is a crying need.

Taming War—the Individual Problem

Why must a people living in an improved social order fight? Many individuals ask this age-old question, and hear diligently and sometimes vainly seek the answer. Innumerable reasons have been promulgated as to why men fight, but Andre Maurois has perhaps found the truest answer. He says, "It is in ourselves that the war-like passions must be subdued." And that is indeed a reasonable statement. If every individual tried to conquer his instinct for war and let the peace instinct prevail the problem would indeed be solved.

The so-called pacifists have gone about in the wrong way trying to transform mankind into a vast contented sheepfold. Their methods have been puerile and inaccurate. They would have men believe that a few guilty individuals make a war and that getting rid of these would promote peace. But it is not so easy. These persons forget that the causes of war include powerful instincts that have been common to all generations through the ages.

If the average citizen hated war—really honestly hated it—all war propaganda and incitements would be useless and the commerce of armaments and munitions would cease for the lack of buyers. If the average citizen could realize the horrors and callousness of a war, if they could take the word of those who have seen it at its worst, it would be so repulsive that he would not speak of it as those who have seen chose to do.

The human sacrifice is inconceivable. Try to imagine the picture Andre Maurois has painted in a recent article: "He has often watched the long lines of stretchers bringing down the wounded, blood-stained and disemboweled, over fields pitted with great shell holes; he has heard the cries of the dying, the hideous gasping of men whose lungs have been burnt by poison gas; he has lived in one of those towns in northern France on which bombs were showered from airplaines every night, and where the houses crashed down in bricks and rubble on the corpses of women and children. Any man who has known these things is a hater of war."

A writer to the London Times has made a valuable point. He argues that suppose some business man conceived the idea of selling human preserved flesh. Suppose he prepared millions of cans of this, and launched a huge advertising campaign to encourage consumption of his product. Would he succeed? Certainly not. It would be but a waste of time and money for him because a powerful instinct in many opposes any such idea.

One can easily get the idea. If men's instincts made war as repulsive to them as human flesh, it would be impossible to incite them to war. First, then, we must learn to abhor war. "Propoganda can succeed only if it strikes an answering chord in the minds of those who hear or read it."

Having developed a hatred of war man must subdue the fighting instinct by sublimating its responses until there no longer remains a warring impulse. To do this man might find happiness in an improved social order in the arts of peace. We must have a healthy economic system to have enduring peace. For the economic crisis has brought discontent, one of the deadliest germs of war, and this discontent has been the result of thwarted desires. The war instinct is the outlet for response to defeated emotions. War is conquered as peace becomes more attractive. Pugnacious instinct in man must find ways of escape in the arts and sports; it must find some degree of satisfaction in love and family life. Young men must be enabled to live and marry and appreciate the joys of youth. Murderous battle must be replaced by contests of sport. The masses must have the privilege of solace in the arts. The bold and adventurous individual must find an occupation worthy of his courage.

Such an idea seems hard to put into reality. It seems too complicated. But during the periods of "calm and recuperation after spells of violence and turbulence" the natural rhythm that follows grants to mankind the privilege of putting this into practice. Twenty years we have endured an abnormal turbulence brought on by the conflict of 1914. Now, if history repeats itself, we shall return to normality. It is then that our wearied peoples may be rescued from a return to combative passions. But it depends on the firm will of the individual, the endurance of memories, and crowning it all, the desire for the happiness of the masses.

Student Opinion

UNNECESSARY NOISE

Editor, The Blue Stocking:

The students, judging from various unidentified sounds heard off the campus lately, delight in uttering war whoops on the streets of Clinton, especially rather late at night. The origin of these savage yells is not known precisely, but it is thought that possibly Joe E. Brown (of movie fame) might have started the desire among the students to fill the air nightly with inhuman utterances.

These noises are objectionable, first, because they are not befitting gentlement appearing in public places or on public thoroughfares. To see a young man walking along Main street (or any other street, for that matter) uttering unintelligible sounds at the top of his voice is not only amusing but also rather disgusting. One would imagine that college students would consider it beneath their dignities to disturb the community, as well as reflect upon themselves, with unnecessary yelling in public.

Secondly, the residents of Broad street in particular have often objected to the "doings" of the college boys at night. Many Clinton people have been known to awaken suddenly at night, startled beyond reason by unearthly sounds from the street. In some cases these frantically aroused sleepers have dashed to the front door to see who is being killed, only to behold (most disappointedly) a band of P. C. Indians sauntering down to the school and amusing themselves by shattering with cries the deathly silence which nightly pervades the local atmosphere after the chickens go to roost. Thus it is evident that public demonstrations vocal abilities are neither gentlemanly nor considerate, unless, of course, there is to be paid admittance. It might be added that Laurens county has produced near the college some elegant pine woods which would be delighted to have P. C. students give vent to their emotions among our turpentine yielders. At least, the pine woods are mort to be preferred than the city streets.

Editor the Blue Stocking:

The letter in the Open Forum two or three weeks ago opposing the extreme penalty for cheating which is expulsion at P. C., was well-timed and deserves consideration by the student body. I shall endeavor to support the position of this man against that of his opponent, whose letter appeared in the last issue of your paper.

It was former a common thing, during the dark ages of medieval Europe for the forces of law and order to place a death penalty on the commission of any crime that suddenly became troublesome, even tho that infraction was extremely insignificant. For instance, we find that England had a death penalty at one time for over two hundred misdemeanors, many for such small offenses as trespassing on the hunting grounds of a nobleman. Of course these crimes were not stamped out because a heavy penalty was placed on them; on the other hand, they went on just as usual.

Such, it seems, is the idea behind the rule put in the student body constitution last spring making expulsion the penalty for cheating (except for those in their first semester of attendance at P. C.) The belief apparently is that the mere fact that such a rule is in the constitution will automatically cut out cheating, regardless of whether it can be properly enforced or not.

The opinion advanced by last week's Blue Stocking correspondent that only one who cheated would want to do away with this penalty, is of course entirely illogical. The fact that a person opposes a rule does not necessarily mean that he is an interested party; it might very well mean only that he did not think it would be for the best interests of the school at large. For instance, if a student is not in favor of punishing by expulsion one who walks across the grass in front of the administration building, should it be assumed that the only reason for this man's opposition is that he is a primarily interested party? Of course not; it would be hard to find anyone who did favor it.

Another instance of the same type should further clarify this point. Probably the most outstanding opponent of capital punishment in the United States is Lewis E. Lawes, who happens to be warden of Sing Sing prison. Will anyone say that he opposes the death penalty because of some crime he has committed that would cause him to come under the law's jurisdiction? I quote verbally the words of the correspondent referred to: "This discontent (with the new rule on cheating) must have been aroused by those who cheated in the past or who intend to cheat in the future. Only the guilty fear punishment and strive to remove it."

This same writer also says: "There will always be reckless driving, there will always be murders—but there will be no cheating at P. C. when the cheaters are removed by expulsion as the penalty for the first offense—." He seems assured that P. C. is free from cheating as long as this rule holds good. I, on the other hand, feel safe in saying that if all the boys here, who have cheated at one time or another during as much as a year's stay at P. C. were expelled, considerably less than half the student body would be left.

But, my opponent might say, there will be less cheating from now on, since the penalty is heavier, and the cheaters will be hopelessly in the minority after the rule has been in force for a long while. I answer to this, I point again to the expressence in this matter; that the prime factor in reduction of crime is not the severity of punishment but rather the certainty of punishment. And the latter factor is exactly the same as it was before the new rule came into our student constitution.

R. O. T. C. NEWS

The report at this early stage of military training is very gratifying to all concerned. All companies have shown improvement constantly since the drill has begun and now it really looks as if these companies will actually resemble an army if this improvement continues for another month or two. Captain Wysor is pleased to note that the spirit of cooperation from seniors down to freshmen is better in all departments of the military work than ever before. All members of the corps are delighted to note that our freshmen have learned this school spirit so early. What we want to know now is whether the lack of hazing in our midst has affected this increased ability of freshmen to absorb the school spirit. No, we are not saying that it has or has not. We are just asking, to fill space maybe.

Well, it seems to be perfectly evident to the juniors and seniors in the military training that the United States government is not very exacting in its requirements of men who wear its uniform. In the regular army, we are told, the only duty of a good soldier is to stop one bullet and he is dismissed. In the ROTC, according to Captain Wysor, the only requirement is to make two "D"s in military science, and you are excused from further participation in any branch of military training at Presbyterian college. Quoting Captain Wysor again, we say, "That the army is not affected by the loss of one man; so if you are tired of it, just permit a 'D' to be marked opposite your name for two successive times and it will only be 'Howdy, Captain' for you from that day on."

Dr. Rhame, the new college doctor, is winning the respect and admiration of the whole student body by his expert advice and expert medical knowledge which he is showing the boys each morning at sick report. He is very good at diagnosis and also unusual in his treatment. An illustration of this will convince you that this is no sales talk for the good doctor. The other morning the above doctor examined an injury to the eye of one of our students prescribed some medicine for the burn and told the afflicted one to "Apply this solution to the eye about an hour before the pain starts each day."

———

The secretary to the P. M. S. & T. has resorted to one or both of the suggestions offered him recently as to how he could reduce his person to a safety point. (For the chairs, understand). He is now in very good condition physically, being able to take himself to the football field each day and get his exercise in watching the varsity scrimmage. And as a result of this even moderate exercise, the chairs in the military office have ceased to moan when this secretary bends over each morning — they merely growl now.

———

It was the duty of the orderly recently to serve notices to those men in school who had been reported three or more "D"s or "E"s for their class work during the first month of the school term. On this tour of interviewing this above one is said to have heard many and various expressions of opinion about this practice (none of which we dare to quote, however) and of the school administration as a whole. This orderly even heard some very verbose descriptions of those putting this rule in force.

Did you know that:

Wars are becoming safer, if there is any such thing. We mean they are safer in proportion to the numbers involved, for now casualties have decreased proportionately about fifty per cent in a very short time. In fact, in the World war 95 per cent of all wounded were returned to duty before the war was over, while formerly it was the custom to have certain noncoms designated to "slit the throats of all wounded, friendly or hostile," thinking they were doing a humane deed. Then we are told today that modern war is becoming more horrible. We ask you before making a choice in this matter to consider the fact that modern war can put you to sleep mighty easily and almost without pain, while it was mainly butcher in other cases. Maybe the throat-slitters were right, after all.

Four hundred thousand men were called to duty in the war of the Revolution again only 30,000 British. Of course, all these men were never put against the British at one time, for they would have shown the whites of their eyes at short range much quicker than the majority of them ever did the other way.

The juniors think the machine gun is a mighty simple weapon to do so much damage, and that the machine gun squad is called the "suicide squad" in time of war.

The enlisted men have an expression for pay which involves the eagle on their ornaments.

There are two worthless pieces of furniture in the office of the Officer of the Day—the two chairs in there.

PHOTOGRAPHS MADE OF METEORS FLYING THROUGH SPACE

Joshua made the sun stand still and out in Pomona, Calif., at Claremont College an ingenious man, Dr. Walter T. Whitney, director of the college observatory, has made the meteors stand still and be photographed.

Up until the accomplishment of this feat the camera has been unable to show the meteors as anything but streaks of light. This has kept the astrophysicist at a great disadvantage. His interest is more centered on the meteor itself rather than on its trail. Even more so is he interested in its spectrogram—that is, a picture of its colorful hues when its light is broken up by a prism. From the hues he can determine the composition of the meteor. The meteor burns up as it flashes through space as it rubs against the molecules of the air. And because a part of the hues are caused by the gases in the air that are consumed he has been unable to be sure what the hues tell. The physicist has wanted a straight spectrograp of a meteor head. Whitney has made the only photograph in which the meteor is not a trail of light.

The method Whitney has used requires a study of astronomical photography of stars. A telescope is trained on the star. The telescope must be kept trained on the star as it moves. This is attended to mechanically. Because this is possible photographs of many hours exposure with no blurring have been made. Except for the star on which the telescope is trained everything moves. This affords an explanation to why a picture of a distant comet stands out clearly against a background of streaks, which are caused by stars in which the astronomer is not at all concerned.

It is through these facts that we discern the secret of making meteors stand still. Whitney simply made a camera move as fast as the meteor. He mounted four cameras on a horizontal shaft and whirled it with an electric motor at approximately the speed with which a meteor hurtles through the air. The cameras were bound to catch something if he kept them in the proper vertical plane.

So when the Perseid shower came along in August, the initial test was made. And in the first attempt Whitney caught a very brilliant meteor. It was not one of the Perseids, however. The next atempts at this photography will be made during the Leonid annual display in November.

As only thirty spectra of mteors have thus far been caught by the camera, the addition of only one is no ordinary accomplishment. It is a matter of scientific importance. With little doubt Dr. Whitney will produce more pictures of meteoric spectra annually than would be possible by the usual procedure in a decade.

Wake Forest Wins By One Touchdown

STRONG CITADEL FRESHMEN DOWN BLUE HOSE

NORTH CAROLINA BAPTISTS DRIVE AND PASS TO VICTORY

Higbe, for P. C., Takes Deacon Punt and Puts It On Three-Yard Line With Beautiful Run. Bolick Carries It Over for Score.

The Presbyterian College Blue Hose lost to a powerful Wake Forest team that was doped to beat them by a tremendous score, 14 to 6, Saturday at Wake Forest.

It was a game Blue Hose team that held the Demon Deacons, conquerors of N. C. State, to a one-touchdown win. Outweighed plenty, the Blue fought unrelentingly but the superior strength of the North Carolinians was too great for them.

Wake Forest started early in the first period when the Deacons, led by Bill Martin, drove their way down to the P. C. five-yard line. Stern took the ball over for the score.

P. C.'s only successful offensive came late in the third quarter. After the Blue Hose had driven Wake Forest down in their own territory they lost the ball on downs. The ball was punted to Robbie Higbe, who was standing in mid-field. He caught the ball at full speed and headed toward town. Higbe drove and side-stepped his way to Wake Forest's three-yard mark before he was caught from behind by Edens. Captain Harry Bolick navigated the remaining three yards for P. C.'s only touchdown. Horne failed to convert.

The Deacons scored again in the third period by virtue of a leaping catch of Kitchen's pass by Martin. The pass was good for 24 yards and a touchdown.

The Blue Hose showed a lot of power and fight in the game Saturday. Wake Forest has a great team this year and the Hose did a splendid job.

In the line, Shorty Horne was a continuous thorn in the Deacon's side. Pudge Plowden and Son Tisdale also were good. The entire line put up a good fight, and showed the power that has been expected of them all season.

Higbe's long punt return in the second quarter was the most spectacular play of the game, but Captain Bolick and Bob Perrin also registered some nice gains. P. C. made only four first downs.

Lee Quarterman's kicking did much to keep the score as low as it was. Rex Wilbanks played well the time he was in the game. P. C.'s blocking showed great improvement, and it was on Higbe's long run that it functioned with the greatest success.

Bob Perrin leaped high into the air to intercept a Wake Forest pass on the 13-yard line. This stopped a Deacon drive.

With their four toughest assignments out of the way the Blue Hose go to war, beginning next week when they play Catawba here. With the defensive power they showed in the Clemson, Mercer and Wake Forest games and the scoring ability they threw against the Howard Bull Dogs, the Blue Hose should be hard to beat by the opponents they will play from now until the season ends.

THE HIPPODROME

Monday and Tuesday: Myrna Loy, William Powell, and Clark Gable in "Manhattan Melodrama." A gripping story of the deep friendship between two men and the melodramatic climax of that friendship. As boys, Clark Gable and William Powell find themselves alone in the world. Gable is a born gambler. Powell, a studious lad determined to get on. He becomes district attorney; Gable a gambling house proprietor. The combat between the two, the unflinching integrity of Powell and the devotion of Gable and his respect for his friend's ideals, present an unusual situation. In order to squelch a scandal against Powell, who is running for Governor, Gable kills a man and it is the duty of Powell, his friend, to send him to death. Myrna Loy, as the girl who once loved Gable and Marries Powell, turns in a beautiful performance. Fine support in this MGM production.

Wednesday: "The Crime Doctor." A pretty perfect picture, all about the perfect crime, with Otto Kruger, Karen Morley and Nils Asther turning in pluperfect performances. Otto, a super-detective can't give up his wife, Karen, when he discovers she loves Nils, so he plots and executes a murder with all the clues leading right to his rival. But even Nils' death sentence doesn't win Karen back for him. So enter the surprise ending—and whew, is it a relief! Guaranteed to keep you riveted to the screen every minute whether you are a crime enthusiast or not. Otto Kruger will mean something more in your movie life after this. Karen Morley has profited by her screen vacation. The same for Judith Wood in a siren role. Don't, by any means, skip this RKO movie.

Thursday: Ramon Navarro in "Laughing Boy." The Oliver La-Farge story of Indian Ramon Novarro's love for Lupe Velez who has learned the evil ways of the white race, makes poor screen fare. Besides the fact that the photography is up Citadel passes. The first-year pass defense was very rugged and must be improved upon before they can expect to win many games. Their failure to stop McCrady's long end sweeps and slants off tackle contributed to Citadel's success.

Harry Cox, the Blue Hose center, showed more class than any freshman on the field. Cox, at intervals, seemed to be playing in the Citadel backfield. More than once he dropped the renowned McCrady for losses and it was due mostly to his power and scrap that the second and third quarter stands were successful.

"Tiney" Hipp, a tackle, was a bulwark in the Blue Hose line. In the backfield the diminutive "Piggie" Isom was the only consistent ground gainer. His speed carried him around Citadel's ends for a few nice gains.

Patterson and Mishoe got a couple of long kicks but the short ones greatly over-balanced the long ones. Hollis showed ability for the short time he was in the game. An injury kept him from starting.

The freshmen presented some miserable blocking. In fact, a lot of rough spots must be ironed out before the Blue Anklets will be a dangerous team.

Citadel gained 101 yards from scrimmage, P. C. gained 38. Citadel attempted ten passes and completed eight for a total gain of 112 yards. P. C. completed three passes out of twelve tries to gain 21 yards.

BULL PUPS TROUNCE FIRST-YEAR PRESBYTERIANS HERE FRIDAY

Fast-Moving, Powerful Citadel Team Walks Away With Game, 27 to 0. Several P. C. Freshman Show Much Promise.

A strong Citadel rat team trounced a small band of hard-fighting Presbyterian Anklets Friday to the tune of 27 to 0 on Johnson field.

It was a clearly outclassed P. C. team, but under the disadvantage of being outweighed 20 pounds to the man and being pitted against a much better opponent, the Blue Socks put up a fight that ran true to P. C. form. Twice the fresh guarded their goal line successfully with the Bull Pups striking with every ounce of power they had.

The chief reason for P. C.'s defeat was the Blue Hose's inability to break excellent, little can be said for this MGM picture which is dull and moves slowly.

Friday: Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey in "Cockeyed Cavaliers." The team, more hilarious than ever, with an elaborate production to back up their insanities. There is a sprinkling of double "entendres," but not enough to keep a strictly moral person at home. The plot? Does it matter? Locale is Merrie Olde England, with costumes, another big bad wolf song, and "I want to Dilly-Dally in the Valley with You," a sure hit. Wheeler is a roving kleptomaniac who steals everything including the Duke's carriage. Woolsey impersonates the King's physician, and you can imagine from there. Dorthy Lee becomes a cute boy to escape marriage with the Duke, and falls in love with Wheeler. Thelma Todd gorgeous, and Noah Beery springs a surprise with his glorious bass voice that goes way down to "there."

Saturday: "Wagon Wheels." There is a good song, and also Gail Patrick. Otherwise this Zane Grey Paramount story is the same old Western you have been seeing for years. Randolph Scott is the hero and Monte Blue is the villain. The picturization of the difficulties on the old Oregon Trail, and numerous Indian raids take place of the plot.

THE WIND BAG

The way new pledges support their respective fraternities, now that everything is settled, is simply astounding. Any intimation of a slam against a rat's fraternity is just like a red rag to a bull. Then, too, their devotion to the groups of which they are members is something remarkable. One freshman actually offered to help put up the stove in preparation for a social!

Two freshmen who were good friends and joined different fraternities were talking the other day. "Are you going up to your K. A. tonight," inquired one. "I've been going up to my K. A. every night."

The new form of greeting in vogue on the campus is "What say?" The recipient of the greeting answers, "All right!" Both of them hold up one outstretched finger while speaking. Roy Forehand is reputed to be the man who started this original form of salutation.

One freshman, it is said, brought a car with him when school started, thinking it would be a good inducement to fraternities he wished to get bids from. Now that this clever plan has worked, to all appearances at least, he serves notice that his auto will be back home for the rest of the year.

Chris Peake's popularity seems to be increasing by leaps and bounds. Not satisfied with ensnaring two of our leading bo-rats, she weaves her spell over other prominent men of the campus. George Cody is the latest to fall before her enchanting personality. The other day the author of this column, being also a photographer of parts, snapped a photograph of "Buffalo Bill" in the act of making a date with Miss Peake. The freckle-faced phenomenon from York, being naturally a modest young fellow, managed to steal the camera that afternoon, however, and one of the biggest photographic scoops of the century was momentarily in jeopardy. The offender saw the error of his ways, tho, after a serious talk with the aforementioned photographer, showed him the enormity of his offense. The picture will appear in an early issue of the Blue Stocking.

Hugh Holman, the heretofore innocent young journalist, journeyed over to York with Buffalo Bill Cody, the man of the wide open spaces. Cody, the sophisticated, debonair man of the world, will endeavor to teach this young fellow how to move around in the best circles of society. Holman is expected to come back a changed man, both physically and mentally.

When Cody was called to account by his family for the low grades he received on the monthly reports, he replied that he had his mind fixed on higher things; doubtless having in mind the elongated co-ed mentioned above.

An important addition is soon to be made to the already bulging shelves of the college library. Librarian Willard Jones announces that a copy of Mother Goose is soon to be placed in our book depository. "School's out!"

Squiff ball applicants have been turning out in droves, according to Sergeant Sterlin Young, coach of the team. Candidates are vieing with one another for leadership in the new sport.

One man, for instance, made a bet of a coca-cola with another that he would make the team.

Yet some few detestable fellows have gone so far as to actually question the existence of this game which is, if the truth were told, rapidly sweeping the country. The author of this column, being one of the leaders in bringing this innovation to the P. C. athletic department, took it upon himself last week-end to get a sponsor for the squifflets while he was in Greenville. A picture of the lovely lady will appear in the PacSac along with those of other athletic sponsors. This startling revelation should be more than enough to sweep away the fog of uncertainty that has been spread over the new sport thru the malicious efforts of a few doubting Thomases.

TAXES—Time To Halt

I don't know of any community, county or state in which taxes have not gone up in the past two or three years. Certainly there is none in which taxes are not materially higher than they were ten years ago. I've just got my tax bills for 1934, and perhaps I'm unduly concerned; but I can't help coming back to the belief I have long cherished, that sooner or later we've got to abandon the tax on capital and find other and more equitable ways of raising money with which to run our various governments.

The real estate property tax is a tax on capital. Nothing like it exists anywhere else in the world, so far as I am informed. It was adopted in America in the pioneer days when there wasn't anything else, much, to tax except land. I like the English system much better. There property is taxed on the basis of what it earns—the income tax carried down to the income of everbody who owns a piece of property that is rented. Of course, there are other taxes, but they do not constitute a lien on real property.

INCOMES—The Average

The average income in the United States is said, by Henry Wallace in his new book, to be about or under $1,500 a year. That includes everybody who works for a livig—except farmers. He figures that the average farm income has been cut down from about $1,300 a year to something like $500 a year.

Of course, Mr. Wallace is talking about cash incomes. Out of his $1,500 a year the industrial worker has to pay for food and lodging. If he has $500 a year left he is either a financial wizard or just plumb lucky. But the farmer, out of his $500 cash income, has to pay taxes and, like as not, mortgage interest, to say nothing of insurance and other items he can't "work out," so it's about as broad as it is long.

The fallacy, it seems to me, lies in comparing the farmer with the wage-earner. The proper comparison is between the farmer and the business man, owner of his own business. The farmer is a capitalist, and subject to the risks that all capital is subject to. That isn't to say that he doesn't have plenty of trouble, but at the worst he is not in such imminent danger of starvation as the unemployed industrial worker.

STAMPS—For All Taxes

I don't know how many kinds of Internal Revenue stamps there are, but it strikes me that the easiest and most painless way for any government to collect taxes is by making it illegal to sell anything that doesn't bear a Government stamp. I know that's merely another way of saying "sales tax" which is a phrase that always makes politicians see red. Nevertheless, some of our most important sources of revenue are from the sales taxes, already in force.

There are revenue stamps on every bottle of liquor, every barrel of beer, every pack of playing cards, every pack of cigarettes or box of cigars. Shares of stock cannot be legally transferred without sticking revenue stamps on them. Everyone is familiar with the sales tax on gasoline.

The only reason why stamp or sales taxes are not imposed upon flour, potatoes, shoes, hats and canned goods, is the fear of the politicians in power that the ordinary man would thus be forced to realize that he is paying taxes, and would vote the politicians who imposed them out of office. There isn't any other reason at all.

REALITIES—Are Few

Most of us live in a dream world, in which we think that there is some magic process, if only we could find it, which would make us happy and prosperous. When something unpleasant happens we are prone to attribute it to malicious fate, which can only be overcome by finding some new incantation which will work the right magic to set everything straight again.

Few people are courageous enough to face realities. The realities of life are terrifying to those who have been brought up to believe that "somebody" is always going to look out for them. They are not at all frightful to the few who relaize that nothing in life is essential to happiness except food and shelter.

I try to be tolerant of everybody else's foibles and frailties, but I get disgusted with people who think they are being badly used merely because they can't have everything they desire at the moment they desire it.

Another victor for legal liquor was chalked up in New York last week when Federal Agents seized a still with a daily output of 1500 gallons of alcohol. Nine men were arrested in a completely modern plant valued at $75,000.

A new opening on Broadway: Merrily We Roll Along. Starts in 1934 with a group of characters successful, or once so, but embittered. And through the second and third acts it pries back into their lives to 1927, 1924, 1923 and finally 1918 when they are all shown with ideals and ambitions. Decreasing interest is inevitable, yet one critic says, "This play will surely make history."

Beefsteak Charlie, a famous Broadway restaurant man, is moving to the other side of Fifth Avenue. "I'm going to open a place where people want the best and can get it. There aren't many of them left around Broadway any more." Bright lights are moving eastward.

Elder Lightfoot Solomon Michaux, gold-toothed, deep-voiced Negro evangelist, stopped in Harlem on a tour of the country. "I'm going to drive the devil out of Harlem," he said. And a small worshipper in the second row shouted, "I bet we catch hell now." Yeah, man!

At the 59th annual convention of the United States Brewers Association of which Colonel Jacob Ruppert of baseball fame is president, it was brought out that both in America and the beer drinking nations of Europe there is an overwhelming preference for beer of 3.2 strength or less. Yet how long we cried for greater strength.

The Pulitzer Prize Play Committee has declined to serve as the play jury this year. They picked "Mary of Scotland" last year, but the award was made to "Men in White," because the rules require an American setting as well as an American author. "A prize play about Adam and Eve," says one member, "would have to be disregarded because the setting would have to be in the garden of Eden, wherever that may have been."

DRINKING — And Accidents

Vermont reports five times as many automobile accidents since the repeal of prohibition as in any year previous. Vermont newspapers and officials are unanimous in blaming this on liquor. The Government collected $86,000,000 in taxes on distilled liquors and $169,000,000 on beer in the year ending July 1, but only $4,000,000 on wines. Better wine is made in the United States than in France or Italy, but we are not a wine-drinking people.

The dream of sudden prosperity through repeal has proved merely a dream. Hundreds of concerns that got liquor licenses in New York, thinking everybody was going to rush to the bars, have abandoned them rather than pay the high license fee. Many liquor dealers have gone broke.

It took a hundred years of education to arouse public sentiment against the abuse of alcohol. Now the effort seems to be all in the other direction. Prohibition was unworkable as a national program. It will take a couple of generations to bring us back to a sane, balanced understanding of the liquor question. Meantime, drunken drivers will kill off a growing percentage of sober folk.

FROM time to time we tell you facts about Chesterfield Cigarettes.

We say that Chesterfields are different from other cigarettes—that the tobaccos are different, the paper is different, and the way they are made is different.

Everything that modern Science knows about or that money can buy is used in making Chesterfield a milder, better-tasting cigarette—a cigarette that Satisfies.

You can prove what we tell you about Chesterfield. May we ask you to try them —that would seem to be fair enough.

P. C.-CATAWBA CONTEST HERE SCORELESS TIE

Gridiron Battle Saturday On Local Field Was Thrilling Game. Blue Stockings Lack Punch To Score After Driving Down Field Several Times.

Biting and tearing at each other with reckless abandon, P. C.'s Scarlet Surge and the Catawba Redskins fought to a scoreless tie as neither team was able to dent its opponent's defense inside of the 30-yard line.

It was a game filled with good football, bad football, thrills, disappointments and all the rest of the action that goes to make a football game that gives a million fans delirium tremens weekly. Both teams Saturday were in scoring position but their hopes at tallying melted into thin air as they approached the goal line.

The Indians received their chance when Perrin fumbled a bad pass from center on P. C.'s ten-yard marker, after which Vaniewsky's attempted field goal was blown wide by the wind.

The Surge was in the coveted position a number of times but each time its touchdown thrusts were of no avail. One time Catawba took the ball on downs, once a fumble stopped them and in the waning minutes of the game the Surges were on their way to an almost sure touchdown and victory but an intercepted pass blasted their hopes.

Captain Harry Bolick played masterful ball all afternoon, tearing off long gains through the Redskin line and playing a whale of a defensive game. When Catawba did succeed in opening a hole in the forward wall of the Scarlet Surge, and that was seldom, their backs were met in the hole by P. C.'s captain.

Robbie Higbe, flashy and eel-hipped halfback, played one of the best games of his career. His sweeping end runs, off-tackle slants and punt returns did much to keep the Indians on the defense. Once it seemed as if he was off for a score as he headed to town with a punt, but he was hemmed in by the sideline and two Catawba backs.

Bob Perrin and Lee Quarterman played great games. Both men gained a large amount of ground and were good on defense. Quarterman's kicking was away above the average. He averaged 39 yards and three times he kicked from the 30-yard line over the goal.

In the line it was Shorty Horne and Doyle Boggs. These men were in almost every play and sometimes the play was yards behind the line of scrimmage. Horne and Boggs were the main cogs in a strong defense, that allowed Catawba to pass the 35-yard stripe only once, and this the fruit of a P. C. mishap, namely, a fumble on ten 10-yard line.

The line-up:

Catawba		Presbyterian
Pearson	le	Yearout
Garland	lt	Davis
Machan	lg	Horne
Vaniewsky	c	Plowden
Williams	rg	Boggs
Fuller	rt	Millsap
Kessler	re	Forehand
Meehan	qb	Perrin
Dinges	lh	Higbe
Maggiello	rh	Quarterman
Clark	fb	Bolick

P. C. substitutions: Waldrep for Forehand, Freeman for Boggs, Shomaker for Tisdale, Tisdale for Millsap, Millsap for Plowden, Holliday for Quarterman, Davis for Freeman, Bird for Collings, Wilbanks for Holliday.

Beta Kappa Gets Three New Men

Beta Kappa fraternity announces the pledging of Julian Freeman, and the initiation of M. H. Jacobs and C. E. Carson.

Freeman and Jacobs are both members of the sophomore class, and of the varsity football squad. Carson is editor of The Collegian, associate editor of The Blue Stocking, president of Chi Beta Phi, and a member of I. R. C., and the Y. M. C. A. cabinet.

Freeman's home is in Clinton, Jacobs comes from Kingstree, and Carson from Atlanta, Ga.

College Press To Meet Nov. 14-15

Converse and Wofford Colleges, In Spartanburg, Are Hosts. This Paper Enters Contests.

The South Carolina College Press Association will hold its 1934 session in the buildings of Wofford and Converse in Spartanburg on Nov. 14 and 15, according to an announcement from Frederick L. Atkinson, corresponding secretary.

The Blue Stocking will be represented by W. F. Guess, editor, and C. E. Carson, associate editor. Three entries have already been sent in to compete in the contest for the best feature, news story, book review, and editorial printed in South Carolina college newspapers. The editorial chosen from The Blue Stocking is "What Are They Worth?" by Frank Guess, an editorial, dealing with honorary fraternities.

The news story entered in the contest is a sports account by T. H. Wingate headed "Blue Hose Split Georgia Scrap," a report of the boxing match with the Georgians in Athens last winter.

The feature article representing the Blue Stocking in the competition is one by W. F. Guess which tells of the success of C. J. Milling, a P. C. alumnus, in the field of poetry.

Glee Club Makes First Appearance

Local Singers Give Short Program At High School. Plans Made For December Trip.

The 1934 glee club made its first appearance Thursday before the Clinton high school in its auditorium, giving two club numbers and solos by Lake and Tisdale.

Plans are made for a trip to begin just before the Christmas holidays and last four days with concerts at Kingstree on December 11, at Conway and Mullins on the nights of December 12 and 13, and at Marion and Dillon on December 14, the same day on which regular holidays begin.

The club which appeared at the high school singing "Calvary" and "Sylvia" and which will go on the trip, with a few possible changes and additions, is as follows:

First tenors: Forehand (manager), Hudson, Plunkett, Collings, Newland, McAlpine.

Second tenors: McCall (president), Guess, Dunlap, Lynn Jones, Gray, Weeks, Horne.

Baritones: Lake, C. R. Johnson, Anderson, Hannah, Upshur, Winn, McDonald.

Basses: Wallace, Heath, Frank Johnston, Singletary, Hemphill, Wardlaw, Harmon, Bob Clark and Bill Clark.

Pianist: Tisdale.

Six men, Dr. Huntley, the director, announces, who compose the orchestra, will make the trip. Some of them are members of the glee club. They are: Tisdale, Chapman, McDonald, Gray, Wallace, Shoemaker.

Dr. T. H. Grafton Pays College Visit

Former Presbyterian Student Is Now On Faculty of Mary Baldwin College.

Wednesday morning at chapel hour the student body was addressed by Dr. Thomas H. Grafton.

Dr. Grafton is a former student of Presbyterian college and while here attained one of the most outstanding scholastic records ever to be given a student. Dr. Grafton is now professor at Mary Baldwin College for girls.

The thought left us by Dr. Grafton was the challenge of young men to enter public life. He also talked on [illegible] and how an end could be [illegible] to the under part of the enemy of our government.

To Form Young Democratic Clubs

Every College and University To Be Organized This Year. Membership Drive Planned.

Plans have been formulated by the National College Committee of the Young Democratic Clubs of America to organize Young Democratic clubs in every college and university in the United States this year and to wage an intensive membership drive in all institutions where clubs already have been formed, it was announced this week by William J. Bulow, Jr., of South Dakota, chairman, and Miss Elizabeth Wheeler, of Montana, vice-chairman, of the committee on organization of college clubs.

Within a few weeks announcement will be made of the appointment of college directors in each state. The duty of each director will be to contact all existing college clubs in his state and to aid in the organization of clubs in all other colleges and universities where clubs have not been formed to date.

The college director for each state will be named by the national committeeman, national committeewoman and state president of the Young Democratic clubs of the state in which he will function. The director will have supervision of the organization of all college clubs in his state and act as the coordinator in this work between the state officers, the national officers and the national college organization committee of the Young Democratic Clubs of America.

College students, both young men and young women, who are interested in this movement may communicate with the officers of the Young Democratic clubs in their state where the institution they are attending is located or with Mr. Bulow, whose address is National Headquarters of the Young Democratic Clubs of America, National Press Building, Washington, D. C., or the college director for their state when his apointment is made public.

The Young Democratic Clubs of America is the official youth organization of the Democratic party and was designated as such at the national convention of the Democratic party in Chicago in 1932 when Franklin D. Roosevelt was nominated for the presidency. The organization now has a membership of more than 2,500,000 and is growing steadily. There are active state organizations now in 46 of the 48 states and every state is expected to be organized before the end of the year.

The constitution of the Young Democratic Clubs of America states that the movement is established "in order to stimulate in young people an active interest in governmental affairs, to increase the proficiency of popular government, to foster and perpetuate the ideals and principles of the Democratic party, and to provide for their people through its administration, the highest degree of justice and social welfare."

The officers of the Young Democratic Clubs of America are Cliff Woodward, of Iowa, president; Ruth Lockett, of California, vice-president; Ray Kirchdorfer, of Kentucky, treasurer; and James Roosevelt, of Massachusetts, secretary.

Military Dept. To Donate Prizes

Will Be Given To Two Students Writing Best Articles On Any Phase of Military Training.

The military department wishing to cooperate in every way possible with the various aspects of student life at P. C. is now offering two prizes of three dollars each to be given to two men who shall write for any issue before or for the issue of the Blue Stocking which shall be published on Saturday, November 17, 1934, an article pertaining either directly or indirectly to Military training at Presbyterian College or to military life in general. The articles may be written either for or against military training and the two winning articles will be published in the Student Opinion column of the Blue Stocking as soon as possible after they are judged by someone other than any member of the Blue Stocking staff or any member of the ROTC department.

It is hoped that several men will be interested in this offer and that the ones who compete will really do creditable work in preparing the articles.

Wyman Elected Alumni Head

Presbyterian College Chapter Organized In Columbia. President McSween Gives Talk.

Presbyterian college alumni of Columbia and nearby towns met Tuesday night, Oct. 23, and formed a chapter of the Alumni association of the institution.

Dr. Hugh E. Wyman was elected president; Dr. Chapman J. Milling, vice-president, and Dr. W. P. Beckman, secretary and treasurer. All three are practicing physicians of Columbia. Doctor Milling and Doctor Beckman are members of the medical staff of the State hospital.

Dr. John McSween, president of the college, delivered an address on the work and progress of the college and said he was greatly encouraged by the spirit alumni are showing. He pointed out that active chapters were already in operation in Anderson, Florence and New York and the association was fast growing in numbers and strength.

Coach Walter Johnson spoke briefly on athletics at P. C. and said this year's team was displaying the spirit customary of Blue Stocking elevens and was having unexpected success in intercollegiate competition.

Other short talks about the college and the work of the alumni were delivered by Prof. H. E. Sturgeon, president of the P. C. athletic association, Spurgeon W. Sumerel, president of the Alumni association, and Willard L. Jones, secretary and treasurer.

John A. Montgomery, who is regional vice-president of Richland, Lee, Sumter, Clarendon, Orangeburg, Lexington and Calhoun counties, was the promoter of the meeting.

Twenty-three members were enrolled in the alumni chapter.

A Professor Recalls The "Good Old Days" At His Alma Mater

Every year, there are a few men who are as pitifully eager to join a fraternity—ANY one will do—as the fraternities are to secure those of their choice. Years ago, when Professor Woodworth was a sophomore at Hampden - Sidney, upper - classmen evolved a stunt, amounting almost to genius, in which this eagerness was utilized to the fullest. The freshman was approached, "sales-talked," and pledged to a "fraternity." There were few restrictions upon the pledging of a fraternity at that time at Hampden-Sidney, so shortly the joyful rat would be initiated. Oh, what an initiation! Emerging from it battered but happy, the proud "fraternity man" would strut around, speaking casually of "his society," until gradually the awful truth crept upon him through the [illegible] of friends. "The society" [illegible] only to serve as an excuse for extra "ratting"! Of course, each year after a few men were so victimized, the secret would out, and the "society" would cease to exist for another year.

There were five fraternities and two literary societies, the Union and the Philomathean, when Dr. Woodworth was there. The literary societies rushed also, and members would sometimes board the train bearing new men college-ward at stations twenty miles out, in order to "line up" prospects.

Hampden-Sidney was extremely out of the way in those days, and consequently intercollegiate athletics were slow in developing. Tennis, baseball, and a primitive form of Rugby foot- [illegible] were popular until during Dr. Woodworth's last year, 1892, a [illegible] a mock fraternity, existing in name [illegible]

PLEDGE DANCE HOLDS STAGE FOR WEEK-END

Annual Celebration In Honor of New Fraternity Men To Be Held Friday and Saturday. "The Californians," Orchestra From West Coast, To Play.

Pledge Dance, the first interfraternity social event of the school year, is scheduled to come off Friday and Saturday of this week. Jack Stern and his Californians will furnish the musical entertainment.

Pledge Dance, as the name implies, honors the pledges of the various fraternities at P. C. Now that the new men are situated with their respective groups, it is thought that a little diversion from the usual round of sweeping out fraternity club rooms, hauling up coal, etc., will be in order.

Since usually there is a great interest in the orchestra that is to play, a bit of information concerning it might prove enlightening to those planning to attend. The Pan-Hellenic council is fortunate in engaging one of the most well-known dance orchestras on the West Coast. The Californians have just recently removed from Seattle, where they have been playing for some time, to take the place of Joe Roman's musical aggregation at Hotel Charlotte.

The Westerners have an arrangement consisting of twelve pieces, and, as an added attraction a torch singer will give a vocal touch to the gaiety of the occasion.

A large number of girls will be here from various sections of the state to attend the festive event. This is the first time in some years that Pledge Dance has two nights of entertainment, and for this reason a greater number of young ladies than usual are expected.

No part of Smyth dormitory will be reserved for the fair visitors, as has been done often in the past.

A great number of outsiders will come to Clinton for the occasion also. Around 200 invitations were mailed out a few days ago to numerous alumni and other non-students.

Bell Street Choir Presents Program

Group of Local Negro Singers At Y. M. C. A. Session. Hymns and Spirituals Rendered.

The Bell Street Choir, (colored), sirging before the largest attendance of a regular Y. M. C. A. meeting, this year, last Thursday night brought to the members and many visitors the message of God in song. Prof. J. T. Mims, who acted as spokesman, had a well mixed and varied program; presenting in the order named: a male quartet (in which our own "Gene" and "Columbus" were very much in evidence), a double-mixed quartet, a female quartet, and two solos. The hymns and Negro spirituals were sung not only reverently but also entertainingly and were received by the group with much appreciation and applaudation.

The colored quartet opened their program with "Kneel and Pray," and "Keep Me From Sinking Down." The double-mixed quartet then sang "My Lord is Waiting All The Time." The old familiar thoughts of "Rock of Ages" were brought to the audience in a solo by Mr. Gary, better known as "Gene." This was followed by three songs from the female quartet, "Turn Around," "Poor Widow in Barrel" and "He Got Away to Heaven." Professor Mims sang next "I'm So glad Trouble don't Last Always." After the male quartet sad sung "Kentucy Babe," the octette concluded the program with two spirituals, "Down by the Riverside" and "Swing Low Sweet Chariot."

The meeting was presided over by C. M. Hudson who read the Scripture and introduced the visitors. Hudson expressed the Y's appreciation to the [illegible]

Do Low Grades Indicate Failures?

In the recent talk by Mr. Hardwick on the sexual side of our lives, he emphasied the importance of attitude. This we believe to be the essence of his message. But the idea of attitude may be given the spotlight in other phases of life as well. Just as attitude toward sexual activity is more important than the activity itself, so the point of view, the mental attitude, toward the various other components of what we call life is of greatest importance in determining success or failure.

Success cannot be measured materially; it is not in itself material. Rather it occupies a higher plane, a broader sphere, and is necessarily a result of certain mental states. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he," is a truth greater than which none was ever spoken. Discovered before the day of higher learning, it is being rediscovered now by science and modern psychology. In the works of Ella Wilcox, "Tis the set of the sails, and not the gales" that determine the way we go.

On the registrar's bulletin board there is at present a list of students who have been given marks lower than seventy for the first school month. This list is one of failures, of persons who were given a piece of work to do and failed to do it successfully. Perhaps there are some who take these grades too seriously, especially freshmen, who have been used to the easy running routine of our high schools, and who have not yet properly adjusted themselves to their new environment, are prone to accept this situation as a smashing blow, discouraging them from trying to better themselves. A few have done their best—not the best they could do, but the best they knew to do. But to all let us say that here again the question preeminent is of attitude. He who has had a spirit of willingness and friendliness toward his work has not failed, though he received a complete set of F's. Grades are at best an estimate of outward appearances; the real concern is one of inward feeling. He who takes his job with a smile, who finds happiness and pleasure in his study, whose mental attitude is one of attempted adaption: he has succeeded.

The Aims of Science

Problems form the main constituent of a science and these have in part definite answers and in part only tentative solutions. The reason for so many problems is very evident when considering that "the field of science is unlimited; its material is endless, every group of natural phenomena, every phase of social life, every stage of past or present development is material for science. The unity of all science consists alone in its method, not its material." It is quite natural then that anything with so large a scope should contain questions at present unanswerable. And there will continue to be only tentative solutions to some of these problems until science has completed its task in solving and classifying every problem and phenomena of the universe. And this is only to state that the task of science shall only cease that it should exist?

when man himself ceases to be, and when the wheels of progress and development have ceased to revolve. The goal of science is the complete interpretation of the universe and as the universe increases through our study of our own little corner of it — it is not hard to see that this goal is an ideal and a stage that we shall never actually reach.

As science grows and attempts to classify and correlate the various fields of phenomena which it surveys, the scope of material to be dealt with stays far ahead of the scientific knowledge with which the scientist has to regard the subject-matter.

In dealing with such a vast amount of matter science has assumed necessarily a disinterested attitude. Through a survey of the history of science we can easily perceive that the point of view is to reveal the unvarnished facts.

Since science is so vast it must plough every field and leave no ground of experience uncultivated, for its scope is so far-reaching as to include everything. And since it must deal with all science cannot fail to take cognizance of the mind, the vital part of man, his inner being — the soul. And so in tilling the soils of knowledge to reap informational progress science must plough on and let no obstacle turn it from its chosen path in seeking the basic of all research — the unbiased truth.

What Are They Worth?

(Note:—The following editorial is reprinted from a previous issue of The Blue Stocking. It was judged the best appearing on this page during the past year, and has been submitted to the South Carolina Press Association contest).

In the modern school or college extra-curricula activities have taken a prominent place, and are generally considered vital parts of the educational system. They encompass a wide field, ranging all the way from well-organized athletics to newspaper and magazine work, and the more important of them are supported either partially or wholly by the college, and have a very definite place on the regular budget. We, as students, regard them as important and devote a great deal of our time to those towards which our interests incline. Some of them have become permanent institutions on the campus with definite traditions behind them and of these we seldom question the value.

In the student's zeal either to participate in more varied activities or to add honor to his name he has gradually formed a series of club and fraternities. In the beginning we prefer to believe that each was organized for a purpose and an aim, and at least we know that each made some particular interest the basis of its foundation. We like to imagine, too, that in the beginning they strived to create a force on the campus, and to do something for the betterment of the school. If this was true, then they justified their existence, and proved that the club form of extra-curricula activity was important in the make-up of the school.

But today we cannot help but take a cynical attitude towards clubs and honorary fraternities in existence on our campus. To accept them as standing institutions, to fail to place them in a critical light, and to find out if they merit existence is to be hypocritical. We have let them pass without question long enough.

Some of them, if they started off vigorously, have degenerated into a pitiful state of inactivity. In a few honorary fraternities a meeting is held at the beginning of each year to bid enough new members to send the regular dues to national headquarters, and to pay for a page in the annual. There may be another meeting, but usually it is forgotten about until the next year when the president again faces the problem of paying for pictures in the annual, which seems to be the fraternity's sole aim and purpose. Others are a little higher in the scale of activity, and have several half-hearted meetings during the year. Even those that seem to carry on in the proper manner, and have regular stated meetings fail utterly in promoting any particular interest. We do not wish to be too caustic in our statements, but we feel safe in saying that no honorary fraternity on the campus does half that it should towards the betterment of the college.

Honorary fraternities are in a sad plight. This state is very apparently caused from the student's lack of interest. However, it is possible that there are entirely too many on the campus for any one to thrive and serve any definite purpose. We believe that there ought to be an accounting, and if it is found that there is nothing to justify a fraternity's existence it should be disbanded. If it means nothing to the college or to the individuals who are associated with it is there any reason that it should exist?

Present-Day Science

By Chas. E. Carson

Just a Rocketeer

The rocket industry has not gone out of business yet. Prof. Goddard, of Clark university, has been working on rocket ships for almost twenty years now, and is still at it. Already he has topped the speed of 500 miles per hour. Unlike most rocket builders, Mr. Goddard does not broadcast wild claims. At present he is mainly interested in stabilizing and guiding the machine. The object is not to attempt to fly to the moon, or make any such trip; it is to try to find something better than the balloon for high and fast travel. While balloons will probably never be used above fifteen miles, a rocket ship may be built which will be able to fly several hundred miles high. If such can ever be accomplished, greater and cheaper speed will result from the low density and small friction of the upper atmosphere.

Do You Sleep Yourself Tired?

During a recent experiment in measuring sleep Dr. Laird, Psychology Laboratory, Hamilton, N. Y., found that the average person moves ten times each hour while asleep. From the looks of this figure the old expression "slep like a log" will have to find a substitute. However, Dr. Laird found that with all these movements the sleeper only loses about five minutes sleep the whole night. The name of the apparatus used is a somnokinetograph, which is enough to keep any one awake. Another interesting result was the discovery that most people become more restless as the hours roll by. No wonder Lazybones is so tired when he finally gets up the next day.

THE WIND BAG

Campus Personals:

Paul Todd was sick with a strange malady for several days last week. He is able to attend classes now, but is still undergoing treatment by Dr. T. J. Peake.

Buddy Chapman spent most of last week-end hanging over the brass rail in Columbia.

George Dunlap and John Todd, two campus inseparables, were highly honored recently by being allowed to hold the headlinesman's measuring chain in the rat football game with the Citadel.

Th eBlue Stocking sports staff is rightfully proud of the fact that it gave the college some very desirable publicity in connection with the newly projected squiff ball team. A late issue of the Charlotte News gives a short write-up about our new athletic venture. Which goes to show that at least a few outsiders read this paper, even if no students do.

One of our ingenious students has devised a way by which exports from America can be increased, and at the same time a use can be made of a hitherto worthless product. The sausages that so often adorn the tables in the dining hall are, according to this plan, to be shipped to South Africa, here ostriches will feast on them (supplanting the well-known doorknobs). Larger ones will be sent to France, there to take the place of the picturesque cobblestones, with which the streets of smaller towns are now paved.

This progressive step is expected to increase the United States' trade balance to a great degree.

Mr. Hunter announced in the dining hall the other day that no more biscuits were to be thrown in Judd Hall. This columnist heartily concurs in that request, as he has been the target for many such missles from the redoubtable arm of Buffalo Bill Cody, the freckle-faced phenomenon from Oklahoma, although he was very luckily able to dodge practically all of them. Woody Tisdale, husky tackle on the football team, was not so lucky, however. He now carries a black eye which is understood to be the result of contact with an overgrown wafer.

Strange and interesting facts:

1. John Rauch, P. C.'s super-salesman and business man, did not give birth to a single new money-making idea last week.

2. "Beowolf" Swedenberg, hefty English professor, has never been known to throw biscuits at Librarian Willie Jones during meals at Judd hall, although it is well known that he antagonizes the diminutive professor in various other ways.

3. Annie Lee Jackson, verbose coed, is said to have once sat thru a class without saying a word aloud. This has not been proved, however.

Dr. Jones informed Bob Hamer, husky footballer of five feet four inches in height, that his stature exceeded his intellect. This statement by the erudite professor Jones only corroborates the opinion that has been forming in the minds of numerous students.

The difference in the position of a new fraternity pledge now as compared with his station in college life exactly three weeks ago, is illustrated by two widely contrasting pictures selected from actual true to life experiences. In one we see a much sought after rat stretched out at full length on a sofa in a frat room, surrounded by a large group of fawning admirers snatching eagerly of the pearls of wisdom that flow from his lips. This reminds one of an Oriental potentate reclining on his luxurious divan, surrounded by a throng of cringing slaves waving palm leaf fans.

In the other picture we see the same freshman, but under widely different circumstances. His hands are covered with grime, and he totters unsteadily on his feet. Beads of perspiration pop out on his forehead. The reason for this is obvious, ladies and gentlemen (if there are any such who read this column). The poor freshman is carrying coal up to his fraternity club-room.

C. E. Nichols, the well-known Pac-Sac photographer, was in a high dudgeon the other day. He found out that the proof of dark and handsome C. B. Elliott's picture was missing. It turned out that the authors of this contemptible piece of thievery were none other than co-eds Highsmith and Beckham. This would not be mentioned in this column, were it not for the idealistic efforts of the author to expose wrongdoing at every opportunity. This policy he has followed constantly during his brief journalistic experience, in spite of the scurrilous attacks of a few dull and conventional minds; which are fortunately in the minority on our campus. No amount of threatening will dissuade this columnist from pursuing his purpose, viz., to publish the unadulterated truth at every opportunity.

Roy Forehand, reputedly one of the foremost social leaders of the campus, sent an 8 by 10 photographic representation of his smirking countenance to a girl in Whitmire some weeks ago. Apparently he met her thru a correspondence club, for since then not a word of news has he obtained from the hick-town houri.

Readers of this column doubtless pay not the slightest attention to the savage attack on their columnist, which is scheduled to appear in this issue on the sport page. He feels that his reputation for telling the clear simple truth, together with an unspotted record in private life, will keep him in the same high estimation that he has always enjoyed in the eyes of the public.

THE HIPPODROME

Monday and Tuesday: "Dames." A barrel of good humor, and several excellent tunes by Dick Powell, who is teamed again with Ruby Keeler. The popular cast also includes Zasu Pitts and Guy Kibbee on whom a puritanical uncle (Hugh Herbert) considers settling ten million dollars. And Joan Blondell, who lends the film the snap it needs, besides leading a cleverly presented number as "The Girl At the Ironing Board."

Wednesday: "We're Rich Again." You've never seen such a merry marital madhouse. It all revolves around a family's attempt to marry off Joan Marsh to Millionaire Reginald Denny. There's a polo-playing grandma (Edna May Oliver) and her rowdy gang, Gloria Shea, who elopes with Buster Crabbe—and country cousin (Marian Nixon) who gets the millionaire in the end. Bouquets to Marian Nixon, Billie Burke and Grant Mitchell.

Thursday: "She Learned About Sailors." And sailors learned about women in this fast, clean Fox Comedy that borders on lusty rowdiness. When gob Lew Ayres tries to get gay with Carabret singer Alice Faye in a Shanghai club, he finds plenty of opposition. They agree to be just pals, which, of course, leads to love. But that screamingly funny team, Mitchell and Durant, meddle in and mix up things plenty. Harry Green is fine as a South American.

Friday: "Uncertain Lady." A comedy of errors with Edward Everett Horton, as usual, making most of the errors. When Horton decides he loves Renee Gadd, wife Genevieve Tobin agrees to a divorce providing he secures another husband for her. And thereby hangs a tale. Paul Cavanaugh, a family friend, plots with the wife to help win back her husband. Plot succeeds, but then Genevieve finds she's in love with Cavanaugh. You undoubtedly remember Edward Everett Horton in "Sing and Like It" and Genevieve Tobin in "Kiss and Make Up." They promise to make quite a team in this new Universal production.

Did You Know That?

Madge Kennedy, star of numerous Broadway productions as well as important leads in several movies, will come to the microphone as the guest of Red Davis for a series of three programs.

Lou Holtz will be in Rudy Vallee's new picture, "Say it With Music."

Leslie Howard will probably be Anthony Adverse in the movie version which will be filmed by Warners.

Miriam Hopkins will be starred in a picture named "Becky Sharpe," based on Thackery's "Vanity Fair."

Grace Moore is touring the country as a member of the Metropolitan Quartet which is made up of Edward Johnson, Rose Hampton and Richard Bonelli.

Lucrezia Bori was the guest artist of Fame program last Sunday night.

Grete Stuegold and Nino Martini, stars of the Chesterfield program, are going to give a joint recital in Atlanta on Thanksgiving night.

Charlotte Colbert's latest starring vehicle is in Fannie Hurst's "Imitation of Life."

Ethel Waters, colored blues singer, was the highest paid star on Broadway last season.

Lyda Roberit, sensational star of Broadway "Roberta" of last season, is making "College Rhythm" for Paramount.

Gloria Swanson is returning to the movies in "Music in the Air." The Casino theatre has booked this production for the near future.

Catawba Holds P. C. to Scoreless Tie

PLAY-BY-PLAY ACCOUNT OF CATAWBA-BLUE HOSE GAME

By Pluto Ross

First Quarter

Forehand kicked-off to Maggiello on Catawba's 20-yard line. Magiello returned to the 33-yard stripe. He was tackled by Forehand and Boggs. Whitner slid off right tackle for five yards, stopped by Bolick. Clark tried center for no gain, stopped by the mass. Clark punted, both sides off-sides. Clark was slow in getting off a punt and Forehand and Tisdale teamed to block it on Catawba's 38-yard line. The ball rolled out of bounds on the Indians' 23-yard mark, putting the Scarlet Surge in scoring position in the first five minutes of game. P. C.'s ball on Catawba's 23-yard line, first and ten.

Bolick got one yard at right guard. Perrin cut in off right tackle for five yards. Quarterman was able to get only one at the center of the line. Perrin threw himself through right tackle for three and a half yards, just short of a first down. The ball went over to Catawba on their own 15-yard line.

Clark booted the ball 29 yards to his own 42-yard line where it was downed by two Indian flankmen. P. C.'s ball, first and ten, on Catawba's 42-yard line.

A pass, Perrin to Higbe, was incomplete. Higbe made 2 yards at right tackle. Bolick ran into a stone wall as he attempted to gain at right tackle. Quarterman kicked from Catawba's 40-yard line to the one-foot marker where the ball hit and bounced back to the four-yard stripe. Catawba's ball, first down, on own four-yard line.

On first play Clark punted 28 yards to his own 32 yard line. P. C.'s ball.

Higbe gained 1 yard. Catawba took time out. Bolick on a delayed buck through center added 2 yards. Perrin attempted to pass on the next play, was rushed and downed for a 6-yard loss by Pearson and Williams. Quarterman punted over the goal. Catawba's ball, first down, on own 20-yard line.

Clark got 1 at right guard. Clark clipped off 7 at center. P. C. was off-side on the next play, giving Catawba a first down on own 32-yard line. Dinges slid off right tackle for 2 yards, and Meehan barely got one at right guard. Clark punted from his 34 to Higbe on his own 30. Higbe returned 13 yards to P. C. 's 43-yard line. P. C.'s ball, first down, on own 43. Higbe skirted end for 5 yards. Bolick rammed right tackle for four yards. Catawba called time. On the next play Bolick made a first down but fumbled as he was tackled. The ball was recovered by Catawba. Catawba's ball on own 40-yard line.

Dinges tried right tackle for 5 yards, he was stopped by a smashing tackle by Bolick. Dinges added 2 at right tackle. Clark attempted to punt but the pass from center was bad and he was downed for a 15-yard loss. Clark then kicked out of bounds on Catawba's 43-yard line. P. C.'s ball, first and ten.

Higbe cut right tackle for two yards. A pass, Perrin to Higbe, was ruled complete when Clark interfered with Higbe, the gain was 9 yards. A first down for P. C. Perrin added two yards in two plays. Quarterman's pass, intended for Yearout, was intercepted by Dinges on Catawba's 15-yard line and returned to 35. Catawba's ball, first and ten on own 35-yard line. Dinges hit right tackle for 4 yards. Meehan smashed center for 3 yards.

Second Quarter

Play had been moved to the center of the field at the first. Clark punted out of bounds on P. C.'s 15-yard line. P. C.'s ball on own 15.

Higbe lost one yard at right tackle. Quarterman punted to Dinges in mid-field who put a wave into P. C. fans when he returned the ball to P. C.'s 25-yard line before he was stopped by Perrin and Higbe. P. C. took time out. Clark got one yard at right tackle. Clark threw a pass across the goal line that was just out of Yearout's reach. A pass, Clark to Dinges, was incomplete. Quarterman punted to Catawba's 30-yard line.

Dinges gained 2. Clark was stopped for no gain at right tackle. Clark punted to P. C.'s 20-yard line. Higbe returned 10.

Perrin failed to gain at right tackle. Higbe circled right end for 8 yards. Bolick added 5 yards and first down. Perrin hit right tackle for 3 yards. Higbe got 1 at right tackle. Higbe side-stepped his way for 10 yards and first down. Quarterman went around

McMillian Calls Basketball Men

Many Have Reported For Practice. Others To Join Squad After Football Season Ends.

Two weeks ago Coach Lonnie McMillian called out all candidates for varsity basketball who were not out for football to practice three evenings a week. Practically all the men from last year's varsity and freshman squads reported. A much-improved team is looked for this winter.

The following men have been getting in shape for the court game:

Phil Adams, Alan Alexander, Roy Forehand, George Cleckler, Alan Levi, J. P. Majors, James Mansfield, Red Potter, Charles Steenbergen, J. W. Steenbergen, "Stormy" Weathers, and Red Wyatt.

When practice gets into full swing after the football season, three more letter men are expected to be out. They are Captain Frank Waldrep, Joe Bradley, and Lee Quarterman.

WHO WON?

First downs: P. C. 14, Catawba 4.

Passes attempted, P. C. 16, Catawba 8 .

Passes completed P. C. 3 for 36 yards, Catawba, 2 for 9 yards.

Passes intercepted By P. C. 1, Catawba 2.

Passes incomplete P. C. 13, Catawba 6.

P. C. punted seven times for an average of 39.43 yards (Holliday 1, Quarterman 6 times), Catawba punted 13 times for an average of 33 yards.

Yards gained by running: P. C. 225, Catawba 90.

Yards lost: P. C. 26, Catawba 20.

Penalties: P. C. 15 yards, Catawba 30.

Fumbles: P. C. 5, Catawba 2.

Individual gains from scrimmage. For P. C.: Higbe carried ball 21 times, gained 81 yards, lost 1, for net gain of 80 yards; Perrin carried ball 13 times, gained 64 yards, lost 15, for net gain of 49 yards; Bolick carried ball 20 times for a gain of 51 yards, lost 5, for a net gain of 46 yards; Quarterman carried ball 7 times for gain of 30 yards, lost 6, for net gain of 24 yards; Holliday carried ball one time for a gain of 1 yard. For Catawba: Clark carried ball 18 times for a gain of 48 yards, lost 18, for a net gain of 30 yards; Dinges carried ball 10 times for a gain of 34 yards, lost 2, for a net gain of 32 yards; Meehan carried ball 5 times, gained 8 yards, lost none.

Sport Shots

South Carolina football reached its climax this week with the state fair game Thursday. This is written before the game was played, but regardless of how it comes out it will probably determine the state championship. Clemson and Carolina are undoubtedly the strongest teams in the state. Furman for the first time in several years, is weaker than either of these teams—or so it seems at present. By Thanksgiving this may look like a joke column on that prediction.

The Calvinists should settle down to a few wins just now. Having met Clemson, Mercer, Howard and Wake Forest, with glory if not always with victory, they can consider their hardest battles fought—with the possible exception of The Citadel. With the Catawba game as history when you read this, you may consider the above paragraph a lot of boloney, but I doubt it.

If the game were a spelling contest on the rival teams' names the Blue Hose wouldn't have a chance Saturday. Just meander down to the athletic bulletin board and look at that conglomeration of Slavic, Russian, and Czech names. But don't try to pronounce them—you might need a doctor's assistance in untying your tongue. As Scoop Latimer has aptly said, it is truly "the team of unpronouncable names."

The basketball boys have started the winter grind. May they get all the practice they possibly can for, in my humble opinion, they're going to need it. This particular sport has been one of the weak spots on our athletic program for several years now. We're hoping for better results this year.

I hate to bring up that much-discussed subject of P. C. spirit, but bring it up I shall. We have seen a manifestation this week of its absence. The election for cheer leaders was nothing short of a farce. No one seemed to care. The team goes out and fights while we sit supinely in the stands and cheer when, and only when, they run some twenty yards or score a touchdown. That, little children, is not school spirit. The simon pure article consists of cheering the boys, win or lose. It's a whole-hearted response to the old call of the cheerleader, "Talk to 'em, boys, talk to 'em!"

And speaking of appearances: what do you think of the looks of Tisdale's midnight eye?

If this weren't supposed to be a sports column, I'd tell you about the time that my colleague, the Walter Winchell of the campus, was wandering over the campus of a certain woman's college telling the girls that he was the Prince of Iraq. But since it's rumored that Mr. Charles may be decapitated at any moment I won't. What say we call him "Key Hole" Charles?

And now that that is that, goodnight everybody until next week at this same hour.

left end for 5 yards. Bolick lacked inches of making first down. Higbe gained 3 at right tackle for first down. Quarterman failed to gain around right end. Bolick carried two Catawba men 8 yards. P. C. was off-side. A pass, Perrin to Bolick, was incomplete. Quarterman kicked over the goal-line. Catawba's ball on own 20-yard line.

Millsap stopped Clark at right tackle. Clark got 2 at right tackle. Clark punted out of bounds on own 45-yard line.

Higbe got 1 at left end. Perrin added 7 at right tackle. Bolick went over right tackle for 2 yards—just short of first down. Higbe slid off right tackle for one yard and first down. Bolick smashed center for 4 yards. A pass, Quarterman to Forehand, was incomplete. Perrin fumbled for a loss of 7 yards. Quarterman kicked over goal line. Catawba's ball on own 20.

Clark gained 1 yard at center. Clark kicked out of bounds on own 44-yard line.

Higbe gained 1 yard at right end as the quarter ended.

Fourth Quarter

Higbe hit left tackle for 4 yards. Clark intercepted a pass intended for Forehand on own 20-yard line.

Dinges lost a yard at left end. Clark gained 1 at left end. Clark punted out of bounds on own 45-yard line.

Higbe gained 2 yards at right end. A pass, Perrin to Bolick, was incomplete, but a pass, Perrin to Forehand, was good for 14 yards and first down. Bolick fumbled but recovered for a loss of 4 yards. A pass, Perrin to Forehand, and another Perrin to Bolick, were incomplete. Quarterman kicked over the goal. Catawba's ball on own 20-yard line.

Dinges almost got away for a touchwown through center but was finally stopped after gaining 16 yards. Clark got one at left tackle. Meehan hit center for 1 yard. Clark kicked to P. C.'s 26-yard line.

Perrin slanted off right tackle for 5 yards. Quarterman got 6 and a first down around left end. Perrin gained at right tackle but P. C. was off-side. A pass, Perrin to Bolick, fell incomplete. Higbe clipped 5 at right tackle. A pass, Perrin to Quarterman, was incomplete. Quarterman kicked to Catawba's 15-yard line.

Clark was stopped for a 1 yard gain at center. A pass, Clark to Pearson, was incomplete. Clark reeled off 4 yards around right end. Clark punted to P. C.'s 10 yard line. It was at this time that Higbe reeled off his most beautiful run. He returned the ball 15 yards and it seemed as if he was away but the side-line hemmed him in. He was hurt on the play but remained in the game. Quarterman collected 2 at right tackle. Catawba was penalized 15 yards for roughing, giving P. C. a first down. Bolick reeled off 5 at center, and Perrin failed to make first down by inches. Bolick got 2 at right guard for first down. Perrin and Bolick added 1 and 5, respectively, at right tackle for another first. A pass, Perrin to Forehand, was intercepted by Pearson to stop the drive, on Catawba's 10-yard line. Clark gained 7 at right tackle. P. C. was off-side, giving Catawba a first down. Clark got 4 at right tackle as the game ended a scoreless tie.

R. O. T. C. NEWS

The big show of the season will be staged on the streets of our beloved city tonight when a picked squad from the Presbyterian college ROTC battalion, probably to be dubbed "PC's Pride," will exhibit various particulars of military drill before the cohorts of Captain (alias Coach) Johnson. The other purpose of the demonstration is to show the National Guards and other bystanders that a real soldier not only learns to explode a tear gas bomb and to point a bayonet at some striker, but that Uncle Sam also includes in his program some provision for certain prescribed movements of the feet and for other ostentatious ritual as well. The student body and Coach, beg pardon, Captain Johnson, are expected to be there with bells on for the notable occasion.

The members of last year's rifle team and those from the sophomore class who aspire to such heights will begin practice under the direction of Sgt. Young, coach of the team, and Lt. Jeanes, captain of the 1934 edition of this sport. Several of last year's leading men are back in school and the places of those who did not return to school this year will be filled by a process of elimination. Each company will select its teams for competition in inter-company matches and the best men will be selected to represent the battalion in inter-collegiate matches. By this method only the best men will be left in the game—It's a matter of "survival of the fittest" if you would like it in biological lingo.

It seems that Sgt. Young has destroyed all chances for a manager of the rifle team by encouraging all freshmen to try out for vacant places on the new squiff ball team of which the sergeant is Coach. We imagine Sarge had to discriminate quite a lot before he decided which field he would work most for—squiff ball or rifle team; but at any rate he seems to have chosen the squiffs. Luck to them.

Did You Know That?

Five-sixths of the army of the United States is composed of citizen soldiers such as the students of Presbyterian College. Of course, this figure includes National Guards and other Organized Reserves.

That South Carolinians in the World war received six congressional medals of honor for valor beyond that required of them; and that only two states, New York and Illinois, received more medals than did this state.

That juniors in the ROTC temporarily (during the test given them on the Machine Gun, to be exact) made the weight of the Machine Gun tripod vary from nine to fifty pounds, possibly looking ahead to the time when they would support this piece of iron and trying to make it easy on themselves.

That the above gentlemen discovered several new parts on the machine gun after they had made a discerning search for parts on the chart given them; and that even Captain Wysor had never seen some of these before—nor since.

Do you know why there are ten men in a machine gun squad while it only takes, at most, two men to keep the gun in operation. In case you don't know this little point, just remember that this particular squad is called the "suicide squad" in time of war.

If you suddenly hear peculiar neighings coming from different parts of the campus don't think it is another version of the Joe E. Brown yell; but remember that it may be one of the juniors who has been serving in this capacity of mule leader in the machine gun squad of which he has been a part the last week, and he may only be perfecting the call characteristic of his order.

Hard-riding cowboys and cool weather are almost synonymous in New York each year when Madison Square Garden sounds to the dull thud of hoofs on the imported dirt thrown on the floor that supports a succession of sports, political meetings, the circus, radio shows, and what-nots each year. The Rodeo is held every year, with many representatives of states of the southwest — both animals and men, roping and busting.

Even children are becoming kidnap conscious. Playmates told Carmen Cullen's parents that the seven-year-old had gone for a ride with a man and woman after school. Hundreds of Brooklyn Police stopped looking for hours later when an aunt explained that Carmen was with her.

When New Yorkers default on jewelry installment payments they may get letters from a Mr. Urquhart, a Mr. Bryan, the National Jewelers Protective Bureau and no less than the "Retail Board of Trade." They are all in the same office. And Mr. Urquhart, recently explained, "I am the Retail Board of Trade."—He registered the name with County Clerk, because "just ordinary letters" don't hurry payments enough.

A new survey shows that since 1920 the Negro population of Harlem has shifted and spread surprisingly. There are many colored people now living between 122nd and 135th streets and Riverside Drive on the West to Amsterdam Avenue on the East. They are migrating to better homes. From 83,000 in 1920, Harlem's Negro population has increased to 204,000 in 1934.

From the Palisades just across the Hudson from 42nd street, some muscular vandal stole the head of a bust of Alexander Hamilton which was on the site of his fatal duel with Aaron Burr on July 11, 1804.

CREDIT—Its Obligations

The whole trouble with the credit situation today, a banker friend of mine explains to me, is that the people who are asking for credit are not entitled to it and those who are entitled to it are not using it. To be entitled to credit at a bank, a man must either be the owner of property which can be thrown on the market and converted into cash quickly, to meet his loan when it comes due, or else be able to show that there is a better than even chance that by using the borrowed money in business he can make enough to pay off the loan and leave himself a profit.

Too many people have the idea that everybody ought to be able to walk into a bank and borrow money, regardless of his prospects of repaying it. The honest banker, responsible to his depositors for the careful investment of their money, can't lend it out that way. Very few people in any community know how to use money profitably; if most of us did more of us would be rich.

I think one of the principal causes of the present distress is that too much credit was extended in boom times to people who were not entitled to it and who did not know how to use it.

CASH—Its Scarce

The other day I talked with five or six of my country neighbors in the course of one Saturday morning. Every one of them said that cash was harder to get hold of than it had ever been in their memory. I went to New York and met a couple of business men whom I knew well. Both reported that business was good—one said better than for years in volume and price—but that collections were slower than ever. Even the largest corporations were taking from two weeks to two months longer to pay their bills than they had ever done before.

As I write this I have just come from lunching with another business man. He gave it as his opinion that people are feeling the depression worse this year than at any previous time. More folk are going "on relief" because they have come to the end of their reserves. They cannot buy anything because they have no money left with which to buy.

I have a distinct feeling that nobody, in or out of government, has yet put the finger upon the weak spot in our economic system which makes it possible for such conditions to continue.

SECURITY—"Clear" Real Estate

The only people, men or institutions, who are in a secure position today are the ones who owe nothing and who have some source of income not dependent upon the daily turnover of trade. Those and the self-sustaining farmers of whom there are many.

I have one friend whose property consists of real estate in a large eastern city. His grandfather founded the fortune which his father conserved and which has now come under his management as trustee for all the heirs. The policy laid down by the founder of the fortune was never to borrow a cent, never mortgage a piece fo property. If the rents were not enough to live on, cut down personal living expenses but don't impair the capital by selling some of it.

My friend has been accustomed to spending a hundred thousand a year or more. Now he is living at the rate of about $12,000 a year. But every piece of property he owns is rented, although what the thousand or so tenants can pay is not much more than enough to pay the taxes and upkeep. The property still stands however, and some day prosperity will return and rents will go up again.

Real estate comes the nearest to offering security of anything I know of. But not when it is mortgaged.

INVESTMENTS—Diamonds

I talked the other day with the diamond expert of America's most famous jewelry house. He told me that the prices of good quality, well-cut diamonds are nearly double what they were three or four years ago. In another store I asked the head of the diamond jewelry department how business was. He replied that they were selling more diamonds, and at better prices, than for years.

People with some capital reserves, he explained, are putting their money into diamonds as the safest way of conserving their capital, possibly increasing it and converting it back into cash over night. Europeans, taking advantage of the depreciated dollar, are sending to America to buy diamonds.

These diamond purchasers represent largely, capital that ordinarily would go into industrial or commercial investments. Its owners are afraid of such investments now, but they want their money where they can get it out quickly if the upturn comes, and the diamond market has always been an instantaneous market, in which minimum prices are rigidly maintained by South African Diamond Trust.

PRICES—In The City

City folks are paying more for what they eat and wear than for several years. Prices are going up. But how far that benefits the farmer I am somewhat doubtful.

The general effect, as far as I can observe, is that most city people are cutting down on their food, either eating less or buying cheaper grades and kinds of foods than they have been accustomed to.

So far as clothing is concerned, there is a great turnover in the very cheapest lines of men's and women's clothing, but many merchants who handled only high-grade garments are closing their stores.

More men that I meet are wearing old clothes than ever before. More women are doing their own dressmaking and making over last year's comes, from salaries, wages, or investments, are not going up but, in many cases, are still going down.

A PROFESSOR RECALLS THE "GOOD OLD DAYS" AT HIS ALMA MATER

leatherjacketed gridmen, many of whom have since become prominent in the world of affairs. Those who were not interested in athletics secured their exercise by long walks about the country.

In Professor Woodworth's opinion, one explanation of the fact that Hampden-Sidney alumni figured highest among college-graduates in Who's Who is that they had little to do, especially during the winter, other than to sit with books in hands, and of necessity and boredom learn something. The classical curriculum was emphasized. Latin, Greek and mathematics, with psychology, philosophy, Bible, French, and German and far less science than is required nowadays made up the courses. To illustrate, there were two courses in chemistry, one being a text-book course, and the other one in the laboratory. Students preparing for medicine took the laboratory course, but others thought a mere text-book course quite sufficient. About the time Professor Woodworth left "The Hill," as the college was frequently referred to, an enthusiastic teacher of physics and chemistry came, and in a few years developed his department wonderfully.

There were no recitations on Saturday, and Friday night was taken up by the activities of the literary societies. Social events were centered about the Intermediate Celebration of the societies. February 22 and June commencement were looked forward to. Dates were scarce through the year and were highly prized, for few girls were in the neighborhood. On these occasions, quite a number of visitors were entertained in the homes on "The Hill." In this connection, college students faced heavy rivalry with the older group of Union Theological seminary, which was at that time located at Hampden-Sidney, some of whom meant "business." Generally there was a kindly feeling between "The Seminites," as the theological students were called, and the college boys. Sometimes a little antagonism would crop out, as in advertising an entertainment the notice might read: "Negroes and Seminites Half Price." The mustaches of the Seminites gave them an unfair advantage.

The fact that he was four hundred miles by rail from home—too far to go during Christmas vacation—reacted in Professor Woodworth's favor; when recitations were resumed, he had several weeks of quiet preparation behind him and was able to get a running start in scholarship on the others. Nowadays a college cap and a thumb will easily carry one almost any place within a reasonable distance of the college which was once so hard to get away from.

REMEMBER HOME-COMING DAY, WOFFORD GAME, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 24

Announcement was made at Canton, N. C., on Oct. 20, of the marriage of Miss Margaret Maye Rome, daughter of Mrs. Geneva Rome, of Asheville, to A. P. Wilson, son of Mrs. A. P. Wilson of Columbia and Clinton, S. C., which took place in Greenville, S. C., September 23.

The bride attended school at Lebanon, Ky., and is well known throughout this section. The bridegroom received his education at Presbyterian college, graduating in '34. He has been employed by the Champion Fibre Co. of that city since last June.

John W. Shaw, Jr., '23, was in Clinton on Tuesday, Oct. 23, visiting his brother, B. G. Shaw, who is a member of the present freshman class. Mr. Shaw now lives in Sumter.

The luxury trades in New York are reported to be doing the best business in moons. Hotels, night clubs, cafes, restaurants are crowded to the doors these days, and florists, jewelers and dressmakers are delighted. No one seems to know quite why, but they're all pleased as punch.

Gertrude Stein, whose writings are done in such a way that few people can understand them, will return to the United States for the first time in thirty years. She has refused a thousand dollars a lecture for a series, and only intends to lecture at six American universities. Miss Stein will sail on October 17th.

Sturgeon Speaks At 'Y' Meeting

Professor of Chemistry At P. C. Talks To Students On "Science and Religion."

Professor H. E. Sturgeon, speaking on "Science and Religion," brought an enlightening message to the college Y. M. C. A. last Thursday night in the chapel. Douglas Patton led a brief devotional previous to the talk, while C. M. Hudson presided over the meeting.

Professor Sturgeon, in opening, remarked that he was not going to treat his subject from the standpoint of evolution but rather from the many references in the Bible concerning science. The speaker proved God to be real in the multitudinous field of the universe, as well as in the minute scope of the atom. In considering the vastness of the heavens and the microscopicness of the smallest of units, Professor Sturgeon concluded that there must be "some infinite mind back of it all." He remarked, "How can anyone look up into the heavens and not believe in God," or "How can anyone study the miniature solar system of the atom and still say, 'There is no God'."

The major portion of the message, however, was not concerned with the presentation of proofs of God, but was mainly taken up with what the speaker termed "a chemist's study of the Sermon on the Mount." Professor Sturgeon revealed to his audience many interesting characteristics of salt and related these to the thirteenth verse of the fifth chapter of Matthew, which deals with the savour of the salt. He showed how pure salt could not lose its seasoning power, but that only salt mingled with impurities could be unsalted. In comparison to this he showed how the impurities of life creep in and cause a soul to lose its savour. The speaker remarked that, in his opinion, the whole Sermon on the Mount connects up with this verse and follows after it, discussing a great many impurities, such as hate and thievery, which tend to render a life impure.

There were many striking and brilliantly true remarks which might be used as excerpts of value, but two will suffice to reveal the popular chemistry professor's attitude toward a Christian life. He said, concerning a Christian's saltiness, that "if the Christians have lost their savour or their seasoning quality then the world is certainly flat as far as taste is concerned." In concluding, Professor Sturgeon challenged that "if we allow any impurities to creep into our life we are spoiling our chance to fulfil our mission on the earth."

Kappa Alpha Gets Two New Members

Two more men have joined the actives of Eta chapter, Alpha Kappa Pi, it is learned from J. Paul Todd, president. The two are J. C. Johnson, of Clinton, and Malcolm D. Gillis, Fayetteville, N. C. Johnson is in the senior class, and was pledged this school year, while the latter is an old pledge of the junior class.

Young People Hold Church Rally Here

Presbyterians and A. R. P.s Join In Arranging Program of Instruction Last Week.

Nearly two hundred young people gathered last Friday in the First Presbyterian church for a rally of young people of the Southern Presbyterian and Associate Reformed Presbyterian churches in the seven counties of South Carolina presbytery.

Dr. R. C. Long of Greenwood, had charge of the meeting and led a group conference with some 25 of the leaders from various societies.

The opening devotional by Dr. D. J. Woods was centered around the psalmist's thought of "Wait upon the Lord," after which E. J. Arnold spoke briefly on "What P. C. has meant to me."

Jim Collings led in the opening music and was in the college quartet in three special numbers.

Rev. F. T. McGill spoke interestingly to the younger members of the audience especially, on "Christ as a Pioneer." The groups then separated for discussions.

After a picnic supper served by the ladies of the First church, the representatives voted to meet again at the First church in Greenwood the day before Easter, and elected Miss Rosalie Bailey president, and Mrs. Harry Bolick, vice-president, with Miss Euphemia Gordan, secretary.

Dr. R. C. Grier, president of Erskine college, gave the closing insipirational address.

More Men To Make Glee Club Tour

Five more men are to go with the glee club on its trip in December than were named in the list published in last week's issue of The Blue Stocking.

Cleckler, Seawright and Valley will be back in the tenor sections, and Barringer and Talmage will go as baritones, with Upshur shifted to bass.

The addition of these men, nearly all of them with experience from last year, rounds out a well-balanced club with quite sufficient volume, Dr. S. M. Huntley, the director, reports.

It had appeared necessary to cut down on the club considerably this year because of transportation, but two members of the club have arranged so that the full number of thirty-two could be carried.

The orchestra list should have included Robert and Bill Clark and Harmon. Their names were inadvertently put into the bass section of the glee club as printed last week.

PLAN ANOTHER ISSUE OF COLLEGIAN SOON

Plans are being made for a second issue of The Collegian before the Christmas holidays. The editor is desirous of receiving contributions from ew students and also from co-eds. Those who wish to be on The Collegian staff and who are interested in any kind of literary work are requested to see the editor as soon as possible. All contributions for the coming issue must be submitted by November 20.

Chemistry Student, By Quirk Of Fate, Ascends To the Rank Of the Poets

Will you accept the word of Jack McAlpine, alias "Alice, the Goon Girl," on an important question? Surely no one but Absalom, the pup, or Johnny Rhodes would have the audacity to doubt the word of one who was voted the wit of last years's freshman class by HALF of that class, or even to insinuate that he prevaricated when he clamied that one of the most famous of England's lyric poets was a member of our student body.

It seems that Alice was standing an identification test under the auspices of Beowulf and his brethren in the English department. In the list of names he discovered a curious scrawl. Alice puzzled over it with goonish perseverance, and a worried frown played over his face, stumbled over his snub nose and fell, drawing the corners of his mouth down into a parenthesis of woe. Finally, with a superhuman effort, he deciphered the hieroglyfic-like characters. It was either "CALVERT" or "Culvert." Immediately the light went out, and the blank expression came back with its frown (Alice possesses the unique ability to look blank and worried at one and the same time). He must have been having trouble with his fuses. Suddenly, the light came back on.

Alice wrote:

culvert (or culvert?) waz 1 ov inglunds MOS famus liric POTES and HE livd in the last part ov the nineteenth SENchury.

You see, several classes before, Mr. Henry Calvert had finished a problem in organic chemistry (or something), written his name beneath it with a flourish, stepped back to admire his work, gave the "T" another touch, and . . . we won't go into whether or not the problem was correct. Then, when Prof. Swedenberg erased the board to substitute his list of identifications, he neglected to remove the "Calvert" (or culvert), and left it there for Alice to render illustrious.

Students To Study Government Affairs

Non-Partisan Organization Inaugurating Program of Study For Selected Students.

The National Institution of Public Affairs, a non-partisan, privately financed organization enjoying the cooperation of the Federal Government, is inaugurating a program of training and study in the practical elements of government and politics for the benefit of selected college students and graduates.

The winners of appointments to the Institution's inaugural training program, planned for February and March, 1935 will be brought to Washington for a practical experience in government and politics. The training will stress the "internship" plan, in which each student will serve as an apprentice to a governmental official, receiving instruction at the same time. It is designed to supplement classroom work in political science in the preparation for leadership in public affairs and general citizenship.

Those eligible for these internships are juniors, seniors, graduate students, and recent graduates of accredited institutions who have pursued a substantial study of political science and related subjects. The following points are stressed as qualifications for a candidate: 1. a strong scholastic standing, 2. a demonstrated interest in politics and government, 3. qualities of character and ability, especially those having to do with leadership, and 4. good health.

Students wishing to enter themselves in this contest must apply directly to the office of the National Institution at 1001 Fifteenth Street, Washington, D. C. Applicants will be referred to the committe at their respective colleges. Dr. Kennedy is chairman of the faculty committee at P. C. This committee will select our quota of nominees who will compete with similarly chosen nominees from other colleges for the final appointments to be made by the Educational Committee of the National Institution on a regional basis determined by the distribution of student population of participating colleges.

The National Institution's program of study and training will be under the direction of the Institution's Educational Director and a staff of social science professors from various colleges.

The training will include:

1. Conferences and forums with high governmental officials and subdivision of students into small groups on a tutorial basis for individual contacts and relations with governmental officials.

2. Observation of the practical operations of the major functions of the Federal Government.

3. Analysis of these dominant functions, in connection with discussion groups led by the visiting professor.

4. Application by each student to a particular case problem of his choice.

5. The serving of an "internship" which comprehends actual work and duties in a government agency of particular interest to the student.

6. A report or thesis by each student on the training program, one copy of which must be submitted to the Institution and one to his college.

Most of the appointments will provide the above training without charge. A restricted number of scolarshpis will also furnish transportation to and from Washington in addition to board and room for the two months of the regular training period.

Students Hear Georgia Resident

Mr. Charles Rowland of Athens, Georgia, spoke to the student body at a special chapel hour on Thursday, November 1. He was introduced by President McSween as a "Christian business man, and one of the greatest leaders of the Southern Presbyterian church."

Mr. Rowland told of the joys that he had found in leading a Christian life, supplementing his own experiences with those of others whose lives had been greatly affected by Christianity. He adjured the students to follow the Christian way of living.

Byrd Expedition Subject Of Lecture

Raymond Mercola, Member of First Antarctic Party, Speaks On His Experiences.

Mr. Raymond Mercola, a Redpath Chautauqua lecturer spoke to the student body Friday morning on his experiences as the youngest member of the Byrd Antarctic Expedition of 1928-29.

Mr. Mercola told interestingly of his attempt to become a member of the crew before the ships sailed from the United States, of how he worked his way to Seattle, to San Francisco, and to Aukland, New Zealand, of how he walked from Aukland to Wellington, and finally arrived at Dunedin to be taken on as a member of the expedition.

The speaker gave a graphic description of living conditions in the base camp established on the ice and named Little America. Entertainment, he said, consisted mainly of a phonograph and a radio, but that during the six month they were forced to remain in the camp other means had to be devised to keep them occupied. Commander Byrd established a school with daily classes in aviation, etc.

Mr. Mercola gave a very vivid account of the hardships that were incurred in getting the ship through the ice pack to bring the expedition back from Little America. He praised Commander Byrd highly, saying that it was his splendid leadership which made the expedition a complete success, the only Antarctic Expedition to bring back every man alive.

Mr. Mercola was received enthusiastically by the student body.

Pledge Dances Are Enjoyed By Many

Fraternities At College Stage Celebration In Honor of New Men. Music Furnished By Jack Stern and His Californians.

The Presbyterian college fraternities, under the direction of the Pan-Hellenic council, gave two dances, Friday and Saturday nights, respectively, in honor of the new pledges who were signed up some weeks ago. Jack Stern and his Californians furnished the musical entertainment.

The dances were considered a great success from every angle. This was the first time there have been two evenings of terpsichorean revelry for this occasion, as generally only the Friday night dance is held. A large number of girls from all parts of the state trooped to Clinton for the weekend. A fairly good contingent of boys from outside attended also.

The Californians rendered some very good music. As an added attraction a torch singer, Miss Joan Wells, delighted the crowd with vocal renditions of numerous popular melodies.

There were several chapeones from the town of Clinton in charge of the dance. The faculty sponsors were Professors Swedenberg and Davis, with Mr. and Mrs. Willard Jones assisting in an unofficial way.

The conduct at the dances was unusually good, considering the large number of outsiders present. Several members of the orchestra said it was the best they had seen in some time at a dance of this type.

Botany Students Find Flora And Relics Of "Boom Days" In Florida

"Little drops of water,
Little grains of sand
Down in sunny Florida
Sell for solid land."

Aside from actual specimens of the flora of central and southern Florida last summer, the Presbyterian College Field Botanical Expedition," as as Dr. J. H. Davis' party composed of P. M. Tiller, J. M. Wilson and E. K. Pitman might be called, found many interesting evidences of the "Boom Days" in that state. Deep in deserted tangled woods, they came across such mute momentoes as a pair of plastered posts, rib-like lathes showing where the covering had cracked and fallen away, and supporting a feded, weather-beaten sign bearing the name of a non-existant, never-existant town—a burst bubble. Sometimes they stumbled into areas where a whole community had been laid out. There would be a complete network of streets, paved with perhaps a meagre half-inch of cement, or with bricks between which grew the tangled grass from the sand upon which they had been directly laid. Light-posts, sign-posts bearing the names of the phantom streets—even hydrants at the corners; everything but the houses and the people.

It is a wonder that some enterprising (but patient) promoter has not utilized the remarkable land building qualities of the mangrove. It is one of the few plants hardy enough to grow in sea-water, and there are mangrove swamps growing up through twenty feet of briny water. The swamp, in the course of time, interjects enough silt and floating rubbish to become solid land. Of course, not all of Florida evolved in this manner. For instance, at Palm Beach one finds within two or three feet of the surface of the soil a bed of coquina rock, and it is necessary to blast even to plant a rose bush. When the pieces of power lines are set up, a rope is always tied to about the middle of the pole. The hole is made to the depth of the rock, dynamite is inserted, and the pole is dropped in on top of the explosive. When the charge goes off and the stratum of coquina rock is broken through, the pole sometimes drops out of sight, which explains the rope with which to draw it back up.

The botanical party collected three or four hundred different species of plants. This collection will be enlarged to include over five hundred species, mounted on permanent herbarium sheets, so that the college may someday have a herbarium of which it may be justly proud.

Many of these plants are rare, even in Florida, and few of them are found in South Carolina. They are being arranged in the order of their habitat preferences, so that they can be used for field work in plant ecology. Of the many families and kinds of plants the collection contains, there are probably more rare ferns than any other group. Some of the tropical shrubs and trees collected are limitted to small hammocks of the Miami region. Among these are some orchids which grow along the branches.

The palms of this region are tropical. The most typical tree, the Royal palm, is almost entirely cultivated now, for nearly all of them have been dug up and transplanted on the estates of wealthy Northern snow-dodgers. The owners of Hialdea Race Track had something like ten thousand Royal palms, at the cost of anywhere from $200 to $500 each, moved to adorn the track—but THEY expect to get it back in a very short time. There are the cocoanut, silver, buchaneer and needle palms. The cabbage palm is so called because of the succulent young buds which grow among the fronds at the end of the stem, and has much the same flavour as a cabbage. The wild Coontie, or Sago palm, is a low tree with a large underground stem. Inside of the stem is now used commercially in making arrow-root starch, from which the Indians manufactured a starch flour, a staple food of theirs.

There is also the "Strangling Fig," which starts as a low bush in some tropical hammock, coiling around a tree, and growing sometimes as much as a foot in diameter until it chokes and kills even the largest tree by constriction.

The Banyan tree in Florida is not a native, being transplanted from In-

I. R. C. Adds New Men; More Later

Two more new men have been added to the International Relations club, it is announced by Hugh Bolman, president of the organization. These members are Tom Newland, whose home is in Korea, and Charles Shoenbergen, of Point Pleasant, W. Va.

Four more vacancies in the club are to be filled in the next week or ten days. Five men in all have been given bids, and they have accepted. The other four places will be taken by the four who make the highest grades on a short examination on current happenings in international affairs.

The Young Cynic

Oscar Wilde has said, "The cynic is one who knows the price of everything and the value of nothing." Undoubtedly in this he expressed the true meaning of cynicism. Too many individuals these days take things at their face value. They look at the wrapper on the outside of an article and never think of examining the inside to see what the package might really contain. Too many are willing to believe things are gilded because they glitter when, despite Shakespeare's common phrase, they might really be gold.

There are students who, having reached even their junior year in college, still desire attention through affectedness of great learning. They haven't yet learned enough to realize how little they really know. These college men question everything under the sun and on top of it with a big "why?" "I think—," and "I don't see—." Perhaps the last statement is the least radical of these poor ignorant fellows. They affect having read everything at least once and thus know all about it. They have formed opinions on actual scanning or on what someone else heard or read about someone saying. The finiteness of their nutshell knowledge is so evident that when they start displaying their "glittering" knowledge, one thinks Shapespeare might have been right after all.

Some of these "brilliant" students are audacious enough to mock the masterpieces of literature and the gems of fine art because they, without any learned guidance, have closely examined the surface of these treasures and found them dull, hollow and worthless. And so with this smattering of knowledge they exhibit themselves and engage in stupendously stupid arguments. They gain attention and so often unintentionally gain the pity of their humble and slightly more sagacious fellow men.

But these cynical critics are too skeptical and narrow to realize this. They too passionately desire to deceive themselves that they know all that is needed to be known and find it much easier to be critical than correct. They are to be pitied, not despised.

Everyone should have a curious attitude toward things he does not understand, excepting the profoundly infinite. But if one questions anything, he should do so with the humble desire to be informed rather than from a cynical point of view.

The chief difference between an ignorant man and a wise one is not that the latter is acquainted with anything invisible to the first, away from the ordinary sight and interest of all, but that he understands the common things which the first only sees. One should never forget how dangerous a little learning can be. It is like a poison, and too often diseases the mind with delusion.

Leadership

" 'E's the man that done us well
An' we'll follow 'im to 'ell."
—Kipling.

The above was written for the soldier in the heat of action, in a day when personal leadership still counted for something on the battlefield. But there is no reason why the sense of it could not be applied to situations in other pursuits.

Most of us are doomed to go thru life following the leader, which perhaps is as it should be. This would be a hectic world with every man aspiring to lead. The question is, who may lead and what are the qualities necessary to leadership?

We have all heard of the "born leader," the business leader, and the military leader. How did they get that way? Is it possible for every man to aspire to leadership? Does he have to learn some formula? Must he inherit leadership? Of course the answer is no, but the average man, though a little envious sometimes, and deep down in his heart believes that he could have done as well, is too prone to admit that the job called for a leader and that he is no part of a leader. Some men, it is true, seem to lead without any apparent effort on their part, but, if so, it is only because they possess those qualities essential to good leadership and because they make intelligent use of those qualities.

Leadership is an art, and not an exact science as some seem to think. True, we have leaders in science, but not of science. Leaders in the field of science do not as a rule deal with the human factor, they are more concerned with the theories and laws of mechanics. The human element is nil. Leadership is the art of handling men in the mass to accomplish some particular object or to attain certain results. It is the art of coordinating the efforts of a group of individuals into a single purpose. It is the art of combining character and knowledge with initiative to stand at the top in a chosen profession. Leadership is best expressed in dealing with the human sde of man's activities.

The most vital qualities necessary in a leader are character and knowledge; without these there can be no leader. Character must include moral and physical courage, loyalty, tenacity and the will to win. "Knowledge is power" and is essential to good leadership. The leader must know what is to be done and how it is to be done, he must demonstrate to his followers that he has the knowledge and that he is superior in that knowledge.

What role does personality play in this game of leadership? What kind of personality is desirable, and if lacking, where and how can it be obtained?

The good Lord in his wisdom did not endow all mankind with inspiring personalities, which perhaps is fortunate for the peace of mankind. Not possessing that inspiring personality we can at least compensate to some degree for the lack. Interest and cheerfulness can be practiced. An attitude of helpfulness may help. Loyalty to both superiors and subordinates won't do any harm. Every man, of course, must act through his own personality and, realizing this, he must find out how that personality affects others. Find out what his personal qualities are, then intelligently develop those qualities. His own personal experiences will provide many valuable lessons which can be applied to personal action. He can learn something from the experiences of other successful leaders, remembering, however, that no two will ever solve the problem in exactly the same way.

Psychology, too, plays its part in leadership, and the would-be leader will come a cropper if he fails to heed those psychological principles which govern man. One of the instincts of man is to progress, and this instinct has made him want to lead where he thought that he knew best and to follow where he thought another best qualified. The would-be leader must make his followers think that his way is the best, and that he is best qualified to get results.

The ability to learn from others, to plan, initiate and to carry out the orders of superiors is essential to good leadership. Loyalty to the team, to the cause and to superiors.

"He leads best who leads most"; practice makes perfect.

Nothing is more interesting than man, and leadership is but the control of man.

"THE ROBBER BARRONS"

Matthew Josephson

Matthew Josephson has written another sparkling biography. This time of a group of men, "the Robber Barons," those young men who were too smart to heed the call of their country and go to war. While others of their age were dying on Southern battlefields, these men were laying the foundations for their vast fortunes.

Jay Cooke obtained the sole right to float bond issues for the government and made millions. He financed a war which resulted in the overthrow of supremacy of land and ushered in the American industrial revolution. At its close there began an era which has been termed "Tragic," "Golden," and "Gilded."

In the years preceding the war Commodore Vanderbilt had operated successfully a constwise shipping line. As a result of the privateering of the war he abandoned it and turned to railroads. He acquired the Harlem and Hudson line, watered its stock, and expanded. This expansion brought him in contact with the Erie ring. This ring, composed of Daniel Drew, Jay Gould, and Jim Fiske, was ruthless and unscrupulous. The Erie opposed any road which might threaten its monopoly in upper New York. Vanderbilt's purchase of the New York Central opened the first of the "Battles of the Titans." It resulted in the ruin of Drew, the check of Vanderbilt, and the ascendancy of Gould and Fiske.

The victors then engaged in a greater scheme. They cornered all the gold in the country. The gold market broke on "Black Friday," but Gould and Fiske emerged unscathed. Fiske was killed by an enraged speculator; Gould went ruthlessly on to head the Western Union and battle for transcontinental railways.

In 1869, with great jubilation, two railroads met in Utah and formed the notorious Union Pacific. Back of the line coming from California were the associates, Huntington and Leland Stanford.

These men ruled California. Starting with no capital they levied tribute, like mediaeval barons, and forced the towns through which their road ran to pay for its construction.

The other half of the line was financed by one of the most corrupt congresses in the history of our nation. In fact, the road's reputation hurt it so badly that it was easily acquired by Gould. So, with the exception of the Northern Pacific, he and Huntington controlled the West.

Josephson then traces the rise of the Standard Oil trust. Rockefeller began life as the proprietor of a feed store in Cleveland, and by destroying the "little fellows" in the oil business he built up the first trust.

Closely linked with the railroads was Andrew Carnegie. He realized the value of steel in building railways. He secured a monopoly of the steel market and thus was in a position to dictate to the rail barons.

Chicago early became a packing center. By 1880 the four main packers formed a pool and thus controlled the nation's meat.

These barons were on the whole very religious. With the exception of a few they gave large sums to schools, churches, etc. In their marble chateaux on Fifth Avenue they surrounded themselves with the spoils of the old world: art treasures, woodwork, and furniture. The barons themselves were not accepted in Knickerbocker society, but their children had access to the most select functions.

In his book Matthew Josephson gives a vivid picture of the great industrialists of the generation following the Civil war. "The Robber Barons" is written in the same refreshing style as "Zola." Josephson again has proven his right to the title of America's most entertaining biographer. He makes the dullest facts interesting and writes in a manner unexcelled in the realm of biography.

Present-Day Science

ORIGINAL HOME OF MAN

The question of the original home of man has long been an interesting one. Although it is generally accepted that he first appeared in the other hemisphere, there are occasionally some who raise doubts. The following is a comment from the New York Times

"In his 'Descent of Man' Darwin reached the conclusion that the human race is descended from an Old World anthropoid ape. With that view anthropologists still agree. The oldest human bones have been found in Asia. Java, Africa and Europe and their apish conformation lends support to the Darwinian doctrine.

"There are also primates (monkeys, apes and leumurs) in South America. Why should they be excluded from consideration as evidence of man's possible origin in the New World? Because they are of the wrong type. Man bears a closer resemblance to primates of the Old Word than of the New.

"Despite all this evidence, the effort persists to discover the original human habitat in America. Dr. John C. Merriam, president of the Carnegie Institute of Technology, did his best before the last meeting of the International Geological Congress to point out the futility of doing more than studying the migration of primeval Americans from the Old World.

"Humanity is like water. It flows. It has backward and forward swashes. It would not astonish Dr. Merriam at all if very old human bones were found in America. But what would the discovery prove? Merely 'that the human race may have penetrated the American Continent on numerous occasions before it became sufficiently entrenched finally to develop such numbers as made possible adequate record of its presence and the stages of its evolution.'

"If, then, some one should dig up on his Nebraska farm human fossils as old as those of Central Europe, cautious Dr. Merriam would simply ask for more evidence to prove that man sprang up in America. The discovery might mean that some prehistoric tribe had anticipated the current of immigration that swept over from Asia tens of thousands of years later, or it might have decided to remain in America after its forbears had journeyed back to Asia. Americans have always been immigrants.

"The evidence thus far gathered indicates that man did not come to America earlier than 30,000 years ago —a mere yesterday in paleontology. All the types thus far discovered here closely resemble present-day inhabitants. The artifacts (arrow heads, spear points, hatchets and other tools) are more highly finished than those of earlier Old World man, which indicates more recent craftsmanship."

Student Opinion

A CRITICISM

Editor, The Blue Stocking:

Last week there appeared in The Collegian an excellent rehash of Bertrand Russell, the well-known Sir Thomas More of the present time. In this article several statements were made that are interesting enough in theory, but have been found to fall down in practice.

The statement that pleasure is the sole aim of life is true enough, but the author forgot to say what type of pleasure he refrred to. He must have meant sensual pleasure, for that is the only kind of pleasure the government has seen fit to restrict by laws.

As civilization developed, man devised certain customs to govern his conduct in almost all matters. These customs were not artificial, unless the nature of man himself is artificial. As the population increased, especially in the cities, it became necessary to put these customs into the form of laws. From time to time they have been refined and revised. Thus the laws and

THE KAMPUS KEYHOLE

— By —
PRESTON CHARLES

It seems that Roy Forehand's ability at love-making has exceeded the hopes of his fondest admirers. This columnist, usually so adept at obtaining information, was unfortunately not able to find out for his readers who the lucky lady (?) was that received a kiss from P. C.'s gay deceiver.

A certain tall, dark and handsome co-ed will be very much grieved to read the above, but it is the policy of this column to publish the truth and also distribute praise or censure where it is due, and in no case will there be any deviation from this lofty principle.

This atuhor has been threatened times without number for his enlightening disclosures in regard to various campus personalities. He was once attacked by a six-footer with one of the sabers used by seniors in the R. O. T. C., and was fortunate to escape with his life. Another time two hoodlums in skirts went afetr him, but he managed to get away after a bit of skillful maneurevring. Needless to say, such abortive attempts to suppress truth can only result in increasing his zeal for pusuance after the sublime work of upholding the principles of right and justice.

The Purvis boys seem to be gaining quite a reputation for power of will and of physique. Joe Purvis, P. C.'s great athlete of some years ago whose feats are now made much of in bull-sessions, was the first member of the family to bring the name out into the public eye. Then in th elast year or two football fans have marveled at the feats of Duane Purvis, nationally known Purdue backfield man. Now we read in the daily papers that Melvin Purvis, a Carolina alumnus, has succeeded in capturing "Pretty Boy" Floyd, so-called Public Enemy No. 1. The latter Purvis made an even greater achievement last summer, it will be recalled, in bumping off John Dillinger, the Indiana gangster.

Buffalo Bill Cody, the freckle-faced phenomenon from Oklahoma, so often mentioned in this feature, somplains that he is not receiving enough publicity. Such gross conceit can scarcely be imagined. All the attentions showered on this epitome of selfishness still have failed to bring out in him any slightest glow of appreciation. From now on he will be given not one line more than he actually deserves, a course which, strictly followed, will make him eligible for mention in this column about twice a year.

We have all heard much of black sheep in the student body who disgrace the school with their rowdy activities off hte campus. A concrete example of this has just been exposed.

To begin with, Buffalo Bill Cody carried a hitherto innocent young man off to York several week-ends ago, admittedly in order to teach him the ways of the sophisticated social world. Now we have the result of Cody's baneful influence vividly shown as follows:

A group of P. C. boys, evidently P. C. men, are having a meeting of their fraternal organization. They proceed just as the usual Monday evening procedure goes, but little do they realize what a rude interruption they are about to experience. Suddenly there is a pounding on the door. A gruff voice shouts, "Open up, in the name of the law!" and then in a quiet undertone, "Don't let him get away, men." The door is opened. Three officers walk in. One of the students turns pale with fear and frantically runs for the door. The officers are prepared, however, and two of the men grab him as he tries to run past.

"Slap the iron bracelets on him, boys. He stole a guy's overcoat on the train last week-end." They leave with their quaking prisoner, and the stirring scene is over.

"What happened next?" is probably on the tip of the reader's tongue. It is not necessary to say that the prisoner was guilty—his demeanor, as described above, is proof of that. The court took into consideration, however, the fact that he was a college man, and suspended his sentence until next summer, in order that he may finish the school year without interruption. Suffice it to say that all fan mail received during the month of June, 1935, for our erstwhile sports editor, Hugh Holman, will be forwarded to him in care of the Laurens County chain gang.

There are two objects in printing the above narrative. One is to show the awful result of allowing such a person as Buffalo Bill Cody to exert his degrading influence on one's mind.

The other is to illustrate what one black sheep will do to mar the reputation of a school and fraternity.

Personal Items:

Roy Forehand, the immortal lover, was the object of a visit the other night by Miss Stella Beckham and two other ladies. They were subject to cruel disappointment when they learned that he was away at the carnival.

Woody Tisdale, hefty football player, is now well on the road to recovery from the severe eye injury he suffered when struck by a biscuit from the able arm of George Cody.

RAMBLING 'ROUND NEW YORK with HUGH KENNY

The radio operator on many a ship has a rating equal to a second mate, but because he can come aboard ship as a full-fledged chief operator without ever having been to sea before, the crew never show him the deference of his rank, but call him "Sparks" the same way they call the carpenter "Chips."

If roofs had been stripped from New York apartments the last week of September, strange sights would have been seen. Because of the lack of new buildings, many new tenants were living in the halls of buildings while their apartments were being decorated. One couple we know of were moved during the week into four different apartments in the same building while waiting for painters to finish their pent-house on the roof.

The story is told in New York that furniture and families waited patiently on the sidewalks as long as four-teen hours when trying to get into Knickerbocker Village, the new apartment development for white collar workers erected on the site of old tenements. Knickerbocker Village has a minimum of passenger elevators and no service elevators.

Free rides for 63,000 children were provided during the summer by one of New York's subways, transporting them from the slums to the parks and return.

"Ten Cents A Dance" is not only the title of a song. It's an actuality in New York. But it also costs ten cents a minute to sit out a dance with one of the dance hall "hostesses." And expert testimony in court recently was presented to show that the rooms were not called "love nests," but "sitting rooms." "And that's what they were," said the witness.

When the S. S. Hamburg docked at New York the other day it carried something the captain had never seen before: a stowaway who carried baggage. He was being returned from the S. S. Deutschland, which had been bound for Germany—The Hamburg also brought 8,000 canaries from the Hartz mountains.

A hefty buck deer horned right through the windows of a suburban food shop near New York, recently, and made free with a variety of spinach, carrots, cabbage and bananas. The police were too late to do anything about it.

Richard Crooks' voluminous victrola recording is beginning to vie with the inimitable John McCormack.

Dolores Del Rio is making quite a hit as Madame DuBarry on Broadway.

Grace Moore is anxious to make a movie version of Bizet's "Carmen," but Claudette Colbert and Cecil B. DeMille have had their eyes on this fascinating character long before Miss Moore came to Hollywood.

SUPERIOR TIGER TEAM OUTPLAYS PRESBYTERIANS TO WIN 15 TO 0

Local Lads Forced To Give Up Two Touchdowns and Field Goal At Clemson Friday. P. C.'s Only Threat Near End of Game When They Had Ball On Bengals' Five-Yard Line.

A gamely fighting Presbyterian college freshman team invaded Tigertown Friday only to be turned back by the undefeated and unscored on Clemson rats to the tune of 15-0. Playing a team that definitely outclassed them, they remained on the defensive for the greater part of the game, their only actual threat coming in the closing minutes of the contest.

Early in the game the cadets forced the Blue Anklets far down the field and when the Calvinist punter attempted a punt he was forced over the end zone, automatically giving the Clemson freshmen a safety.

They were forced to be content with this two point lead for the remainder of the first half, though they kept the ball in Blue Sox territory most of the time.

In the third quarter Dill Clary of Clemson raced around the invaders right end for the first touchdown of the game. The cadets failed to make the point after goal good.

Very early in the fourth period a blocked P. C. punt gave Clemson the ball on the Blue Sox 24 yard line. The Cubs drove down the field to the one foot line, but there they were forced to give up the ball due to Presbyterian's brilliant defensive playing. Soon after, however, Clary again skirted right end for twenty yards and a touchdown.

Just before the whistle blew, P. C. had the ball on the Clemson five yard stripe. This was their only actual threat of the game.

One of the strongest factors in the Clemson victory was the punting of Page. His most outstanding kick was an eighty yard punt that was grounded on the Blue Sox three yard line.

Cox and Caldwell were outstanding for the Presbyterian Freshmen.

S. C. Teams Have Edge For Week

With Presbyterian college the only idle state gridiron aggregation this week, the state football race drew nearer to its climax. Only one intra-state game was played, Citadel and Wofford, with the Terriers falling before the Cadet onslaught.

The out-of-state games were divided, South Carolina teams winning two and losing two. Oglethorpe took the Erskine Flying Fleet into camp Friday at the Greenwood County fair. Furman fell before a strong Bucknell team in the only inter-sectional game to the played in the state this year. The Gamecocks won from V. P. I., while the Clemson Tigers took the highly praised Hunk Anderson team from N. C. State for a ride.

Monday and Tuesday: Mae West in "Belle of the Nineties." You who thought Mae West couldn't do it again—go, and lose your bet. Also your dignity. As Ruby Carter, burlesque queen of the beef-trust days, Mae is still the consummate artist of timing and delivery—and she has some knock-out lines to deliver. Her costumes are "something"; her songs are good, too. Ruby glides through, taking diamonds from Brooks Claybourne (John Mack Brown); love from Tiger Kid (Roger Pryor); Ace Lamond (John Miljan) from Molly (Katherine DeMille)—and no back-talk from anybody. Duke Ellington's orchestra accompanies Mae's provocatively swaying hips and feathers. And the lines are so funny, without being offensive, that the outcome is a major triumph of Mae over matter. No one who likes Mae can afford to miss the super Paramount film.

Wednesday: "The Dude Ranger." George O'Brien in just another western.

Thursday: Warner Baxter in "Grand Canary." An intriguing beginning sags in the middle and fades out to a thin, sad end. The tale of a doctor who, having been "gossiped" out of his profession, takes a ship to Santa Cruz, meets Lady Mary Fielding (Madge Evans) and finally recaptures his past standing by wiping out a plague of yellow fever. Warner Baxter is wasted as the doctor. Barry Norton, Zita Johann, Marjorie Rambeau, and Roger Imhoff are also in the cast of this Fox picture.

Friday: Miriam Hapkins and Bing Crosby in "She Loves Me Not." Smart treatment of the stage success puts this way out in front as light, riotously funny entertainment. Fireworks fly when gangsters, movie producers and the law seek out Miriam Hopkins in Bing Crosby's college dormitory after a shooting in the night club where she works. And it is in this scene that Miriam uncorks to display a type of humor that will amaze you. Kitty Carlisle, Edward Nugent and George Barbier are in the cast of this Paramount picture.

Did You Know That—

Evelyn Laye, the famous English actress, has arrived in Hollywood to play a leading role in Ramon Novarro's new picture.

The Rochester Civic orchestra has returned to the airwaves again for an extended series of concerts presented at 4:30 p. m. This program may be heard on Wednesday.

Maria Peritza will open the Chicago Opero company, singing the title role in "Turandot" by Puccini.

"The Barrets of Wimpole Street" played at the Capitol theatre in New York for four consecutive weeks. This is the first picture to play this famous theatre for such an extended time since Garbo's "Flesh and the Devil" which was an old silent film.

Ethel Merman, famous torch singer, has a leading role in Eddie Cantor's new film, "Kid Millions."

Miriam Hopkins has been signed by Samuel Goldwyn in order to race with Anna Sten as one of the most interesting and exotic actresses in films. This situation will help bring out the best qualities in both of these sterling actresses.

Newberry Next On Blue Hose Schedule

The Presbyterian college varsity football squad will journey to Newberry on Friday to meet the Newberry Indians in their annual game.

The dope has it that the Blue Hose will win the game by a narrow margin. And another thing that will be in the Calvinists' favor is that they are seeking revenge for the upset that Newberry gave them in last year's game.

An interesting feature of the game will be the playing of Robbie Higbe of Presbyterian, and Beck of Newberry. These are two of the fastest and most elusive backs in the state and fans will have a treat in watching them both in action at the same time.

Sport Shots

After a two-week rest the garnet and blue clad boys go out to battle with Newberry on their home ground Friday. The Newberry game is one which I never like to make a definite prediction about. We should win, but the question is, will we. I don't know—Newberry has the knack of upsetting the dope where P. C. is concerned. Remember the 1933 game!

One thing is certain. The boys are going to need more of a touchdown drive than they used against Catawba if they win the Indian contest. Until they got in the shadow of the goal posts they ran all over the Salisbury team, but then, well, you saw the game!

Newberry has one man that I advise everyone who sees the game to watch, and that man is Beck. He's a little fellow in statue, and he's not such a giant on the weight side, but still he'll get many a vote for the all-State eleven.

And, speaking of all-State, I want you to be thinking seriously about the matter in these closing days of the gridiron season. We want an all-State selected by the P. C. student body. Blanks will be published in the issue that comes out just after Thanksgiving. So watch the good boys from now on!

The freshmen seem to be having a rather tough time of it this year. Already they've fallen before Carolina and Citadel and Clemson. The rats aren't blessed with the best material in the world but they certainly have two good punters. And they're nothing for us to be ashamed of.

Incidentally, I notice by the Johnsonian that the Winthrop girls will be at the Erskine game in Rock Hill which means that the P. C. student body will be there in a body. Ship ahoy, Winthrop!

And now, that that is that, so long.

Student Opinion

customs that now require certain moral obligations of us are a product of the evolution of the finer instincts of man, and not a survival of his ruder ears.

The title of the article, "Freedom and the Creative Spirit," is peculiarly reminiscent of the type of literature we used to find in the magazines just after the war, recommending the "Freedom" and the "Creative Environment" of Greenwich Village and the Latin Quarter in Paris. That's just a little old-fashioned now.

It might be well if those of us who are so apt in offering destructive criticism would offer some that is constructive. For instance, in what way could those who have no moral restraint be restrained without laws?

STUDENTS AND MARRIAGE

Editor, The Blue Stocking:

Section X, Article 8 of the Rules of the Faculty of this institution states that "any student who marries while a sudent at Presbyterian College will be dropped from he student roll." In my opinion this foolish rule is clearly an infringement upon the personal rights of a student.

As this institution is kept up and maintained by the Presbyterian Church, it is extremely hard to understand why a branch of the church should make such a rule, while marriage itself is considered as one of the holiest ceremonies of the church. If a student feels that he has reached the age of serious consideration of matrimony, and is legally of age, is financially able to continue his studies and wants to do so, and can support a wife, what right has any body of men to say whether or not he shall make this step?

Marriage has proven in thousands of instances that it not only uplifts the ideals and morals of the persons involved but it also creates an ambition to reach out for the better things of life. As the primary purpose of this college is to build up the morals and character of its students, it seems to me that the faculty would permit marriage instead of stifling it, in order that the above mentioned purpose might be realized to the utmost. Of course this rule will only concern a few directly, but just suppose that you were one of those few, would your attitude be pro or con?

And then, too, suppose a married student lives out in town, is not dependent on the school financially, and passes the required work, what right has the faculty to say that he shall be dropped from the roll—or, as they put it, "We shall have to ask for your resignation," as if the student had committed a hideous crime.

Recently, a member of the faculty stated that "if one student married it would put the idea into the heads of other students." In my opinion, this is undoubtedly a weak comeback. No student who fully realizes the obligations of matrimony will take such a step just because he sees someone else doing it. At least not any more so than he would be influenced by the marriage of one of his friends in his home town.

If we students would get some feeling of right and wrong about our personal rights and snap out of this dilemma into which we have been placed, we will have some say-so in the rules which are forced upon us. Until then, what else can we expect but a decline in our so-called "privileges" of student-government?

—Z.

A MUCH-NEEDED REVISION?

Editor, The Blue Stocking:

Freshman math is too dry, too useless and too hard, and it should not be required? But why shouldn't we give similar consideration to other sore spots in courses. Some freshmen may be able to sail through a term of algebra at high speed, but strike a thousand snags with comma faults and the like in their English. To be fair to them, the college should not make them repeat what is to them dull and difficult, should it?

We believe that a college course should represent a fairly well-rounded slice of knowledge covering science and literature. Science or an understanding of science without math is crippled almost as much as a one-armed athlete. College graduates should not be intellectual cripples.

We believe that a removal of standards for graduation is not good. A diploma then would be just a certificate that John Doe has been a collegian for four years at P. C., exposed to some knowledge and learning, where he absorbed whatever took his fancy—and no more. Pshaw! —X.

ALUMNI

REMEMBER HOME-COMING DAY, WOFFORD GAME, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 24

Dana McLendon '28, football coach of Beaufort high school, has lost 4 games, tied 3, and won 35 in five years of coaching. His team has won six-consecutive games this season and has not been beaten or tied in its last fifteen games.

Dr. W. R. Wallace '03, Regional Vice-President of the Alumni Association for York, Chester, Fairfield, Lancaster, Chesterfield and Kershaw counties has called for a meeting of the Alumni in this region to be held in Rock Hill on November 16th at a Dutch Treat supper. As this will follow the P. C.-Erskine fray there that day a large crowd is expected. John Wilson Moore, Jr., '30, of Rock Hill, is making a drive to have all the surrounding Alumni at the game.

Letters have been mailed to L. M. Simpson, Rev. E. L. Barber, W. J. Cherry, Jr., A. F. Marshall and D. H. McFadden, Presidents of the classes '14, '19, '29, and '34 and several other members of these clases to help them in calling meetings of these classes for class reunions at Home-coming, November 24th.

THE PARADE GROUND

We had never been just sure in our mind some we had been hearing of P. C.'s ever always quoted slogan, "Where men are made," that this phrase was not one more baloney until we observed the uniform (and personal) inspection last Tuesday morning. During the course of that inspection we saw numerous budding gentlemen docked a grade or so for not having their faces smoothly shaven, and it just occurred to us that the military department of this school may be transforming these boys into men after all, for when they begin shaving, the big step may have been taken. We wouldn't consider it an unusual thing at some of these fellows who came here with only a little fuzz on the face would return home Christmas and proudly exhibit a miniature beard—their idea of the real he-man that college made them.

And speaking of the last uniform inspection, we might say that Cadet (?) Marks has so far exercised better judgment than any man in the whole unit in selecting a freshman to clean his uniform, since he was given AA on the uniform at that time. However, Marks has so far refused to disclose the identity of either the freshman who did the work or the other unfortunate who furnished the blitz for the job. No, we don't accuse Buck of selfishness, but just compliment him for more good judgment in refusing to share the services of the man who has done so willing for someone else a job better than he did it for himself.

This week we regret to announce that Sarge Young has proven himself fickle again by changing his interests for the second time in one month. At first he directed his attention on the development of the squiff ball team when we thought it should have been on the rifle team, and we overlooked that; but now he has forsaken the varsity squiff team and insists that all his spare momnets will be employed by his pet hobby—developing a co-ed rifle team. Sarge is again most enthusiastic over the prospects of a fine team and after Miss Mary Workman, captain of last year's team, gets her cohorts on the firing line we expect soon to see men entering the canteen by the rear door or wearing steel helmets when it is absolutely necessary for them to go out the front hall. Upperclassmen will remember this period of stress and strain last year when rifles suddenly went off without being loaded and when members of the rifle team tried in vain to direct their shots at the target when the co-eds were around. Also applications for manager and coach of the above band (no other name could be supplied) are in order from the time of this reading on until Sarge Young informs all the applicants that he is the one and only coach and that all men may get to act as manager of the team in time—that is, if all of them care to hang around the firing one a day or so. Duties of this manager will be as follows: (1) Replacing lights above the targets after someone shoots one out, (2) Seeing that all guns are unloaded after firing and that all window panes, etc., are repaired after one of these unloaded 22's goes through them.

Coming attractions in the military life on this campus are listed below, viz:

(1) The military ball which the P. M. S. & T. is very seriously considering, and (2) a probable trip for some members of the corps on Armistice day to Greenville for participation in the Armistice day celebration. Understand that both of these affairs may NOT come off, and that if the first one materializes it will be off the campus. Also, in case some men make the Greenville trip it must be understood beforehand that each one of them must be in condition at the parade to at least recognize the men he came down with.

Do you know that:

Captain Blanton still has hopes for his sophomore class in military science even though he found it necessary to hand out a large number of low grades at the end of the first month.

That the expression "I don't know" isn't in the military vocabulary of either of our captains and that they don't purpose to have it in corresponding vocabularies of any member of the advanced course?

That there is now on exhibition in the armory of West Point a muzzle-loading gun which was picked up after the battle of Gettysburg with about 27 full charges of powder in the barrel. The explanation is that some Confederate soldier became flustrated by all the noise and confusion around him and never knew that his gun was not going off.

That submarines were used by the Chinese in their war with Japan about 1500 A. D.

That the first breech-loading gun was in service at the Battle of Kings Mountain, although they were not generally used for some time after that.

SILVER—And Trade Boom

The Chinese Government has protested to the United States Government against the policy of buying silver, which has forced the price of the metal up in the world markets to nearly 60 cents an ounce. China has levied an export tax on silver, so much was being drawn out of that country.

Regular readers of this column will remember that I pointed out, more than three years ago, that an increase in the price of silver to its pre-war average would make it impossible for China and other silver-money countries to compete unfairly with the gold-standard nations in international trade. The silver policy adopted at Washington has had just that effect.

As an amateur economist, I want to register another guess about international money. It will not be very long now before France devalues the franc again, and the other gold-standard nations will follow suit. Then a complete equalization of the values of the currencies of all nations will be possible and international trade will begin to boom again all over the world.

PRODUCTION—Distribution

One good result of the depression and the consequent efforts of thousands of intelligent thinkers to find out what caused it and how to prevent another one, is that we have learned, for the first time, a lot of facts that nobody knew about our economic system.

When we have all the facts maybe somebody can do something about it, though it takes a long time for facts to become generally known. A lot of loose talk has been heard in the past few years about "overproduction." Men have been disciplined for denying that America was producing more goods than we could consume. But now it has been ascertained, with what seems to me convincing definiteness, that in almost every line of industry the equipment for production is far below what would be needed if everybody were to be supplied with all the goods he needs.

The problem is one of distribution, and that is not going to be solved in a day. But I think we are coming out of the depression with a great deal more accurate knowledge on this and many other economic problems.

WAR—Doubtful

Maybe, by the time this appears in print, the nations of Europe will be flying at each other's throats, but I doubt it. I do not believe that the assassination of King Alexander of Jugoslavia will precipitate a war That it not to say, however, that no European country wants something that it can only get by going to war.

I was in Italy a couple of years ago, Everywhere I saw and heard evidence that Mussolini's government wants to control the eastern coast of the Adriatic, which is Jugoslavia. Also, I heard much talk about Italy's desire to regain the whole Riviera, as far west as Marseilles, from France. Italy wants to control the sea routes of the Mediterranean and is jealous of any other nation that might have a motive in shutting her off from her supplies of fuel oil, coal and the products of her African colonies.

If Europe had recovered financially from the last war, the present situation would look more war-like to me. I don't think any nation, except possibly France, could finance a war at this time; nor do I believe any of them wants to fight.

PEACE—Resolutions

I have to smile, though somewhat sadly, at the numerous peace movements among well-meaning persons who haven't the remotest notion of the causes of war. Ladies' sewing circles adopting resolutions against war will never bring peace.

I counted up a while ago the major wars that had been fought in the world since the United States declared its independence. They totalled more than thirty. Our nation was only involved in seven of them. But let some able propagandist convince the people of the United States that some other nation is treading on our toes, or threatening to deprive us of some of our rights on the seas, and see how quickly the young men of America will rush to enlist for war!

I do not expect to live to see the last threat against the world's peace removed. My great-grand-children, if such there be, will not see it. Meantime, peace societies will continue resoluting but wise statesmen will be preparing for war in time of peace.

Let's find out why Turkish tobacco is so important to a good cigarette Native tobacco grower telling American tourists how Turkish tobacco is cured.

On the sunny slopes of Smyrna . . . in the fertile fields of Macedonia . . . along the shores of the Black Sea . . . grows a kind of tobacco that is different from any other tobacco in the world.

THESE Turkish tobaccos are the only tobaccos of foreign cultivation that are used to any great extent in making American cigarettes.

Turkish tobaccos are famous for their spicy aroma, and a blend of the right kinds of Turkish tobacco with our own home-grown tobaccos is better than any one kind used alone.

In Chesterfield we balance mild, ripe tobaccos grown in this country with just the right amounts of the right kinds of Turkish.

It is by blending and cross-blending these different tobaccos that we make Chesterfield the cigarette that's milder, the cigarette that tastes better.

Model League To Be Conducted At Winthrop, Dec. 14

International Relations Clubs To Meet At State Woman's College. Delegates From Here Make Plans To Attend.

The President of the International Relations club announces that he has received information from Winthrop College to the effect that the annual Model League of Nations Assembly will be held there on December 14 and 15.

This assembly is a meeting together of representatives from various colleges throughout the South for the purpose of discussing international matters in a way similar to that of the regular League Assembly in Geneva.

This assembly was begun in 1929 at Winthrop as a part of the class in World Politics and Imperialism and since then has met five times. Its purpose is to promote interest and increase knowledge in international affairs.

Last year 12 colleges were represented with forty-eight delegates being present. In addition to these there were 150 Winthrop girls who took an active part in the meetings.

Needless to say, the social side of the League measures up equally well with the intellectual side, as all men who have attended it in the past will testify.

The President of the International Relations Club states that the following men have had their names submitted as delegates from this institution: Preston Charles, John Rauch, Charles Carson, Tom Plaxico and Hugh Holman.

Hold P. C. Student In Auto Death

An unfortunate accident occurred on the night of November 3 when the car driven by J. W. Steenbergen, a Presbyterian college sophomore, of Point Pleasant, W. Va., struck Grady Bodie, of Clinton, on the Greenwood highway a short distance from Clinton.

Mr. Bodie was apparently lying in the road and Steenbergen did not see him until he was almost upon him. In order to avoid him the driver put on brakes and swerved, but ran over the lower part of his body. The man was rushed to the hospital, but he died several minutes after aid was administered.

Steenbergen and N. E. Andrews, of Spartanburg, also a Presbyterian college student, who was in the car with him, reported at the police station, went to the scene of the accident with three policemen who asserted that they thought the accident was unavoidable.

The coroner's inquest was held Sunday. The jury turned in the verdict that Bodie met death because of careless driving. The solicitor is pressing a charge of involuntary manslaughter.

I. R. C. Exam Be Held In Few Days

Any student who is interested in joining the International Relations Club is advised to turn in his name on a slip of paper to Dean Brown immediately. An exam will be given in the near future, probably in the next few days, to those who are candidates for entrance into the society.

All the questions in the test are short and can be answered with one or two words. They are concerned with the subject of current happenings in international affairs. The students who make the highest grades on the test will be invited to join the local I. R. C.

Ministerial Club Host At Outing

Some two dozen members of the Ministerial club and their friends held an oyster stew at the country club Saturday night.

A number of town girls and several from the orphanage were there to join in the fun and make short work of the refreshments.

I. R. C. Program Interesting Event

Hudson and Plaxico Speakers At Gathering of Club. Announcements of Interest To Members.

Colin Hudson and Tom Plaxico were the principal speakers at the regular meeting of the International Relations Club Wednesday evening. In the interval between the two talks the members discussed various related topics.

The subject of Plaxico's talk was Austria. He gave a resume of events of the past few months in this so-called "step-child" of the League of Nations. During his short discourse he brought in the ambitions of Mussolini in Austria and other countries of southeastern Europe.

Hudson made an extemporaneous speech on Germany. He told of Adolf Hitler's rise to power, and the set-up of Germany as it is now.

Hugh Holman, scholarly president of the club, made an announcement that will be interesting to many who keep posted on international events. On Armistice Day, Sunday, November 11, there will be a world-wide broadcast on the general subject of the "Family of Nations," during the hour between four and five p. m., eastern standard time. The speakers for this occasion will be as follows:

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, who will initiate the program and will close the program with a summary of the various addresses.

Sir John Simon, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs in the British government.

Dr. Eduard Benes, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs in Czechoslovakia.

Richard B. Bennett, Premier of Canada.

Dr. Afranio de Mello Franco, former Minister of Foreign Affairs in Brazil.

Prince Iyesato Tokugawa, former president of the House of Peers, of the Imperial Diet, Japan.

The program is sponsored by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. This is one of the very few times if not the first time, that so many important figures have spoken on the same program. All men who find foreign affairs interesting should make it their business to listen in on one of the numerous radios that infest our campus.

Another announcement made by the president of the club was about the Model League of Nations Assembly, held annually at Winthrop College. This gathering is composed of delegates from International Relations Clubs at various South Carolina colleges. There are two men representing each country in the League of Nations, with a Winthrop girl as sponsor for each country. During the meeting the delegates discuss problems in the relations between different countries. Needless to say, some unusually interesting controversies are staged, as nearly every member present has something to say at one time or another.

This meeting is to be held on December 14 and 15. The following members of the local I. R. C. have announced their intention of going to Rock Hill for the above mentioned event: Charlie Carson, Preston Charles, John Rauch.

Alpha Psi Delta Adds Members

After a strenuous and prolonged cashing season the members of the Alpha Psi Delta sorority are fortunate in announcing the addition of four new members to the chostered ranks of their sisterhood. The initiates are: Misses Catherine Lawrence, Mary Metts and Eva Wilson, all of Laurens, and Miss Mary Howze Dillard of Clinton. The initiation ceremony took place last week at the home of Miss Jamie Little, an alumna of Presbyterian college. A social and gossip session followed the installation of the pledges. With the addition of these young women the club plans an even more gala and elaborate social program than last year.

Phelps Inaugurated Winthrop President

Is Third Head of State Woman's College. Succeeds Dr. James P. Kinard.

Dean M. W. Brown and Dr. R. L. Coe went to Rock Hill Friday, Nov. 9, to attend the inauguration of Dr. Shelton Phelps as the third president of Winthrop college, the South Carolina college for women. Dr. Coe was the official delegate of Presbyterian college, and Mr. Brown represented Centre college, of which school he is a graduate.

The exercises, centering around the inauguration, featuring the address of Dr. David Allen Robertson, president of Goucher college, and drawing many distinguished guests, were among the most colorful ever to be held in academic circles in South Carolina. The presidential party, composed of Dr. Phelps, Dr. Robertson, Governor Ibra C. Blackwood of South Carolina, the trustees of Winthrop college, the Rev. Dr. F. W. Gregg, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Rock Hill, and Dr. James P. Kinard, president emeritus, was escorted by Miss Mary Burgard, chief marshall, from the library through a double line of students to the auditorium.

Dr. Kinard presided at the induction ceremonies. Following the invocation by Dr. Gregg, the chapel choir, under the direction of Walter B. Roberts, sang "Gloria in Excelsis," by Mozart. Doctor Kinard then presented Doctor Robertson, who made the principal address. W. L. Riley, vice-chairman of the Winthrop board of trustees, introduced Governor Blackwood, who delivered the charge of office to the new president. Mrs. W. L. Daniel then introduced Dr. Phelps, who responded. Following the inaugural address, Dr. Warren G. Keith, who was in charge of the academic procession, presented to Dr. Phelps the delegates from other colleges.

The inaugural luncheon was held in the college dining hall, and a reception given at the president's home in the afternoon.

Doctor Phelps is an honored addition to the educational system of South Carolina, and is well fitted to serve as the president of Winthrop college. He was formerly dean of the graduate school at George Peabody college, Nashville, Tennessee.

Brown Speaks At Y. M. C. A. Session

Tells of Significant Historical Incidents In Development of Modern Hymnology.

Dean M. W. Brown, professor of history, spoke last Thursday night, at the regular Y. M. C. A. meeting, on a program which included special numbers from the P. C. glee club. Prof. Brown spoke on "Sacred Music," while the "songsters" appropriately sang "Largo" and "Calvary." As this part of the program E. J. Arnold, "Y" program committeeman, presided over the meeting.

In developing his theme Dean Brown referred to several historical incidents which were of great significance in the development of modern hymnology. He placed the "Psalms" as the earliest and greatest collections of lyrics the world has ever known. These were probably the basis of the majority of our hymns, it was noted, although in later years many various influences, such as are revealed in the old Greek legends, gave rise to numerous new songs.

The speaker also touched briefly the lives of several better known musicians. He spoke of Handel and his experiences in the Hanovarian court. He mentioned the effects of Morot's work in the court of Francis I of France. He praised John Wesley for his work in popularizing the modern hymn and mentioned the fact that it was Wesley, who, at Charleston in 1756, published the first modern hymn book. He remarked that Charles Wesley wrote about 6,500 hymns and played a leading part in the growth of sacred music. Watts was laudad as having earned the right to be given the most credit for the development of the modern hymn.

Dean Brown also noted two songs in particular and gave a few brief remarks about their history. These were "Abide With Me," the notes of which W. H. Monk claims to have written in ten minutes, and "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross."

Prof. Brown in concluding his valuable talk on sacred music cautioned that we should think more of the great spiritual value which was in the mind of the writer as he wrote the hymn, than the average person ordinarily does as he casually swings through the familiar words of some sacred and divine hymn.

People On Mars, Normal In All Respects, Boast of Many Ingenious Customs; But Birtie Twirple's Ire Is Aroused When He Finds Out They They Have No Pockets

And so he landed on Mars. There was a reception committee, and a most peculiar committee it was. The chairman took off his hat politely as the steaming rocket-car thundered to rest with a roar, directly before him. The other members of the committee bowed in turn as Bertie Twirple, muffled to the tongue in fur and oxygen helmet, unscrewed the steel jacketed door, and poked out his head, grasped the edges to pull himself out, let it go hastily and swore in a gentlemanly tone at its warmth.

It was a MOST unusual committee. Its components had neither six legs nor three, but two very ordinary ones. Evidently they were nudists, for the only articles of clothing worn were a leather belt and a top hat each. From his belt the chairman drew a small rubber mallet, bore it into, and gravely presented the halves to the astonished explorer, the astonied Twirple, who sat in the hot cubbyhole of the rocket, afraid to come out because of the friction-heated door jamb.

Bertie found his tongue.

"I say, really, this can't be right! I mean—you know—it never happens in the books. Why, I haven't even prepared a return speech!"

The chairman looked distressed. "But you have it in your hand. We find it less trouble to present the welcoming speech in manuscripts, while the visitor, who naturally says less, returns only part of it." Reaching out, he recovered one of the halves of the speech. The committee applauded the return speech. They paired off and patty-caked with one hand. The chairman patty-caked with Bertie, who had neglected to move the palm from which the return speech had been taken.

"I say what a curious method! Really, it requires explanation. That, your costume, and the fact that you are speaking English. Impossible! 10,000,000 miles from England, and speaking English. I don't think any editor would accept it."

"Its really quite simple. Did you ever hear of celestial music?"

Bertie beat a Sousa march with his fingernails upon his teeth and wrinkled his low forehead.

"Can you mean Chinese Jazz?"

The chairman carefully combed his eyebrows the wrong way into a fierce bushiness, and explained.

"Celestial music is the music of the spheres. Its all we have up here, when a planet is traveling at something better than ——— miles a minute, it speeds up into jazz. And English is the language best adapted for commercial people the world over, so naturally all speak English."

Bertie scrambled quickly down the door and loosened the oxygen helmet which had been muffling his speech.

"Why—on the speed we have—height of Mars as we like—"

"More nonsense and scientific gas-conversation. With customary ogle-eye, you probably expected to find us green-ly shaped, with antennae instead of ears, and—"

Bertie changed the subject. Teetering on one leg, he found himself no lighter on the surface of Mars than on the earth, and commented on it.

"Oh, yes,—following the English system by telescope, when the pound went up, naturally made our pounds heavier, and there is very little difference now. Two years ago, a one

P. C. Men Seeking Appointment As Rhodes Scholars

J. W. Combs, Class of '34, W. F. Guess and P. M. Tiller To Go Before District Committee In Effort To Win Selection.

Presbyterian college will be represented by J. Walker Combs, Jr., '34, in Georgia, and by W. F. Guess and P. M. Tiller in South Carolina, before the state committees on Rhodes scholarships.

Two men from each state will be picked to interview a district committee, which will elect the four most promising men from Virginia, South Carolina, North Carolina, Georgia, Florida and Tennessee to enter Oxford university in England. Most of their expenses will be paid for the two or three years.

Nominations are made by the faculty of the college and considered for the following qualities:

(1) Literary and scholastic ability and attainments.

(2) Qualities of manhood, truth, courage, devotion to duty, sympathy, kindliness, unselfishness, and fellowship.

(3) Exhibition of moral force of character and of instincts to lead and to take interest in his schoolmates.

(4) Physical vigor as shown by interest in outdoor sports or in other ways.

The money for the scholarships, 100, or about $2,000 a year each, was given years ago by Cecil Rhodes to draw brilliant students together at Oxford from all parts of the English-speaking world. The millions extracted from the wealth of South Africa in gold and diamonds have thus been used to found what probably is the most important group of scholarships in the world.

District Rotarians Meet On Campus

Address By Dr. von Scheven, of Germany. P. C. Students Assist With Program.

The Clinton Rotary club will hold an inter-city meeting in the Presbyterian college dining hall on Monday night, November 12. The affair will be in the form of a banquet at which Dr. Waldemar von Scheven, of Germany, will be the principal speaker. Entertainment will be provided by the college orchestra, A. E. Lake, baritone soloist of the P. C. glee club, and several out-of-town artists.

Dr. von Scheven founded the Rotary club of Baden-Baden, Germany, in 1929 and was president of that club from 1929 until 1934. He is now serving as a member of the club service and extension committees of Rotary International, for Europe, and as president of the Rotary club of Baden-Baden for the same period. He has been active in developing international contacts between Rotarians of Germany, England, France and Switzerland.

Dr. von Scheven comes to this district by arrangement of Rotary International.

When Children Are Bad . . .

"A boy's dormitory will inevitably become abused." That is more or less accepted casually as a true statement of fact, and the truth of it is not considered particularly unfortunate. Certainly our own dormitories have been, and still are, grossly abused. And certainly we don't deplore their abuse to any great extent.

Of the four dormitories on the campus, age and the unceaseless ravages of their succession of occupants have palled on three of them to the extent that new scars go unnoticed. Abusing them now is somewhat like putting a black mark on a black piece of paper—it won't show. We do not mean to imply that they are wretched or in the least uninhabitable. They are not. But they have long ago lost the flavor of well-kept or pleasant surroundings, and they have lost it mainly through the careless destruction of boys. Smyth presents clearly the process of a dormitory undergoing its inevitable abuse. It is still new enough to show recent scars.

We don't wonder why such things happen. We know. It is a lack of respect for property. It results from the very selfish and rather childish attitude of, "I don't care; it ain't mine." And we are not fooled into believing that those with lack of breeding are the worst offenders. Boys who apparently have excellent backgrounds often do the worst damage. The best of us are not above a little idle destruction now and then.

We sincerely believe that the situation can be remedied, but not without a little effort. A fearless student should be placed in each dormitory and in each section of Smyth. (He may be a councilman, though councilmen have been known to be quite as reckless as anyone else). This proctor, if he be called such, should not be a spy, but he should conscientiously try to find out who does any one a serious. For a large offense, of which there are a great many, the abuser should be fined not some paltry sum deducted from his breakage fee, but enough to make a very sizeable hole in his pocketbook.

You protest that this would be treating college students like small children? We admit that it would. We maintain that when college students act like children they should be treated like children—and a child still needs a good spanking.

"People Who Live In Glass Houses . . ."

Robert West summed up some people rather well when he said, "Nothing is easier than fault-finding; no talent, no self-denial, no brains are required to set up in the grumbling business." There are some people in every group who are always endeavoring to find as much wrong with as many people as they can. Their one idle joy is grumbling about something or somebody. They take frivolous pleasure in running anybody and everybody in the mire. They see something to mock in every worthwhile project and person.

Individuals of this kind are afraid they cannot depend on their own merits to go high in the world so they tear down the skyscrapers of others with snobbery so their little one- or two- or three-story structures will seem supreme in character. They try to keep themselves in the limelight and push themselves forward by running down the better fellow. This selfish type comprises those who think if their candle can't burn quite as bright as others they try to snuff the others out.

About every organization in the world, excepting a few blessed ones, have their number of these selfish individuals. They are as grime and grit impeding the wheels of progress. They find fault with every movement and program and criticize everyone's honest attempt to be at least doing something. They complain things aren't being done right and this or that could be so much more interesting. The worst part about these lazy individuals is that they are like Voltaire: they destroy without replacing. One of this type never stops to think what he might contribute or that he might cooperate toward making things better, that is, be constructive rather than destructive.

Too many college clubs can attribute their stagnancy to students of this type. These supposing intellectuals go to meetings and chatter during the entire program and grumble about how boresome the whole thing is and that so-and-so can't make a talk, etc., etc. The type is well known. He is never seen breaking his neck to improve the organization by doing something useful himself.

And if these ones cannot find a reason for some selfish motive they will tear something down for the mere result of being amused or having done something. Idle conversation can be most insidious. Such acts are rather like those of the infant who gets a great deal of joy out of tearing down the house of blocks that someone has been kind enough to build for him. One smack and the structure goes tumbling down. Then someone has to come along and rebuild it to please him so he can tear it all down again. How like many of his more mature fellows, yet he confines his destruction to material things. The infant hasn't yet developed enough mentality to abe able to see his own faults. A more mature being of the human race should have learned to take a glance at himself and to analize his own faults before broadcasting those of others. He should stop to think that perhaps he would see twice as an assidous person as the one he laughs at if only he would stop and look in some mirror. How wise was that person that said, "Search thy own heart; what paineth thee in others might in thyself be." "Despise not any man, and do not spurn anything; for there is no man that has not his hour, nor is there anything that has not its place."

Do You Measure Up?

A noted psychologist of Cleveland, Ohio, has given the following requirements of a scholar:

Understanding and appreciation of other races and cultures contemporary or remote.

Ability and disposition to weigh evidence in controversial matters.

Ability and disposition to project mentally an undertaking through its successive steps before undertaking it.

Skill in explanation and prediction.

Ability and disposition to Look beneath the surface of things before passing judgment.

Ability to do reflective thinking.

Disposition toward continued study and intellectual cultivation.

Critical and questioning attitude toward traditional sanctions.

Clarity in definition.

Discrimination in values in reacting to environment, social and physical.

Analytical approach to propositions leading to the detection of fallacies and contradictions.

Ability and disposition to observe accurately and systematically.

Understanding and skill in the use of processes of induction, deduction and generalization.

The ability to see relationships and accuracy in their interpretation.

A freshness of interest with respect to the developments of knowledge.

A REPLY

Editor, The Blue Stocking

A correspondent, in a letter published last week, offered a criticism of an essay, "Freedom and the Creative Spirit," appearing recently in The Collegian. Although, as editor, we support no statements or theories other than those printed on the editorial pages, and although this particular writing was done for the purpose of raising the question rather than settling it, we think further comment is appropriate. The reason for the anonimity of the author was to invite criticism more readily, and this we are glad to receive. However, we take this opportunity of making a few observations which came to our mind when reading the above-mentioned letter.

Concerning the question of pleasure, the criticiser, after agreeing that pleasure is the sole aim of life, continues, "but the author forgot to say what type of pleasure he referred to. He must have meant sensual pleasure, for that is the only kind of pleasure the government has seen fit to restrict by laws." This statement is incorrect in two places: firstly, Mr. Anonymous specifically states, "However, by pleasure I do not mean only physical happiness, but that of a 'moral' and spiritual nature also"; secondly, there are moral and spiritual laws imposed by government, and many of them.

The essay, seemingly, was inspired by the works of Russell. This the correspondent appreciates in calling it "an excellent rehash of Bertrand Russell," and at the same time exposes his mere superficial knowledge of the philosopher, whose works require careful study for a satisfactory understanding, by his apposition, "the well-known Sir Thomas More of the present time."

Again let us say, we back no statements made by the author, and we invite criticism; at the same time we wish to clarify any misunderstandings.

THE PURPOSE OF THE R.O.T.C

Editor, The Blue Stocking:

I had just rounded out five hours as armory orderly, and was in fine trim to write a burning anti-R. O. T. C. article, when I picked up the paper and glanced at the headlines. It was full of murmurs in the Balkans—shades of Serajevo. Gray-bearded statesmen and munitions manufacturers are already gloating over the new crop of youth—MY generation—which has sprung up since the last harvest. Although experts claim that no European nation is financially able or willing to fight, everyone concerned speaks of the "next war" in a matter-of-fact tone, in much the same manner in which prosperity is referred to as being "just around the corner"—but what is more ominous, without the same sarcastic smile.

Assuming then the general attitude that was is eventual and inevitable (every generation of Americans since 1776 has had its struggle), it is certainly stupid to go into it without some means of preparation. The idea that pacifism and simple faith in the underlying nobleness of man is enough to protect a nation from attack was disproven in 1917 by Germany. Civilization, unfortunately, has not advanced to a point where Utopian non-resistance is respected, and even the League of Nations seems to have developed into a rather futile pamphlet-distributing body.

It cost the United States millions to learn the lesson of preparedness.

Economizing in the nation's defense budget is a salient point upon which public of taxpayers, and consequently the candidates, rally. It is false economy to allow a machine to rust in disuse, for although it saves a little in oil, it necessitates costly repairs if efficient operation is again desired. There we are, between the devil and the deep; on one hand, the expense of maintaining an army; on the other, the possibility of again being 'caught short', and again being forced to pay battleship prices for makeshift wooden transports.

Naturally, a compromise is the only practical solution of the problem . . . and the R. O. T. C. is that compromise. Its purpose is to create an efficient skeleton and therefore less expensive, military organization which can be quickly filled up into full war-strength in case of another such emergency as occurred seventeen years ago —when time was certainly money. In training men for four years and passing them out into a reserve to make room for more, the War Department is only following a plan much similar to that evolved by Germany. She was restricted in the number of men she should have under training at one time, but it was not specified that they be always the same men. so Germany, bless her ingenious heart, trained her soldiers, passed them out and took more, until she had a potential force of trained 'civilians' superior to any other in Europe.

GAME OR WAR?

Editor, The Blue Stocking:

Football! What a gloriously thrilling and glamorous "game"! Or is it a game? It appears rather to be a war without weapons. Visit any practice field and hear the grinding of two charging lines, the thud of colliding bodies, the creaking of straining leather, the shrill whistle and sharp voice: "You, Batson! Charge into that line!! Put that head down and dig! Let's play FOOTBALL!" Are these characteristics of a game? Never. Indeed, what could be more warlike?

Why laud football to the skies? Why do we always read headlines such as this: "Batson's Plunging Outstanding in 7-6 Victory"? Does not someone realize that Batson spent long weeks doing nothing but plunging—always plunging? The papers call him a hero—the dictionary defines a hero as "a person of distinguished valor or enterprise in danger or fortitude in suffering." This definition has no place in football.

Every football game seems to be a signal to fight. The stands roar "Fight 'em, Bulldogs, Fight!" Excited partisans fight ferociously for the glory of Alma Mater. Twenty-two arousal youths rush and charge at one another — occasioning broken bones and multitudinous minor injuries. All of this is war—not play. Last year the Yale team shocked spectators by smiling and laughing as Harvard scored at will. Later this shock was changed to horror when the Yale captain said that the boys knew that they didn't have a very good team but that they were out to have some fun from the game. This was the first revolt against the frightful solemnity and fallacious importance of football.

Why doesn't some coach say to his men: "Play the game; don't live it"! Then football would lose its warlike characteristics and become a true game.

CHAPEL

Editor, The Blue Stocking:

Our regular morning chapel exercises constitute a most important part of our college life. Yet too many students are prone to overlook this fact and to regard chapel attendance in the same way that most of the freshmen regard themes—as something that just must be done, despite all desires to the contrary. This deformed mental attitude has promoted a profound disrespect for the sacredness of chapel exercises, as is witnessed by the uproar which is forthcoming every morning as soon as the last member of the faculty has stepped outside the chapel door. Hats are placed on their owners' heads, voices begin to hum and then to roar, and suddenly there is a grand rush to the door — a rush characterized by such pushing, prodding, plunging and blocking as would be of inestimable benefit to the football team. This conduct is inexcusable. It is the usual custom in churches to file out of the building in a quiet, orderly fashion, to don headgear only after arriving on the outside. It is natural that this respect should be shown the place of worship. Our chapel exercises are most assuredly worthy of no less respect. Why, then, do we not remedy the existing situation and walk quietly out of chapel every morning, waiting until we are outside to put on our hats?

'Aptitude' Test To Be Held On Dec. 7

Pre-medical students will be interested in learning that the aptitude test adopted by the Association of American Medical Colleges will be given on December 7 at 3:00 p. m. in the biology laboratory in the Science building.

This test is to be taken by all students who expect to apply for admittance to a medical school before the fall of 1935, as it is one of the formal requirements for admission.

Those interested should apply to Professor John H. Davis.

MOVIES

Monday and Tuesday—Harold Lloyd in "The Cat's Paw." Once again Harold Lloyd is the naive, unsuspecting young man with wide, horn-rimmed eyes, who blunders into difficult situations that work out miraculously for him. The story has fundamentally the same formula as his previous pictures, but the plot is more consistent. Missionary's son, Ezekiel Cobb (Lloyd), brought up in a remote Chinese province, has the culture of the Oriental, quotes to advantage from the poet, Ling Po, and knows nothing of the modern world. Through a fluke, he is elected mayor, while in America looking for a "mother for his children." But the crooked politicians frame him when he refuses to take orders. Comedy builds steadily to final climax. Una Merkel and George Barbier are splendid in this Fox release.

Wednesday—"Charlie Chan In London." With three days left in which to solve the six-months-old mystery, Warner Oland (Charlie Chan) joins a party at Alan Mowbray's country place to help save Drue Leyton's brother from execution for a murder he did not commit. For movie-goers who like to solve the mystery before the detective exposes it, this will prove the most baffling of the Charlie Chan plots. Oland and Mowbray, excellent.

Thursday — "The Notorious Sophie Lang." A crook comedy-melo-drama involving two thieves, Gertrude and Paul Cavanaugh, who, jealous of each other's noteriety and skill, endeavor to prove to each other and to the police their respective superiority in matters of stealing. Good comedy is supplied in this Paramount film by Alison Skipworth and Leon Errol. Miss Michael and Cavanagh both do well.

Friday—Clark Gable in "Men in White." By no means are you to consider this just another medical thing. It is a hospital picture to end all hospital pictures. Interne Clark Gable's problem is whether he shall marry wealthy Myrna Loy and have an easy practice, or make the most of his opportunity to work with a famous scientist (Jean Hersholt) and have little leisure. It is a film long to be remembered—fine and honest. In the scene with the little sick girl, Gable does a remarkable acting job. And he has your sympathy all through the episode with the nurse who dies as the result of an operation that should not have been performed. Hersholt tops all previous performances. And what a trouper Elizabeth Allan is. Otto Kruger and C. Henry Gordon are also in this MGM picture. The play won the Pullitzer Prize last year. They say that although the movie is splendid, it cannot touch the state version.

Saturday—"The Case of the Howling Dog." Smooth and clever, different and diverting, this novel murder mystery has plenty of talk, but enough action to balance. Attorney Warren Williams unravels all the complications of the mysterious tangle of a howling police dog, a nervous wreck (Gordon Westcott) and a beautiful lady (Mary Astor)—and then he pulls his surprise in the courtroom. Allen Jenkins hides behind a moustache in this very entertaining Warner production.

Did You Know That?

Myrna Loy and William Powell proved to be such a marvelous team that MGM has immediately cast them in a new mystery yarn. Their latest picture, "Evelyn Prentice," is playing on Broadway this week.

Jascha Heifetez, the violinst who was paid $30,000 for his first radio performance, will be guest artist on the General Motor's program Sunday.

Geraldine Farrar, former prima donna of the Metropolitan, made an outstanding success on the General Motors program last week.

Robert Donat, who played the title role in "The Count of Monte Cristo," is one of the most sought after young juveniles in Hollywood and London. This can easily be understood if one saw him as Culpepper in "Henry, the Eighth." or in the new version of Dumas' "Count of Monte Cristo."

Lily Pons has signed a movie contract with RKO-Radio pictures.

Charles Laughton has withdrawn from the cast of "David Copperfield." W. C. Fields will replace this illustrious English actor. Have you seen Mr. Laughton in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," He is absolutely perfect.

Joe Penner will soon be in Paramount's "College Rythm."

Ruth Bryan Owen will give a lecture at Converse the first part of December.

Lucrezia Bori's favorite opera is Massenet's "Manon."

An English version of "Boris Godounow," the Russian opera which is generally associated with the famous Feodor Chaliapin, is to be sung in Chicago with Lawrence Tibbett in the title role.

Lawrence Tibbett and "The Peanut Vendor" and "The Last Round Up" last week on the Packard program.

Jack Benny, famous radio comic, has made quite a hit in the movie, "Transatlantic Merry-Go-Round" with Gene Raymond and Nancy Carroll.

Nothing has been heard of the volatile Mary Garden this year. What has become of our Mary?

Fifteen years ago Betty Compson was the outstanding actress on the screen. Today she is a comparative nobody.

Pola Negri is back in Hollowood seeking a comeback.

Five years ago Jeanette MacDonald was a new sensation in Hollywood. Today she is still a sensation with her film, "The Merry Widow" entering its second month at the Astor theatre.

EXCHANGE

Citizens of Hanover, where Dartmouth is located, found it very profitable souce of graft to levy a town poll tax on all college students.

After several years of peaceful submission, some brilliant undergraduate conceived the idea of exercising the voting privilege. Accordingly, the entire student body turned out to the next town assembly. During the proceedings, a student leader introduced a bill proposing the construction of a wall eight miles high enclosing the town, and the building of a town hall one foot wide and a mile high. The townspeople, woefully outnumbered, were helpless against the mass approval of the students.

Consequently, to avoid having to build the two outlandish structures, the citizens were forced to go to Washington and have the students disfranchised.—The Emory Wheel.

We never realized until now that the University is the most generous and considerate school in the state. "The Gamecock," student newspaper, declined membership in the South Carolina Press Association because, says the paper, "The officials of the "Gamecock" feel that the contest to determine the best student newspaper in the state will prove more stimulating to the other members of the association if the "Gamecock is not represented."

At the University of Minnesota a fine of ten dollars, or a jail sentence of six days is imposed on any co-ed found wearing a fraternity pin.

P. C. Freshmen Win From Newberry Papooses

PRESBYTERIAN WINS ANNUAL GAME WITH NEWBERRY, 12-0

Passing By Perrin, Line Plunging By Bolick, and Brilliant Punt Returns By Higbe Feature Contest In Newberry Friday. Air-tight Defense of Blue Hose Line Also Noteworthy. Beck & Co. Fail To Do Appreciable Damage In Any Part of Game.

The Presbyterian college Blue Stocking gridsters fell fighting Newberry Indians at the latter's annual homecoming game last Friday and thereby gained sweet revenge on the Lutherans for breaking up a similar gathering on Presbyterian soil last year. A deadly passing attack, combined with short gains through the line when needed, spelled ruin for the red-jerseyed Indians, who went down under a 12-0 score.

Richie Higbe, outstanding P. C. performer and ball-hawk, was the most spectacular player of the game. Time and again he received punts and brought them back almost as far as they were kicked. Ed Beck, Newberry backfield ace who reaped destruction last year in the Indians' 26 to 7 victory, was completely bottled up, however. Hardly a time did he pass the line of scrimmage for more than a yard or two, and when he did P. C.'s great defensive backs nailed him before he could get his agile legs into high gear.

With Higbe putting the ball in position for scoring drives by his long punt returns, the Blue Stockings brought into play its fine aerial attack, thus reminding rabid P. C. fans of the days of Jimmie Stamps and Charlie Wilson. With Pug Perrin flipping the forwards and a trio of able men hauling them down out of the ozone, P. C. was able to put the punch in her goal line thrusts. The Presbyterians connected with eight out of its total of fourteen aerials tried, an impressive percentage in view of the large number of attempts.

Another feature of the game was the wonderful defensive play of Harry Bolick, the burly fullback of the Blue Hose. Blocking, not usually emphasized as one of his strong points, marked him as one of the prime reasons for P. C.'s superiority over Newberry in running plays. His tackling, also, was more vicious than ever. Ever on the alert on pass defense, he was even more watchful during this engagement, as he intercepted three Indian heaves. Then, too, his line-driving was the only way in which P. C. could gain consistently through the line.

The passing of Pug Perrin, the Union boy on loan, was especially noteworthy. His accuracy at putting the ball right on the heaves was almost uncanny.

Another P. C. backfield man who covered himself with glory was Lee Quarterman. In blocking and defensive work he was unsurpassed on the field, while during the few times he carried the ball, he made good gains, and was credited with scoring both touchdowns.

The entire P. C. line played about the steadiest game they have exhibited this season. Led by Davis, Horne and Forehand, the forward wall hurled back every attempt of the sporty Indian team to get past the scrimmage line.

Perry Koch, end, was the [illegible] for his team, in view of the fact that he was breaking up [illegible] Koch, Gibbons and Hewey also helped keep P. C.'s end zone and all-aerial gates from doing much damage.

The first quarter found the two teams engaged in a punting duel, with Newberry on the defensive on account of P. C.'s superiority in offensive play. A drive to the 14-yard line was started early in the second period, but a few minutes later Higbe made a long punt return to midfield, which on the following play Forehand snatched a pass out of the air for a 13-yard gain.

The next play was one of the prettiest of its kind ever pulled by the Presbyterians. Perrin threw a short pass to Forehand, then ran over toward the sideline. While he was still in the air from the leap the receiver flipped it straight back to Perrin, who lifted his knees high and traversed 27 yards of Lutheran soil before he was run out of bounds. Another pass to Quarterman went to the six-yard stripe. After a couple of line plays Perrin tried his throwing arm again, and Quarterman caught the pigskin with ease, to put the Blue Stockings six points ahead.

The third quarter saw P. C. putting the Indians on the defensive again, and as the period ended Higbe ran a punt to the 11-yard line of the enemy territory. After Bolick made a first down on the one-yard line, Quarterman plunged over for the touchdown. During the remainder of the final quarter Newberry tried desperately to tally, mostly through the forward pass method. Three were completed for good gains, but many more fell incomplete, as the Lutherans failed in their attempt to stage a comeback in the closing minutes.

Presbyterian chalked up 11 first downs to five for the Indians. P. C.'s forward passes were successful eight out of fourteen times, while the Indians made only three of theirs good, out of 18 attempted.

Epworth Crushes Central Hi Here

Epworth orphanage, a Columbia institution, won the district high school championship by defeating Central High in a contest on Johnson field Saturday afternoon. The score was 27 to 0.

The game was rather slow, as would be expected of a class C high school game. The Epworth boys, although much smaller than the opposing team, showed far better form and were evidently well-coached. They scored early in the game, and from then on showed a superiority that was evident all through the contest. A good running attack along with some tricky and smoothly executed aerials, combined to give the Epworth boys an easy victory.

Officials for the game were: Harry Bolick, referee; Pug Perrin, umpire; Sherry Horne, headlinesman, and Joyce Scruggs, field judge; Pluto Ross and Algernon Williams assisted by adding the chain, while Alfred Plowden was peg man.

Blue Hose To Meet Erskine At Rock Hill Next Friday

On this coming Friday, for the first time in several years, Presbyterian college will be the guests of Winthrop in a football game to be played in their stadium against Erskine.

A few years ago it was a custom to play Davidson at Rock Hill. But since athletic relations were severed with Davidson, P. C. has not carried the pigskin in Rock Hill. It will, in one sense, be homecoming for the Blue Hose, and a happy homecoming it will be.

The Erskine team that the Blue Hose are meeting then is not one of the strongest in this state. Their trail has been well marked with defeats, but they have gained the reputation of being one of the gamest and hardest-fighting teams in this section.

The Calvinists meet them just after their battle with their greatest state rivals and there may be some reaction that will favor the Erskine eleven slightly. But despite the fact that it looks like the Clinton boys game, there is no doubt that it will be one of great interest and great football.

The Erskine team is reported almost wholly free from injuries and it is thought that the P. C. aggregation will be in similar position when the whistle blows on November the 16.

The probable line-ups are:

Presbyterian		Erskine
Yearout	le	Mann
Tisdale	lt	DePhillips
Horne	lg	Austin
Plowden	c	Ford
Boggs	rg	Crawford
Millsap	rt	Reeves
Forehand or

BLUE HOSE YEARLINGS SET GOOD EXAMPLE FOR OLDER BROTHERS

Send Newberry First-Year Men Back Home On Short End of 20-7 Count Day Before Varsity Game. Mishoe, Dreyfus and Isom Lead Presbyterian Attack. McIntosh, for Indians, Starts Off Contest With 53-Yard Touchdown-Run for Only Score.

In a game packed with thrills from beginning to end, the freshmen of Presbyterian college soundly defeated the Newberry first-year men on Johnson field Thursday afternoon and sent them home smarting under a 20 to 7 score. The game was all that a lover of spectacular runs could expect, even if it was only a comparatively unimportant engagement between freshmen, although marred by frequent fumbles.

Both teams showed great offensive strength. Fishoe led the attack for the Calvinist frosh, ably seconded by Dreyfus and Isom. The Newberry halfbacks, McIntosh and Gustafson, also pulled some nice runs.

The Papooses started off by making a great bid for victory. Early in the first quarter McIntosh broke through the center of the line for 53 yards and a touchdown. The extra point was good and the first quarter ended with the Redskins ahead, 7 to 0. At this point, however, the Calvinist frosh set out in earnest to redeem themselves. After threatening once and losing the ball on a fumble, they forced Newberry to punt out to the Indians' 32-yard line. From there the Clintonians, led by Mishoe, worked the ball to the one-yard line where he carried it over.

With the score tied at 7-all, P. C. went out for more blood. Following an exhibition of shifty running by Mishoe, the Presbyterians again carried it over on a triple reverse, with 40 seconds left to play. The half ended, P. C. 14, Newberry 7.

During the third quarter P. C. had things much her own way. With Newberry on the defensive, the Calvinist yearlings kept the ball on foreign soil nearly all the time. Mishoe scored again for Coach Lonnie McMillian's proteges.

The last period was a repetition of the second and third, with Newberry showing offensive power at times, but unable to keep up a sustained attack.

This is probably the best game played by the Presbyterian freshmen so far this season. As stated before, the offense showed up well, with Mishoe, Isom, and Dreyfus carrying the ball most of the time. On defense, Lindsay was most outstanding in the backfield. In the line, Caldwell exhibited some unusually heady playing. Peterson and Burns also made some nice tackles.

For the Papooses, Reed was a tower of strength in hauling down opposing line plunges, while McIntosh and Gustafson bore the brunt of Newberry offensive play.

The line-ups:

LE—Caldwell		Thomas
LT—Hipp		Jones
LG—Moore		Abrams
C—Cox		Reed
RG—Jaillet		Dreher
RT—Peterson		Entwhistle
RE—Burns		Gray

THE KAMPUS KEYHOLE

— By —
PRESTON CHARLES

The writer of this column has received a complaint about changing the name of this feature from "The Wind Bag" to "The Kampus Keyhole." All readers are urged to give the author their ideas on the question of which one to use. Or, if anyone has a better name than either of these it will be used, and the originator given due credit therefor.

A rather interesting and clever practical joke was staged last Tuesday night. This is the way it works:

A freshman, or bo-rat, is sitting in his room after supper quietly studying, or otherwise minding his own business. Suddenly the quiet of the evening is interrupted. A man rushes in the room, breathless, slams the door hastily, pulls a flask out of his hip pocket and cries in a hoarse whisper, "My God, tell me—quick, where can I hide this? A student councilman's coming after me!" He glances around frantically, with fear written on his pale countenance. He quickly runs into the bedroom, deposits the flask under the bed, unbeknownst to his host, and rushes out the other door.

Before the astonished recipient of the unexpected visit can do anything about it a student councilman walks in. "Have you seen anybody come through here with some liquor?" he quizzes. Not wishing to be forced in as a witness, the student answers in the negative.

The councilman gazes skeptically around the room to see if there are any signs of the hunted one. He does not find his man, but, in looking under the bed his exulting eyes fasten upon a flask containing a brown liquid. "Ah!" he says, smacking his lips, "another case for the council!" He smells the contents of the flask, by way of clinching the case. "Yep, that's it. Judd Hall will have one empty seat for the next two weeks."

He confronts the horrified young man with the incriminating evidence. The accused pleads his utter innocense and breaks down with the tale of a student running through his room. But, alas, it is too late to blame anyone else; evidence is evidence. The poor victim of circumstances begs the officer to accept his story; but, no, his previous version contradicts the new one. Finally the councilman tells him to meet with the student government officers the very next morning. In desperation the poor victim bursts into tears and makes a last heart-rending appeal, but still his accuser is adamant.

At this point a laughing group of students walk in, and the joke is explained to him. With shaken nerves and a sense of relief he goes on with his studies, if he is able.

This joke (?) was actually pulled off eight or ten times on the above-mentioned night, to the great amusement of a few gayer members of our student body. It is said that several nervous systems were wrecked beyond repair as a result of the escapade.

Another incident of the same kind happened two or three years ago at this institution. A student council representative told a man whom he knew had been on a wild orgy the night before that he was wanted at a meeting of that august body. The victim very disobligingly tried to beat the council to it, however. When the perpetrator of this joke returned ten minutes later for the big laugh, he found the defendant with his trunk packed ready to embark for home.

While we are speaking of violations of student government rules, another story might bear repetition. The same man mentioned above was well known for "riding" on tests and examinations. On the last examination he stood at P. C. he carried with him an extra examination book filled with answers to every possible question. The exam went off in a very satisfactory manner for the man here concerned. In one particular, however, he pulled what might be called a "faux pas." He handed in the wrong examination book.

It is not known whether P. C. is unusual in the number of slang expressions originated on the campus, but there are at any rate a great many very interesting ones. For instance we have the word "smuck." The meaning of this word is rather indefinite. Suffice it to say that "smuck" indicates almost any type of girl, from attractive to ugly, according to the individual's own interpretation.

Another much used phrase is "Joe Purvis." Whenever a person wishes to convey the idea of superhuman strength and athletic ability, he uses this name.

The origin of this novel expression is in the ability of Joe Purvis, P. C.'s famous athlete. Of course every student here has heard at least a few of the tales about this wonder of strength and power. One of the best ones goes like this: It was in the last quarter of a game with another prominent South Carolina college. With Joe Purvis, P. C.'s star full back, on the side lines with a broken ankle, the score was 7 to 6 against the dear old alma mater. But Joe Purvis would not allow a small thing like a broken ankle to keep him out of the fray. After a touching plea to the coach he was finally allowed to go in the game, with the ball on Presbyterian's 15-yard marker.

With only forty seconds to play before the final whistle, Purvis backed up ten yards behind the line of scrimmage. The ball spun back from center into the anxious hands of another back kneeling on the ground near the great athlete, who intended place-kicking the ball over the goal-posts 65 yards away. Just at this moment, however, an opposing lineman broke through and ran directly in front of the ball. P. C. supporters groaned, as they saw their hopes dashed. But the great Purvis was equal to any occasion. Quick as a flash he swung his powerful foot. At the same moment the invader dived for the oval. Rising from the athlete's toe, the ball met the unfortunate player just below the ribs. In a few seconds he was sailing through the air, with the ball as a terrific propelling force, and the pigskin landed with its human cargo just over the enemy goal-post. A few seconds later the game was over, with the Calvinists on the long end of a 9 to 7 score.

The following are a few campus superlatives that this journalist made up. The column will be glad to print contributions of this nature that anyone wishes to hand in; that is, if they are not of too personal a nature.

THE PARADE GROUND

Attention of the student body is called again to the contest which will come off in the Blue Stocking in a couple of weeks. As was announced in another edition of this paper, all men in the student body are eligible to write an article pertaining directly or indirectly to Military training and either for or against this training in our colleges today. Two prizes of three dollars each will be given as the winners in the contest—one to the winner among those writing for military and one to the winner of those who write against it. The editorials or whatever they are will be printed in the "Student Opinion" column of the Blue Stocking soon. Some member of the faculty and not any one in the military department will judge the papers handed in, so no one need be afraid of losing his chances of being in the army the rest of his stay at P. C. if he should write against military. Neither should anyone waste any shows on any members of the Blue Stocking staff, for the majority of them won't know a contest is going on at the time of the judging.

Since the last issue of this paper no further developments in the matter of the military ball which might not be held in the near future has been noised. Some discussion by various members of the corps seems to show that the fellows are very willing to attend; but Captain Wysor has made it plain that the initiative for such an undertaking must come from the unit—he is only sponsoring the affair. If some members of the corps will make the plans and submit them to the Captain's approval, however, it is almost certain that this new social feature in connection with the military life at P. C. will be begun. So the gist of the whole matter is in these few words. The ball can be inaugurated if there is enough initiative in the members of the advanced courses to put it over. We believe there is.

It might be opportune to mention here that all men in the unit are just one position higher in the army than they might be if their execution of the duties required by this position are not deemed satisfactory by the P. M. S. & T. at the time of annual makeovers at the end of this semester which is not far hence; so if any man from Major or private wishes to keep his position in this man's army he had better start moving. It isn't any effort on the part of the military department to put a soldier down a few notches—or out of the unit if it gets that bad.

Each year one man from the corps area is sent on a four day trip to the nation's capital for training in matters related to R. O. T. C. training. This man is selected in a basis of scholarship, athletic ability, participation in college activities and any other qualities which go to make up a good student. This year our unit is submitting to the corps area headquarters the name of its Cadet Major, D. W. Boggs. It will be some time before the Boggs will know for sure if he is the man selected; but all members of the student body know that he has a fair chance to be the lucky one and hope that he will be fortunate enough to be that man. And too, this adds one more reason to the new long list that we can give a member of the well; but the grades that will tell the basic course as to way he should strive to get in the advanced course of this unit.

Juniors last week stood tests on the functioning of the almighty weapon, the machine gun, and some of these men proved to be very original in naming and explaining some of these functions, even to the point of attempting to improve the book's explanation. To the non-interested party those fellows may have succeeded very results will be slightly different.

BLUE HOSE WIN FROM ERSKINE FRIDAY, 13 TO 6

Doped To Win By Large Margin, Presbyterians Extended To Earn One-Touchdown Lead In Game At Rock Hill.

The Presbyterian College Blue Stockings rolled over the gamely-fighting Flying Fleet from Erskine college last Friday in the Winthrop stadium, at Rock Hill, before a crowd approaching 3,000. The game started as if it would be pushover for the Calvinists but, after tying the score at 6-all in the first half, the ARPs gritted their teeth, drug their toes in the ground, and hurled back every scoring attempt the Clinton team could muster until the middle of the final quarter. During this period Harry Bolick plunged over center to put P. C. ahead, 13 to 6.

The playing of P. C. was very disappointing to their supporters. Doped to beat Erskine by two or three touchdowns, they found it hard even to chalk up a victory. Erskine, on the other hand, played what is probably their best game this season, and P. C. had plenty of trouble keeping up a sustained attack, with the Seceder linemen holding unusually well.

The Presbyterians started the game off with a rush. The first quarter opened with an exchange of punts, after which Erskine was backed up to her own goal line. Panzarino, being badly rushed, kicked out on his own 38. There the Calvinists started their drive for the first touchdown of the game. Bolick and Higbe made it a first down, and Bolick made another, putting the ball in position for Quarterman to score on the following play. Horne's try for extra point went low.

Here it looked as if Coach Johnson's boys were on the way to an easy victory, but the Flying Fleet was far from a push-over. Striking back with lightning-like swiftness, the Fleet scored a touchdown and tied the score. After the next kickoff, Whitesides carried the ball around end for 20 yards to the P. C. 43. Then on a beautifully- worked forward-lateral, McCown to Gettys, and then a lateral to Leonard, advanced the ball to the Calvinist 17-yard stripe. On the very next play Mann, Erskine's great end, snagged a pass for the touchdown.

The second and third quarters saw drives by P. C. which did not materialize. Once in the third period the Blue Stockings were held inside the 5-yard line for four downs. The quarter ended just afterwards with the ball P. C.'s again near the Fleet's goal line. Three tries at the line were ineffective, but on the fourth Bolick plunged over center for the final touchdown, and made the score, P. C. 13, Erskine 6. The Scarlet Surge made another threat but were unable to put the punch into it.

For the Presbyterians, Bolick and Higbe were outstanding, with Quarterman still showing the improved brand of ball that he has exhibited in the last two or three games. In the Lee Davis was most outstanding on defensive play, with Plowden and

Sigma Upsilon Frat To Be Reorganized

Meeting Called For Wednesday Evening By L. A. McCall, Acting President of Body.

The first meeting this year of Sigma Upsilon, national literary fraternity, is called by the acting president, L. A. McCall, for eight o'clock Wednesday evening in Dr. Kennedy's room.

The main business of the meeting is the election of officers for this year, since Hart Odom, former president of the organization, did not return to school this year. A plan of activity for this year's work will also be discussed. All members are urged to be present at this important meeting.

Blue Key Fraternity Gets New Members

Clark, Seagle, Guerard and Forehand Receive Bids From Local Leadership Group.

Four new men, two juniors and two seniors, have accepted bids from the local chapter of Blue Key, national leadership fraternity. At a meeting held last week the brotherhood passed Bill Clark, Jimmie Seagle, Allen Guerard and Roy Forehand.

There are two bases for selection to Blue Key. One is that of holding major offices. Prospective members who hold high offices on the campus, such as president of the student body, major of the battalion, editor of The Blue Stocking and a few other offices can be elected for merbership by a three-fourths majority. Others who do not come under this qualification must be unanimously acceptable.

The two seniors, Clark and Seagle, are well-known captains of the track and boxing teams, respectively. The other men are juniors. Forehand is a four-letter man in athletics and is on the student council, while Guerard is president of the junior class. The newly elected men hold numerous other honors in various extra-curricular activities.

College Press Has Successful Session

Converse and Wofford Are Joint Hosts To State Gathering. The Blue Stocking Wins Prize.

Approximately 55 delegates from the staffs of college publications of South Carolina attended the annual session of the South Carolina College Press association which met jointly at Converse and Wofford colleges in Spartanburg on Thursday and Friday, November 15 and 16.

An article entitled, "Chapman J. Milling, Presbyterian Alumnus, Makes Name for Self in Field of Poetry," written by W. F. Guess, was awarded first place among features in the news article contest.

A well-organized program was carried out and directed by the officers of the association, who were members of the publication staffs of Converse and Wofford.

J. F. Crook, editor of The Spartanburg Herald, and John Parks, editor of the Raleigh Times, Raleigh, N. C., were the principal speakers at sessions held at Converse on Thursday. The convention convened at Wofford Friday to take up general business of the association. A new scheme to enable college newspapers in the state to share their press material with the members of the association was presented and passed by the convention. This will be operated by The Citadel Bull Dog as a news agency sending out weekly exchanges.

The business session was followed by informal discussions in three separate groups, the newspaper editors, the magazine editors, and the business managers.

The two-day session was concluded at a banquet at the Franklin hotel where awards were announced and prizes presented to the winners. Dr. H. N. Snyder, president of Wofford college, addressed the guests on "The Art of Writing," and Dr. Gwathmey, president of Converse, announced the prizes.

Among the newspapers, The Tiger of Clemson college won first award; The Hornet of Furman university, second, and The Parley Voo of Converse college third.

The Concept of Converse college, won first place in the judging of magazines, The Journal of Winthrop college second, and The Erasthesian of Lander third.

An Invitation

The student body of Presbyterian college is taking this means of extending to their fathers an ardent and sincere welcome to make Homecoming "Dad's Day" as well. To all of you, our fathers, come be with us on this day, and share with us those pleasures that we will experience. We offer to you a football game that will probably be one of the best played in the state this year and, more than that, we offer you a day of comradeship and goodwill with us.

Blue Key Arranges Week-end Program

Banquet and Dance To Be Staged Homecoming Day. Blackwood and Johnston Expected.

Blue Key, national honorary leadership fraternity, has arranged an elaborate program for Homecoming next week-end. A dance and a banquet are the principal attractions they have planned.

Governor Ibra C. Blackwood, retiring governor of South Carolina, has been invited to be the guest of this organization, along with Olin D. Johnston, governor-elect. It is not known for certain whether they will be here, but the two men have planned tentatively to come. They are both scheduled to see the Homecoming game with Wofford and also to speak at the Blue Key banquet Saturday night. Special seats will be reserved for them at the football game that afternoon.

At the game there will also be girl sponsors for each senior on the football squad. Special seats are to be reserved for them along with the seats for Blackwood and Johnston. The seniors on the squad are Harry Bolick, captain, Doyle Boggs, Bob Hamer, Pug Perrin, Woodrow Tisdale, Frank Waldrep, and Paul Yearout. These sponsors will be entertained by Blue Key during the week-end.

Early Saturday evening the Blue Key members will stage a banquet for the senior football men and their sponsors at the Clinton hotel. Blackwood and Johnston are to speak to the assembled group, if their plans for coming do not fall through.

From 9 to 12 Saturday night Blue Key will be host at a Homecoming dance, held at the Lakeside Country club. Shorty MacDonald and his P. C. orchestra will play. A number of bids are now being sent out.

Class Editors Are Named At Meeting

Calvert and Holman Edit Junior Issue, McLees Sophomore. To Select Frosh Leader Later.

At the weekly meeting of The Blue Stocking editorial staff the editors of the class issues were chosen. Henry Calvert and Hugh Holman were elected co-editors of the Junior issue. Both of these men have done splendid work on The Blue Stocking.

Calvert has done work in the editorial department since early in his freshman year. He has contributed much to the editorial page in book reviews, editorials, and science column. He has written various columns and kept up with all the news events on the campus.

Holman was the principal contributor to the sports page during his entire freshman year. He is sports editor on the present staff. His writing has shown splendid talent and if he chooses to do so will probably find a place in the journalistic sports world.

R. C. McLees was elected to the editorship of the Sophomore issue. He has been feature editor of the staff since last year.

The freshman editor is to be chosen at a later date. Several men are now in the making and will have a chance to show what they can do.

Another Alumni Chapter Formed

Rock Hill Organization Perfected With A. F. Marshall As President. Includes Three Counties.

At a meeting in the Andrew Jackson hotel in Rock Hill another chapter of the P. C. Alumni association was formed with Arnold F. Marshall of Rock Hill elected president, Rev. G. H. Estes '20 of York vice president, and John W. Moore '30 of Rock Hill, secretary and treasurer.

This chapter takes in the counties of York, Lancaster, and Chester. This meeting was called and arranged for by Dr. W. R. Wallace, '03, of Chester, who is one of the regional vice presidents of the general Alumni association.

Among those present were: Dr. W. R. Wallace, Rev. J. H. Dulin, Gastonia, N. C., Bob Sims, Billy Simms, Stark Sims, Bob Wylie, "Hoss" White, Johnny Wilson Moore, Jimmy Neely, Julius Garvin, Bill White, Phillip Burns, George Burns, Arnold Marshall, "Doc"

P. C.-WOFFORD GAME WILL BE DAY'S FEATURE

Many Former Students Expected To Be Present. McMillian To Serve Barbecue. Class Reunions Will Be Held.

On Saturday, November 24, alumni and friends of Presbyterian college, along with ardent supporters, plan to gather on this campus for what portends to be the greatest Homecoming day P. C. has ever had.

The main event of the day, of course will be the game on Johnson Field at 2:30 between the P. C. Blue Stockings and the Wofford Terriers. Coach Johson has promised the alumni that "P. C.'s team will be in there fighting as all P. C. teams do;" but he can not assure them of a sure victory since comparative scores seem to indicate that the two teams are fairly evenly matched. There is a possibility then that Wofford may get the breaks of the game and come out at the large end of a close score; but it is certain that the Blue Hose will give their best to furnish the probable 3,000 fans the thrill of their lives, and to renew the pride that the alumni have in their almo mater; so (in either event) a thrilling game is certain.

In order to arouse interest in this Homecoming, Mr. Willard Jones, secretary of the P. C. Alumni Association, has sent pamphlets to all alumni urging them to be present on behalf of Dr. McSween, president of the school, who tells the old men they "are cordially invited to 'COME HOME' Nov. 24th, as their presence will greatly inspire those who serve them in building up their Alma Mater"; and on the behalf of Mr. Spurgeon Sumerel, class of '06 and president of the Alumni Association, who tells his fellows that "it will stimulate their interest in old P. C. if they will come back and visit the old institution—its president, faculty, fine student body, and beautiful campus." Although no definite estimation of the number of old men who will return on that day can be made at present, Mr. Jones feels that he is most conservative in saying that 300 will be back for the day. These, added to the normal crowd which will be attracted by the game, should most certainly fill the stadium on Johnson field which has a seating capacity of 3000.

At 12:30 on this day Coach Lonnie McMillian's barbecue will add another feature to the reception of the alumni. All these old men together with their wives, sons, daughters and guests are

Emmet R. Blake, Ornithologist, Trods Ground Where Few Whites Have Been

Graduate of Presbyterian College, Class of '28, Now With Field Museum, Tells of Experiences Encountered In South America While Searching for Specimens of Wild Life.

By H. W. Calvert

Among that group of Presbyterian College graduates who are up in the world and still going strong is Emmet R. Blake. He is an alumnus of the class of 1928 and is now connected with the Field Museum in Chicago in the ornithology department.

During the years since his graduation, Mr. Blake has been on several expeditions for the Field museum and the National Geographic society. He has attained that desire of many people—to put his feet where few white men have trod. He is even now contemplating spending the winter in the South Seas or some other thrilling section of the globe to collect specimens of natural life.

He returned this summer from his third stay in the wilds of Central and South America. During his six months sojourn in the two Americas he sent approximately 1,000 bird skins, 100 mammals and 200 reptiles which he collected to the museum.

In discussing this trip Mr. Blake said that the question of food would be most serious to anyone lost in the South American wilds. Mosquitoes and other noxious vermin constantly threaten health and comfort. In parts of the remote South American jungles vicious Indians are an actual menace, and dangerous reptiles might occasionally be encountered, but most of the animals are not half so anxious [illegible] to be seen as a bathing beauty supposedly blushing on the beach.

The sheer difficulty of making one's way through the jungle involves the

An Apology

The editors of this issue of The Blue Stocking regret that this has to be a four-page issue. It is in no way due to negligence on the part of the staff, but it is solely due to a sudden deficiency in advertising material.

Wofford Rats Win From Hose, 24 To 6

The Presbyterian college rat team fell before the Wofford Terriers in a game at Spartanburg Friday afternoon. After tying the score in the first quarter and carrying the game into enemy territory during the second period, the little Scarlet Surge was overpowered in the second half and lost by a score of 24 to 6.

The game opened as Wofford drove [illegible] down. On the following kickoff, however, Mishoe, little Presbyterian back, ran 70 yards for a touchdown, tying the score. During the second quarter P. C. kept the ball in Wofford territory most of the time. The half ended with P. C. near the Terriers goal line.

During the second half, however, the Wofford rats came back with a vengeance, however, and scored two touchdowns in the first five minutes, by drives to the goal, featured largely by by passes. The last quarter saw a pass intercepted by the little Terriers which went for a touchdown, making the score 24 to 6.

The P. C. lineup was as follows: Ends, R. Burns, Caldwell; tackles, Hipp, Peterson; guards, Jaeller, Moore; center, Cox; quarter, Isom, Hadden; Patterson, Mishoe; fullback, Stevens.

SHALL WE LOSE IT?

Lately we have fallen into a deep discontent with the college, with the spirit and the life and the work here. But it is an honorable discontent bred in us by devotion, not by captiousness or hostility or by unreasonable impatience to set the world right. We are but anxious and thoughtful friends, not critics. Neither are we cynical nor are we pessimistic. We are but honest lovers of a good thing, our college life. of whose manifest deterioration we are jealous. We would fain keep one of the finest things in our lives from falling short of its best, and believe that by a little more care and candor we can do so.

In former days we have had a spirit of cordiality, friendship, and cooperation among both students and professors. We have been impressed in this atmosphere which pervaded our campus. It is something no other student body in our area has been able to match. This spirit of which we speak is an intangible thing hard to express in mere words. It must be felt to be understood. It has been felt and has not completely passed out of the field of perception yet. But it is fast doing so and will do so unless we find the germs that are killing it and destroy them. We must recreate this atmosphere. It is far too fine a thing to let slide away. We owe it to both our alumni and future students to recapture the spriit which many years of tradition established.

The reasons that are promulgated as contributing to the difference and change in the atmosphere of the campus pertain to various things. No one could really be the source of all the baffling disharmony. Each in its own way contributes its share to the disintegration of the spirit. These factors range from the unappetizing diet of the dining hall to the oversemphasize of the learning element of our undergraduate life. None of the reasons for discontent which permeate the action of the students are exaggerated or unfounded.

It is true that without the correct attitude student cannot to the highest degree concentrate upon his school work and have that pep and enthusiasm necessary toward the smoothworking of student activities. His mental faculties are not in an unconditioned state whereby he can freely attend to all his work in the least time possible so as to have time for a varied college program of relaxation and activity. The depression of the student is but a mirror of the condition of his digestive system and we would wish the image there to be happy and contented.

A condition of having has been added to the usual list of the personal [illegible] Any one [illegible] the purpose of [illegible] and [illegible] to [illegible] under a cover hand and [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] aren't rounding out into the same type [illegible]

Woman Discovered To Be Ninety-Third Chemical Element

Symbol, Wo, Used To Designate New Test Tube Discovery. Affinity For Au.

This element called woman is a member of the human family and it has been assigned the chemical symbol, Wo. The accepted atomic weight is 120, although a number of isotypes have been identified having weights ranging from 95 to 400.

Occurrence: It is abundant in nature; found both free and combined. Usually associated with man. That found in the United States is preferred.

Physical properties: A number of allotropic forms have been observed. Their density, transparency, hardness, color, and boiling and melting points vary within wide limits.

The color exhibited by many specimens is a surface phenomenon and is usually due to more or less closely-adhering powder. It has been found that an unpolished specimen tends to turn green in the presence of a highly polished one. The boiling point of some varieties is quite low, while others are likely to freeze at any moment. All varieties melt under the proper treatment. The taste varies from sweet to very bitter, depending upon environment and treatment.

Chemical properties: Absorbs without discoloring in a number of liquids, the activity being greatly increased by acetic. Absorbs seemingly unlimited quantities of expensive foods, [illegible] this food into fat in accordance with the formula: FAT Many naturally occurring varieties of Wo are highly magnetic. In general the magnetism varies inversely with the density and size, directly with the square of the valence, and inversely with the cube of age. Some [illegible] tend to form anne-irons; others, cat-irons. Their ionic migrations vary widely. All varieties exhibit [illegible] affinity for Au, Ag, and Pt, and [illegible] stones in both chain and ring structures. The valence toward these substances is high and its study is [illegible] by the fact that the [illegible] valency is never satisfied. Many [illegible] and available [illegible] have been [illegible] the latter in the dark [illegible] ent specimens of Wo produces such varied results as to defy the principle of Le Chatelier.

Uses of element: Highly ornamental. Wide application in the arts and domestic sciences. Acts as a positive or negative catalyst in the production of a fever, as the case may be. Useful as a tonic in the alleviation of sickness, low spirits, etc. Efficient as a cleaning agent. Equalizes the distribution of wealth. Is probably the most powerful (income) reducing agent known.

Y. M. C. A. NEWS

The Presbyterian college Y. M. C. A. launches into a new season of deputations on Sunday, Nov. 18. A team of the local "Y" is to present a program before a Lander college group and the First Presbyterian church of Greenwod, on the subject, "Conformity or Transformity."

The representative group is composed of Tom Plaxico, as leader, Jim Collings, Shorty McDonald, Harris Gray, and Dick Wardlaw, as the college quartet, and Colin Hudson and Red Potter as speakers.

The work of deputations has proven to be one of the most attractive and interesting phases of Y. M. C. A. work and it is with anticipation that this new season is opened. Arrangements have been made for several other programs to be presented in nearby schools and churches, but no definite announcement is ready to be made.

The Presbyterian college Y. M. C. A. is to sponsor something unique in the way of benefit to both faculty and students. Beginning on Wednesday, Nov. 21, conferences will be held, simultaneously, by four professors in the four dormitories. These group discussions will start at 10:00 p. m., and will last no longer than a half hour. They will be held in some student's room which is most suitable for the occasion.

Dr. McSween, Prof. Sturgeon, Dr. Davis and Capt. Wysor will compose the first "round robin" of the four dormitory meetings. The topics have not been definitely assigned, but will be chosen from such suggested topics as the following: "What Christ Means To Me," "What Is Worldliness," "A Christ-like War," "What is the Plan of Salvation," "Sex Relations As a Detriment to the Student," "Is Science Replacing Religion?" and many other similar subjects, all of which were suggested by the students.

The schedule of these meetings up until Christmas holidays is as follows: Wednesday, Nov. 21, Smyth dormitory, Prof. Sturgeon; Spencer hall, Dr. McSween; Alumni hall, Capt. Wysor; Laurens dormitory, Dr. Davis. These faculty members will advance around the ring of dormitories until all four have spoken at each group meeting. The meetings will be on the 21st and 27th of November, and the 5th and 12th of December.

The students are advised that these meetings are wholly informal and optional. Anyone may come and no one has to. The faculty members have already been notified of the fact that students may enter and leave at any time during the discussions without any feelings of ill manners. These conferences are chiefly for the purpose of contacting the faculty and students.

The topics of the discussions will be announced and posted later and each student is urged to be ready to present any problems of his, along the pre-announced subject, to the faculty speaker and thereby derive another benefit from the group. The meetings are calculated to benefit both faculty and students inasmuch as the faculty becomes better acquainted with the students and the students are enabled to present their perplexing problems to some capable man.

MILITARY COURTESY TO GOD?

Editor, The Blue Stocking:

A brief, blatant stab at unheeded announcements, a surging flow of "men made P. C.en's" and another chapel is over. Interesting it is that some one noticed and commented on the "broken dyke" type of exit from our place of worship but how tragic that no one has tried to solve this problem — why can't these energetic "gentlemen exit plungers" manage to muster up enough of their driving power to remain standing during the morning prayer?

There is a never-failing, listless, disconcerting, irreverent rustle that sweeps through the sacred chapel in order that some of the weaker (spiritually and physically) "men in the making" may "get situated" for their communion with God. Seats creak, faces bury themselves in palms, eyes fix on belated study, elbows support wary heads, minds wander, hearts shrink, and—souls drift—it appears.

"Bosh!" says the pink-glow Christian, "Can't I be sincere in this chapel prayer and remain seated?" Yes, but do you tell Captain that you are sincere but you would appreciate drill being executed from a sitting position this morning? Do you attempt to approach God in a posiiton slouchier than you would approach your fellow man?

On Monday, following Armistice day, the "Star Spangled Banner" was played and, without exception, each student stood attentively paying homage and reverence to his country which is "of the people, by the people, and for the people." Is country more demanding than God? Certainly the One whom the people are of, whom the people are by, and whom the people are for has a right to expect some similar reverence.

The "tidal-wave departure" may be a reflection on the "where men are made" division of P. C., but is not the jelly fish with cream puff backbone and the wary weary body a deflection from the "Christian institution of a selected three-hundred" division? Brother, can you spare a few minutes in reverent attention and holy communion with the One who controls your eternal minutes? Insert the strong, main ribbed tent pole—ere you collapse! Present arms!—to God.

—R. R.

THE R. O. T. C.

Editor, The Blue Stocking:

Three years in the Reserve Officers' Training Corps are quite enough for me to see that military training gives incalculable values.

In the first place it opens our eyes to a broader outlook. We handle arms and shudder to think that they may some day mangle and destroy others who live and enjoy life as we do. More than ever before we resolve to help for peace to continue. But we realize that longing and statecraft are no surety. We want peace and security.

We must be prepared. A short tussle at mounting a machine gun convinces us that no mass of raw men could become an army of defense on notice of brief days or weeks. A nucleus of officers for instruction and direction is essential. We soon reflect also that munitions, food, clothing, and transportation must be planned for on tremendous scale, for otherwise we could never organize in time. Our outlook is expanded. We want and we know why we want safety.

Aside from the widening of views, military gives the student great personal advantages. Accurate obedience is one thing needed in any field. Experience in responsible leadership is always of first importance. Ability to know and deal squarely with men, above us or below, is a third essential. Hours in the R. O. T. C. are invaluable in reinforcing these qualities of knowing how to obey, knowing how to lead, and knowing men.

Not only does military training broaden our outlook and develop personality as mentioned above, but it also gives a sense of satisfaction as of a Scout in his "Be Prepared." We intend to use our hands and minds in arts of peace and to be ready for a last resort to protect them with all that we are. —H.

A PROTEST

Editor, The Blue Stocking:

It is always poor taste to grumble, but sometimes it is necessary to complain just a little, even at the risk of being a boor.

Most of us are in a rather difficult position. Because of scholarships, or because of the long walk up town, we find it necessary to eat in the dining hall. When we venture to protest at the meals, we are told unceremoniously to "git out." But we can't "git." We have to stay and take it.

The meals are hardly satisfactory. We are served meat, for instance, that is of very poor quality. The ham is so salty that about the only way to eat it is to dilute it with a very large amount of hominy. But there is no point in giving single instances of poor food. The single instances don't matter. It's the monotonous daily occurrence that ruins the appetite, spoils digestion, and offends the senses, that forces us to protest.

It seems that it would be an added attraction to the college, if it were known to outsiders that the dining hall was up to the standard set by the catalogue, and otherwise advertised. It is well known to most of us what type of food is served in every college in the state. Ours is hardly better now, yet we pay much more than most of them.

Lest it should seem that the writer is extremely prejudiced in his article, it might be well to add that he has just returned from one of the typical meals. —Student.

THE HIPPODROME

MOVIES

Monday and Tuesday—Janet Gaynor and Lew Ayres in "Servant's Entrance." This fairy-tale story takes Janet Gaynor to Sweden where, as wealthy Walter Connolly's daughter, she voluntarily hires out as a servant. In her adopted household she meets Lew Ayres, engineering-genius chauffeur, who forgets "Minnie," his speed boat invention, to work along romantic lines. Hearty characterizations by Seigfried Rumann, Louise Dressler; devastating dead-pan humor by Ned Sparks makes this Fox picture very interesting especially if you are an admirer of Miss Gaynor.

Wednesday— "The Lemon Drop Kid"—When Lee Tracy talks fast in race-track lingo, you can understand him. But when he pulls the sob-stuff he's out of line. Some Damon Runyan flavor has been retained in this film about a tout going straight for marriage and a baby, but it's somewhat melo in spots. Helen Mack is charming; William Frawley turns in a prize performance. Baby LeRoy, Minna Gombell and Henry B. Walthall make up the cast of this Paramount film.

Thursday—"The Human Side"—Accurately titled, with rich dialogue, enjoyable from start to finish. Adolphe Menjou is a wandering father with a love for his adorable kids and divorced wife, Doris Kenyon — but a weakness for wealthy women as well. Doris decides to marry stuffed-shirt Reginald Owen, but Adolphe gets together with the kids—Charlotte Henry, Dickie Moore, Dick Winslow, George Ernest—and things happen in this delightful Universal movie.

Friday—"Madame Du Barry"—This elaborate presentation of Madame Du Barry's (Dolores Del Rio) pranks in the French Court speels divertisement plus. King Louis XV, who caters to his favorite's every whim, however unreasonable, is brilliantly portrayed by Reginald Owen. Dolores' beauty is breath-taking. Victor Jory, Osgood Perkins, Veree Teasdale and Anita Louise enrich the cast. This Warner film is indeed a magnificient spectacle.

THE PARADE GROUND

The staff of the Blue Stocking, believing it is speaking for the entire student body, takes this opportunity to express its most sincere appreciation and very hearty congratulations to the members of the senior class who so nobly beore the name and spirit of their Alma Mater this past summer while they were residents of Camp McClellan which is encircled by all the mountain rages and heat waves of 'ole Alabam". The student body has just pride in the R. O. T. C. unit of this school and in its directors since it has won the "general efficiency" cup which you remember is given to that college in the Fourth Corps area whose men show best the knowledge of military life and practice, the spirit of cooperation and initiative, the evidence of true gentlemanness, the truest control on the several directions a bullet may travel after it leaves the muzzle of a 30 calibre rifle, etc., for three times in the last five years. While we don't propose to believe that this cup is to be a permanent possession of our unit, we members of the present junior class will make a reasonable wager that it will be here at least one more year. You refer to this strip one year hence and come tell us we were right.

As announced in another section of this paper, the annual boxing fracas between such amateurs, greenhorns or what not that can be persuaded, defrauded or otherwise induced by the several companies or home guard units of our campus to don the leather mittens and bet their main strength awkwardness or native ability to give and take, that they can enter the boxing ring with another of their kind and still come out whole after three periods of struggle. This classic was not given last year; so all are hoping that there will be entrants from two classes this year instead of one (the freshman) as formerly. A good time is anticipated by all the spectators.

The mid-semester grades for the classes in Military Science were posted this week; but no notable re-marks can be made except that even though there is not the usual percentage of high marks this time there is not the usual griping about them. We hope this will be permanent and that everyone in the unit will cease to believe that he is the victim of circumstances or of the Captain's disfavor; and that he will recognize that he makes out his grades himself during the whole year—the officer (or teacher) merely records them. In case you object to the teacher above, kindly omit it.

Dr. Spencer "Taken For a Ride" One Hallowe'en Night Years Ago

Way back years ago, when Dr. Spencer lived up town and had a barn across the street in front of the house in which Dr. Kellers now lives, there lived a P. C. student body that loved mischief, especially at Hallowe'en or other special days. On this particular Hallowe'en which we are relating to you there seemed to be an extra streak of mischievousness in the crowd. And too, it was the yearly custom to go over to Dr. Spencer's, get his buckboard; bring it to school and place it on the front porch of the Administration Building. No harm was ever done to the buckboard, but there it was on the porch in a very amusing "pose."

Hallowe'en night arrived, and, as usual there were the men all eager to do something that would be funny and at the same time unharmful. And of course the men of the year before had told the present bunch how much fun they had had with Dr. Spencer's buckboard. So now they were only awaiting for the Doctor to go to bed for they did not wish to be caught in their foolishness.

Not very much later a crowd of college boys slipped quietly into Dr. Spencer's barn and slipped out as quietly again, but they had an "addition" to their number, in more ways than one had they but known it.

Silently, but swiftly, the crowd moved toward their destination, because they had not gone very far from the residence from which they obtained the wagon. But as they neared the college they forgot the quietness and caution and began to enumerate the thrills they would get on the following morning when the student body would behold the wagon. In fact everyone anticipated that this would be the most thrilling of all the pranks.

No lights were near to illuminate the scene when suddenly the crowd received the anticipated thrill about eight hours too soon. And what happened? Up till now the boys had failed to notice that there was straw in the bottom of the wagon, but suddenly the straw seemed to rise up, in fact it did rise and with it came Dr. Spencer.

And from his mouth there came these words: "All right, boys, you can take me back home now." We know very well that Dr. Spencer did not have the satisfaction of being hauled back home, but don't you imagine he had enough satisfaction in laughing at the look of surprise on the faces of the boys and at the way they "vamoosed" when the "ghost" "rise" up from the most unexpected place and how they wondered how on earth the good Doctor had managed to find out their plans.

'Y' Program By Football Men

Bolick Presides At Session. Johnson and Boggs Speak, and Others Take Part.

Members of P. C.'s football team presented a program on "Sportsmanship" last Thursday night at the weekly meeting of the Y. M. C. A. Harry Bolick presided and presented as speakers Coach Walter Johnson and Doyle W. Boggs. Special selections were rendered by L. A. McCall and W. W. Tisdale. Mr. Sapp led the devotional.

Coach Johnson related several interesting experiences of his football career and used them as illustrations in bringing out the benefits of sports in developing character. He spoke of "good" and "bad" coaches as necessities of good sportsmanship. The second coach remarked that "football and other sports are great building forces." He closed with the admonition that "whatever you go at, go at it in earnest and, most of all, be honest."

Boggs spoke on "A Comparison of Becoming Life With a Football Game." He enlarged upon several interesting points of similar development in the two fields and discussed five main characteristics which are expedient to both good football and correct living. These were cooperation, unselfishness, courtesy, self-control, and spirit. The speaker closed his talk by citing a timely inspirational poem.

Mr. Sapp, in reading the Scripture from I Corinthians, concerning "Paul's conception of life with a game," made several interesting remarks. He brought out the fact that "Christ meant for us to have fun or he would not have given us a sense of humor, and the ability to appreciate a joke."

The well-rounded program was delightfully varied by a vocal solo by McCall and a piano solo by Tisdale.

Emmet R. Blake, Ornithologist, Trods Ground Where Few Whites Have Been.

matter of getting or transporting food. On an expedition in 1932-33, Mr. Blake said he used four Indians four days to make his way less than five miles. During six months collecting birds, reptiles and mammals in Guatemala he supplemented his supplies with such native delicacies as monkey legs, lizard tails and luscious meat of the agauti, a tailess rat.

But getting this food when needed was the thing, the explorer said. The scientific expeditions of course start out well supplied with canned foods and medicines, but on an expedition in the Rio Negro country he said canoes spill supplies and equipment to the rapids.

In the public mind the danger from Indians is often exaggerated, Mr. Blake said. In Guatemala and along the rivers of South America the present day Indian is generally indifferent, if not friendly, to the white man. For a few cents a day he will cut paths and carry packs, but in the remoter jungles he head hunter and his poisoned arrow are a possibility.

Even in the jungles, the scientist has to hunt the snake instead of the snake hunting the scientist, Mr. Blake declared, notwithstanding the general impression that the jungles are alive with reptiles. Dense vegetation affords the reptile concealment which he generally enjoys. Of tropical American snakes only the deadly bushmaster is known to attack without being molested and it is a fact that a snake can strike only two- thirds of its distance. Mr. Blake said he came near stepping on a segment of a sleeping boa constrictor and had to punch it with a stick to make it show its head.

If the explorer has to go into the water he may be in more danger than on land. The crocodiles of the Orinoco are as nasty as they are painted, though in some of the other rivers they are hardly more vicious than our home-grown alligator. Even a wounded crocodile cannot survive many minutes the attack of the vicious little cannibal fish which is rather common in the Amazon and Orinoco basins. In several instances Mr. Blake came across Indians who had lost a finger in the steel-trap jaws of such fish when a hand on the canoe paddle merely touched the water. The electric eel can deliver his disabling shock to the swimmer, but fortunately this may not often be encountered.

Since his return, Mr. Blake has been acting curator for the museum. He is now working on reports of the collections from Guatemala and other expeditions. These reports will be published by the museum.

At the annual meeting of the American Ornithologists Union the last week in October, Mr. Blake read a fifteen-minute paper on the life history of Derbija Guan, one of the rarest of large birds, which has probably never been seen alive by any other American naturalist or collector.

Mr. Blake has done some splendid work and has had some very interesting experiences. He is excelling in his field of work and we shall probably hear more about him and his achievements in the future. He intends to be through Clinton in the spring and it may be that the student body shall have the privilege of hearing him and seeing some of his movies of wild life.

Note: Some of the information for this article has been taken from an interview with Mr. Blake by The Index-Journal, Greenwood, S. C.

From the college there were present: Dr. McSween, Professor Sturgeon, Coach Johnson, and Willard L. Jones. More interest has been shown in the Alumni association in the past six months than in the last six years. In the past six months chapters have been formed at New York City, Anderson, Columbia, Florence, Spartanburg and Rock Hill.

Anderson Moore was responsible for the promotion of the P. C.-Erskine game at Rock Hill and put it over in a big way. The Rock Hill chapter bids to become a wide awake center of interest for the school in the near future.

Waldrep also showing up well.

The Erskine team displayed good backs also. Panzarino, Whitesides and Leonard did some good ball carrying at times, especially the tiny Whitesides. The defensive play of the line was also outstanding. Mann and Gettys time and again stopped end plays that seemed headed for long gains.

Presbyterian made ten first downs to eight for the Seceders, while the Surge totaled 177 yards in gains from scrimmage as against 133 for Erskine. The Fleet made 34 yards on passes, and at the same time knocked down all heaves the Calvinists attempted.

HOMECOMING DAY HERE NEXT SATURDAY

invited to attend. Coach Lonnie has engaged an expert barbecue chef who will prepare the broth for these grads and since Coach Lonnie is quite a chef himself and is supervising the cooking of this dinner, it is certain that the guests will receive something to tell about when they go back home.

Following this eating, at one-fifteen the new Alumni Association under the leadership of its president, Mr. Spurgeon Sumerel, will hold a short but peppy meeting in which three outstanding alumni will give short and inspiring talks about the work of this association which has been revitalized the past year under the guidance of its president and other equally enthusiastic sons. It is the aim of this meeting to foster interest in the Association and to form new bands of P. C. alumni in the various cities and counties which do not have such an organization onw but which have grads enough for such an organization.

Then during the day, the classes of '14, '19, '24, '29, and '34 under their respective presidents, L. M. Simpson, E. L. Barber, W. J. Cherry, A. F. Marshall, and D. M. McFadden will hold their class reunions. It is reasonably sure that the attendance at these reunions will be unusually good, and that many friendships will be revived by them.

It is true, therefore, that plans have been made for the biggest and greatest Homecoming P. C. has ever had and now the only things lacking are good weather and a fighting Blue Hose team. The latter is almost sure; and the former may be; so it is safe to say that old P. C. will pack up her troubles on that day and really have a perfect day of it—on November 24.

Fair enough—

WE tell you that Chesterfield Cigarettes are made of mild, ripe tobaccos. We've told you about the paper—that it's pure and burns right, without taste or odor.

We have said that Chesterfields are made right. The tobaccos are aged, then blended and cross-blended, and cut into shreds the right width and length to smoke right.

These things are done to make what people want—a cigarette that's milder, a cigarette that tastes better —a cigarette that satisfies.

You can prove what we tell you about Chesterfield. May we ask you to try them —that would seem to be fair enough.

Strictly on their merits

the cigarette that's MILDER
the cigarette that TASTES BETTER

"ALL FOR P. C. P. C. FOR ALL"

VOLUME XVI PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE, CLINTON, S. C., NOVEMBER 24, 1934 NUMBER 10

Home-Coming Day Is Eminent Success

Many Former Students From All Parts of South Return For Day's Festivities.

The home-coming day crowd assembled on the campus Saturday was probably the largest in the history of Presbyterian college. Alumni from all parts of the two Carolinas, Florida, and Georgia took the trail back to their alma mater and overflowed the campus.

The early part of the day was taken up with alumni meetings and the renewing of college friendships. A barbecue dinner was served to the old graduates and former students by Coach Lonnie McMillian, and later in the afternoon the crowd flowed over to Johnson field to watch the homecoming football classic between Wofford and P. C.

The entire stadium presented a gala picture. The stands of the visiting team were decorated with black and gold and those of Presbyterian with garnet and blue. Just inside the fence surrounding the playing field and track were seated the sponsor for each senior member of the football squad and Governor-elect Olin D. Johnston, accompanied by L. A. McCall, varsity manager and president of Blue Key. Governor Johnston is a graduate of Wofford college.

The bands of both Wofford and Presbyterian were present and added much to the success of the afternoon. During the half the Amato brother, of Columbia, entertained the spectators with a tumbling act.

The section reserved for the alumni on the 50-yard line was filled before the two teams took the field, as was the student section. The entire stadium, holding 3,000 people, was well filled. The combination of excellent weather and a hard, close game marked the 1934 home-coming event as one of the most successful in the annals of the college.

Y. M. C. A. Hears Visiting Speaker

Miss McMullen Tells of Mission Work In China. Group Discussions Make Good Beginning.

A special meeting of the college Y. M. C. A. was held Wednesday night. Miss Carrie Lena McMullen, secretary of the Student Volunteer movement in the South Atlanta region, gave an interesting address. Her subject was "Missions."

Miss McMullen emphasized the fact that the work of carrying on in mission fields should be regarded as a distinct privilege rather than merely a perfunctory task, and that a sincere loyalty to Christ must be felt deeply in the heart of every missionary of the gospel. She pointed out that the Christian church is the direct source of all human progress. China, where she has spent the major part of her life, has shown marked progress since the introduction of the Christian religion in that country. There are still vast areas that have not yet been touched by Christian influence, and geographically China offers unlimited possibilities for the spreading of the gospel. In conclusion, Miss McMullen stressed the glorious future which Christianity has in all foreign lands, as well as in America.

In the open discussion group, following her address, Miss McMullen spoke of China as a country of marked transition. Almost any religious or political influence of weight is met with acceptance by large groups of Chinese. She commented that two-thirds of the interior of China is Communistic. When asked of the progress that Christianity is making in China, Miss McMullen stated that the outlook is very encouraging. The frequent conflict of missions and trade interests is an important problem that is confronting the mission worker in China.

Miss McMullen was born in Hangchow, China, the daughter of Presbyterian missionaries. She attended high school at the Shanghai American school, 140 miles from her home. She came to the United States in 1930 and attended Agnes Scott college, from which institution she was graduated last June. In September she was elected to her present office in the Student Volunteer movement. She plans to make a continued study in America, and then return to China to engage in active mission work.

Y. M. C. A. Sponsors Discussion Groups

After the special meeting, one of the most unique events yet sponsored by the present administration of the Y. M. C. A. took place in the different dormitories on the campus. Some eighty boys met with faculty members in the various dormitories for group discussions. The meetings began at 10 P. M. and were to last only 30 minutes; however, the shortest one remained in session over 45 minutes, and one was still going strong at 12 o'clock. One faculty member met with each group and led the informal discussion. The topics discussed were those which had been suggested by the students themselves and which were of interest to all boys on the campus.

Le Club Francaise In Interesting Meet

"La Marseillaise" Is Topic of Recently Organized French Club Program.

Reecntly there was organized upon the Presbyterian college campus "Le Club Francais," devoted to the study of the language, customs and other matters pertaining to the French. Its membership consists principally of advanced French students.

An interesting program on the subject of the national anthem of France was enjoyed by the group on the afternoon of Wednesday, November 20, Miss Annie Lee Jackson, president of the society, presided. Roswell Porter gave a talk on "The Origin of the Marseillaise." "L'Origine de la Marseillaise" by Tom Newland, and "The Life of Rouget de Lisle" by Earl Winn followed. Led by Frank Guess, Le Club Francais sang "La Marseillaise" with true gallic fervor. The program was concluded by a reading, given by J. E. Patrick.

Bergmann Players Give Goldsmith Play

"She Stoops To Conquer," the immortal comedy of Oliver Goldsmith, will be presented at 9 a. m., Monday on the stage of the Florida Street school. A special arrangement renders the low admission, fifteen cents for college students, possible. The Bergmann Players, who are to present the play, form a nationally known company. Many excellent notices have been given them by dramatic critics in Northern newspapers, and a fine performance is expected.

Dr. S. C. Hays Heads P. C. Alumni Group

Clinton Surgeon Elected At Session Held Here Saturday. McSween Tells of Progress.

The Presbyterian College Alumni association had what was probably its largest gathering in history on Homecoming day Saturday. A large number of old P. C. men with their wives or dates were here for the day. The college entertained the former students with a barbecue dinner served under the trees between Laurens dormitory and Judd dining hall. Shortly afterward the alumni group held its annual meeting in the auditorium.

A number of important matters occupied the attention of the association during its brief meeting. The report of the steering committee, headed by William P. Jacobs, of Clinton, was adopted. A copy of the report is to be sent to all members of the body.

The committee on nomination of new officers for the association read its report. The following men were nominated and elected: President, Dr. S. C. Hays, of Clinton; vice-president, Johnny Wilson Moore, of Rock Hill; secretary-treasurer, Willard Jones, of Clinton; alumni trustee, J. M. Wilson, of Fayetteville, N. C.

The report on by-laws was postponed until another meeting, so the members could hear Dr. McSween.

In his talk the president of the college welcomed the men, and urged them to be present every year at this event. He told of the problems confronting the college three or four years ago, such as the adverse financial condition, indifference of alumni, and reduced student body. He showed these obstacles largely had been relieved and pointed to the present condition of the college, with an incresed student body, a large and active alumni association, and good prospects for wiping out the debt.

The following alumni were among the large grop of former students who attended the barbecue and meeting:

J. P. Young, '26; F. M. Hart, '29; J. W. Dillard, '34; B. A. Robinson, '34; S. A. Abrams, '33; W. E. Robinson, '27; W. H. Weldon, '29; H. P. J. L'Heureux, '28; M. P. Sherard, '31; H. M. Byrd, '14; J. W. Combs, '34; Jimmy Green, '31; Bob Gillespie, '32; R. S. Latimer, '29; L. Norton, '24; H. D. Montgomery, '29; Bob Wylie, '33; J. M. Davis, '29; C. M. Lawson, '34; W. R. Anderson, '23; W. E. Johnson, '30; H. A. Copeland, '32; Dr. R. E. Abell, '02; O'Dell Bankhead, '30; Dr. W. R. Wallace, '03; L. L. Dunlap, '29; Fred R. Stallworth, '31; A. W. Brice, '16; Miss Annie Lou Norman, '16; W. P. Jacobs, '14; Ross Rucker, '25; Dr. D. C. Alford, '21; Dr. Herbert Blake, '28; John Osman, '33; J .H. Wilson, '34; Jack Martin, '30.

There were many other former students who arrived too late or did not attend the barbecue and alumni meeting.

PRESBYTERIAN AND WOFFORD IN THRILLING 7-7 DEADLOCK

Beautiful Long Pass, Gault To Abercrombie, Paves Way For Terriers' Score Early In Second Quarter. Heave From Perrin To Quaterman Over Goal Scores for Blue Stockings In Fourth Stanza. Brilliant Contest Was Feature of Home-Coming Day.

A wildly charging and passing Presbyterian team, playing before a home-coming day crowd of 3,000, came from behind in the final quarter of a thrilling game with Wofford on Johnson field Saturday, to tie the score 7 to 7.

The Calvinists opened the game with a passing attack that took them from mid-field to the Wofford 5-yard line. With fourth down and five to go for a touchdown, Perrin faded back and tossed a short pass to Quarterman who was just over the goal line. The pass was completed but an official ruled that Quarterman was standing outside when the catch was made.

This unfortunate incident seemed to take the spirit out of the local team and it was apparent to the spectators that something was lacking from their drive during the remainder of the quarter.

The Wofford tally came in the second period. Starting a drive from their own 41-yard line, the Methodists gained four yards through the line in two tries, and then came the most spectacular pass of the afternoon. Gault, versatile Wofford backfield ace, heaved a long one to Abercrombie, who was stopped by Perrin after a net gain of 35 yards. This put the oval deep in P. C. territory.

With the ball on the 16-yard marker, Gault smashed tackle for two yards. Then a pass, Gault to Hendley, was incomplete, and on the next play, with third down and eight to go, Anderson stumbled while attempting to pass, but P. C. was offside and penalized five yards. Again P. C. was offside, putting the ball on the five-yard line with first down. A thrust at right guard netted two yards. On the second down Gault smashed through the left side of the line for the touchdown. Anderson's try for extra point sailed driectly between the uprights and the score stood: Wofford 7, P. C. 0.

Another Wofford threat in the same quarter began when Anderson intercepted a Hose pass and sprinted from his own 44 to the P. C. 36-yard line. In two plays the Methodists advanced the ball to the 25-yard stripe for fist and ten. Then, as though shot from a rifle, "Shorty" Horne smashed into the ball carrier on the next play, causing him to fumble, and recovered on his own 35.

After three tries had failed to net a first down, Wilbanks dropped back to punt but fumbled a bad pass from center and Abercrombie recovered for Wofford. Once again the Methodists were inside the Hose 30-yard line. However, the Calvinist line stiffened and held for downs. The half ended shortly afterwards.

On the opening kick-off in the second half Robbie Higbe snatched the ball out of the air and squirmed 10 yards down the field. Two costly fumbles gave Wofford the ball on the P. C. 39-yard line, but the Methodists seemed unable to make appreciable gains. During the entire third quarter, and throughout the game as well, the line plunging of Bolick and the defensive work of the stocky fullback were highlights of the struggle.

The Presbyterian tally came early in the fourth quarter. Higbe, although injured, writhed through Wofford tacklers for 17 yards. This put the ball on the 16-yard stripe with first down. Bolick went over guard for a yard. On second down, with the promised land 15 yards away, Perrin shot a pass to Quarterman who was across the goal. The P. C. stands went wild as the official raised him arms in the touchdown signal.

Wofford now led by one point. Horne was pulled out of the line for a placement try for extra point. The air was charged with suspense as the foot of the "Little Giant" swung forward. An instant later the ball was over the cross-bar and the game was deadlocked, 7 to 7.

Presbyterian thrilled once more in the closing minutes of the battle as the garnet and blue team smashed down to the Wofford six-yard line. There the Methodists seemed determined to hold and on fourth down

Blue Key Stages Banquet, Dance

Leadership Fraternity On Campus Entertains Its New Men, Alumni and Football Seniors.

The Blue Key honorary leadership fraternity entertained its new men and the senior members of the football team at a banquet Saturday evening, shortly before the Bley Key dance. Each man present brought a date.

Doyle Boggs made a short speech of welcome to the new men in the society. Harry Bolick, captain of the football team, expressed gratitude to Blue Key for its invitation to the senior football men. L. A. McCall, president of the group, then made a welcoming address to the Blue Key alumni who also attended.

Six Men Added To I. R. C. Membership

Identification of Personalities In Recent News Events Used As Basis For Examination.

Eleven men took the competitive examination for membership in the International Relations club at Presbyterian college. The examination was given by Dean M. W. Brown at the request of the club. In its first firm the exam consisted of 25 identifications taken mainly from recent issues of "Time," a news magazine. Two contestants were dismayed and dropped out, accompanied by murmurs such as "There is one gone," and "He had some sense."

On the count it was found that answers ranged from 23 correct to 5 correct. The best answer was an identification of Magda Lupescu, red-haired mistress of Carol II of Romania, as "Minister of Personal Affairs for Carol of Romania."

When the papers were checked it was found that two men were clearly in the club, Campbell and A. K. Darby. Four other tied or come within one-half point of each other. This necessitated a second trial between these four contestants. Ten more names were added and the result was that Lynn Jones emerged victor. A third contest was held which resulted in a tie between Tiller, McLees, and Patton. It was decided to offer bids to these three and exceed the limit of 21 members for the club.

CAPTAIN WYSOR TRACES EVOLUTION FROM MATCH LOCK TO "MODEL 1902 — SIR"

According to some members of the sophomore class to whom the dissection of the automatic rifle is particularly difficult, there is a crying need for enlightenment as to the inventor of the first gun. They want to dance on his grave. Captain Wysor advances the probability that the first gun was invented in the Orient, perhaps in China, where bamboo, hollowed out, might have been used for rifle barrels. However, a German monk, Berthoid Schwartz, is credited by some authorities with the invention. He is also favored above Friar Roger Bacon as the inventor of gun-powder, although it seems certain that in the Orient it was in use a century earlier than 1320, the more or less arbitrary date set upon his discovery.

The following is an excerpt from notes of Captain Wysor:

"In the order of their invention we have the 'Match Lock,' which required the gunner to carry a lighted match or firebrand to light the powder in the priming pan. The 'Wheel Lock,' an improvement on the 'Match Lock,' had a steel or iron wheel which was controlled by a strong spring. Pyrites were stuck into the rim of the wheel which, stricking against the pan, ignited the powder. The 'Flint Lock' utilized a piece of flint in the hammer itself to strike sparks into the priming pan, setting off the charge. The 'Percussion Cap' was the biggest improvement of all. A hollow nipple led from the powder chamber to the outside of the gun. On this nipple fitted a cap, which on being struck by the hammer, ignited the powder charge in the barrel. Next came the type of cartridge now in use.

"The origin of 'bore,' or 'gauge,' as indicating the size of the cylindrical cavity in gun barrels, arose from the fact that a round ball was generally in use, and the size of the hole was known by the number of balls per pound that the gun would shoot. A ten-ball gun would shoot balls, ten of which would weigh one pound. The evolution from 'ball' to 'bore' was easy.

"The first breech-loading rifle that we have any record of as being used in this country was introduced by the troops of a Major Ferguson, of the British army, at the battle of Kings mountain on October 7th, 1780. Major Ferguson invented this rifle and received permission to arm his troops with them. Collectors know of only one of these rifles in existence today. This gun, however, was not the FIRST breech-loader. An Englishman by the name of Willmon had invented one about 1689. Breech-loaders did not come into general use until late in the Civil war.

"The ancestor of the present Springfield was born in the Springfield armory sometime diurng the year 1795. The present Springfield rifle, now in use by the army, saw the light of day about 1902, and for the last thirty-three years has held its own against all rivals. Without improvements it stands as the best military rifle in the world.

"A great many people wonder why automatic rifles are not used by the military. When we can find some way to keep the rifleman supplied with ammunition, and to prevent him from wasting his shots, then we will go to the automatic."

Song For Thanksgiving

By Nancy Byrd Turner

So chill the first Thanksgiving came,
That they who kneeled on earth and stone
To thank the Lord in freedom's name
Were well-nigh frozen to the bone.
Peril was near, and midnight fear,
With desolate wind about the door,
But courage lit a candle flame
That warmed them to the core —

Candle that burned so staunch, so strong,
Courage that dared so dark a way
They light the centuries, clear and strong,
On each Thanksgiving Day!

So bare the first Thanksgiving fell
That, counting all the scanty yield,
They who had sowed and reaped could tell
Their thanks for scarcely one good field;
Yet, strangers in a lonely land,
They thanked God for their harvesting,
And dreamed a dauntless dream, and planned
New sowing for the spring.

For candlelight no wind could shake,
For sowing rooted far and near,
For men and dreams like these we make Thanksgiving every year!

—American Boy.

Censorship of the College Press

Editors of some nine South Carolina college newspapers met at the recent press convention for an informal discussion of the problems which they incur in their work. The most noteworthy result of their discussions was a declaration to fight wholeheartedly against all censorship of college newspapers. These college editors were motivated by sincerity of purpose. They have the best interests of their separate schools at heart. But beyond that they have at heart the best interests of the various papers which they direct. And, believing that their papers cannot attain the maximum of value and service while they are restricted, they are uniting their efforts against censorship.

Censorship of newspapers in a few South Carolina colleges is of a very deadening type. Anything slightly critical of the administration and the faculty is deleted. In some instances it goes so far as to strike out all material not strictly conventional, traditional, and orthodox. This very easily discourages individuality and initiative. It prevents the students from developing the ability to express their own opinions. However, worthless these opinions may be considered, their constant expression in writing is bound to be in some measure beneficial to the individual. A great deal of censorship appears to be a defense mechanism. It may arise, however, from the traditional sense of superiority, of the always current opinion that, "The younger generation are fools; they must be ruled with an iron hand." It often comes, too, from the faculty's fear of having their inflated dignity punctured by the "needle point" jibes of students—thrusts from which their positions do not allow them to retaliate.

The staffs of college newspapers should be trusted by the administrations. Left to their own devices, we believe that they have enough "taste" and good sense not to convert their publications into scandal sheets. This does not mean that they would not criticize. To serve any definite purpose they must of necessity criticize. But college papers can very often offer constructive criticism in presenting the student's point of view.

The Blue Stocking has no censorship to deal with; its publication is entirely free. This results from a wise administration. And we of The Blue Stocking staff sympathize with those college papers that are confined within the narrow bounds of strict censorship. As a member of the South Carolina College Press Association we wish this to be a statement of our fidelity to a worthy cause.

Take Our Advice—and Make "A's"

Are you an introvert? Are you one of those individuals who, through timidness and reserve, do not get those B's and A's in the class-room? Why, of course you are.

Recent investigations into ten of the largest universities in the country have disclosed the astounding fact, that even though students sometimes know their lesson perfectly, they do not get an A on the course because they lack that indefinite something, that polished touch. It has been disclosed that an entirely new school of thought is springing up in the leading educational centers. It, if it can be classified, is a system of classroom technique. To use the language of the layman, it is a course of instruction in the gentle art of dingle-plucking.

For your help and your room-mate's, we have compiled a simple list of "do's" and "don'ts."

1. Remove shoes and go to sleep in class.
2. Sneer and hurl jeers when professor tells favorite joke.
3. Argue with professor on technicalities, and offer to prove it by the book.
4. Call attention of class to any grammatical error that professor might happen to make, and tell professor that your French teacher doesn't pronounce "Richlieu" the same way that he does.
5. Criticise manner in which professor's tie is tied.
6. Tell professor what he had for breakfast that morning, by the spots on his vest.

The Editorial "We"

It is about time something was done about it. Here is an editorial:

"WE have fulfilled a life-long ambition. Taking advantage of the absence of Willard Jones during a recent football game, WE sneaked into the library. Intimidating the assistant, We spent a joyous quarter of an hour jumping backward and forward with a mighty clump of boots, over the sacred bulwark from behind which it is the librarian's custom to issue periodically with menacing forefinger and sibilant hiss."

The use of WE conveys the impression of hordes and hordes of repressed students leaping, with all the carefree abandon of the imaginary sheep in the insomnia remedy, over the desk. The reader feels inferior, and slighted. He has been left out of the fun.

If it had been written, "I have fulfilled a life-long ambition . . . etc.," the reader would feel sympathetic, and perhaps an imitative urge. "I" would mold the public's mind.

An editor manuevers a ponderous "WE" into position with the same care and awkwardness of a King Khafra personally directing the placing of a stone in his pyramid. It is just as unwieldy.

However, WE think that an editorial "WE" can be strictly accurate in some cases. Certainly, it seems unbelievable that one man could write such silly drivel as this without collaboration.

Student Opinion

ISN'T CLINTON INTERESTED?

Editor, The Blue Stocking:

Presbyterian College is the greatest asset that Clinton possesses. For this reason we feel that the people of Clinton should show more interest in our school and its activities — should attend our athletic contests and support our local organizations. Why did we go to Rock Hill to play Erskine? To see Winthrop and its beauties? Of course not. We were forced to play in Rock Hill because we knew that Clinton would not support us—would not close her doors even for a few minutes to come out and fight with the home team. Why do we not receive more invitations from the local townfolk to visit in their homes and share their joys and sorrows? Is it that we are not worthy? We feel that we do our best to aid the people of Clinton by trading with their merchants, working in their churches, lending our talents to the improvement of their undertakings. However, we feel that they should take a like interest in us. More and more the town is devoting itself to its own interests, alienating itself from the college. Of course, we can exist without vital contact with the people of the town, but that would be a selfish, unfair existence. We wish to be a part of Clinton, but we also wish Clinton to be a part of us.

ABOLISH THE R. O. T. C.

(Editor's Note:—The following letter is one of a series being written by P. C. students on any phase for or against R. O. T. C. training. Prizes are offered for the best letters).

Editor, The Blue Stocking:

The R. O. T. C. is entirely superfluous as a potent factor in our national defense. It affords to a college man no benefits which he could not otherwise receive from the various phases of his college life. It does not develop a man's personality or broaden his outlook. All in all, the R. O. T. C. is more detrimental than beneficial.

That the R. O. T. C. is indispensable to national defense and preparation for war is the salient point in the arguments of those who would preserve this organization. Anyone who reasons thus is obviously not familiar with the National Defense Act of 1916 and the revisions of 1920. This Act provides for a professional standing army of sufficient strength to meet the needs of peace both at home and in our overseas possessions. This army is strong enough to cope with minor emergencies; it furnishes instructors for civilians; finally and most important of all, it forms the skeleton organization or nucleus around which the civilians can be mobilized in the shortest possible time in case of a major emergency — supposedly the very purpose for which the R. O. T. C. was formed. The National Guard of half a million men and the Citizens' Military Training Camps are more important in the scheme of national defense than is the R. O. T. C. The territorial and industrial organization of this nation lends still greater force to the fact that the United States has, without regard for he R. O. T. C., made ample provision for any major emergency which may arise.

Miliary training offers no exclusive advantages. Leadership is important, but it is quickly seen that the leader on the drill field is almost invariably the man who has always led, both in high school and college, both on the athletic field and in student affairs. The R. O. T. C., then, does not make leaders: it merely gives to those who have already achieved leadership another unnecessary means of displaying their abilities. Accurate obedience is taught and learned in the home, in the classroom, in the realm of play—military training offers nothing new in this respect. To learn men and to learn to deal with them are the greatest advantages of dormitory life — how can the R. O. T. C. better these associations?

Do we handle arms and there secure a broader outlook on life? N. Recall the horrors of the European war. The men engaged therein had become mere machines — beasts without souls. Why else would they murder eight million souls and wound twenty-two million people? That is the tragic result of military training. But what is the broader outlook?

Finally, the R. O. T. C. is more detrimental than otherwise. The many hours wasted in drill could be spent in profitable study, research, play. Athletics and sports offer ample opportunity for physical development, whereas the military drill may ever be injurious—any exercise taken immediately after a meal is harmful, as any instructed physician will affirm. Too often radiant personalities subjected to the rigidity of military training are so obscured and down-trodden that they never fully recover. Is not this alone enough to condemn the R. O. T. C.? —S.

QUESTIONS

Editor, The Blue Stocking:

1. Why has the faculty, of late, taken such an intense interest in the affairs of the student body?
2. Where does all of the money we pay for meals in the dining hall go to? In the catalog it is expressly stated that the dining hall was not run for profit. Is that statement to be included in the next catalog?
3. Why is Governor Blackwood not to be given an official welcome by the college?
4. What is that peculiar influence about Presbyterian college that is supposed to "Make Men"?
5. Why is it that we still maintain the pretense of a student government?
6. Where has the "Old P. C. Spirit," that really used to exist, gone?
7. Is the faculty ruling the student body, or is the faculty in its turn being ruled? If so, by whom?
8. If the writer of this article made statements instead of asking questions, would he be far wrong? Would there be much chance of his rmeaining in school for the remainder of the term, or would there be much use of his remaining? —Student.

THE STRANGE CASE OF AARON FISHFIGHT
or
The Scarlet Enigma That Rocked Five States

Early on the morning of August 8, 1889, Aaron Fishfight jumped out of his bed beating his strong chest with healthful vibrancy, and lashing out a wicked left on his wife's chin, he bit her ear playfully, and strode out into the cold morning fog. This was the last that was ever seen or heard of Aaron Fishfight — well, for a while, anyway.

Mrs. Fishfight, when questioned closely by the police, gave evasive answers, and subsequently delighted all, by snatching the canary cage and leaping from the third story window to the ground below. She hit the ground running, and paused only long enough to grab a cigarette butt from the milk-man's hand. The last they saw of her she skated around the corner puffing away dexterously.

But to get back to my story of Aaron's strange disappearance. The police, a trifle embarrassed at the eerie flavor of the whole case, in desperation threw out a drag-net over five states. Never once did these efficient fighting forces of humanity lessen the terrific pressure in the man-hunt of the century! Slowly but surely the prey was being engulfed; a web of circumstantial evidence was being spun—because, well, gee whiz, crime just doesn't pay, fellows!

The morning of the 18th dawned bright and early. All morning the dusty little motorcade beat its way along South Carolina roads. Suddenly at 2:00 o'clock the officers of the law struck! Justice had triumphed again!

Aaron Fishfight had been found! Mr. Fishfight was at the moment refereeing a football game between Presbyterian college and their traditional foes. He snarled at first, and beat at his captives futilely with his little fists, but subsequently collapsed, and wailing loudly, told all. His statements were for the most part incoherent, but The Blue Stocking's ace reporter managed to compile a few of them.

Fishfight: "Oh, hello!"
Police: "Hey, yourself!"
Fishfight: "Do the ministerial students meet tonight or tomorrow night?"
Police: "Tomorrow night."
Fishfight: "Oh, I'm so happy, so happy. Let me referee some more. I've been here so long, so long. I love this gridiron. Football players dashing by me, running, shouting, laughing, life, love, Huey Long—"

The End.

Little Facts You Really Ought To Know

1. Personal nomination for the most miserable man in the world: Graham MacNamee. He has to laugh at Ed Wynn's jokes.
2. South Carolina is called the iodine center, but 90 per cent of the world's supply is produced in Chile.
3. Horatio Alger, the author of so many stories about local-boys-who-made-good-in-the-big-city, died in poverty.
4. No matter what color soap you use (red, green, yellow, pink), the suds are always white.
5. A ton of pure gold is worth 3602.-799.21, while Jean Harlow makes only a few thousands a week.

MOVIES

Monday and Tuesday:—Gary Cooper, Carole Lombard, and Shirley Temple in "Now and Forever." How that greatest of all past and present child stars, Shirley Temple, keeps on topping every previous performance is amazing. Her natural charm is contagious. Gary is a life-loving vagabond adventurer, unhampered by scruples about honesty. Shirley is his motherless tot, and Carol Lombard is the woman who can't help loving him in spite of his faults. Sir Guy Standing and Charlotte Granville turn in believable characterizations. A picture well worth seeing.

Wednesday: — "Ladies Should Listen." Delightfully adult society comedy, with Cary Grant revealing himself as a "Farceur" of distinction in the role of a Parisian bachelor. Telephone operator Frances Drake makes Cary her responsibility and, by listening-in, protects him from the machinations of two designing women.

Thursday: — Wheeler and Woolsey in "Cockeyed Cavaliers." This team is more hilarious than ever, with an elaborate production to back up their insanities. There is a sprinkling of double entendres, but not enough to keep away old fogies. The plot is unimportant. Locale is Merrie old England, with costumes, another big bad wolf song, and "I Want To Dilly-Dally in the Valley With You," a sure hit.

Friday: — "The World Moves On." Madeleine Carrol, English beauty, begins her American film career inauspiciously in this picture. A dozen threads of plot are picked up and broken in this prolonged opus—another "Cavalcade." Franchot Tone and Dudley Digges turn in suave performances in this fair film.

Saturday:—"Crimson Romance." If you want to see a war story, you'll like this one, for it is all action, with some good flying and air combat scenes. Ben Lyon (an American) and idealistic James Bush (a German) join the air corps of the German army, and both fall in love with ambulance driver Sari Maritza.

THE PARADE GROUND

Now that the sophomores who felt so inclined have had their night hike and enjoyed Captain Blanton's delicious steaks, and since the proposed military ball has apparently been let drop, the chief attraction of the near future is the long-awaited R. O. T. C. boxing classic. Some of our bloodthirsty freshmen can hardly wait until the first of December to show their ability in the ring. It is reported that several freshmen have been taking secret workouts lately in the boxing room getting in trim for the coming bouts with an eye to the championship of their weight.

As a super extra special this year, there is to be a grudge fight between "Battling" Green and "Newberry Kid" Norton. The seconds have not been chosen as yet but everything is under way to make this the fight of the venturay. The entire student body is looking forward with great interest to this glamorous event.

Surprises and disappointments are now in order since the first-class privates have been appointed, or at least recommended to the P. M. S. and T. Don't give up yet, you disappointed ones, the appointed ones may falter.

The military department has decided to spare most of their men from the rigors of company football so that they will be ready and waiting for boxing. However, a hand-picked team —the all-R. O. T. C.—will be sent into the field against their old enemies—the Homeguard. Such old stars as Will Wallace, Buchan, Yow, Potter, McCaskill, Williams and Seagle will have a chance to star again.

Monday and Tuesday the company captains will have a chance to demonstrate their quick thinking ability because company drill will be the order of the day.

Sargeant says that there have been several promising men to try out for the rifle team. He hopes to have finished his eliminations, and to have picked out his varsity team by December 5th. No statement was made as to whether there would be matches with the co-ed rifle team or not.

And don't forget the regular uniform inspection on Tuesday. Remember that these inspections are good chances to bring up those low military grades.

the Wellman Process does this —
...it gives the tobacco an extra flavor and aroma

...in a common-sense package — 10c

In the manufacture of Granger Rough Cut Pipe Tobacco the Wellman Process is used.

The Wellman Process is different from any other process or method and we believe it gives more enjoyment to pipe smokers.

...it gives the tobacco an extra flavor and aroma
...it makes the tobacco act right in a pipe—burn slower and smoke cooler
...it makes the tobacco milder
...it leaves a clean dry ash —no soggy residue or heel in the pipe bowl

HIGH-LIGHTS OF THE SOPHOMORE CLASS

ALTHOUGH the failure of many of the old gang to return this year left blanks in the class of '37, some of these places have been filled by men from other schools who are proving their worth to their new alma mater. Degner and Luey, from the University of Wisconsin, seem to have traveled the farthest to take part in our college life this year. Newland, from the University of Richmond, and J. W. Steen-[illegible], from Marshall college, are also among the new men. Paul Van Sant hails from Reinhardt college in Georgia. We have two men, Gaspie and Tuten, from our old football rival, The Citadel. It may be interesting to note that these new men are among the most active and wide-awake members of the class. These men have brought new ideas to the campus, and I believe that they will reflect credit on themselves and on the college. We welcome them and wish them success in their work at P. C. It would not be right to leave out those who were out of school last year. These men often have the most interesting experiences while out of school. Kitchens has been a globe-trotter during his absence, traveling through Central America.

Sixty-seven of our men are in "this man's army." From all indications, it seems that there is a slight possibility of them learning something of the character of the rifle and other basic fundamentals.

Of the eighty-five members of the class, there are thirty-four fraternity men.

O. A. Matthews holds the distinction of being the smallest man in height and weight. The real big man is Collings, although Yow still holds the title of being the tallest and of having the largest feet. The average weight of the class is about 137 pounds, and the average height about 70 inches.

I will not disclose the names of the oldest and the youngest, but will add that the ages range between seventeen and twenty-two.

The superlative contest reveals a few of the more promising men:

Most popular—Collings.
Best athlete — Cappelman, Thompson.
Most handsome—Will Wallace.
Ye ladies man—Plunkett.
Hardest on freshmen—Bird.
Biggest gold-brick—Alexander.
Best sport—Shoemaker.
Best all-round — Collings, Shoemaker.
Most studious—C. Steenbergen.
Wittiest—McAlpine.
Most popular co-ed — Sophie Sullivan.
Most journalistic—McLees, Love.
Biggest mouth—Bird.
Laziest—Jones.
Best orator—F. T. Wallace.
Best physique—J. B. Jacobs, Shoemaker.
Most dignified—Chalmers.
Neatest—Plunkett.
Most militaristic—Freeman, Legare.
Most original—Love.
Best business head—Yow.
Best bull sessionist—Buchan.
Best informed—McLees.
Most courteous—Chalmers.
Cutest—McAlpine.
Most literary—McLees, Patrick.

P. C. AND WOFFORD IN THRILLING DEADLOCK

Quarterback Perrin called for a try for field goal. Once again Horne dropped back. This time the kick was wide and with it went Presbyterian's hopes for a victory. Both teams tried a shower of passes in a vain effort to score but the game ended shortly afterward.

For Wofford, Gault and Anderson were especially outstanding in the backfield; and in the line Hendley, Jones, and Abercrombie were towers of strength.

For the Calvinists it is difficult to select individual stars. Certainly Bolick, because of his smashing tactics, and Highe, because he proved his reputation as one of the best broken field runners in the state, are worthy of mention among the backfield luminaries. In the line, it seemed that Horne was in every play. In addition, Waldrep, Yearout, and Boggs did excellent work.

Presbyterian gained 270 yards from scrimmage and made 12 first downs, while Wofford gained 120 yards from scrimmage and made 4 first downs.

The line-up:

Presbyterian		Wofford
LE	Yearout	Hendley
LT	Tisdale	Hoover
LG	Boggs	Quattlebaum
C	Plowden	Parnell
RG	Horne	Jones
RT	Davis	Hardin, G.
RE	Forehand	Abercrombie
QB	Perrin	Anderson
HB	Quarterman	Hawes
HB	Holliday	Gault
FB	Bolick	Williams

such a crowd that all were not able to find places to sit. He spoke on the subject, "Is Science Replacing Religion?" This was followed by a discussion which brought up many issues and heated arguments. Evolution, predestination and other topics were discussed.

In Spencer dormitory, Doctor McSween led the discussion, using as the basis of his talk the subject, "What Christ Means In My Life," showing that Christ is a companion, helper, redeemer, intercessor, saviour, and teacher.

Apparently the entire population of Alumni were present when Dean Brown started a discussion on "The Christian's Part In War," speaking briefly on the machinery for peace, the meaning of a pacifist, what our attitude toward war should be, and other interesting subjects.

Dr. J. H. Davis, in Laurens hall, began a discussion on "The Younger Generation." Among the things discussed were honesty, the value of a college education, love, sex, and other challenging subjects. The clock passed the 12 o'clock mark before the group called things off until another time.

After the Thanksgiving holidays these discussions will be continued each Wednesday night. The same faculty members will shift to different dormitories, but the same subjects will be discussed unless a change of topic is requested by the students.

Bolick Is Winner Of Blocking Trophy

Boxing Tournament Closes Friday Night

Nine Fast Bouts and Free-For-All Make Up Final Card. Good Crowd Witnesses Program.

The finals of the R. O. T. C. boxing tournament were held in the college gymnasium Friday night, following a series of eliminations earlier in the week. Nine bouts were fought.

The band was there early with its stirring marches and pep tunes. A large crowd of outsiders was in attendance, to say nothing of the amount of student attendance.

The fights were all spectacular and fast. From the first fight until the last gong of the final there was nothing but thrills. There was much slugging, skilled and well-placed punches, and knockdowns. There was nothing slow about the fights and the crowd was never in need of yelling "mix it up!"

The first event on the card was a free-for-all among six black boys. This was approved much by the crowd as the six worked each other over in fine fashion. It finally ended with only three in the ring and they looked as though the final bell was a godsend.

The bouts were brought out in the following order:

Bantamweight: This was a fast fight from beginning to end between Dusty Rhodes and Simon Legare. Rhodes had a little edge throughout though Legare's footwork was nice.

Featherweight: This fight between Pretty Boy Wallace and Baby Face Boggs was plenty fast and there was plenty of slugging. Wallace finally got the best of it and won by a few points.

Lightweight: K. O. Buchan and Punch Drunk Beeman started off with a bang. Both fighters were really slinging the mittens. The third round slowed a little. Beeman seemed to have the edge throughout but Buchan never let up.

Welterweight: The next fight was between Battling Benny Horne and Capital City Bright. This was a very close fight and there seemed to be a little disapproval at the decision.

Grudgeweight: The crowd was brought to its feet as the two Apollos, Battling Biffet Greene and Musset Norton, climbed through the ropes. This was a slugfest from start to finish and finally ended in a draw. Just before the fight started one member of the band rendered Taps very nicely.

Juniro middleweight: This fight was fast and furious from the beginning with both Leland and Burns toeing the mark and slugging.

Middleweight: McSween and Wardlaw put on a good exhibition of slugging, with McSween getting quite the upper hand. Wardlaw took lots of punishment and kept coming for more.

Light heavyweight: This fight between Stroker Waldrep and High Pocket Cox was a fast slugging match. For the first time blood was drawn when Waldrep's Durante nose stopped one of Cox's haymakers.

Heavyweight: The final bout of the evening was between One-Round Bird and One-Punch Hipp, which was a slugfest from the start. This was a good fight, with Bird tiring a little at the end and Hipp put on a little speed to win by a punch. Before the two pugs entered the ring the band rendered quite appropriately The Funeral March.

Summary of the fights:

Bantamweight: Legare, 118, vs Rhodes, 118. Rhodes the winner.

Featherweight: Wallace, 128, vs Boggs, 128. Wallace won.

Lightweight: Buchan, 137, vs Beeman, 139. Beeman the winner.

Welterweight: Horne, 145, vs Bright, 145. Horne the winner.

Grudge: Greene, 109, vs Norton, 102. Draw.

Junior middleweight: Leland, 155, vs Burns, 159. Leland won.

Middleweight: McSween, 165, vs Wardlaw, 165. McSween the winner.

Light heavyweight: Cox, 175, vs Waldrep, 176. Waldrep the winner.

Heavyweight: Bird, 186, vs Hipp, 185. Hipp the winner.

Glee Club Leaves For Lower State

Six Concerts To Be Given On Tour. Well-Rounded Program To Be Presented.

Tuesday morning the Presbyterian college glee club leaves for the lower part of the state on a trip that lasts until the beginning of the Christmas holidays.

A bird supper will be ready for the music makers in Florence, where they will stop off for a short while with friends on the way down.

Night concerts will be given in Dillon, Mullins, Conway and Kingstree, with programs at schools in Marion and Lake City in between times.

The program includes twelve numbers by the club, seven of them new ones added to its reportoire this year, with variety of sacred, Negro spiritual and secular pieces. "Morning," by Speaks-Baldwin, has been added as a selection of semi-classical music, and a group of old favorite melodies have been arranged one after the other into a medley for the closing number.

Three soloists, A. E. Lake, Jr., L. A. McCall, Jr., and H. G. Wardlaw give vocals in baritone, tenor, and bass ranges, and T. R. Barringer and Woodrow Tisdale play piano solos.

The quartet has concocted an even better version of "Put On Your Old Gray Bonnet" to go with its other ditties, and also takes on four more strong voices to form a double quartet singing "In the Time of Roses," which is echoed softly by the entire club offstage.

The orchestra seems lacking without K. Mills beating time with his whole body and baton but seems better than ever with "Shorty" McDonald playing his saxaphone as he leads the ten-piece unit.

P. C. Fullback On All-State Eleven

Composite All-State Team, Compiled By Associated Press, Includes Harry Bolick.

The mythical all-South Carolina football team given by the Associated Press and made up of a compilation of votes cast by thirteen leading sports writers of the state is:

Craig	South Carolina	End
Brown	Clemson	Tackle
Shore	Clemson	Guard
Symmes	Citadel	Center
Jones	Wofford	Guard or
Gaffney	South Carolina	Guard
Black	Clemson	Tackle
Fellers	Clemson	End
Mauney	South Carolina	Quarter
Hinson	Clemson	Halfback
Stevens	Furman	Halfback or
Beck	Newberry	Halfback
BOLICK	P. C.	FULLBACK

Harry Bolick, P. C.'s hard hitting, line driving fullback and blocker par excellent, was definitely an all state man. He received eight of the ten votes cast in the composite Associated Press All State Eleven that was announced on last Monday.

Bolick in the four years that he has been at Presbyterian has proven himself to be an athlete almost without equal in the state. He was a veritable ram rod on the freshman team of 1931. In his first year of varsity football he was high scorer in the state, capping the year with three touchdowns against a Citadel team that had an invulnerable goal line, according to the dope. But already, despite his great scoring power he was becoming recognized as a fine blocker.

Last year he truly came into his own as a blocking back worthy of notice, and this year he has shown in glory and the all state honor is one truly deserved by the finest blocker, the best short gain man and one of the cleanest sportsmen in South Carolina.

Other P. C. men than Bolick, though, came in for their share of the All State Honors. Perrin, Calvinist's quarterback, tied with Anderson of Wofford for that honor on the second team. Three other gridiron heroes from the Blue Hose sector came in for honorable mention on this mythical eleven. They were: Yearout, senior end, and all state last year; Horne, diminutive and powerful Junior guard; and Higbe, Junior halfback and broken field runner superb.

Football Season Passes In Review

Presbyterian Eleven Ties Two Games, Wins Three and Loses Four On 1934 Schedule.

On Thanksgiving day the Presbyterian College football team closed a hard but by no means fruitless season by bowing before the Citadel gridiron aggregation by the score of 13 to 6.

Fighting one of the hardest schedules that a Blue Hose team has ever been called upon to battle through, the Calvinists came through with glory. Losing to Clemson, Howard, Wake Forest and Citadel, they tied Catawba, and Wofford, and defeated Mercer, Erskine, and Newberry.

They held to a one-touchdown victory a Clemson team that has marched triumphant to a state championship. They defeated a Mercer team that was slated to win by at least one touchdown. They won from a crack Newberry eleven. They held two powerful aggregations, Wake Forest and Citadel, to one-touchdown leads. Truly they have battled gloriously well.

Bolick has shone forth as the best blocker and short-gain man in the state. Quarterman has proven himself to be one of the finest pass receivers in this section. Higbe was all that was expected — a marvelous broken-field runner and unequalled as a returner of punts and kick-offs. Perrin was a splendid passer and a cool and able field general for the Blue Stockings. Horne was scintillating in the line and kicking points after touchdowns. Three fine ends have glittered for the Calvinists: Yearout, Waldrep, and

McSween, Brown Return From Meet

Kappa Alpha Frat Leads 'Y' Meeting

Is First of Series By Groups. "A Christian In College" Is Subject of Program.

The members of the Kappa Alpha, in the first of a series of fraternity-sponsored Y. M. C. A. meetings, presented a well planned program last Thursday night in the chapel. Three talks and a selection by the K. A. Quartet featured in the presentation of the subject, "A Christian In College."

The three talks, "A Christian and College Studies," "A Christian's Part in Extra Curricula Activities" and "Christian Aspirations" well delivered by "Buck" Patterson, Jim McClary and Lynn Jones, respectively. George Dunlap presided over the meeting while Colin Hudson led the program, giving thoughtful and interesting introductory remarks to each talk.

Patterson asked the question, "What does the college student think about when he studies?" He then dealt with the general attitude prevailing among the students on the campus. The "class room cards" and "Y cards," present in class rooms and dormitories were lauded and praised for their effect and helpfulness to the student.

McClary in discussing the relation between extra-curricula activities and the Christian based his remarks on the fact that "we know what's right and what's wrong and can adhere to our own power for guidance." He remarked that "God judges according to a man's opportunities" and lacked his atonement with reference to God's judgment of the heathen, in uncivilized lands, who have never verbally heard of God. He exhorted that one should, in any activity, whether football, orchestra, personal, or what-not, use his judgment as to right and wrong and then—act upon it.

Lynn Jones concluded the talks with some interesting remarks upon the proper attitude of a Christian college student. He quoted from Habakak the words "The Lord God is my strength—and will make me to walk upon my high places." In order to have the right aspirations we must walk on the "high places" it was stated. We can't if we have unclean souls, base thoughts, selfish motives, lazy ways, and such things while we can if we follow God's will, strive toward high and noble, have faith in God and similar [illegible]. The speaker concluded that "if we are missing the height we are [illegible] be."

Alpha Kappa Pi Adds Members

During the past several days Eta chapter of Alpha Kappa Pi social fraternity added one new pledge and three new active members. The actives are: R. R. Yow, of Martin, Ga., Marion Byrd, of Columbia, and Hugh Holman, of Goldville. The new pledge is H. D. Cranford, of Sharon.

Yow is well-known as circulation manager of The Blue Stocking, while Bird is a varsity football man. Holman edits the sports department of The Blue Stocking.

To Be Presented Wednesday Night

P. C. Fullback Selected By Vote of Sports Writers and Coaches To Receive Jacobs Award.

Harry Bolick, Presbyterian college's [illegible] fullback, has received the greatest honor that can be bestowed on a South Carolina football player—[illegible]

The [illegible] to [illegible] William P. Jacobs, of Clinton, to the [illegible] writers of the state to be the best blocking back in South Carolina. It is recognized throughout the state as the symbol of football greatness, the epitome of football honor.

Bolick has been in the running for the honor since his first year of varsity football. In that year he showed himself to be a blocker of unusual ability as well as one of the greatest scoring backs of the state. In that year he was high scorer in the state, beating the great Earl Clary, of Carolina, who in that same year was in his prime.

Bolick this year has been, beyond the shadow of a doubt, the finest blocker in the state. He ran interference as no one else in this football sector came near doing; he covered passers and punters in a manner that was most irritating to the opposing teams. From the opening game with Clemson down to the closing contest with Citadel he has been all that a coach or a team could wish for.

But Bolick's gridiron ability did not stop with blocking. He is recognized as one of the most dangerous short-gain men in the state.

The trophy will be presented on Wednesday night at a banquet held in honor of the state's greatest blocker.

Bolick has closed a gridiron career with honor and glory that makes him the idol of the school and the football fans of the state. He deserved all that he got and more!

Agnosticism Marks Age Of Transition

Miss Ribertson Says Writers Are Subject To Delusions Who Say It's All Over For Religion.

The increasing prevalence of atheism and agnosticism among college students—but the mark of an age of transition, writes Louise Fleming Robertson, of Florida State College for Women, in the current (No. 3) issue of The Literary Workshop, the national organ for student expression. Her article is titled "Religion Comes of Age."

Subject to delusions, contends Miss Robertson, are the legion of American writers who in the last decade have pronounced that it is all over for religion, presenting, among other causes, the increasing [illegible] of [illegible] in our colleges.

"I am convinced," she writes, "that the characteristics of the recent religious period had their natural termination in agnosticism and that the time is right for the emergence of a neo-Christian movement, realistically and dynamically adapted to this age.

"At the present time the college student often finds himself empty-handed and [illegible] where spiritual matters are concerned. Religion as an [illegible] in Russia, [illegible] in the intelligent of modern knowledge and criticism.

Foreman. In the line, Millsap, Boggs, Bowden, Davis, and Collings have proved that they possess the stuff of which football men are made.

Bolick, Peurifoy, Yearout, Waldrep, Millsap, and Boggs were playing their last year of college football.

Boggs and Quartermann tied for scoring honors, each of them having five touchdowns to their credit. Hughes was next with two, and Yearout scored one against the Citadel eleven.

The team finished tied with Furman, Wofford, and Citadel for third place in the state race.

The year's scores are:

Clemson 0	P. C. 0
Mercer 6	P. C. 7
Howard 12	P. C. 19
Wake Forest 14	P. C. 6
Catawba 0	P. C. 0
Newberry 0	P. C. 12
Erskine 0	P. C. 13
Wofford 7	P. C. 7
Furman 13	P. C. 7

THE DRAWING ROOM

In the much-touted Blue Ridge mountains a man was arrested for stealing hams. A lawyer was summoned. He went out to the home of the man and was much impressed by its cleanliness and by the honest appearance of the man. When the case [illegible] the jury gave a verdict of "not guilty" after a fervent appeal in true legal manner. Several days afterward the accused asked the lawyer if he would take a few hams for his fee.

Somewhere in our Southern mountains is a region known as "Piney," a hotbed of Anglo-Saxon pride and prejudice. In the great T. R.'s second presidential campaign a Republican orator was addressing a crowd of "Pineyites." A heckler in the crowd called, "What about Roosevelt having a nigger (Booker T. Washington) to eat dinner with him?" To this query the speaker responded in that bluff manner natural to mountaineers, "I was in eatin' dinner with Teddy when the cook came in and said that Booker T. had finished cuttin' some wood out back. Teddy told her to take him a piece of pie. She did and he sat down on the back steps and ate it. That, gents, is how that story started."

Along the same line is an excerpt from "Stars Fell on Alabama." The author went to a political meeting and heard the candidate for the governorship respond to a query about how he stood on the hard liquor problem. The would-be governor said:

"When I think of all the homes wrecked by the Demon Rum, and all the women's and little children's hearts broken by it, I'm agin it.

"But when I wake up on a cold morning and my old woman says, 'Do you want a little toddy to warm up your joints?' gentlemen, I'm for it!"

When the American Bar association met in London in 1924, a garden party was given at Buckingham palace for the visitors. Among the lawyers was Mr. Thomas Duke, of Albemarle county, Virginia. In his desire to get closer to the king he pushed up into the place reserved for the nobility. A flunkey stopped him. Whereupon, Mr. Duke drew himself up and said, "I am Thomas, Duke of Albemarle." The footman cried, "Way for 'is grace."

They ought to know—

MANY men of the South have been "in tobacco" for years—growing tobacco and curing it—buying it and selling it—until they know tobacco from A to Izzard.

Now folks who have been in tobacco all their lives, folks who grow it, know there is no substitute for mild ripe tobacco.

And down in the South where they grow tobacco and where they ought to know something about it—in most places Chesterfield is the largest-selling cigarette.

Harvesting tobacco and packing it in the barn for curing—and (below) a scene at a Southern tobacco auction.

VOLUME XVI PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE, CLINTON, S. C., DECEMBER 15, 1934 NUMBER 12

Horne Elected 1935 Football Captain

MILLSAP NAMED ALL-S. I. A. A.

Thirty Colleges Compose Group

Presbyterian Man Has Played Consistently Good Ball During 1934 Season.

James "Soupie" Millsap, Presbyterian college tackle, was placed in that position on the composite all-S. I. A. A. football team, announced last week. This is one of the highest honors that a player in this section can receive. The S. I. A. A., comprising at it does some thirty of the leading schools of the South, contains within it some of the best football material of this gridiron sector, and to be chosen as a member of its mythical eleven is an honor indeed.

Millsap has played throughout the year a strong, hard, consistently good game of football. He has never been a spectacular player, but on defensive and offensive he has been a powerhouse for the Blue Stockings and one of the most valuable members of the squad. A dynamo of a linesman, he deserved the honor that he has received, and the school is proud of him.

Millsap is the first Presbyterian college man to place on this team since the days of Presbyterian's mighty end, J. B. Copeland.

Seminary Group Conducts Chapel

Frampton's Talk and Vocal Selections By Quartet Feature Program On Tuesday.

A deputation from Columbia seminary, Decatur, Ga., P. C. sister institution, presented an interesting and inspiring program in chapel last Tuesday morning. M. P. Frampton's talk on "Touching Jesus," and the seminary quartet's vocal selections featured the morning worship.

Frampton, a P. C. graduate of the class of '33, eloquently delivered his remarks taken from the ninth chapter of Matthew. They were based chiefly upon the incident of the diseased woman who, by touching the edge of Jesus' garment, was healed. The speaker exhorted that one should break all barriers in his search for Christ and should touch Him and then, through faith, be transformed.

The quartet, composed of John Talmage, B. Dupree, J. B. Bradley and F. Cox, was well received. They rendered songs both before and after Frampton's talk. Among the selections sung were "Going Down the Valley," "The Old Rugged Brose" and "Wondrous Things of Thee Are Spoken."

The visiting delegation was composed of a number of P. C. alumni who were properly introduced during the chapel exercises. These were: K. Hamilton, '32; C. Pepper, F. Parker, M. Frampton, and G. Barron, '33; and E. Nelson; '34. After a short meeting with the Ministerial club and a brief review of the college, the visitors returned to Decatur.

LAWTERS HAVE SON

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil B. Lawter of Spartanburg, announce the birth of a son, David Darlington, on November 22, at the Mary Black hospital.

Mr. Lawter entered Wofford last March from Presbyterian college. He is a member of the senior class. He is president of Pi Kappa Delta, national president of Delta Chi Alpha, and a member of Pi Kappa Phi, social fraternity.

Mrs. Lawter before her marriage was Miss Mary Darlington Black of Clinton.

Bolick Presented Blocking Trophy

Presbyterian Fullback Feted At Annual Banquet; Sirrine and Coach Alexander Speakers.

At a banquet in honor of the Presbyterian college football squad, given on Wednesday night by the Clinton Rotary club, Harry Bolick was formally presented with the Jacobs blocking trophy.

The entire football squad, several prominent South Carolina manufacturers, Dizzy McLeod of Furman, Jess Neely of Clemson, and Bill Alexander of Georgia Tech, several press representatives, and the runners-up for the blocking trophy were guests of the occasion.

Brief talks were made by Coach Alexander and J. E. Sirrine of Greenville. Alexander's talk was filled with witticisms and football humor. Getting serious, he congratulated South Carolina on the way in which its schools were able to play intra-state football and expressed the sincere hope that someday Georgia would be able to do the same. He congratulated Bolick on the honor that he had received and William P. Jacobs on the idea that was behind the trophy.

Mr. Sirrine stated that he knew of no sport or activity that better prepared a man for life than football, but he expressed the hope that none of the men who had received the football honor should think that they had "arrived." He said they should feel rather than they had begun to prepare themselves for the battle that was before them. He congratulated Bolick on the qualities of unselfishness and fair play that the trophy signified, and closed his talk with the statement that, after all, it is how you play the game that counts.

Mr. Jacobs, in presenting the trophy to Bolick, emphasized the fact that the cardinal virtues of that forgotten football hero — the blocker — was unselfishness and fair play. He

Blue Hose Win Over Seminary Quintet

First Basketball Game of Season Results In Victory For McMillian Men, 39 to 22.

Playing their first game of the season Monday night, Coach Lonnie McMillian's varsity basketball team won over the Columbia seminary quartet, of Decatur, Ga., 39-22. Although the Georgia team offered fine resistance, the Blue Stockings kept the game well in hand through their splendid team work. The local team, having more opportunities for shots than they permitted the opposing team to have, could have piled up a much higher score if more of their tries had been effective. With practice after the holidays the P. C. team will whip into such shape that it will be a formidable rival for any basketball team in this section.

Led by Captain Waldrep, the team clicked together nicely. "Red" Wyatt and "Lefty" Levi were especially ef-

Doctor Jones In Charlotte Hospital

Will Be Gone Several Weeks. Miss Hallett, Dean Brown and Dr. Woods To Conduct Classes.

The student body was sorry to learn this week that Dr. F. D. Jones, professor of psychology, philosophy and religious education, has found it necessary to spend the next few weeks in the Charlotte Presbyterian hospital where he will undergo treatment for arthritis, which has troubled him for sometime. Dr. Jones expects to return to his place on the faculty in time to give the mid-semester exams to his classes. The student body hopes that he will return much improved.

The following provisions have been made for Dr. Jones' classes during his absence: The phychology department will be filled by Miss Norma Hallet, psychiatrist at the State Training school, of this city. Miss Hallett has a master's degree in psychology from Columbia university and is splendidly equipped to fill this department. Dean M. W. Brown will take over the philosophy class, and Dr. D. J. Woods, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Clinton, and a scholar in his field, will teach the class in religious education.

Freshman Class Officers Elected

The freshman class, after a second ballot, finally placed an occupant in each of their hotly-contested offices. All races demanded a run-over between the two highest candidates of the first ballot.

Baxter Carpenter was elected freshman member of the student council. The winners in the race for class officers were: Joe Commander, president; "Piggy" Isom, vice-president; J. L. Boggs, secretary-treasurer; Jack Witherspoon, historian, and Chester Keller, poet.

Carpenter is from Greenville, S. C., and is pledged to Kappa Alpha social fraternity. Commander hails from Florence, S. C., and is pledged to Pi Kappa Phi social fraternity.

The candidates for the council were B. Carpenter, M. Hipp, F. E. Johnston, and E. L. Jaillet. Three were nominated and forced to withdraw on account of a constitution rule conflicting with their eligibility. These were G. Colett, Boggs, and Joe Cammander.

Team-Mates Pick Guard As Leader

Excellent Work of Diminutive Star Rewarded By Fellows. No Alternate Selected.

At the Rotary club banquet on Wednesday night Coach Walter Johnson of Presbyterian college, announced that the 1935 captain of the Blue Stocking football team would be William S. (Shorty) Horne.

Horne has been a regular guard for the past two years and has played a stellar game. Last year his placement kicks for points after touchdowns won him state-wide recognition. A small man, probably the smallest on the squad, he has been constantly in the play. His work as a defensive player has been particularly noteworthy; he was one of the hardest and surest tacklers on the squad.

No alternate captain has been chosen as yet due to the fact that several of the men were away on a glee club trip at the time the voting took place. This position will probably be filled soon after the Christmas holidays.

Fall Inspection Of Unit Held Monday

Captain Austin Here For Conference With Director. Appears Before Class Group.

The annual fall inspection of the Presbyterian college R. O. T. C. department which, according to the inspector, Captain Thomas A. Austin, Jr., now P. M. S. and T. of the military units of the public schools of Atlanta, Ga., was "mostly a conference with the directors of this unit," was conducted without apparent incident on Monday of this week.

Captain Austin made a brief inspection of the corps during drill, spoke to some of the advanced course men during their regular class meeting, and spent the remainder of the day in conference with Captains Wyser and Blanton; but since this inspection is merely to see that the work has been begun properly, the inspector could make no statement about the standing of the unit.

This was Captain Austin's second inspection at P. C., having conducted a similar one here fifteen years ago. He is a native Texan and has been a [illegible] army since 1917, when he received his [illegible] commander for the major part of the war. Since [illegible] he has [illegible] abroad. Among [illegible] are: General Pershing's Tacna-Arica Plebiscitary commission in which he had charge of an isolated portion of the Chilean-Bolivian border; member of Major General Frank R. McCoy's commission which represented the United States and the Republic of Nicaragua on the Nicaraguan-Honduran frontier in connection with the Nicaraguan presidential elections in 1928, for which service Captain Austin received commendations from the U. S. army, Marine corps, and the Nicaraguan authorities. In 1930, after the completion of an advanced course in the infantry school at Fort Benning, Ga., he was made professor of military science and tactics in the public schools of Atlanta. This post he has held since, with the exception of the short time in 1933-34 when he attended and graduated from the Air Corps school at Maxwell Field, Alabama.

Is There A Santa Claus?

Is there a Santa Claus? Unequivocally, yes. There is a spirit, of whatever sort it may be, which pervades throughout the minds, and permeates the deepest souls, of the people at Christmas time. It entwines itself about us, grasping us with its many arms like the tentacles of an octopus and gradually drawing us into the sea of Yuletime fancifulness.

Is there a Santa Claus? As surely as kindness and generosity exist, as certainly as love and devotion and faith are alive, as positive as the idea of beauty and joy, he must be real. He is a reality of the unseen world, of that kingdom of values which is the essence of living. That world we do not see, but we feel its presence as we gaze wordless into a beautiful sunset, warming in the radiance of its hueful brilliance streaming across the sky. From that world we hear no sound, but we read a message in the unfolding bud of the rose in the spring, or in the crystal flakes of glittering white fluttering earth-ward in the winter. Faith, fancy, love, poetry, romance: these are as real as the supernal beauty of the star-speckled galaxy. And with them lives the gladness that comes with Christmastide.

Is there a Santa Claus? Who has seen little tots jumping around the tree on Christmas morn, who has listened to youthful voices sing the joy of the season's carols, who has seen the poor and hungry receive the blessings inspired by that happy "whiskered gentleman": he can only say yes. To ... as real as he is to the small child ... looking in front of the fireplace on Christmas eve. And to you we wish the best of Yuletide happiness, which is old Santa himself.

Hooey!

For some time politicians have posed as statesmen; now one has offered himself as educator. A narcissistic belittler of human rights (except his own), Huey Long—more correctly pronounced "hooey"—has shown himself the freedom-of-the-press's public enemy No. one! Along with a great majority of the college press we take our stand as opposing such disregard for personal liberty. It is from respect for our readers that we refrain from expressing our innermost thoughts.

All over the country editors of college newspapers have given an outlet to their indignation. From the Clemson "Tiger" do we get a very adequate summation of the situation, and of the common feeling which permeates the college campuses.

* * * * * *

The Land of the Free

Huey Long, the bloated "gentleman" from Louisiana, has jabbed another besmirched feather in his cap of ill-gotten gains, this time by having suspended from L. S. U. the staff of The Reveille who dared criticise his dictatorial whims.

The case is a simple one. Several weeks ago the Kingfish offered Abe Mickal, Tiger grid ace, a state senatorship which Mickal refused. The demagogue heard that his offer of a solonship to the student was to be denounced by the L. S. U. publication. He acted promptly; according to an AP dispatch from Baton Rouge. "The printing presses were stopped, guards were posted at the door, and scores of printed editions were destroyed. The issue appeared only after objectionable matter was deleted." When Editor Jesse H. Cutrer saw J. M. Smith, president of the university, he was informed that "no criticism of Long or any university official would be permitted," and that, furthermore, "the staff would have to accept the censorship of a faculty supervisor or resign." The staff resigned, and four of 26 seniors in journalism who favored this move were handed their walking papers.

Long, a walking one-ringed circus, is drunk with his own power. Hiding behind a pile of gold and an armed body-guard, this jerk-water politician and headline-hunter toys with liberty and education as if they were just another pair of his ward bosses; that he will soon learn the difference between American students and his group of parasitic henchmen is a statement that we venture without fear of contradiction. Too much decent blood has spilled in the fight for man's freedom to let this slovenly and boorish clown trample it in the dust with a twist of his heel.

The editors of this sheet know Cutrer well, having spent six weeks with him in the publicity department of the R. O. T. C. camp at Fort McClellan, Alabama, this past summer. He is an ardent supporter of L. S. U., a courageous newspaper man, and not one to fly off the handle without ample cause.

With Huey's claim, "I made L. S. U. the school it is today," ringing in our ears we feel strongly tempted to mail him thirty gleaming pieces of silver.—The Clemson Tiger.

* * * * * *

Is there any possible reason, then, to wonder why the entire staff of the school resigned. One wonders why the whole student body has not registered a similar intention. — Alabama Crimson and White.

Students of the journalism school signed a declaration that they would not contribute anything further to the newspaper until the staff was restored and the censorship lifted. The students and the college authorities are at a deadlock now, the former protesting for a free press and the latter insisting upon faculty supervision. The students were encouraged in their stand by support from the American Association of University Professors, who issued a warning that they were ready to take action against Louisiana State University if events warranted it. The association criticised Mr. Long's interference with student activities.—The Blue and Grey (Hood College).

* * * * * *

And so the Kingfish becomes editor of what was once The Reveille, and with it he takes on another characteristic of his European counterparts—suppression. The next step will be control of education.—Tulane Hullabaloo.

* * * * * *

These Twenty-Six

There is no justification for the suspension of the twenty-six journalism students at L. S. U. who protested against Dictator Huey Long's censorship of the school paper. Such suppression of student opinion for political purposes can be compared only to Herr Hitler's rule of German educational institutions and the German press.

With exception of these twenty-six students, the Kingfish has the university under his thumb. Neither the faculty nor the student body as a whole has shown any spirit. But these twenty-six have risen up in support of a principle that is essentially American, and they are being supported by the press of the nation. The situation should prove to be a big set-back to Huey's presidential ambitions.

Not only is freedom of the press being violated. The right of these students to education has been denied, merely because they have offended a politician who claims that L. S. U. is "his university." Politics and politicans have no place in the operations of educational institutions — The Emory Wheel.

* * * * * *

It is not the students on the staff of the Louisiana State newspaper who should be blamed for "gross disrespect," but the officials for a "gross disrespect" of the freedom of the press, a right which the Constitution of the United States provides.—N. C. Technician.

* * * * * *

The United States is getting into one devil of a state of mind when any one state will condone a Kingfish Long.—Red and Black (U. of Ga.)

* * * * * *

"This is my university and I'll throw anybody out who utters a word against it. There'll be a new editor of that paper tomorrow if they print anything against Huey Long."

Student Opinion

RAH! RAH! FACULTY!

Editor, The Blue Stocking:

Last year a member of the student body suggested that a co-ed football team be organized, and gave what he considered the best possible starting line-up. Along the same line, I should like to suggest a faculty eleven. I firmly believe that a team composed of certain members of that august body could easily take apart any similar aggregation in this part of the country. If any do not believe this, let them look at the names of the prospective team-mates and I am sure any doubts they have will be dispelled.

Let us begin first with the forward wall. The center of the line is a convenient starting point. Here, weight and toughness are of prime importance. Immediately, one man stands out from all others in this respect, Hawk Hunter, I believe, should win this position with little trouble. His 200 pounds of beef is well able to stand terrific punishment to which a pivot man is subjected.

The guard posts offer a more difficult problem. Weight is not at such a great premium here, speed and fighting ability being more significant. After careful consideration, I find that Professors Graham and Woodworth ,two small but sturdy fighters, are probably the best for these positions. This pair will be able to come out of the line like streaks of lightning in leading interference. Their speed again will serve them in good stead in breaking through and stopping plays behind the line of scrimmage.

At tackles, weight is most important, combined of course with a certain amount of speed. The selection of these two men is comparatively easy, judging from this basis. Swedenberg and Coe, two mountainous hulks of human flesh, should fill the bill—and then some.

The wingmen must, of course, be tall and rangy, with a fair amount of weight at the same time. One candidate pops into my mind immediately. Long John McSween, pass receiver de luxe, steps into this post. The other end should be well taken care of by Marshall Brown, another lanky man who undoubtedly is good on snagging aerials.

The backfield presents much more food for thought. A number of men could look good in this department. At quarterback, for instance, a position requiring a tremendous amount of brain power, we have several who could hold this down in a very satisfactory manner. My pick, however since one must be made, is Dudley Jones, whose knowledge of psychology gives him a slight advantage over the others. I can think of no one who is so well qualified to dictate to his team what to do and at the same time think of strategic methods of outwitting the enemy.

Even more difficult to decide is the status of the two halfback jobs. Here we need speed and more speed, together with ability in broken-field running. At one half I suggest the high-stepping Dan Brimm, a shifty runner of recognized prowess. At the other post it seems that the snake-hipped Will Blanton has it on the rest of the boys for skill in lugging the oval for long distances.

Next comes the line-smashing, bone-crushing full-back. This necessitates a hefty physique, one that can stand plenty of wear and tear. The selection is fairly simple. Wysor, the genial P. M. S. and T. stands head and shoulders above others in these qualifications. I feel that he would be a veritable battering ram once he swings into action in gridiron attire.

It would seem at first glance as if there is nothing more to be desired after such a stunning array of football as this has been gathered together. Still, however, every team, no matter how good in itself, must have a coach. For this responsible position my pick is Seargeant Sterlin Yong, in view of his phenomenal success as squiff ball mentor during the last season. And with Wee Willie Johnson serving as water boy, I am positive that this team can sweep aside any similar group of men in the country.

Such an aggregation of perfection should bring an even greater amount of honor and glory to old P. C. than she has ever before enjoyed.

THE KAMPUS KEYHOLE

PRESTON CHARLES

The news comes out that a new contest is to be held on our campus. This kind of competition is probably the most unusual ever held at P. C. Only a very few men possess qualities that will make them eligible to enter. Frank Guess, Twyman Fowler, Fred Frowein, Alfred Plowden, Macon Hipp, and Louis Anderson have already been suggested as logical contenders. The winner will be given the title of "Mae West," by which name he will be called henceforth. From this explanation the nature of the contest should be obvious to intelligent readers.

The number of girls' pictures adorning walls of the Romeo's room is the wonder and admiration of the entire colony. This author, hearing the breath-taking tales of Foreman's dazzling room decorations, went to his room in order to see for himself. After an accurate count was made he found that there were no less than fourteen different girls represented. This does not mean that he had only fourteen pictures in the room. Some girls had their pictures two or three times. The grand total of portraits ran up in the latter twenties.

By the way, it is practically certain that the Great Lover will have a picture of Stella Beckham to hang up as a trophy of conquest within the next few days, thus bringing the count to an even fifteen.

Frances Spratt, when asked why she has had that snooty air for some weeks, replied that the reason was, not that she had conquered Cappelmann, but that since her spectacles were loose she had to keep her nose high up in the air, so as to prevent their falling off.

According to reliable information a P. C. man was responsible for the shipping of four Winthrop girls on the week-end of the Erskine game. Odell Matthews, better known as P. C.'s champion philanderer, is the contemptible fellow who caused this unfortunate event. Matthews was caught by Winthrop officials in a dormitory between halves.

Spencer hall was a scene of wild disorder during the past week. Boys from other dormitories gave it a wide berth as sounds of rough and tumble revelry resounded over the campus. A student councilmen actually had the audacity to walk in The Blue Stocking office without bringing the lock inside with him, and in less than no time he found himself a prisoner when some evil-doer snapped the padlock shut. All his hammerings on the door and pathetic pleas for release from the impromptu prison were to no avail until he had made a solemn promise to stay out of the dormitory forever.

Things you never see:
An upperclassman getting out of chapel ahead of a freshman.
Dr. Coe with his hair parted straight.
Jimmy Seagle walking into the dormitory without lifting his voice in song.
Dr. Brimm not wearing a winged collar.

At the assembly Charles will represent India; Rauch, Poland; Plaxico, Ecuador; and Holman, Rumania.

These men are attending the assembly as delegates from the local International Relations club.

L. S. U. President Burned In Effigy

Aftermath of Controversy Over Censorship of Student Paper For Criticising Huey Long.

Baton Rouge, Dec. 9. — Louisiana State university authorities today were attempting to apprehend the person or persons who twice hanged James Monroe Smith, president of the college, in effigy.

An effigy placarded "James Monroe Smith, 'Jimmie the Stooge,' hanged December 8, 1934," was found early yesterday morning dangling from the halyards of the campus flagpole. Late last night another figure of President Smith was discovered, this time roped to a tree on the campus.

Both figures were hurriedly destroyed.

The incidents reopened the hot controversy over the censorship of the "Reveille," campus student newspaper, in which Smith forbade the printing of any criticism of the activities of senator Huey P. Long in his connection with the state university.

Singers "Prime" The Dream-Train

College Bus Refuses To Start On Cold Morning, But Manly Efforts of Riders Turns Trick.

The Presbyterian college glee club departed Tuesday for a six-day trip, and this time took the bus—literally. In a breeze that must have blown directly from the center of the arctic region, members of the club Tuesday morning were seen pushing the new red, white, and blue Dream-train of the Presbyterian college Blue Stockings.

Dr. Huntley, director of the songsters, was standing as patiently as possible near by, appearing to direct the proceedings and seeming a little fidgety regarding the outcome.

However, the gleers' great determination to take the new bus with them finally won over the elements, and soon the powerful road-burner was running of its own accord.

THE PARADE GROUND

This reporter, hoping to swell his last column before the Christmas holidays to a passable minimum, asked Captain Wysor if he could not say something really Yuletide-like that could be quoted for this issue. To this request Captain replied that he was afraid he could not express the aged-old wishes in any different lingo from that used for the past two thousand years, namely: a hope that "old Santa would fill all our little stockings (excepting Footsie Yow's, which would be an imposition on the old fellow) to the brim." However, he did say, and said it seriously, that he wished to express in behalf of the military department, its very deep appreciation for the spirit which the corps has displayed this year and particularly the past few weeks. He believes that such a spirit of loyalty and faithfulness has not been shown by any unit since he has been here, and hopes that the Christmas vacation will really be pleasant and profitable for all those who have cooperated to make our corps what it is now.

Due to the extreme weather on Tuesday night, it was necessary to let the men who volunteered to put on a parade at the time of all the gala affairs on the square earn their excused drill by acting as traffic cops and body guards to Santa Claus.

The inspection held Monday was satisfactory as far as is known at present. At least, the uniforms were better than usual, very few low grades being given and an unusually large number of men receiving two A's. Some of these fellows, though, say that 40 cents was a nice sum for the extra A. But maybe that clean uniform will earn some fellow an extra flame before we return to drill again.

Do you know how ages are class-

In the manufacture of Granger Rough Cut Pipe Tobacco the Wellman Process is used.

The Wellman Process is different from any other process or method and we believe it gives more enjoyment to pipe smokers.

...it gives the tobacco an extra flavor and aroma
...it makes the tobacco act right in a pipe—burn slower and smoke cooler
...it makes the tobacco milder
...it leaves a clean dry ash —no soggy residue or heel in the pipe bowl

P. C. MEN ATTEND WINTHROP MEET

Representatives of International Relations Clubs Hold Model League of Nations At State College In December.

Four P. C. men attended the Model League of Nations, held at Winthrop college on December 14 and 15, as official delegates of the local International Relations club. One other man, who is not a member of the club, also took part.

This gathering is conducted after the fashion of the League of Nations meeting, held in Geneva, Switzerland. Delegates from various schools are assigned to represent certain countries in the model session. The following P. C. men represented countries in the League: Preston Charles, India; Hugh Holman, Rumania; Tom Plaxico, Ecuador; John Rauch, Poland. Although not a member of the I. R. C., Oliver Luey represented Argentina in an unofficial way.

The League officially opened Friday morning, December 14. Two of the P. C. delegates, Charles and Rauch, had some difficulty in obtaining entrance to Johnson hall, the place where the assembly convened. When they entered the building, the girl who had charge of the registration, noting their youthful appearance, eyed them suspiciously and queried, "Are you from the high school?"

Another meeting took place Friday afternoon, but the main body of delegates arrived Saturday morning, at which gathering most of the fireworks took place. Several questions of vital importance to the League came up, such as the Saar plebiscite, the situation in the Far East, the Jugo-slavio-Hungary difficulty, problems in South America, and others. Among the speakers of the morning was Delegate Rauch, who exploded a bombshell in the meeting when he announced that Poland would no longer be bound by the League's will in the matter of foreign minorities in his country as long as Polish minorities in other countries were not accorded the same protection. During the discussion the delegate from Abyssinia arose and made a fiery address, but none were able to appreciate it, since this country's representative spoke in some foreign tongue, presumably the Abyssinian vernacular.

During the morning session a president was elected. Tom Plaxico nominated Sandler, of Sweden, who was finally chosen president of the League. This man's part was taken by Miss Mary Jacobs, of Winthrop.

During the Saturday afternoon session the League voted to admit Russia into the body. The two delegates from Russia then entered, amid wild cheers from the majority, and boos from some others. The Russian foreign minister made his opening speech and his country became a full-fledged member.

Following this business, Delegate Charles, of India, introduced a resolution that would bind nations belonging to the League to pool their military forces and force Japan to return Manchukuo to China. Holman, the Rumanian representative, attacked the resolution as being too idealistic and

1935 Basketball Season Has Bright Prospects

HOSE TO PLAY ALL S. C. TEAMS

Coach McMillian Says Squad Presents Much Better Appearance Than Last Year. To Play Charleston Thursday.

Basketball practice for the varsity team is making good progress, with prospects considerably better than last year. Coach Lonnie McMillian said the other day that the team presented a much better appearance than last year. He thinks they are working together more smoothly.

The first two teams have been tentatively picked, subject of course to changes from day to day. At present the teams are as follows:

First Team

Forwards: Frank Waldrep, Red Wyatt.
Center: Roy Forehand.
Guards: Phil Adams, Joe Bradley.

Second Team

Forwards: Red Potter, Alan Levi.
Center: Cleckler.

Hay Family To Give Bible Medal

Children of the Late Frederick J. Hay Establish Memorial To Their Father.

A memorial has recently been established at Presbyterian college to the late Rev. Frederick Jay Hay, it was announced by Dr. McSween in chapel Friday morning. The memorial will be in the form of a Bible medal to be awarded annually to the member of the sophomore class who has made the highest average in two years of Bible study. This year it will be given for sophomore work alone. Both men and women are eligible to receive the award.

The children of the late Rev. Frederick Jay Hay, who have established the award are: the Rev. S. H. Hay, D.D., Morristown, Tenn.; the Rev. J. R. Hay, Hickory, N. C.; the Rev. F. J. Hay, Dillon, S. C.; Mrs. S. M. Huntley, Clinton, S. C.; Mrs. L. B. Salters, Florence, S. C.; Mrs. Louis McCaskill, Blenheim, S. C., and Miss Lisle Hay, Marion, S. C.

Osman Named Field Agent For College

John E. Osman, class of 1932, has accepted a permanent position with Presbyterian college as field agent in Georgia. He will begin work immediately.

While at school here, Mr. Osman was prominent in college activities. Since his graduation he has been teaching and coaching in the schools of Belton, S. C.

MATHESON ON COLLEGE STAFF

Named Assistant To President and Will Do Field Work In Raising $50,000 For Current Debt. Is Graduate of P. C.

R. G. Matheson, Jr., former president of Presbyterian Junior college at Maxton, N. C., has accepted a position at Presbyterian college as assistant to the president and field agent in South Carolina. Mr. Matheson is to assist especially in raising $50,000 to pay off the current debt. He will assume his new duties at an early date.

Mr. Matheson received his A. B. degree from Presbyterian college in 1921 and his M. A. from the University of South Carolina in 1929. He taught successively at Thornwell orphanage, Columbia high school, Virginia Polytechnic institute, and Presbyterian Junior college. At the latter school he was promoted first to dean of the college, then to acting president, and finally president.

While in school at P. C. Mr. Matheson was editor of The Blue Stocking, and took active part in literary and athletic affairs. His return to the school is considered a very welcome and worth while addition to the college personnel.

Swimming Practice Gets Into Swing

Likely Group of Candidates Out For Positions. Hank Wilson Is Captain and Coach. Freshmen Also Prep For Season.

Swimming team practice came into full swing this week, with a likely-looking bunch of candidates for positions. There is to be a separate team for varsity and freshmen, as usual. Hank Wilson, well-known dash man, is captain and coach. Norton, famed R. O. T. C. boxing man, is assisting George Dunlap in managing the team.

Will Wallace, tiny freshman swimmer of last year who broke records in the state freshman meet, is out for the varsity. Valley, Wilson, and Legare are other men who have had plenty of experience and should represent P. C. well. Three others are out: Tiller, Millsap and Calvert. More are expected to try out later. Alexander, one of the best men on the squad last year, is out for basketball and therefore will not be able to participate in swimming.

The freshman squad is the best seen here in some time, according to Coach Hank Wilson. The following men are trying for positions: Dreyfus, Caldwell, Boggs, Billie Burns, Seawell, and Carpenter.

Local Sorority Fetes Alumnae

The Alpha Psi Delta club, local sorority, entertained a few of its old members at a dinner party at the Lakeside country club on Thursday evening, December 28. Miss Virginia Spratt, able library assistant, is president of the club.

The hostesses for the event were Dolly Milling, social committee chairman, and Frances Spratt. Practically all the members, including pledges recently taken in, were present. The alumni members who enjoyed the evening were: Margaret Jones, Emmie Adair, Mary Lawson, Elizabeth Speake, Sara Copeland, and Jamie Little. All the above mentioned girls were students at P. C. last year and either have graduated or transferred to other schools.

BOXING TEAM GETS IN SHAPE

First Bout Comes With Citadel At Charleston On January 19. Several Old Men Head List of Candidates For Positions.

With the first match only about two weeks away, the boxing team continued steadily getting in shape for a strenuous series of meets. Three outstanding fighters are on this year's roster, Bolick, Seagle and Clark.

Following is the list of men who are out for boxing positions:

Bantamweight: Jimmy Seagle.
Featherweight: Doc Gillis, Jack McCaskill.
Lightweight: Bill Clark.
Welterweight: James McClary.
Senior welterweight: Walt Williams.
Middleweight: Frank Holliday.
Light-heavyweight: Claus Cappelmann.
Heavyweight: Harry Bolick.

The 1935 schedule follows:

Jan. 19—Citadel at Charleston.
Feb. 2—Citadel at Clinton.
Feb. 9—Clemson at Clinton.
Feb. 15—South Carolina at Columbia.
Feb. 26—Georgia at Clinton.
March 2—Georgia at Athens.

Robert D. Lynn Highly Honored

Selected As Most Representative Undergraduate In National Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity.

The most representative undergraduate fraternity man in the national Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity for 1933-34 is Robert D. Lynn, of Clinton, a graduate of Presbyterian college in the class of '34. He will receive the award from Beta Phi chapter at Buffalo, N. Y. A trophy is awarded by the chapter each year to the undergraduate who best represents the ideal fraternity man. It is therefore a signal honor which Lynn has received.

Lynn was prominent in the spiritual, athletic, social, and scholastic life of the college. He is now doing further study in Richmond, Va.

College Plans Special Services

Rev. A. G. Harris, of Milledgeville, Ga., To Lead Meetings In February.

The Rev. A. G. Harris, pastor of the Presbyterian church at Milledgeville, Ga., will conduct a special series of religious services here Feb. 18-22.

Mr. Harris, a graduate of Erskine college, received his theological training at Union Theological seminary, Richmond, Va., and at Princeton, New Jersey. He is one of the most popular preachers in the Synod of Georgia, and his church at Milledgeville is usually crowded with students from Georgia Military academy and Georgia State College for Women.

ALUMNI GROUP APPEALS TO ITS MEMBERS

Cash Subscriptions Now Being Sought and To Continue Until Goal Is Reached. Dr. S. C. Hays Is Leader In Move.

For several years it has been the ambition of certain members of the Presbyterian College Alumni association to see Johnson field equipped in order that night football, track meets, and various other kinds of assemblies and speakings might become possible. Night football is not merely a fad, but a very practical way to avoid conflicts in dates with games scheduled between other colleges, which is extremely hard on the gate receipts of an institution in a town the size of Clinton.

During the football season, there are invariably a number of conflicts, resulting in a smaller attendance by out-of-town fans who would otherwise come. Night football, by eliminating the conflicts in hour, would enable the fan to see both games by motoring from the afternoon game to the scene of the nocturnal encounter. Many colleges, likewise endowed with comparatively few local supporters—Lenoir-Rhyne for instance—have been forced to adopt it.

At a recent meeting of the Alumni association, a subscription list which will be published in The Blue Stocking from time to time, was commenced. Dr. S. C. Hays, president of the association, stated that a sum sufficient to take care of the cost of equipment necessary to install a system of flood lights to illuminate the field was expected from members of the association. However, a system of amplifiers, which is almost as necessary, would not be covered in the calculations. Dr. Hays issued a tentative appeal, pending discussion by the student body, that each student contribute toward a fund to secure the amplifying system.

"If each man would contribute at least one dollar—the cost of a half dozen packages of cigarettes — the system would become a fact. It is a personal matter with every member of the student body who wishes to see his alma mater stride forward, for besides being a great pleasure and accommodation to himself in his activities, it would be worth many times its cost in publicity to the institution."

The following names have already been signed to the subscription list, all being individuals and firms of Clinton:

P. C.'s Napoleon Of Finance Folds His Straight Razor And Silently Slips Away

Presbyterian college's champion Napoleon of nickles and successor to David Harum is no longer with us. Alas, poor John!—We knew him well; oft in the stilly night was the stillness rent by his clarion cry, even as the Swiss lad might have cried "Excelsior," HIS cry—"ROYAL DRY CLEANERS." Perhaps the fact that he, as advertising manager of The Collegian, accidentally allowed an UNORDERED, and consequently, gratis ad for the "College Pressing Club,' OF ALL ESTABLISHMENTS, to slip by his eagle eye into a column of the magazine had something to do with it. He has folded his straight razor (the one Stuart Campbell used to sharpen his pencils with) and silently stolen away. In the lonely room sits a slight figure, softly sobbing on its outstretched arms, oft and again raising its curly head upon its slender neck to gaze sadly at a relic left by its mate—room-mate—in the pigeon hole of the desk. It is a brown bottle (EMPTY, Mr. Carpenter and other student sleuths), and by its side is a small glass, up-side down (EMPTY, of course). It is Prince Charles. (Business done in the old stand: new management: See us for rates).

Rauch, for whom we predict a successful business career, was little known on the campus, being of a

Presbyterian Professors Pursue Varied Activities During Christmas Vacation

January the first, and the ivy-clad belfry has run forth its dreary summons for a new year of reading, writing, and analytics. Presbyterian's professors have packed away the imitation snow and tinsel, and with a gulp of coffee and a bite of turkey hash, have hurried back to dusty classrooms.

While students followed their usual program of sleeping, dancing, or possibly working, how did Clinton's sages pass the Yuletide?

Professor Huntley temporarily forgot all about past definites and present subjunctives of French verbs and hied himself to Liberty Hill for the holidays where he visited Mrs. Huntley's relatives. Among other things he went fox-hunting with a party including former Governor Richards, who, incidentally, is Mrs. Huntley's uncle. The chase, it seems, was long and exciting, but, unfortunately, foxless.

Professor Sturgeon played the part of nurse most of the Christmas holidays. Mrs. Sturgeon went down with flu, and no sooner had the professor's medicine mixing put her on the road to recovery, than his daughter, too, was stricken. However, all seem to be fully recovered now.

Professor Cook seems to be the

MONDAY, JANUARY 7, 1935

1935

THIS year will be part of no golden age, federal projects and alphabet soup notwithstanding. We are still in the age of steel and electricity, gauges and levers, and toil. Toil and men. Toil has been reduced, and men have spent part of their hours of leisure in demanding more. Developments in this will evidently cover tons of front page newsprint.

Millions of people now on government relief work must be cared for, yet Uncle Sam's gifts and expenses cannot continue forever. These people, or more correctly, we and our friends, will naturally be against ceasing aid. War veterans are more and more insistant upon the bonus. Fiscal affairs must be settled probably by an increase in taxation that will return most of the government funds to it. The principle is the same as that of a college giving scholarships to almost everyone and recovering the difference from higher fees than otherwise would be necessary.

Great changes may take place on international scale or local, but a happy new year will depend chiefly on everyone himself. Enjoyment of a dinner depends far more on the appetite than on whether turkey is served or beefsteak, and success in 1935 will be more in attitude than in tangible achievement or apparent failure. Happy New Year!

Teachers of Subjects Or Teachers of Students

THERE are three points from which colleges should or may be judged; the quality of those who are instructing, the quality of those who are being instructed, and the quality of the place where the teaching is done. All three of these must balance for the best work to be accomplished.

There are two types of professors now teaching in our colleges and universities. One derives his chief inspiration from learning, the other gathers his inspiration from the realities of life. The first type teaches subjects, the latter teaches students. The one is a research man, the other is beloved by the students. Indeed, one is not to be belittled for his attempts to penetrate into the unknown. "Many a false hypothesis must be constructed before the real one is found, and many a failure recorded before the goal is reached." Yet is it not just as absurd to make every student go into research as it is to make each one try to write poetry?

Students are undoubtedly entitled to professors who can teach, who can guide the student through his search for higher knowledge, who can inspire the student with a zest for learning. On the other hand, are not the professors entitled to students who can be taught, who will be taught, who want to be taught, or at least inspired to the spirit of learning? Putting the student in the light, just what kind is the ideal student?

Tests or entrance examinations that simply determine the information a student may be able to retain in his memory a day or two after having crammed for that particular examination are not valuable as a basis to judge the student. In fact, they do not deserve bothering with.

Dr. Hamilton Holt of Rollins College has recently said in an address before the Western Section of the State Teachers Association, "Personally, I would admit to Rollins any student above the intelligence of a moron and mature enough to carry on college work, provided that he showed capacity for improvement. He who keeps improving will surely amount to something, and he is worth educating."

The lecture system is possibly one of the worst schemes ever devised for imparting knowledge. It has the possibility of too many evils. Too many professors are likely to assume that what one man has acquired by a lifetime of the most painstaking observation, intensive thinking, and continued lengthy reflection and meditation can just be handed on by him and spoon-fed to any other man who has not gone through a similar process.

The student under the recitation system, it is assumed, spends two hours in preparation for a lesson and then recites about an hour in class. An investigation has shown that about ten per cent of the students study two hours, another ten per cent do not study two hours, while the intervening eighty percent do not study at all, or at the most twenty or thirty minutes in preparation for class. The recitation puts a premium on shirking.

If the student is what the name implies, he would be asking questions rather than vice-versa. The professor knows. The student does not know. Yet it is the professor who quizzes. Therefore, under the recitation system, the professor becomes a detective trying to find out the student's degree of unfaithfulness, and the marking system is the measure of insufficiency. Marks then tend to become the objective of the student rather than the mastery of the subject.

The conference plan now being practiced in so many colleges is perhaps the best yet to be tried by progressive educators. Students are assigned a "reasonable" amount of work to do and that is their class work. Classmates may consult each other in preparation and help each other in class. When that is completed they are through. As the student masters one part of a course under this system he progresses on to the next without waiting for the rest of the class. No attendance records are kept, only the accomplishment records. Students pay for their education and they get credit for what they learn and not for the mere attendance of class.

In other words, under this system, the sources of accumulated knowledge and wisdom which have come down through the ages are indicated; guides in the form of professors have been chosen because of their aptitude for and delight in working constructively and creatively with young people.

We Pity Them

A FRESHMAN of our acquaintance once boasted shamelessly that he had never read a book. The mere statement is not in itself particularly alarming. There are a great many people who have, in the proper sense of the word, never read a book. The ludicrous yet pathetic thing is that anyone would proudly lay claim to the very dubious distinction of never having read a book. We don't understand.

We know, however, that there is a large number among us who do not read. They cannot in strict truth make the unfortunate freshman's strange boast, but they are not so very far removed from being able to do it. They don't read and we suppose they never shall. The reading habit if not developed long years before college will never really be a part of life. The love of reading, like the love of music, must begin and must develop from childhood associations. College may fortify and strengthen the habit but it can't inject it into the arm like a serum.

Many of us hardly know what a library is. A book to that group is something that occasionally one must open and study—a set number of pages—no more. Not knowing how books look on a shelf. Not wanting to see their multi-colored forms in rows on a shelf. Not loving the sight of books, the feel of books, the reading of books. God pity them! We do.

There's nothing else that cools off a love for the common people like being elected.

Sometimes, however, a philanthropist is a man who is afraid to die without trying to square himself.

They aren't too old to spank if they aren't too old to need it.

Student Opinion

EXHORBITANT!

Editor, The Blue Stocking:

Twenty-five cents—one quarter of a dollar—to see a picture show! To the college man of unlimited means that sum is not even trivial, but to the average fellow, it is something that makes a definite hole in an already gaping pocketbook. There are so many average fellows at P. C. that a protest against the local picture show admittance charge will not pass unheeded.

Of course, we appreciate the two "dime days"—we patronize them—but how much greater would be our patronage if we could see any show at the local theatre for fifteen cents, which amount is neither too great nor too small, and which is the usual charge for college students in other localities. Clemson men never pay but fifteen cents at their local theatre — why should we pay more?

Certainly the P. C. boys furnish an exceptionally large per cent of the Casino's box office receipts—no other group of people in Clinton can even challenge our supremacy as leading theatre-goers. Also, it is certain that other institutions here in town receive special rates from the management. Why should we not receive like favors, or rather courtesies instead of favors?

The logical thing to do is to appoint a committee from the student body to visit the management of the theatre and request reduced rates. If this request is refused, a boycott would soon convince said management of its mistake, and a conciliation would be forthcoming. If we refuse to attend the show until our demands are met, our success is inevitable. It is a somewhat difficult task, but not impossible in the least. It's a worthy project, let's try it!

CHANGE THE HOLIDAYS!

Editor, The Blue Stocking:

Our Christmas holidays begin too soon and end in like manner — too soon. This year P. C. closed her doors a week and a half before Christmas—a full week before the other institutions in the state closed. P. C. reopened her doors on New Year's day—at least three days prior to the customary time for the resumption of college duties. Why is this? Why should we be granted such an inconvenient holiday period? The situation could be remedied in a moment's time if the faculty would only take the trouble to do so.

Our Yuletide leave of absence begins almost before the holiday spirit has been infused into the hearts and minds of average persons. We go home only to find that our college friends, our out-of-town relatives, and our holiday guests will not be at home for a week. Of course it is pleasant to be at home with our parents, but how much pleasanter it would be to wait until family, friends, relatives, and guests have returned home — to celebrate the entire holiday season with our loved ones instead of having to return to school when the joys and pleasures of Christmas and the New Year are just beginning to reach their height. We are back in school before the New Year festivities are even begun. To many people the New Year celebrations are supremely important—many fond memories and hopes are associated with the dethroning of the old year and the coronation of the new. Why are we denied these joys?

There is a faint rumbling to be heard here and there on the campus—it seems to say that the idea here proposed is undesirable because of a few students who can find employment before the holidays and who, for that reason, wish to leave school ten twelve days before Christmas. To minutely small group has corrupted our holidays too long. The overwhelming majority of the student body favors a change. Now is the time to act. Also, it would appear that there are multiple jobs to be had after Christmas by ardent seekers — cleaning debris, taking inventory, rearranging stock, renovating, moving, changing things.

There may be a few who will say that the writer favored the extra holiday following Thanksgiving and now reaping his just reward while complaining accordingly. Nothing could be farther from the truth. The proposal is to change the dates of the Christmas vacation so that if we are forced to make up a day or two, then we can do so without being dragged back to school when we most desire to be at home. It would be hypocrisy to complain at this late date of the decision which we made weeks ago.

There is no obvious reason for not rearranging our holidays, and since the concensus of opinion is definite and almost defiantly favorable to the change, the faculty is hereby requested to make the change before the next catalogue is published—thus preventing this atrocious state of affairs from annoying us next year.

THE KAMPUS KEYHOLE

— By —
PRESTON CHARLES

A new story drifts in about Odell Matthews, the Gay Lothario who is so noted for his amorous activities, and also for his unusual ability as a prevaricator. It seems that one evening, at 11:30 o'clock, Matthews was seen driving the family car home. Some acquaintances who happened to be passing by noticed him, and, thinking to catch him at last just after his evil work of undermining some poor hapless maiden's hitherto spotless character, one said, "Aha, Odell, now tell us where you've been tonight." But the great heart-despoiler was equal to any occasion. He replied, "Oh, I just took our preacher to the picture show."

Matthews, it will be remembered, is noted for his causing the expulsion of four Winthrop girls, which resulted when he was found in a dormitory during the week-end of the F. C.-Erskine game.

The Christmas season seems to have brought joy and cheer into the drab life of Roy Forehand (The Great Lover). He has a new picture in his room, with the autograph, "Love, Lyneath." The photographer's imprint gives the name of a town in Georgia. We wonder if this is the same one that Forehand kissed on the way back home from the Mercer football game. Will some kind soul please straighten it out for us? And also we wonder what will happen if a certain girl at Limestone reads this — and to say nothing of poor Stella Beckham — Out in the Cold Again."

Interesting Sights

Prof. Sturgeon back in the kitchen drying dishes.

Georgs Collett and Annie Lee Jackson holding their morning tete-a-tete in the seclusion of Jackson's car.

Wee Willie Jones scratching Frances Spratt's back. Page Cappelmann!

"Little Tyrant" Cranford giving orders to F.E.R.A. workers.

Suggested New Year Resolutions

Annie Lee Jackson: I resolve not to say a word aloud in classes.

Pug Perrin: I resolve to stay off the chain gang all the rest of the year.

Ervin Green: I resolve not to read a word of lewd reading matter, or give any of my enormous stock of lewd magazines to anyone else.

Dean Brown: I resolve not to use the phrase, "You will recall—."

Dr. Brimm: I resolve to wear a sporty-looking collar and tie every day.

George Cody: I resolve to refrain from cutting off the electric light switch in Spencer at night, and also from throwing water.

Prof. Graham: I resolve to get, and keep, a trim and youthful waistline.

Roy Forehand: I resolve to get a picture of Stella Beckham and also portraits of at least nine other girls.

Joe Patrick: I resolve to win the hand of Sophia Sullivan.

Sophia Sullivan: I resolve to do all I can to encourage Joe Patrick.

Marion Bird: I resolve to make more noise than ever before (if possible).

Cappelmann: I resolve to keep all college boys away from the Spratt home except myself.

Jimmie Seagle: I resolve to give the inhabitants of Spencer a break by improving my singing voice.

Bob Hannah: I resolve to bum no more cigarettes (hear! hear!)

Joe E. Brown: I resolve to make more and better statements for the press.

The columnist: I resolve to dish out more and better scandal.

THE PARADE GROUND

The juniors are to be in command of the companies this week and following too if the weather is suitable, while the seniors will be given that time in class room study. The juniors will be having their first experience at commanding a company and doubtless there will be the usual ludicrous About Face March, Squads RIGHT, and confusion of left and right; but anyway this period must be gone through with in the making of a soldier, and the "sooner the quicker." These new aspirants to higher places will be rotated in the positions of captain and lieutenant during these five days or more and will thus be given a chance to prove to those in charge that they deserve to be promoted, or rather that they don't deserve to be promoted.

Juniors and seniors in the advanced course, but especially those unfortunates on our campus who hold I. O. U.'s, promises to pay, etc., against the above gentlemen, have been in a state of anxiety (and in the second group, we suspect, a state of impatience) lately since the time will soon be here when the government will reward these men for the hour of sleep they sacrificed each day in order to become good soldiers of Uncle Sam. Evidently these checks were held back over Christmas so everyone could get the satisfaction of having something to come back to. But at any rate, these pay-days are like any other pay-days—the only calendar to those involved. The only difference is that here we only say "so many days till pay day" since we can't trace one back more than two days.

The annual make-overs in the unit are to be made at the end of this semester as usual. Some members, no doubt, will be "inflated" to higher positions than they now hold; and others will make room for them by suffering the effects of too much inflation. Others will remain the same and will remember the period only as one of the big scare; and while those who have been "busted" will raise the annual cry of injustice, and what not, we hope that the unpleasant sounds in our midst will be counteracted by the joy screams of the others who went up.

Practice for the Fourth Corps Area rifle match will begin here next week. Our team showed up favorably last year and since we have most of the old men back and since those vacant places will be filled by promising sophomores we see no reason why this standing should not be duplicated or bettered. Seargeant Young is coach, manager, etc. again and will be ready to give the boys the extra fine points which another year of age has given him. So far, however, he has failed to get the co-eds to engage in the opening meet with the varsity since they were not so successful in their attempts to disconcert very many of the firers last year. And, too, we suspect their captain has too much senior dignity to don overalls again.

Seniors who wish to take the air corps examination in the spring should be seeing about application and be preparing themselves to pass them when they are given. Powell Freeman, of last year's class, is now first sergeant of his company at Randolph field and is now taking up the blind flying part of the course there. This all goes to prove that "there ain't nothing short about the training one gets in this little school." A great opportunity is open in this field to anyone who is good enough not to be washed out, and we hope to see several of the men take the exams.

Captain Blanton lectured to the Reserve officers of Greenville, on the third of this month; but no statement could be drawn from him to tell us if that audience was any more capable of listening than his freshman class in map reading is.

Blue Stockings List Six Bouts

THE HIPPODROME

Monday and Tuesday—Shirley Temple in "Bright Eyes." A bright bit of entertainment, not too sad, not too gay, not to incredible. Shirley Temple, orphan, is sheltered by the boys at a flying field, and quite firmly but without benefit of legality, adopted by Jimmy Dunn. A battle ensues when one, Uncle Ned (Charles Sellon), a grouchy old fellow in a wheel chair, sets his soft, old heart on having the child. The end is pretty exciting, what with James and Shirley bailing out of a doomed plane, Jimmy being accused of kidnapping her, and a courtroom scene where a judge brings Jimmy and his estranged sweetheart, Judith Allen, together again, and makes a happy ending all around. A fine characterization is offered by Jane Withers, a little girl not much older than Shirley. Charles Sellon is superb in this Fox production.

Wednesday—"Elinor Norton." This attempt to photograph the strange quirks of a diseased mind is hopeless from the start. It is an unbelievably dull picture. Taken from Mary Roberts Rinehart's story, "The State versus Elinor Norton," there is nothing left of "The State," and very little of the audience after the first reel. Claire Trevor, Hugh Williams, Gilbert Roland, Norman Foster and Henrietta Crossman can't lift this Fox film from complete boredom.

Thursday — "Helldorado." A Fox picture with Richard Arlen and Madge Evans. This is such a new picture that no reviews have been written as yet. However, it should be worth seeing.

Friday — "College Rhythm." Get ready with a sis boom rah for another bright and tuneful collegiate musical with football star Jack Oakie stealing girl friend Mary Brian from Lanny Ross, and Joe Penner adding gales of laughter. A wow is Joe, and no mistake. The music is catchy, the comedy hilarious, and the climax hysterical with the nuttiest football game ever played. Helen Mack, Lydo Roberti and George Barbier help greatly in this excellent Paramount production.

Saturday—"The Fighting Ranger." A Columbia western with Tim McCoy.

Did You Know That?

Arthur Fear, baritone of Convent Garden, London, gave a concert at Converse college on December 4. This concert marked Mr. Fear's first appearance in America. His musical training was received largely at the Royal Academy of Music in London, where he studied under Thomas Meux. A student's performance of "Falstaff" at the Academy won him his first professional engagement with the British National Opera. This was followed by an invitation to join the Convent Opera Garden company.

He has a voice of broad range and resource of temperament as well as tone. His enunciation was nearly perfect and his choice of selections was a happy one. The concert was opened with an aria from Mozart's "Le Nozze de Figaro." This was followed by two old arias by Handel. His best group was the German lieder. In this group he sang, beautifully, Schubert's "Am Meer," "Lachen und Weinen" and "Der Atlas." The last one was exceptionally well done and would have been perfect if the artist had not used operatic gestures to help put it over. The text was dramatic enough without this little aid which is considered bad taste in a concert recital.

For his encores, Mr. Fear sang "Five Eyes" by Gibbs, "When Dull Care" by Leveridge, and the rollicking aria from Rossini's "Barber of Seville." This last number was an adroit interpretation of this extremely difficult number.

The British baritone was enthusiastically received and was applauded with deserved cordiality. Edwin McArthur at the piano shared in the success of the evening.

Our Swan Song

All good things must eventually come to an end. We believe there is an old maxim running something like that. But even if possibly original we think it nonetheless true. For with this issue a work-worn staff dons hat and coat and says goodbye to The Blue Stocking and its avid public.

Leaving somewhat apprehensive as to our ability as journalists, we should like someone unbiasedly to affirm or discredit our apprehension. Not having such a one (or not having looked for fear of finding him), we are prone to go back ourselves and compute the results of our regime. Summing up what we have tried to do would be like labelling the drawing of a cow. We won't be as obviously fearful as that. You are the judges and we hope that in your estimation we have in some measure succeeded. We hope we have given you something a little interesting, amusing, scandalous, or what-you-will. We take pride in a few things we have reported and said in these brief pages. But our own pride is worthless without your approval.

You have been considerate enough (or do we not know and hear all?) At times you have exhibited enthusiasm. We appreciate it. We quit a trifle reluctantly. We flatter ourselves by thinking that maybe you are a trifle reluctant to see us go.

But all good things must come to an end—so with hats and coats on we slip out quietly and shut the door.

——— Succeeding to P. F. R. J. ———

What Price Comedy?

On seeing a recent screen performance we thought of what someone had given us as the difference between Will Rogers and Joe Penner, "One is unconsciously funny, and the other is just unconscious."

Now for several days we have seen supposedly intelligent persons ambling around, goo-goo-ing (without the aid of a duck), and making motions almost as nonsensical as the would-be wit himself. And the worst part of their movie-influenced actions is that they expect us to laugh! If we don't, either they feel hurt or they excuse us as not being able to appreciate the "artistic things of life."

We remember once hearing an explanation of why we like to frequent the theatre; it is something like this: If we see a comedy in which, for instance, the lead is forcibly ejected by the father of his lady-love, and he lands on his head or the seat of his pants, we enjoy the entertainment because we were not in the poor chump's place. We gloat over the fact that here is one whose actions are less sensible than ours. If, on the other hand, we see the suitor turn the tables and egress victoriously with the object of his affections, then we imagine ourselves to be in his role, and we leave the theatre smiling, believing that we, and not the actor, have been victorious. In other words, if the hero is a hero, we delight in being a hero. If he is a villain, we prove ourselves on [illegible]. It is a senseless [illegible] cracker, we revel in classing ourselves with the intelligentsia.

Perhaps it is this which affords Joe Penner his apparent success. But to us he is outright detestable and nauseating. Seldom is there any humor in his antics; and never is there any wit. Comedy is a necessity of life; but foolishness is no synonym.

Critics and Criticism

"I never saw a school where the student body criticized the administration so frankly and freely" said a student from another college.

There is no such thing as a situation which cannot be improved. Blindness to the imperfections of an institution is not loyalty. It is stupidity. Honest criticism is a certain sign of interest in progress. Constructive criticism is one of the greatest possibilities of a logical mind. We do not feel that the severe criticism of the college indicates disloyalty, but an absorbing interest in improvement.

On the other hand, too much destructive criticism is a help to no one. A criticism made without possibility of result degenerates into mere "griping," and is worse than useless.

Let us see what we have had the gall to criticize recently.

1. Faculty interference in student affairs.
2. Meals.
3. Lack of P. C. Spirit.
4. Compulsory Military Science.
5. Compulsory Freshman Math.
6. Compulsory Comprehensive Exams.

We contend that every criticism has two sides, and that neither the critic nor the criticized is always wholly right.

We think the administration of any college will bear improvement. It is our honest opinion that the faculty and its methods will bear improvement. We are positive that the student body will bear improvement. Most of all, we KNOW that WE ourselves will bear improvement.

If this be treason, make the most of it.

All For PFRJ and PFRJ For All

A cause so worthy, a need so great, we feel that each one of our readers will do his best to help the PFRJ. It is a cause for which many in times past have given their strength. And now the work has been left up to you, gentle readers, to carry on as those before us have so unselfishly begun.

It may mean sacrificing for some of you, giving more of your time and money. But any great project can be accomplished only by drops of sweat from the brow of red-blooded patriots. And the PFRJ is no exception. It will require fighting opposition to the end. Nothing good comes through little effort.

And so in this last issue of The Blue Stocking of the electorial year, we appeal to your humanitarian outlook. For the better of the country and the world at large we beseech you: Sacrifice for the PFRJ.

Free, Did You Say?

(The State, Columbia)

News from Germany says: "Elsa Sittell, New York woman, was free after 11 days in jail for 'insulting' Reichfuehrer Adolf Hitler. She was free, that is to do anyhting but talk."

Free? As a kite without a tail is "free" to fly. As a bird with pinioned wings is "free" to soar. As Cavalcade, with hobbles about those amazingly slender legs, would be "free" to race. As a hound on a leash is "free" for the chase. As one blindfolded is "free" to enjoy a sunset. As Paderewski with broken wrists would be "free" to play the piano.

Free? A woman "free" to do anything but talk!

The [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

THE KEY OF THE UNIVERSE

[illegible] Nearly a hundred years [illegible] which drifted eastward across the Atlantic and [illegible] and retold by round-eyed [illegible] to every inn and ale-house made high and low feel that they were living in a continuous fairy tale full of wonders, monsters and strange happenings. It was, in truth, a mighty century; and yet there are those who, without belittling the [illegible] voyagers, [illegible] the discovery of the [illegible] was a mere [illegible] which [illegible] recent explorations of our boundless but finite universe and the discovery of the countless little universes which are [illegible] themselves.

One difference is that though we laymen suspect that something of supreme importance has been going [illegible], and speculate on discoveries have been made, our Columbuses and Einsteins have not brought back from the jumping-off places of the universe any golden nuggets or aromatic spices or exotic living creatures as understandable trophies of their voyages. About all we can learn from the lofty and slippery wall of ignorance which confronts us is the conviction that we know little or nothing about time or space or even the electricity which we buy so freely at a few cents a kilowatt hour.

There is, of course, a practical answer which should perhaps silence these lamentations of ignorance. We shall be told that if our modest intellectual equipment causes us to funk these higher jumps which Mr. Einstein and other scientists have set for us, there are plenty of others within our powers. There is always bridge or contract or even chess; and every newspaper has its syndicated crossword puzzles and so-called brain teasers.

This vigorous snub should perhaps put in their places those humble learners who want to learn for the sheer thrill and pleasure of learning and knowing; but it does not answer those practical souls who are beginning to realize the extent to which mathematics is invading every field of everyday life. It does not answer the youngster who wants to build bridges or skyscrapers and knows that he must mix higher mathematics with his mortar, build it into his foundations, and use it to test every I beam and angle iron that goes into his work. It does not answer the young research physician or biologist or chemist or industrial engineer who knows that he cannot reach the top of his profession owing to his lack of advanced mathematical knowledge. It does not answer him who has discovered, or thinks he has discovered, that higher mathematics is the master key of the universe.

There are still those who suppose that this untranslatable language we call mathematics is as dead as classical Latin or Sanskrit. They have no one to tell them that it is as truly a living science as physics or chemistry; that new and startling advances in it are still being made every few years, and that with every day that passes it becomes more and more interwoven with our daily lives and with familiar things of which we make daily use. Industry recognizes, in a measure, its debt to this science. Our larger electrical and telephone companies have fostered it consistently, and in recent years farsighted insurance companies have thought it worth their while to support mathematical research.

Every circumstance points to the belief that if we are to keep up with the procession of human progress our schools and colleges will have to devote more time to this subject, offer more advanced courses and stress their importance to every student who hopes to make any real progress in the physical sciences.

THE HIPPODROME

MOVIES

Monday and Tuesday—Jackie Cooper and Wallace Beery in "Treasure Island." With a zip and a zoom, a gusto and a sturdy "yo, ho, ho" this story of Treasure Island swings into action right at the start, carries thrills, chills, suspense and stirring drama right smack through to the heart-touching end. It is a beautiful, moving, inspired and inspiring picture that will appeal not only to children, and have them right on the edge of the seat with enjoyment, but will do just about as much to adventure-loving adults. It gives you a cheerful glow, a decided life out of the run of ordinary things. The picture stands the acid test of reality—meaning by that this—you find yourself taking part in the life of exciting adventure, quest of treasure trove; you feel the sting of the salt sea spume on your face in warm, tropical waters of a land of mystery and fascination. In other words, you live the roles you see before you on the screen. You are taken out of yourself. And it has such enjoyable characters as Lionel Barrymore as Billy Jones, Jackie Cooper as Jim Hawkins, Wallace Beery as Long John Silver, Chic Sale as old Ben Gunn, and Otto Kruger as Dr. Livesey, and Nigel Bruce as Squire Trelawney. All grandly entertaining. And grandly exhilirating. This MGM picture is a monument to Robert Louis Stevenson.

Wednesday—"That's Gratitude." An amusing story, written, directed and acted by Frank Croven. In return for a favor, Arthur Byron entertains Craven at his home, where the guest lingers too long and becomes involved in intimate family affairs, with excruciating results. Helen Ware, Mary Carlisle and Charles Sabin make up the cast for this Columbia picture.

Thursday — "The White Parade." Blessed with fine acting and superb direction, here is a picture you'll long remember. Against a hospital background which is at all times genuine and human are portrayed the good times, the bad times, the dreams and ideals of a group of girls in nurses training. Loretta Young, giving the best performance in her career, stands out in the group. A Cinderella love story threads through the picture, with John Boles, wealthy play-boy, as the Prince Charming and Miss Young his desired. Jane Darwell, as the soft-hearted head nurse who must be stern, is outstanding. The entire supporting cast, particularly Sara Haden, Muriel Kirkland and Dorothy Wilson, is excellent. It's a beautiful, a heart-stirring picture which keeps you trembling between tears and laughter.

Friday—"Redhead." Grace Bradley doesn't believe in the old adage of never marrying a man to reform him, for she does just that and it works. When Bruce Cabot is disowned by his father, Grace marries him and signs an agreement with the father, Berton Churchill, to reform the boy in exchange for $10,000 and a divorce. Grace then trades in her new husband's roadster for a hamburger wagon, Bruce gets a job, and she remains his wife in this Monogram production.

OUR SINCEREST NEW YEAR'S GREETINGS TO THE COLLEGE BOYS AND FACULTY
L. B. DILLARD

Did you ever notice..in a roomful of people..the difference between one cigarette and another..and wonder why Chesterfields have such a pleasing aroma

Many things have to do with the aroma of a cigarette . . . the kind of tobaccos they are made of . . . the way the tobaccos are blended . . . the quality of the cigarette paper.

IT takes good things to make good things.

Someone said that to get the right aroma in a cigarette, you must have the right quantity of Turkish tobacco —and that's right.

But it is also true that you get a pleasing aroma from the home-grown tobaccos . . . tobaccos filled with Southern Sunshine, sweet and ripe.

When these tobaccos are all blended and cross-blended the Chesterfield way, balanced one against the other, you get a flavor and fragrance that's different from other cigarettes.

Basketball, Tennis, Swimming and Baseball Teams Will Be Organized To Compete In Athletic Program On Campus.

Intramural basketball began taking acive form last week when the representative teams gathered at all hours for a brief practice, to be able to play the first round matches in the tournament which is a part of the contest for the big silver cup offered by Blue Key.

Winner and runner-up of the basketball tourney will receive twelve and seven points respectively in their try for the cup, and first and second in the consolation flight will receive four points and two, announces D. W. Boggs, in charge of the sport.

Later on similar contests will be had between the six fraternities and four dormitories in three other sports—swimming, tennis, and baseball—and possibly wrestling, if several are interested, with other members of Blue Key in charge.

The matches of the first round begin Tuesday at 7:30 when the A. K. P.'s play Spencer, immediately after which, at 8:30 the A. L. T.'s encounter Smythe.

On Wednesday the Pi Kappa Phi team has a game at 7:30 with Alumni, and an hour later Beta Kappa plays Laurens. Next Monday the K. A.'s and Pi K. A.'s lock horns, the winner to have a bye until the third round, according to the schedule which listed all the flights and times on the bulletin board.

Blue Key sponsorship of other intramural sports will be directed by G. W. Dunlap in swimming, H. E. Bolick in baseball, and R. M. Perrin in tennis.

Team captains are the presidents of the six social fraternities or whoever they choose, and the dormitories will be led by Alex McCrackin for Spencer, "Cat" Carothers for Alumni, "Soupy" Millsap of Laurens, and the red-haired barber Underwood of Smythe.

Lineups have not been announced, and will probably change from game to game as one player and another forges ahead in the competition for the great all-campus team, official record-keeper John Woodward says.

Local Musicians Play For Visitors

"Shorty" McDonald and his College Orchestra broke into collegiate fame last week-end as they played in the dining hall for the visiting "dates."

The evening meal on Friday and Saturday was greatly enlivened by the fast and furious music of the orchestra.

The music was so well received and encores so loudly demanded that the modulator (Shorty to you) had to blushingly but firmly refuse to make it an all night affair.

Tried as an experiment by the Pan-Hellenic council, the arrangement was so successful that it will probably become a regular feature of the school dances.

Dr. Rhame Heads County Physicians

At the regular meeting of the Laurens County Medical society held last Monday, Dr. D. O. Rhame, Jr., was elected president for the coming year.

Dr. Rhame is the a college [illegible] and a Presbyterian college graduate. The Blue Stocking extends its hearty congratulations to him.

PAN-HELLENIC DANCES FEATURE WEEK-END ON LOCAL CAMPUS

Regular Spring Celebration Is Staged By Fraternities and Enjoyed By Many. Hod Williams' Orchestra Plays.

This past week-end old Copeland hall swayed and swagged once more to the tune of dancing feet as Presbyterian college dance lovers enjoyed one of the most successful and delightful series of dances in the history of the school.

The music was furnished by Hod Williams and his eleven-piece orchestra which used as its theme song, "Memories of You" and which played excellent dance tunes the whole time. Hod's orchestra has been playing over WBT from the Hotel Charlotte in Charlotte, N. C. for some three months now and is recognized as the best orchestra in the Carolinas. He has had wide experience in the musical world and is widely known by a host of radio listeners and dance lovers in this section.

An unusual number of alumni, out-of-town girls and friends from other colleges attended all of the dances—

Limestone 'Y' Team Coming Thursday

A deputation team, under the leadership of "Boots" Ankers, of the Limestone college Y. W. C. A., will present a special program at the "Y" meeting Thursday evening at 6:30. The visiting group's program will be [illegible] by several musical numbers [illegible] along with short, interesting talks.

This is the first of a series of deputations which are to visit the P. C. campus throughout the spring [illegible]

DR. ALMON EDWIN SPENCER

(The following appeared in the "Clinton Folks You Know" column of last week's issue of The Clinton Chronicle. It is reprinted here because of its interest to students and alumni of Presbyterian College).

Dr. A. E. Spencer, vice-president and professor of Greek and French of Presbyterian college, was born in Tuskegee, Ala. He graduated from Center college at Danville, Ky., after which he came to Reidville in this state, where he taught several years. He received the degree of M. A. from Center college, and in 1914 his alma mater conferred upon his the honorary degree of doctor of laws.

As a young teacher Dr. Spencer came to Clinton in 1891 as professor of Greek and French in Clinton college, now known as Presbyterian. He has been connected with the institution longer than any other individual and ranks as dean of the faculty. He has served on several occasions both as its president and acting president.

Dr. Spencer has not confined his interest to the college but has entered into the civic life and development of the community. He is a former president of the Chamber of Commerce and has held many posts of honor and responsibility in the affairs of the city. Since 1894 he has served as an active elder in the First Presbyterian church, holding the position of clerk of the session. He has served as a commissioner to the general assembly and as moderator of the Synod of South Carolina. He is the beloved teacher of the Men's Bible class of the First church.

Presbyterian college—Clinton — Dr. Spencer—these names are inseparable. He has made his mark in the city, quietly and faithfully he goes about his work and has proved himself to be a man of force and character and purpose.

Dr. and Mrs. Spencer, before marriage, Miss Martha Calvert of Reidville, make their home on the college campus.

Clemson-P. C. Fights On Next Saturday

On next Saturday night at eight o'clock the Presbyterian leather pushers will meet the highly-praised and powerful Clemson mittmen in Leroy Springs gymnasium.

The Clemson fighters emerged victorious over the Gamecocks on last Friday night, taking six bouts to the University men's two.

Registration For Second Term Less

Five new students partially fill the gaps left by those leaving school and registration for the second semester is 262 as compared with 288 in September.

The decrease is due to the normal withdrawal of about five percent during the fall term and the failure of several to return for the second semester. Besides, R. P. Hamer and Miss Annie Lee Jackson completed all their required work and need only wait until June for diplomas.

T. T. Fowler has gone to Greenville where he will be able to work and also meet classes at Furman.

Upper classmen have welcomed the reappearance of George Oliver on the campus as a senior again after long treatment for veretebral trouble in a Charlotte hospital. He will make no more brilliant distance runs, but at least he is back.

The four other names added to the rolls are: Bernard Fitzharris, Florence, S. C.; M. B. Tate, Saxe, Virginia; J. T. Templeton, Anderson, S. C.; and John G. Willingham, Laurens, S. C.

Doyle Boggs Leads Superlative Contest

Popular Student Gets Four First Places In Voting. Wysor Most Popular Professor.

The Junior-Senior superlative contest sponsored by The Blue Stocking and the Pac-Sac ended last week with Doyle Boggs, student body president, capturing major honors. He was named "Most popular," "Most militaristic," "Best all-round," and "Most promising." Only three other men gained more than one of the superlatives. Mary Workman was named as the most popular co-ed; and Capt. R. E. Wysor carried off the nomination for most popular professor.

Few of the contests were close; most being won by large margins. The most outstanding example of this feature is the rave for "Best all-round athlete," which Harry Bolick won easily, a few others, however, were extremely close because of the fact that such a great number of men were given mention. An instance of this was "Best sport," in which nineteen men received one or more votes each. Bob Perrin finally won out with six votes.

The balloting in this contest was limited to Juniors and Seniors, a fact which accounts for the closeness of some contests. Then, too, only about half the members of the two classes took the trouble to cast their ballots.

The following are the winners in the various departments with the name of the runner-up following

Charlestonians Win By 4½ To 3½ Count

Several Good Fights Appear On Card Here Friday. P. C. Wins Two, Citadel Two, and Cadets Get One Forfeit.

A growling, snarling Citadel Bulldog ripped out a 4 1-2 to 3 1-2 victory from an all-wool Presbyterian Blue Stocking boxing team here Friday night in a match marked by three draws.

In the opening bout of the festivities, Seagle of P. C. and Nelson of Citadel fought to a draw in one of the closest scraps of the evening. Seagle took the fight to his opponent in the first round, but in the second the Citadel bantamweight made a strong come-back and landed several lusty swings. The final round was nip and tuck with neither man seeming to have the edge.

McCaskill, of Presbyterian, and Dillard, of Citadel, fighting in the featherweight division, supplied the card with the second draw in as many bouts. Dillard was of the long, rangy type, cool practically every minute of the time and continually flailing with pole-like arms. McCaskill's strongest bid for the decision came in the final round.

The next fight, between lightweights Clark and Padgett, was clearly Clark's from the end of the first stanza. The Presbyterian mittman was constantly on the aggressive and landed terrific lefts and rights to the face and body. Early in the struggle, Cadet Padgett's nose stopped a punch that left him bleeding profusely.

The fourth bout, the welter-weight, ended in a decision for Butt, Citadel, over McClary, P. C. Butt owned a powerful left mitt and did not fail to utilize it. He peppered the face of the Hose fighter from time to time and then followed up with his right. McClary put up a stiff battle and showed excellent form at times. The chief difference in the two fighters seemed to be the comparatively stronger left of Butt.

Horton, of Citadel, took the decision over Williams, of Presbyterian, in the senior welter-weight scrap. Williams, fighting his first bout, gave the Citadel boxer plenty of [illegible] but was hard capped by the lack of [illegible] and left few openings for blows to the body or face. From the exhibition Friday night, it appears likely that Williams will develop into a much better fighter.

Because of the [illegible] of Holliday, P. C. scrapper, the middle weight bout was forfeited to Townsend of Citadel.

"King Kong" Cappelman, also making his debut in inter-collegiate boxing circles as a varsity man, punched

BASKETBALL FOR THE WEEK

In an interesting double bill, Wofford varsity and frosh basketeers administered decisive drubbings to Presbyterian's quintets, the Terrier varsity winning by a 55 to 32 count, and the Terrier Pups by 35 to 32.

In the varsity contest, the two teams mixed it up on even terms for the duration of the first quarter, but superior accuracy in shooting on the part of Wofford caused the gap to widen and eventually develop into a one-sided affair. Presbyterian's "Red" Wyatt took scoring honors with a total of 16 points, followed closely by Norrell, the Terrier guest-man, who counted 14. Kinard and Anderson [illegible] for Wofford, and Lee and Cochran [illegible] for the [illegible] were [illegible] P. C. Wyatt, [illegible] his scholastic and athletic career, prior [illegible]

The [illegible] of the two [illegible] tions provided a more interesting contest than did their varsity brothers. Hodges, Wofford center, was the undisputed star of the game, his only opponent for that honor being "Little Wandy" Woodward, diminutive Blue Sox forward.

In a rough and tumble contest, characterized by its gridiron tactics, the College of Charleston showed more ability to "take it," and by a 35 to 21 score defeated P. C. on the latter's court.

La Roche, Charleston center, used his height to advantage and proved himself to be the leading light of the [illegible]

"The Old Order Changeth . . ."

With this issue of The Blue Stocking a new staff faces you for the first time. It is a new staff in that it is reorganized, has new aims and, we hope, new determination. You will find in looking it over that few names occur that are not familiar to you. The old men have been retained because it is the honest belief of the editor that they are the best men in school for the jobs that they are running. The new ones have been added because of the belief that they have the ability to become the best men in school for the jobs to which they have been assigned.

The biggest change that you will notice is a change in policy and purpose. You will continue to find the scandal spread before your eyes by our able and beloved Walter Winchell. You will continue to read a weekly column of military news and tid-bits. The student opinion column is still a place in which you are at liberty to speak your mind—so long as you are gentlemanly and fair in the way that you speak it. ALL THE NEWS will continue to be presented to you in the most interesting manner possible. In all these things you will find the new staff a little more determined but still very similar to the old. But the change is that for the next year the rule of the paper shall be tabloid rather than conservative. Conservative journalism has to a large extent passed out of the picture, and its passing shall be reflected in these pages.

As to editorial policy: it shall be to champion that which is worthy of praise and approval and to condemn that which is worthy of censure. The days of long and laborious editorials in this paper have ended. The chief objective is brevity, conciseness, and interest.

We are taking command full of optimism, hope, and good intentions. It is our desire to give you the best paper that you have ever had. We ask not only your cooperation but also your criticism.

"Within Those Cloistered Walls"

For a long time, our school has lacked one of the outstanding and praiseworthy essentials of any college's existence — intramural sports. Recently, however, the local chapter of the Blue Key, the "leadership fraternity," has inaugurated an extended program of intramural sports, and in doing so proves itself worthy of the name which it bears. It is to be highly praised for this constructive and forward step in the athletic program of the school, and for thus filling a vast and unnecessary gap in our college life.

Intercollegiate sports have become the most important athletic phase of college life, but they offer success in the sporting world to only a small group. The average, mediocre college man has not the slightest chance of experiencing the thrills and pleasures of competitive sports—his only possibility lies in playing with those classmates who, like himself, have not the ability to make the varsity. Intramural sports open the door of athletics to all who will enter, not merely to those who specialize in physical attainments. The student who has never learned to play, who has never learned the rules of good sportsmanship from actual experiences on the athletic field, has failed to attain one of the most important objects of the American college system. He has missed one of the essentials of a well-rounded education. However, intramural sports bind together the ends of an otherwise loose educational string, and give a moderately active man a chance to learn and appreciate his own physical powers, to give growth to those latent qualities of good sportsmanship which characterize every educated, successful human being. We thank the Blue Key for bringing them to our campus, and we wish to lend our support to the ultimate success of this most important movement.

NOTES AND SHADES

"LA FORZA DEL DESTINO"—VERDI

On Saturday afternoon, January 18, the Metropolitan Opera Company presented for the first time on the air a complete opera, Verdi's "Force of Destiny." Since this opera is a revival the radio audience was extremely fortunate in hearing a dramatic and musically beautiful work.

Elisabeth Rethberg, the Saxon soprano, sang the role of Leonora. This was her third appearance in the role since this artist made her sensational debut at the Metropolitan Opera House with Enrico Caruso. Madame Rethberg, with her beautiful tonal quality, was in excellent voice and sang the taxing music with opulence of tone and unusual clarity. However, since this part is Miss Ponselle's favorite, it is regrettable that this American prima donna wasn't "among those present."

Giovanni Martinelli, in better voice than ever, sang the role of Don Alvaro, Leonora's lover. His great aria in the second act and all the duets with Armando Borgioli, as Don Carlo, were delivered in a more than satisfying manner. This was quite evident due to the thunderous applause which greeted these two singers.

Gladys Swarthout, in the role of Preziosilla, the little gypsy, sang her part well, and Alfredo Gandolfi supplied the required comedy. Ezio Pinza, singing the role of the Abbot, was the surprise of the afternoon. Never has this sterling artist been heard to better advantage. His duet with Mme. Rethberg was the essence of pure bel canto.

Vincenzo Bellezza conducted with his accustomed brilliance and made the most of this very sad and melodious Verdian masterpiece.

MOVIES

Monday and Tuesday—Greta Garbo in "The Painted Veil." Somerset Maugham's story, lighted by Miss Garbo's presence, is distinguished and powerful on the screen. Garbo has seldom been more real or compelling than in the tragic role of the girl who goes with her doctor husband (Herbert Marshall) to China, there realizes a consuming passion for another (George Brent), suffers the heartbreak of his disappointment, and then discovers a love greater than passion for her husband amid a cholera epidemic. Director Richard Boleslawski has captured a tremendous movement and tense realism in his climatic scenes, but in other a vagueness hampers the film's meaning. Marshall is as polished as usual. Brent plays his scenes convincingly and with warmth. Jean Hersholt, Forrester Harvey and Cecilia Parker are distinctive in small roles in this excellent MGM production.

Wednesday—"Million Dollar Baby." No reviews available.

Thursday—Picture not yet selected.

Friday—"Gentlemen Are Born." Franchot Tone gives his most able performance to date in this modern story of four pals just out of college, struggling to place themselves in their professions. Nick Foran, as Smudge, is good, and the other major parts, played by Jean Muir, Ross Alexander, Margaret Lindsay, Ann Dvorak and Robert Light, are convincing. In spite of its trend of hopelessness, you'll enjoy this First National picture, for it's real.

Saturday "Murder in the Clouds." This production is not outstanding but has considerable entertainment value which is made more interesting by the capable performances of Ann Dvorak, Lyle Talbot and Gordon Westcott.

WITH THE GREEKS

Only two fraternities on the campus have had elections of new officers for the second semester, the rest having made selections some months back to last for a full year.

Pi Kappa Phi elected a junior, Frank Holliday, to carry them thru the remainder of the year, on the resignation of Doyle Boggs, archon for the first semester. Robert McLees was reelected treasurer, and Lawrence Mixson was named secretary.

Pi Kappa Alpha will be led next term by Allsobrook McCall, of Florence. Cliff Johnson is vice-president; Alan Levi, treasurer, and Jimmy Winget, secretary.

Although the threat of exams has cut down somewhat on the individual social achievements of many fraternity men, some fraternities have managed to stage social affairs.

Beta Kappa and Alpha Kappa Pi both put on parties th esame evening, that of January 11.

Beta Kappa fraternity announces the addition of a new pledge, Tom Talmage, of Wyssnes, Ga. He is a member of the sophomore class.

BOOK REVIEW

By Keitt Darby

"ANTHONY ADVERSE" — Hervey Allen

Once in a lifetime a book emerges that strikes the reader with its beauty of construction, language, description, plot—in short a worthwhile novel. It has been my rare privilege to read such a book—"Anthony Adverse." It is useless to attempt describing the smallest part of the story, for who can put the contents of 1300 pages (and not fifty of them dull) into a brief review?

This book is a panorama of eighteenth century civilizations and countries that had not then reached the stage where they could safely be called civilized. The tale sweeps with a vivid and awe-inspiring intensity across pages packed with fine powers of description, easy, charming and dramatic, style, subtle satire and realistic situations and characters.

The central figure of this fictional biography is the namesake of the book. His entire life is traced with a masterful pen, telling a charming and [illegible] taking everything that it had to offer. It is this strong central character—a man begot in France, born to an unsuspecting "father" in the Alps, and who spent his wild and breathlessly romantic life on three continents — it is about this colorful figure that Allen paints a glorious picture of one of the most red-blooded and hard-living periods of the world's history. He weaves into the hundreds of characters who are more than mere ink on paper, but who step out of the pages to become your friends and enemies for long years to come.

It is much longer than most books but then it is much more engrossing than most books and it has a theme whose vastness demands its thirteen hundred pages. It is better written than almost any ten best sellers that you will pick up on a day's stroll through any man's book shop.

To you, prospective indulgers in this rich experience: If you want a thrilling tale of adventure, of love, of history romantically recorded, and of multitudes of other things that a good book should have, if you want all these get "Anthony Adverse," read it and thrill as I have to its color[illegible]. If you want a [illegible] pathetically; if you want a sound philosophy as to God's relations with men; if you want a subtly drawn miner characterization of a man's entire life, soul and experiences, read "Anthony Adverse."

THE PARADE GROUND

Well, in this sixth day after make-overs, in the sixth year of our present P. M. S. and T., the third year of our assistant P. M. S. and T., and in the year of our "excellent" rating, the fifth, a new columnist bids farewell to the old and extends greetings to those who regularly read this column. May military life during this new semester be full of pleasant surprises to all!

Captain Wysor reports that his jovial and rather corpulent secretary has returned in the best of health, and is ready for the hard labors which are certain to swamp him soon. We hope that the Captain will not have as much trouble with his secretary as the sophomores have when this same secretary is conducting their quizzes.

The corps area rifle matches are now in progress, and as soon as they are over the Hearst trophy matches will take place. If our team shoots as well in these matches as some of the members do in practice, the Hearst trophy is practically ours now. However, if the team shoots as it did against the co-eds last year, we had better withdraw from competition and devote our time to drill.

It seems that five of our outstanding generals have decided to take to the air in the near future. Perrin, Yearout, Clark, and Carothers have decided to apply for admission to the air corps, the first exam coming some time in March. They have our best wishes for a flighty success, and may they do as well as Powell Freeman, who entered the air corps last year from P. C. and is now a first sergeant among a bevy of army regulars and crack West Pointers. Mory glory to P. C.!

The sophomores, at least, can't say that they have nothing to live for any more. Captain Blanton is expounding his views on automatic rifles, military history, and extended order now—all at the same time. The automatic rifle alone would offer a fine major for any college, and with history and drill to fill in spare moments and spice up the program, idleness is no longer in vogue.

The make-overs and shake-ups have come and gone. Appointments are many, disappointments are few. This means that we have an either exceptionally good or unusually rotten battalion—the result would be the same in either case. Following are the most important changes: Cadet Lieutenant Colonel, D. W. Boggs; Cadet Major J. M. Seagle; Cadet Captains, H. E. Bolick, commanding Co. "C"; J. G. Jeanes, commanding Co. "B"; T. E. Carothers, commanding Co. "A"; C. E. Elliott, commanding the Band; R. M. Perrin, L. A. McCall, and J. P. Todd of the Battalion staff.

STUDENT OPINION

CIRCULATION REFORMS

Editor, The Blue Stocking:

"The Blue Stocking" is too valuable a paper and it costs to much hard labor to be strewn carelessly over the floor of the dining hall. Distributing the paper at meals is very inconvenient. Handing it out as one large, unfolded sheet is unnecessary and foretells laziness on the part of those who have charge of circulation. However, there is a remedy for each of these faults.

The most logical place to distribute the paper is in the mail boxes. If it is impossible for the staff to do this, some of the FERA lads who vainly strive to break ground in front of Smyth dormitory every day could be utilized to fold the papers neatly and place them in the mail boxes. This would correct the disorderly method now used and prevent an entirely useless waste of good paper. It would also create a greater respect for the paper, because distributing "The Blue Stocking" in this convenient way would make it seem more like a newspaper than a grocery store advertisement — which is exactly what it appears to be now, in that it is distributed like one and treated accordingly. For the betterment of the paper and for the benefit of the staff and readers alike, put the paper in the post office every week—to save waste, trouble, and criticism.

THE KAMPUS KEYHOLE

— By —
PRESTON CHARLES

Side glances at campus life:

1. Shorty McDonald, Jaillet and Gillis serenading the telephone operator with tender love songs, accompanied by the haunting rhythm of McDonald's banjo.

2. Dr. Cook reading the funny papers.

3. Robert McLees in psychology class with a loudly purring cat lying peacefully curled up in his lap.

4. George Collett and Annie Lee Jackson coming out of the book room of the library, with the latter's hair greatly dishevled.

5. A ragged street urchin standing outside the Capitol Theatre at noon today, saying, "Heh, it wasn't each wuth a nickel."

The new editor requests a bunch of new stooges for this column, so we'll start off with Shorty McDonald, the genial band director . . . The other day after he had finished band practice early he looked frantically around, under benches, drums, saxophones and what not. Finally he eyed his boys suspiciously and demanded angrily, "Where's my lewd magazine?" . . . (Apologies to J., of Open Forum fame, for the use of the word "lewd") . . . Marion Bird, handsome Columbia sheik, is still hanging precariously onto Polly Roberts, although he still admits she won't let him hold her hand . . . They do say he detailed Rat Jaillet not to date her . . . Red Abbott, it is learned, tried to get married when he went home to Walhalla last, but his brother, being older and more mature, turned him over his knee and administered a castigation which apparently had a good effect . . . Red is now back on the campus, without wife one, as the expression goes . . . A certain member of the well-known Lewdist club was reproved by a friend who caught him reading a certain salacious (J., please note) magazine . . . His reply was that he had been appointed chairman of a Y. M. C. A. committee to investigate the flood of risque reading matter that has inundated our campus since the beginning of the evil work of Green, Anderson, et al . . . Doyle Boggs, it is learned, has been chafing at the bit for some time over the matrimonial question . . . Like Abbott, he wishes to take off into the blissful state of holy wedlock. The future wife (that is, at present writing) occupies a conspicuous place over the fireplace in his room. . . . At least, says Cappelman, she has a warm place in his room, if not in his heart . . . A girl in Columbia seemingly has Bill Thompson running around in circles . . . Is her name by any chance "Gussie" . . . Anyway, he says if he had a job he would marry her without a moment's hesitation . . . "Why are Shorty McDonald's cheeks so red?" asks a curious freshman . . . A close friend of Shorty's supplies us with the answer . . . In his younger days, when he was not quite so sophisticated, he chanced to walk in on a lady seated in the bathtub . . . We now see the result of his early environment exemplified in his ruddy complexion . . . Red Peterson has become well-known under his new nick-names, "Bottle" and "Caldonia" (after a choice brand of gin) . . . Strolling down leisurely to watch the high school girls practice basketball, he was greeted by the yells of a crowd of small boys, "Here comes Bottle Peterson"; then they got together and gave "Rah, rah for Caldonia!" . . . "Bottle" was seen the other day in a serious conference with Joe Commander . . . Then he walked away with a worried look on his face . . . Something about a Florence girl, it appears.

It seems that the new Lewdist movement which was started by our old Stooge, Ervin Green, is spreading like wildfire. Alumni dormitory now is the home of Beta chapter of this brotherhood, with Doyle Boggs and Johnny Rhodes in the leadership. Not to be outdone, B section Smyth has Gamma chapter, a select group headed by Ernest Arnold, Elmore and other Y. M. C. A. notables. Van Arnold, Y. M. C. A. president and brother of Gamma chapter's head man, announces that the organization of which he is leader will sponsor the Lewdist movement on the campus. The original founders of Lewdism, Green and Anderson, thank Arnold heartily and predict that the new cult will spread to other schools.

Jack Gasque, widely known satirist, is just finishing his fourth week without a haircut. He said yesterday that he was determined to continue a shearless existence until the Fourth of July, explaining that he made a New Year's resolution to that effect. A few friends have been urging him to break over and have it cut, putting forth the argument from the standpoint of sanitation. He did relent, however, in agreeing to have the job performed if enough funds could be raised from a few generous students. The goal is twenty-five cents, to be collected in pennies until the whole amount is reached. All charitably-minded students are strongly urged to contribute to this worthy cause. Pennies may be handed to Gasque personally, as he carries a box around in his pocket for the purpose of receiving contributions.

P. C. Tracksters Face Big Season

The athletic department has announced that both varsity and freshman track teams will open the season against Wofford, on March 23, at Spartanburg. There will be two varsity and three freshman meets at home and three varsity and two frosh out of town. The state meet will be held in Clinton on Friday and Saturday, May 3 and 4.

The schedules follow:

March 23—Wofford at Spartanburg —varsity and freshman.

March 30—Carolina at Columbia—varsity and freshman.

April 6—University of Georgia at Athens—varsity.

April 13—Clemson at Clinton -varsity and freshman.

April 20—Furman at Clinton—varsity and freshman.

April 26—Davidson at Clinton, [illegible]

May 3—State freshman meet and varsity trials at Clinton.

May 4—State varsity finals at Clinton.

James Horton Gains Promotion

Friends here of James Horton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Horton, who reside near here, will be interested to know of the success he has attained since going to New York.

Mr. Horton graduated with the valedictorian honor from Presbyterian college in 1933. Soon thereafter he formed a connection with a large magazine agency and was assigned to New York where he has since made his home. Recently he has become manager of one of the New York divisional offices of the Western Union company and friends visiting there recently learned with interest of his promotion and the high esteem in which he is held by the company with which he is now affiliated.

Announce 1935 Football Schedule

In 1935 Presbyterian gridironers will meet the Georgia Tech Yellow Jackets for the first time and will probably resume football relations with Furman university after a lapse of several years. The 1935 schedule, as it will look when it has been definitely settled, will be one of the most difficult seasons ever arranged for a Presbyterian eleven.

The season will open with the usual curtain-raiser against Clemson on Saturday, September 21, at Clemson. The following week the Hose will be entertained by the renowned Yellow Jackets of Georgia Tech. It will be remembered that not so very many years ago Tech journeyed out to the Rose Bowl and came back with the [illegible]

[illegible] lowing the Tech game, a tentative [illegible] man. In the event that this is definitely scheduled, it will probably be played in Greenville. On the two following Saturdays the Hose will meet Newberry and Mercer, in the order named. The Newberry game is the only encounter which has been definitely scheduled for Johnson field.

During the remainder of the season, the team will be occupied with Wake Forest, Wofford, Erskine, and Citadel. The Citadel game will be played at Charleston on Thanksgiving day, November 28, and will complete the schedule.

Coach Walter Johnson states that the 1935 schedule is the hardest ever arranged for a Presbyterian team during his year's of coaching at P. C. He feels confident, however, that next year's team, win or lose, will exhibit the same courage and determination as the teams that have gone before.

The schedule is as follows:

Sept. 21—Clemson at Clemson.
Sept. 28—Georgia Tech at Atlanta.
Oct. 5—Furman at Greenville (tentative).
Oct. 12—Newberry at Clinton.
Oct. 19—Mercer (place undecided).
Oct. 26—Open.
Nov. 2—Wake Forest at Wake Forest.
Nov. 9—Open.
Nov. 16—Erskine at Due West.
Nov. 23—Wofford at Spartanburg.
Nov. 28—Citadel at Charleston.

ALUMNI

"The State," Sunday, January 20, carried two announcements of interest to all alumni:

Mrs. John Hugh McMaster, Sr., of Winnsboro, S. C., announced the marriage of her daughter, Catherine Cutino McMaster, to Thomas Marshall Robinson, Saturday, January 19th, at Winnsboro.

"Robbie" is remembered as a member of the class of '26, and the captain of the 1925 football team. He now has a government position in Rock Hill, S. C.

Dr. and Mrs. William Hartridge Hendricks, of Tifton, Ga., announced the engagement of their daughter, Louise Hendricks, to James Allen Stamps, of Atlanta, Ga., and Calderwood, Tenn.

"Jimmie" was a member of the class of '28 and, with Charlie Wilson, formed the famous Stamps-Wilson passing combination that made the Blue Stocking coal foes on any gridiron.

A New Deal In FERA

It is with significance we note the announcement of the reorganization of FERA here on our campus. It is really not so much the reorganization as what the movement brings with it, that is so noteworthy. That small body of fortunate students benefiting from FERA is to get an opportunity for self-administration. That is, the future work and the future of the organization itself, at least for the remainder of the current year, will depend upon the ability of the students to organize its routine, to develop its projects and to materialize these projects.

Such action on the part of the faculty in moving to sponsor this plan of work has splendid advantages for those students benefiting from federal funds. The students will get a taste of what it means to organize an idea and see that it is properly carried out. Each member of the organization will have a chance to plan or help plan a project to his liking. Such planning is exactly what one runs against after graduation. The man who is able to develop ideas, organize them, and have ability to carry them out is the man who is going to be most valuable to his employer. Training such as this is helpful in progressing toward such a level.

Anyone can readily see the limitless advantages and possibilities under the "new deal." The students are being put on their own and whether or not the organization shall live, function properly, and show material results is up to them. They are being put on their own feet to educate them to dependence upon themselves for their means of livelihood and continuance of their organization. Such practical education is invaluable and again F. D. R. scores a point in the benefits to be reaped from his program.

What Price Peace

The Peace Poll being conducted by the Literary Digest and the Association of College Editors shows the rather astounding fact of the ninety thousand student votes cast to date, sixty-eight per cent believe that the United States can stay out of the next world war, that eighty-three per cent would fight if the United States were invaded, and only eighteen per cent would fight if their country were the invader.

It is surprising that the pacifists can find only seventeen per cent who refuse to fight on the invasion of our borders, considering the organized peace propaganda that has been flung at us for the past few years. And it is equally as surprising that only eighteen per cent say they would fight if the United States were to invade a foreign nation.

We feel that this last is, if sincere, a truly noteworthy move on the part of our college students—a long forward stride towards true peace. BUT we doubt its absolute sincerity. Too young to remember the hysteria of war times, we believe from what we have read that this is merely peace time sentiment. Let a new "make the world safe for democracy" idea spread like wild-fire across the nation, let the bands again start a song such as "Over There," let a new group of lovely girls pay for volunteers with a kiss, and once more let mob hysteria sweep our nation and the pacifists of this poll will be flocking to the ranks like so many monsters thirsty for the new-spilt blood of their fellow man. We hope that we are wrong. We fear that we are right.

NOTES AND SHADES

NEW YORK PHILHARMONIC SYMPHONY

The orchestra under the baton of Hans Lange presented quite an interesting and varied program on Sunday, January 20. The concert opened with the overture to Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro." This rhythmical and delightful work was beautifully rendered. The second number was a "Nocturne" by the American composer, Stringham. This composer received most of his musical training in the West and a few years study with Respighi in Rome. It was while in Rome that he was inspired to compose this lovely nocturne. The audience showed its appreciation by tumultous applause.

Robert Casedesus, pianist, was the soloist in the "Coronation" concerto by Mozart for piano and orchestra. Mr. Casedeus was royally acclaimed for his brilliant technique and masterful poise.

d'Indy's famous tone poem, "Un jour d'ete a la montagne," followed the concerto. Mr. d'Indy is one of the foremost composers of France. This work is his best and shows up the composer as a man of undisputed genius.

Wagner's overture to "Die Meistersinger" closed this enjoyable afternoon of symphonic music which can only be played by such orchestras as the Philharmonic. Philadelphia and Chicago orchestras in such a wonderful manner.

MOVIES

Monday and Tuesday—"The Gay Divorcee." A rehashing of the Carioca theme, with Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers supplying the smoothness, speed and a certain amount of sophistication that makes "The Gay Divorcee" unique among musical pictures. This picture is replete with dances, songs, and comedy. With Astaire for grace and Rogers for beauty and Edward Everett Horton never better, "The Gay Divorcee" is one of the outstanding pictures of the year.

Wednesday—"Women Must Dress."No reviews available.

Thursday—"The Secret Bride." Barbara Stanwyck uses this rather unwieldy vehicle as a background for superb dramatization. The plot is rather involved with a double murder, a secret marriage and an attack on the governor (Arthur Byron). His daughter (Barbara Stanwyck), aided by Warren William and Glenda Farrel, unravel the mystery.

Friday—"Bachelor of Arts." No reviews available.

Saturday—"Bordertown." Paul Muni as a Mexican product of Bordertown turns in a good performance. The picture is Bette Davis's, however. She again exemplifies the maleficient power of women as she did so ably in "Of Human Bondage." As a female murderess she gives any fiance in the country something to think about. The acting of Muni and Davis makes this a notable production. Don't miss it.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

"Point Vallaine," the new play by Noel Coward, which stars Alfred Lunt and Lynne Fontaine is quite mediocre and would have flopped if the performance of Alfred Lunt hadn't kept it going. There is a scene in the play where he spits into Lynne's face. This cause a furor among the critics as well as the audiences.

Werner Janssen, the American conductor, is to conduct the New York Philharmonic for the second time this season.

Lily Pons, Gladys Swarthout, Nina Martini and Helen Jepson have signed movie contracts.

Grace Moore sings every Tuesday night at nine over WJZ.

"In the Pashar Garden," the American opera which was produced at the Metropolitan two weeks ago was a total flop.

Gladys Swarthout was the featured vocalist in four different broadcasts last week.

WITH THE GREEKS

The Pi Kappa Phi's announce that hog-killing time is in full swing again. They initiated seven men on the night of February 6.

Out of the freshman class one man went through, Billy Jones, of BBishopville. From the sophomores, five men underwent the cermeony: Oliver Luey, Bill Degner, Johnny Hutchinson, John Bill Steenbergen, and Charles Steenbergen. Luey and Degner are residents of Lake Mills, Wisconsin, and came here in September from the University in that state. The Steenbergens and Hutchinson hail from Point Pleasant, West Virginia. Charles Steenbergen is a member of the student council, while John Bill is a transfer from Marshall college, W. Va.

This event brings the Pi Kappa Phi active membership to 17, with 7 pledges, making a total of 24 men in the fraternity.

Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity announces the pledging of a new man, Raleigh A. Shoemaker, of Charlotte, N. C. Shoemaker, playing the guard position on the football team, was one of the three sophomores who made letters last season. He is also a student assistant in the chemistry department.

Many students commented on the fine quality of the music rendered by Hod Williams and his orchestra for the Pan-Hellenic dances of Feb. 1-2. Many social leaders said that it was the best rhythm that has been handed out at a P. C. dance in several years. The only thing that marred the Pan-Hellenic function was the fact that intermissions were so long and frequent. However, it is sincerely hoped that this orchestra again will be engaged for the third dance of the year, Pan-Hellenic final.

BOOK REVIEW

By Stuart Campbell

"PRINCESS IN EXILE"—Marie, Grand Duchess of Russia

It has been said of the average inhabitant of a democratic country that underneath a harsh republican exterior is concealed an awe of persons of royal power and perogatives. We are dazzled by the glitter of palaces. Those of us so dazzled read assiduously any book relating the lives or reminiscences of kings and captains. Such a book is "Princess in Exile."

Grand Duchess Marie, a member of the Romanov family, has all the qualifications for a sucessful memoir writer. In the preface one is to expect a great deal of philosophising on the ways of the world and the lot of a royal exile trying "to get along." However, Her Imperial Highness (ex) knows her American public well enough to mask all philosophy behind endless tales of her familiar relations with the various European royalties. She relates anecdotes about Marie and Carol of Romania, Alphonso, former of Spain, Ex'papa-in-law" Gustav of Sweden, and many others.

The book is divided into the traditional three parts, Sleep-walking False Dawn, and New Day. The first tells of the escape from Russia and the first three years of exile. Fala relates the first attempts at self-support and her divorce from her second husband. The last describes the advent in the United States and the longing for a New Day in a New World, incidentally not as exploited as the Old.

"Princess In Exile" is in the same style as any other memoir written by a person without literary talent and utterly devoid of wit. It should prove interesting to those who like books abounding in stories of Mama Queen, Papa King, and Grandma Empress.

THE PARADE GROUND

It seems that a man's popularity is not determined by his profession, or if he is a teacher, by his course of instruction. Our esteemed Captain Wysor carried off the honors in the recent junior-senior superlatives, with Professor Sturgeon running a close second. In spite of the anti-militarists on our campus, we feel sure that if a freshman-sophomore superlative contest were held, Captain Blanton would head the ticket with Dr. Huntley as his running mate.

And speaking of Captain Blanton, we have his own statement that he has been tentatively ordered back to school. Of course, it's a school of specialization, one far beyond our scope—The Command and General Staff School of Fort Leavenworth, Kansas. There, our assistant P. M. S. and T. will order armies around, fight wars, and execute brilliant manoeuvers—all on paper. If his orders are not changed, he is to be there for two years, beginning next summer. We wish him the best of success, and hereby express our sincere regrets at his expected departure.

According to Lieutenant-Colonel Boggs, the military ball—about which so much has been said and so little done—will quite probably be held. Action is being delayed until the new Pan-Hellenic council takes office. The ball would be open to the entire school, regular uniforms would be worn, and music would more than likely be furnished by "Shorty" and his music masters. It is possible that the military affair would be followed by a masquerade ball—let's hope so!

Construction has started on the outdoor small-calibre rifle range on the lower athletic field. This will consist of a concrete butt and will be sufficiently large for a squad to fire combat problems with the 22-calibre. Well, a few more problems can certainly do us no harm—the problematical automatic rifle has already made us more than immune to puzzles.

Our petit, militaristic librarian is showing great improvement in shooting ability, now being a substitute on the Reserve Officers' team. He probably will receive orders shortly to report to Fort Benning for active duty training, two weeks. His forceful manner should carry him far in the military world—his eagle eye should make him a crack shot.

Our rifle team (ROTC) and the Reserve Officers' team will fire a shoulder to shoulder match the latter part of the month on the indoor range. It should be a battle royal—come down and see the fun.

Searge undoubtedly has some hidden appeals which are not to be seen by the masculine eye. The co-eds have lately beseiged him and with their undeniable feminine charms, have persuaded him to coach a ladies' rifle team again this year. We believe that Searge did not require as much persuasian as he would have us think. The first shooting (or what?) took place Thursday, and regular practice will be held three times per week—dates to be selected later.

Quoting Captain Wysor: "The P. M. S. and T. is pleased with the new interest being taken by the cadet officers in the training schedule. Knowledge, plus interest, equals RESULTS." Such commendations are greatly appreciated by the cadet officers, but it may be said authoritatively that the cadet privates and corporals would appreciate even more a similar statement from Captain Blanton.

We're taking a great interest in the war of words that is going on between Clemson's "Talk of the Town" columnist and Winthrop's "Winthrop Week by Week" writer. It seems that some time (ages ago) Mr. Tiger made a big, bad remark about Miss Winthrop, whereupon Miss Winthrop, in true Victorian manner, haughtily replied, "Suh, you're no gentleman." And to prove it, Clemson said, "Mebbe not, baby, but you're no columnist." We are awaiting developments. When!

Swimmers To Make Debut; Boxers To Meet U. S. C.

Meet Clemson Here Tomorrow At 4 P.M.

The Blue Hose tank men make their 1935 debut this week as they meet Clemson here on Tuesday afternoon at four o'clock. There will be two other meets here this week: Florida on Thursday at four, and Furman on Friday. On the twenty-sixth the boys meet Clemson on their home water, and on March 2 the state meet will be held at Furman.

Coach Hank Wilson seems to feel rather confident about "his boys." They include, in addition to Wilson, Will Wallace, Valley, Legare, Tiller, Millsap, Calvert, and Alexander.

The schedule:
Feb. 12—Clemson at Clinton, 4 p.m.
Feb. 14—Florida at Clinton, 4 p.m.
Feb. 15—Furman at Clinton, 4 p.m.
Feb. 26—Clemson at Clemson.
March 2—State meet at Furman.

ALUMNI

P. C. is well represented in the Soil Erosion at Salsbury, S. C. Lloyd Wilson, Junius Montgomery, Webb White, "Pucker" Andrews, all of the class of '34 have positions on this project.

Jack White, class of '34 attended the dances here during the past week-end, after which he left for Savannah, Ga., where is entering the O. R. C. Camp there.

Dr. Matheson who is a graduate of P. C., and is now assisting the president of the college, besides being field agent for the state of South Carolina, has been confined to his bed during the past week because of an attack of the flu.

Isaac McDonald Adair, better known as "Mac," has the honor of being one of the more successful business men of Clinton.

"Mac" is the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Adair and has always lived in Clinton. He received his schooling at Clinton high school and at P. C., graduating from here in '30. Up until January, '33 he was employed by Mr. L. B. Dillard as a salesman. Then at the beginning of the year he and Mr. Irby S. Hipp entered into partnership and established the clothing store known to all as "Hipp & Adair."

"Mac" is a member of the local Lions club and is quite popular among the younger married couples. He married Miss LaVerne McQuistin of Clinton about a year ago. They now have an apartment at the home of his parents on East Carolina avenue.

BASKETBALL FOR THE WEEK

Ably assisted by the famous female, Lady Luck, Citadel's cagers eked out a 44-39 victory over the Presbyterians in the most interesting and best played game of the season.

The Bulldog basketeers encountered stiff opposition from a hard-fighting, determined Blue Stocking machine that functioned smoothly and well throughout the contest. Only in the closing moments did the Calvinists cede the victory to their opponents.

"Red" Wyatt gave by far the most aggressive performance seen thus far on the local court. His ability to convert seemingly impossible attempts into points was the highlight of the contest. Every member of the team accredited himself well, especially Roy Forehand at center and Joe Bradley, at guard.

For the Bulldogs, McTee and Hall played best, with McAllister, doing creditable work at the pivot position.

In a preliminary, the Frosh decisively defeated Darlington prep school of Georgia by a 31-14 score.

Unable to check the offensive power of a strong Furman team, P. C.'s cagers dropped another contest, this time by the one-sided score of 49 to 26.

Paced by Culclasure, King and Roper, the Baptists scored freely, rolling up a 21-5 score at the half and adding 28 points during the latter period. Culclasure topped the scoring with 17 points.

Only Levi of the Presbyterian five was able to make any headway, the deceptive little forward ringing up 13 points during the evening.

Despite the spectacular performances of forwards Wyatt and Levi, P. C.'s Blue Hosemen bowed in defeat to Georgia's strong quint by a 41 to 37 count last Friday evening in a fast and intensely-played game on the local court.

From the outset, the contest was rough and rowdy. The Georgians presented a smart, well-directed attack in which Johnson appeared as the spark-plug and field general. Anderson's accuracy in shooting gave him high scoring honors for his team.

"Red" Wyatt played the most aggressive game seen this season on the local court, and led the scoring for both teams with 16 points. Levi was runner-up for starring honors.

Names in the campus news:

Bull-sessions in Alumni dormitory are now practically non-existent since the removal to Smyth of MONTAGUE JACOBS, all-American end and romancer . . . BILL THOMPSON, when interviewed concerning his best girl, GUSSIE, answers, "Best girl, me eye—the only one!" . . . The column wishes to correct the statement made last week that Gussie lives in Columbia . . . She resides in some other city, Thompson says, and attends Coker college. . . . FRANCIS GREGG, prominent ministerial student, has only recently recovered from the attack of flu which he contracted after osculating a young lady during the Christmas holidays . . . He now says that he is ready for another heavy evening . . . A name has finally been found for "BEOWULF SWEDENBERG'S" turquoise-colored motor vehicle. It is now called the "Rhapsody in Blue." . . . And speaking of names, JAILLET, popular campus politician, has just been dubbed, "Alice, the Goon Girl." . . . ODELL MATTHEWS, prominent social hound, was observed Saturday night dancing with JOE COMMANDER'S date and crooning softly in her ear, "Please don't talk about me when I'm gone." . . . In answer to last week's statement about the exceedingly slow rate at which BIRD is progressing in his suit for POLLY ROBERTS' affection, he says, "I'll be holding her hand before the week is out." . . . HICK HARVIN tearfully complains that GREEN and CRANFORD, dining hall waiters, paid entirely too close attention to the wants of his Pan-Hellenic date Saturday night in the dining hall . . . He hints vaguely at a suit for alienation of affections . . . QUESTION: Why does CATFISH CAROTHERS buy groceries every Saturday night? . . . The columnist was much very much exasperated last week to find out that ERNEST ARNOLD, who just broke out into print last week, has placed a good-sized strip of adhesive tape over his keyhole . . . Let's hope the custom doesn't spread . . . Why does MARION BIRD still pay his addresses to Polly, even though he has been warned by a fortune teller against blonds with pretty blue eyes? . . . Who is the girl that put the skids under HENRY DILLARD? . . . And why doesn't he get back the fraternity ring he gave her Christmas? . . . Since NORTON acquired the huge picture which now adorns the wall of his room all the boys in the dormitory have been talking about how strikingly she resembles Jim London, the Adonis of the mat.

A popular co-ed requests that The Blue Stocking print the following announcement:

In view of the fact that, according to the folks at home, too much coal has been burned and too little studying has been done at the home of Miss Bebe Dillard during the past semester. The younger of the Dillard coeds is allowed only three nights a week for receiving suitors, namely, Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Furthermore, each swain will be required to bring along a good-sized scuttle of coal, sufficient to last for the greater part of the evening.

At the present writing there is great joy among the many friends of Jack Gasque, widely known literary figure on our campus. The campaign for a haircut fund started last week in The Blue Stocking had a very good effect, since the amount set, 25 cents, was oversubscribed by several coppers. The paper wishes to encourage givers to charitable enterprises.

It might further be of interest to local philanthropists to know that the shearing operation was executed by a young lady in a Clinton beauty parlor. No extra charge was made above the customary 25 cents.

It will be remembered that recently our rat basketball team tangled with the quintet put out by a large dry-cleaning establishment in Columbia. This team was financed by a certain Ed Robinson, whose name was embroidered on the front of each player's jersey. During the half time Rat Cox was asked by Coach Lonnie Mac whom he had been guarding. "Ed Robinson, sir," he replied.

P. C. Basketeers On Road This Week

This is to be a week of travel for the Presbyterian basketeers. Tonight they meet the Purple Hurricane in Greenville. Tomorrow night they meander over to Due West where they battle the A. R. P. boys at Erskine. On Thursday they search out the Indians at Newberry. And with that close a week of traveling.

Fighters Move On Columbia Friday

On next Friday night the Blue Hose boxing team goes to Columbia to fight the University of South Carolina mitmen. There is every indication that this will be a good card. The Carolinians, though they came out on the short end of the score with Clemson, defeated The Citadel leather-pushers 4½ to 3½ on last Friday night.

Coach Johnson says "Tell the boys that we'll be in there fighting and we hope that we'll come out on the long end of the score. I believe we will."

TIGER-BLUE HOSE FIGHTS END IN DEADLOCK

[illegible] Williams, of the Calvinists, on the count of ten.

The welter-weight went to Clemson [illegible]

Cappelmann and Kissam, in the light heavyweight class, locked in the closest and hardest fight of the evening. For three rounds they slugged each other about the ring, with neither seeming to have any definite advantage. The decision, however, was given [illegible] Clemson.

[illegible] Bolick, most famed of Blue Hose fighters, stepped into the ring with Clemson's man-mountain, Henley, who tips the scales at 200. Bolick was forced to carry the fight throughout the three rounds, and while a little more "mixing it up" might have been hoped for, still the Calvinist performed to the satisfaction of the judges and the fans.

The summary:

Bantamweight: Seagle, P. C., 119, won decision over Williams, Clemson, 119.

Featherweight: McCaskill, P. C., 127, won decision over Altman, Clemson, 129.

Lightweight: Clark, P. C., 139, won decision over Dawson, Clemson, 139.

Junior welterweight: Griner, Clemson, 146, won technical knockout over McClary, P. C., 149.

Senior welterweight: Loften, Clemson, 159, knocked out Williams, P. C., 156.

Middleweight: Clemson won by forfeit.

Light heavyweight: Kissam, Clemson, 177, won decision over Cappelmann, P. C., 176.

Unlimited heavyweight: Bolick, P. C., won decision over Henley, Clemson, 200.

him popular throughout the state as a speaker for any occasion and his vast realm of friends boost his as one of the most succesful of the younger preachers.

The ten o'clock dormitory prayer groups is one of the ways by which the "Y" is attempting to prepare the way for the coming of this leader. The bell tolls each night as a reminder of these prayer groups and all students in the dormitories at that time are urged to attend these short devotional gatherings. Those responsible for these groups to be regulated and carried out are, in their respective dormitories: Spencer, Tom Plaxico; Alumni, C. McCutcheon; Smyth A, L. A. McCall; Smyth B, George McInnes; Smyth C, George Dunlap; Laurens, Jim McClary. Each student may be benefitted by these friendly, reverent, and inspiring worship periods.

Spencer vs Alpha Kappa Pi

Spencer Hall, with the aid of day students Ellis and Beeman, were able to sink three field goals to give them the margin of victory over the Alpha Kappa Pi Greeks Wednesday afternoon. Spencer led by one point at the half, but Ellis improved his shooting enough by the second half to help materially in changing the final count to 11-5 in his team's favor.

"Goon" Jaillet and Marion Bird stood out for the A. K. Pi's, while Peterson and McCrackin were strong for the dormitory men.

was closed by reverences to and calling of the "Christian International" and its relations.

Two musical numbers were rendered, on before each talk. Misses Catherine Swofford and "Boots" Anchors sang "Alone" as the first number while Miss Swofford sang a solo, "Come Ye Blesed of the Father" as the second piece. Both were accompanied by Beth Mattison at the piano.

This was the first of a series of visiting deputations and a large crowd responded to the visitors. There shall be another special program given by visitors next Thursday and it is the hope of the Y. M. C. A. that a similar interest will be shown.

THREATEN LIFE OF CAMPUS COLUMNIST

A sinister bulletin appeared on the customary board early last week, threatening the life of our beloved (?) Walter Winchell of P. C. Certain boys on the campus, the Arnold freres, to be specific, being unable to stand the gaff of cold facts as they were presented by our fearless exponent of the pure, cold, and unadulterated "truth," posted a notice to the effect that ten dollars would be paid to the man presenting them with his head. A section of the department where Chesterfield tobaccos are blended and cross-blended.

Just what is meant by cross-blending tobaccos . . . and how does it make a cigarette milder and taste better . . .

Well, in blending you take two or more tobaccos and mix them together—a rather simple process. But cross-blending goes a step further . . .

IN making Chesterfields we take Bright tobacco from Virginia, the Carolinas, Georgia and Florida. We take Burley tobacco from Kentucky and Tennessee, and tobacco from Southern Maryland.

Then in addition to these home-grown tobaccos we take tobacco grown in Turkey and Greece.

We balance these mild, ripe home-grown tobaccos with the right amounts and the right kinds of aromatic Turkish.

Then, instead of just mixing the tobaccos together, we blend and cross-blend them so that all the different flavors go together into one full flavor—the Chesterfield taste that so many smokers like.

Cross-blending tobaccos as it is done in Chesterfields gives the cigarette a pleasing taste and aroma—they're mild and yet They Satisfy.

Blue Stocking Fighters Beat Gamecocks

SERIES OF RELIGIOUS SERVICES START TONIGHT IN CHAPEL

Rev. Albert G. Harris, of Milledgeville, Ga., Is Leader. Has Wide Experience Among College Students.

Rev. Albert Grady Harris, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Milledgeville, Ga., will lead the annual series of religious services at Presbyterian college, beginning Friday. The services will be held from Feb. 18 through Feb. 20.

Mr. Harris is originally from Mecklinberg County, North Carolina, having spent the earlier part of his life in Pineville. He received his undergraduate degree from Erskine College, and secured his theological training at Union Seminary, Richmond, Va., and from Princeton University. He was for six years pastor of the Presbyterian church at Seneca, S. C., and is now in the sixth year of his pastorate at Milledgeville.

Since going to Milledgeville, Mr. Harris has built up the church there from a membership of less than a hundred to an overflowing congregation of more than five hundred. He is especially popular with the young people of the community, attracting large numbers of students from both the Georgia Military college and the Georgia State College for Women. The number of students wishing to attend services at the Milledgeville church often exceeds the capacity of the building.

Mr. Harris has gained wide popularity throughout the states of Georgia and South Carolina. During the past summer, he filled the pulpit of the First Presbyterian church of Atlanta for a month, during the absence of Dr. Lyons. He is also prominently identified with civic and educational activities in his community. Mr. Harris' appeal lies in his attractive personality and his sincere and forceful delivery.

Clemson 'Y' Group Conducts Service

Mauldin and Cureton Give Talks and Quartet Furnishes Music At Thursday Meeting.

A deputation of young men from Clemson College conducted the Y. M. C. A. program here last Thursday night. The group was under the leadership of W. P. Mauldin, a senior at Clemson. The meeting opened with a few short sentence prayers, after which Henry Malone took charge of the devotional. The first talk on the program was given by R. W. Curaton on the topic "The Living Jesus." In his talk Mr. Curaton brought out the fact that the prerequisite factor leading to the Living Jesus is the power of prayer. He brought out also that through prayer Jesus resisted temptation, and through that element we too may resist life's temptations today.

The second talk of the evening was delivered by Mr. Mauldin, who used as his subject "The Living Creator." Mr. Mauldin emphasized that Jesus is the only possible substitute for our transitory life here on earth. Reaching the goal is not the really important thing, but what counts is the manner in which we conduct ourselves in attaining the final achievement. No empire that has been founded upon force has ever survived, Mr. Mauldin pointed out. The Kingdom of Christ which has been founded upon Love, is the only ideal that has ever been able to withstand the onslaught of negative forces. Finally, the life of fellowship with Christ is the supreme test of any man's strength, because that is the courageous life to live.

The Clemson quartet, composed of E. H. Howard, J. O. Corbett, F. E. Terrell, and L. E. Vaughan, rendered several musical selections.

Military Ball Plans Well Developed

Plans for the first Military Ball on the P. C. campus took more definite shape after the student body meeting Wednesday morning. After the student body meeting, the advanced R. O. T. C. agreed to be individually assessed in order to insure the dance financially.

The dates for the dances have been set for Friday and Saturday, March 8th and 9th. Plans call for a strictly formal dance Friday night and a "bowery ball" Saturday night. At the formal, all first year advanced men will wear red sashes. The seniors will wear the sashes with shoulder pieces.

As the plans stand now, the festivities will be held in Copeland Hall. The Blue Stocking orchestra will furnish the music. The orchestra has received a warm reception on Glee Club trips and at several dances for which it has played.

Great plans are being made for this, the first Military Ball at P. C., with the hope of establishing this ball as an annual custom.

Rev. Mr. Harris Arrives On Campus

Rev. A. G. Harris, who is to conduct the worship services that are beginning this evening at 6:30, made his first appearance before the Presbyterian college student body this morning when he made a brief and interesting response to Dr. John McSween's welcoming talk.

He stated his pleasure at being at Presbyterian college and stated that this pleasure sprang from his warm friendship and respect for Dr. McSween, his admiration for the school and its student body and his great interest in the youth of the nation—particularly the college youth.

Doctor E. M. Berry Heads Math Dept.

Comes To Relieve Prof. Martin For Balance of Term. Graduate of Hamilton College.

Small, thin, quiet, Dr. Eugene M. Berry arrived last week to take up the labors of Professor A. V. Martin.

Dr. Berry, originally of Maine, completed his undergraduate work at Colgate, in Hamilton, N. Y. Upon his graduation, he was made a Phi Beta Kappa, which was under the circumstances a more signal honor than it would have been, if received after post-graduate work. He got his advanced degrees at the University of Iowa, his Ph. D. being in mathematics.

For six years he taught at Purdue, the engineering school. For the past eight and a half, he has been in charge of the department of mathematics and physics at Lynchburg college, which is a church school much similar to Presbyterian college.

At the University of Iowa, he made the acquaintance and friendship of Professor Fant, who later died while serving this institution.

Dr. Berry is also a Sigma Psi, which is a scholastic fraternity of distinction.

He will continue the courses of freshman math, calculus and surveying, as well as a course in the teaching of mathematics.

Student Conference Held In Columbia

Representatives From Colleges In State Discuss "Human Needs and World Christianity"

One of the most progressive steps for the advancement of Christianity in South Carolina was the Student Christian Conference held in Columbia February 8-10. More than one hundred and twenty-five delegates, representing Christian organizations from every major college in the state, gathered at the Washington Street Methodist church for an enlightening and informative discussion of topics of universal interest. The general theme of the Conference was "Human Needs and World Christianity," and the topics treated with included the major problems of students; the present contribution of Christianity in dealing with campus problems; and equipment of agencies that serve as channels of Christian influence.

Mr. Jesse R. Wilson, of New York City, general secretary of the Student Volunteer Movement, was the chief guest speaker of the occasion. Rev. Charles K. Douglas, of Seneca, S. C., assisted in the capacity of devotional leader. Special discussion groups were held throughout the session for the purpose of considering such vital topics as war and peace, campus problems, men and women relations, race relations, and personal religious problems. Particularly inspiring was the closing address by Mr. Wilson on the challenging subject, "The Spirit Invincible."

N. C. State Rifle Men Beat P. C.

The rifle team from North Carolina State college defeated the Presbyterian marksmen in their first shoulder-to-shoulder match here Saturday by a score of 46 to 826.

Andersen and Upshur were outstanding for the Calvinists, Anderson's score being 172 and Upshur's 170. Whitty, of N. C. State was high scorer of the meet with 175.

The Presbyterian team was greatly handicapped by the absence of several of their best men. The juniors on the team, of which there were three, were further handicapped by sore arms due to the typhoid innoculations.

Martin Has Seen Years Of Service

Came To P. C. In 1899 As Professor of Math and Chemistry. Ill Health Forces Rest.

Professor Abram Venable Martin was born in Goochland County, Virgina, in 1868. He took his B. A. degree at Hampden Sidney, and then went to the University of Virginia.

PROF. A. V. MARTIN

Professor Martin, with the exception of Dr. A. E. Spencer, has been with the college for a longer period of time than any other instructor, coming in 1899 to take the position of professor of mathematics and chemistry. With the exception of one year, during which he taught at Kings College, Bristol, Tenn., he has a continuous record of service. Since 1913 he has taught mathematics alone. One summer he spent studying at Cornell, and another (1923) at the University of California.

The Presbyterian college annual as far back as 1900 — then "The Garnet and Blue"—has some affectionate remarks to make in its personalities section about Professor Martin and his addiction to cigarettes. He has been as close to the hearts of the members of the student body since his first arrival.

For years he had charge of athletics at the college, and before the formation of the S. C. I. A. A., played on some of its various teams. It was not an unusual thing for a college in those unrestricted days to have a B.A. from some institution who had been a star pitcher in his undergraduate days to register with the freshman class just before baseball season. Professor Martin was instrumental in putting a stop to such activities, for he was prominent in the formation of the S. C. I. A. A., and later the S. I. A. A. (Southern Intercollegiate Athletic association, as if you didn't know) to which the college now belongs.

It is the sincere hope of the student body that Professor Martin's health will warrant his return next September, and that such a major upheaval as his permanent retirement will not occur.

JOHN RAUCH MARRIES MISS DOROTHY SEALY

John J. Rauch, erstwhile student and business man of Presbyterian college, was married to Miss Dorothy Sealy in York, Sunday, September 2.

Mr. Rauch attended this institution as a junior until the Christmas holidays of this school year. He was an influential member of the business staff of every publication on the campus, a member of the Pi Kappa Phi social fraternity and the International Relations club.

Mrs. Rauch was a member of the junior class of Winthrop college.

The couple have taken an apartment in Rock Hill.

Win Decision By Count Of 5 To 3

Clark and Cappelmann, for P. C., Earn Technical Knockouts, To Gain Victory Over University Men. Carolina Forfeits Three.

The Presbyterian Blue Hose warriors picked, fried and ate the Carolina Gamecock in Columbia Friday night to take the long end of a 5 to 3 score.

The rooster, its spurs somewhat dulled by three pre-match forfeits, was unable to cope with the fighting spirit of the Calvinists but won two of the bouts, the bantamweight and the senior welterweight, both by decisions.

The principal fight of the evening, measured by the number of thrills per spectator, was the clash of the bantams. Both men boxed cautiously during the opening round, but turned the second and third into wild melees.

Jimmy Seagle, fighting his last bout against a state team, gave the highly touted Taylor, of Carolina, a run for his money and lost only in the third stanza. Seagle took the fight to his opponent throughout the second and Taylor was bleeding freely at the bell.

However, the situation was reversed in the third and little Taylor seemed bent on mischief as he rushed the P. C. man to the ropes. The fight was fairly even, though Taylor seemed in a bad way when the final gong sounded, he was awarded the decision.

Carolina having forfeited the featherweight to McCaskill, the next fight on the card was the lightweight. There was no doubt at all, after the first few blows, as to the superiority of Bill Clark, the Hose entry, over Dunn of Carolina.

Upholding his reputation as the outstanding lightweight of the state, Clark pounded his man with rights and lefts to the head and body that left the other dazed. Had a technical K. O. been awarded P. C., Dunn would certainly have taken the count.

The renowned Humphlett, Gamecock welterweight, cooly boxed his way to a decision over Presbyterian's gamely fighting Jim McClary in the third fight of the night.

McClary proved himself well able to absorb punishment, but the Universities rug-master utilized a devastating punch to pile up the points.

"Jacko" Pitman fought his first fight Friday night and lost it to Car-

I. R. C. Discusses Saar Plebiscite

Representatives Named To Attend Conference At Davidson College This Week-End.

On last Wednesday night at its regular bi-weekly meeting, the International Relations club discussed the Saar plebiscite. Frank Guess led the discussion, giving a thorough summary of the conditions in the region preceding the plebiscite and the forces that had been brought to bear on the Saarlanders prior to and during the plebiscite. After Mr. Guess's survey of the question there was a general discussion by the club members. The general opinion was that this disputed area had probably made a mistake in not remaining under the rule of the League of Nations and that the Saar plebiscite was a distinct feather in the cap of the League.

Following the discussion the club appointed delegates to the Southeastern Students Conference on International Relations that is to be held at Davidson college on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week. The club officially appointed Preston Charles, Hugh Holman, president of the club, and Dean M. W. Brown, the faculty adviser. They also gave permission to Tom Newland and Lynn Jones to attend the conferences unofficially. The group will leave Thursday afternoon and return Saturday night.

Just Why ARE We Here . . .

How many times during the past semester has each of us wondered just why we were in college? When studies are hard, when assignments are long, when teachers seem unfair, when the world frowns darkly upon us we are always prone to question the wisdom of our action in coming to college. We look at the grades of that "grind" down the hall and decide that college was made for such as he and not for the mentally mediocre such are we are. We gaze at the football star who strides in all his glory across the campus and feel that an athlete alone has a true place in the modern college. We look at the man who has received a little of the transient honor that a college can bestow and feel that we, confined to the ranks as we are, should have remained at home and had a wife and a twenty-per-week pay check as Bill did.

All of these attitudes are natural ones — and all of them are basically wrong. Take the case of the grind: From his immense study he secures an astounding and practically useless bundle of details that will take him practically nowhere in life unless he chooses teaching as a profession. He has lost more than he can ever regain, lost something that mere knowledge cannot repay—he has lost the ability to enjoy true comradeship, to gloss over the serious tragedy of life with a certain superficial buoyancy. No, we are not here merely to study — if we are, we had better go home.

Or consider the athlete: His athletic work has given him a body that is far superior to that of the average man; but, after all, what is a body? Without the ability to think clearly, without the ability to look on another's physical weakness without being patronizing toward him, without the understanding that the body is merely the shell in which the man himself lives, athletics make, not a man, but a forest god such as the fictitious Tarzan is.

Look at the receiver of college's ephemeral honors: He is placed in a position of leadership—truly, he had an advantage over the others, but, if he neglects either of the other two he is doomed. He must learn that leadership means responsibility and work and that all that glitters is not gold.

No, each of these is receiving a portion of what college has to offer—neither is receiving all that college has to offer. There is, after all, only one reason that will satisfy that nagging and persistent question of "Why am I here?" and that is that we are here to learn to live on a bigger scale than we could have otherwise, we are here to learn to know and understand friendship and congeniality, we are here to learn to laugh with and at life in all its varied forms. If we are merely learning to be scholars, if we are merely learning to be athletes, if we are merely learning to be leaders, then time, money and effort are being criminally wasted.

MOVIES

Monday and Tuesday—"Broadway Bill." With that inimitable comedy team, Warner Baxter and Myrna Loy, under the splendid direction of Frank Capra. Don't miss it!

Wednesday—"Girl O' My Dreams." With Mary Carlisle in a typical and rather mediocre college romance. Sterling Holloway adds a good comic touch.

Thursday—"Home on the Range." A Zane Grey picture that Jackie Coogan, Randolph Scott, Evelyn Brent and a popular song barely lift above mediocre horse opera.

Friday—"Lottery Lovers." An amusing comedy, with music that boasts Lew Ayres and Pat Patterson.

Saturday—"The Marines Are Coming." William Haines, Conrad Nagel, and Esther Ralston in a revival of a popular silent of several years ago.

WITH THE GREEKS

Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity announces the addition of six more members to its active chapter. The following men went through the ceremony in a recent initiation: Billy Moore, Dalton, Ga.; Ed Frierson, Belton; Bob Jones, Rome, Ga.; Robert Higbe, Andrews; Billy Burns, Macon, Ga.; and E. A. Johnson, Columbus, Ga. All of these men are members of the freshman class, with the exception of Higbe, who is a well-known football man of the junior class.

This event brings the total membership of the Pi Kappa Alpha to 23, with 21 actives and two pledges.

Beta Pi chapter of Kappa Alpha gives out information of another pledge. Ernest Propst, a sophomore, of Winnsboro, is the man just added to the K. A. fold.

o

THE PARADE GROUND

The Military Ball is now a certainty—along with all the trappings and paraphernalia naturally attached to such affairs. There is much talk of gay, dashing sashes for the officers—to distinguish them from the privates. The privates, however, feel slighted, and state most definitely that they would also like to have something bright to break the monotony of the rather drab uniforms which adorn them at drill every day. There is certainly truth in the fact that our uniforms look much better on the drill field than in the ball room.

Cadet Captain J. P. Todd will attend the Chemical Warfare camp at Edgewood, Md., sometime in June of this year. There is no doubt that chemical warfare is increasing steadily in importance, and today opens up a new field for the prospective officer—a comparatively recently developed phase of military life.

Likewise Sgt. Young will attend the annual fiesta at Fort McClellan, Ala., this summer. Sarge will quite possibly serve in the capacity of coach of the "squiff ball team." No definite statement has been secured as yet concerning wages, hours of work, etc., but we are positive that the P. C. athletic association will furnish excellent recommendations for Sarge, in view of the fact that he displayed such remarkable abilities as a coach here during the past squiff season. It may be that we have in Sarge another Knute Rockne—in the realm of squiff ball instead of football, of course.

The juniors are now busy practicing during class periods what they attempt to preach during the drill periods. From the private's point of view, it seems rather to be the other way around. However, we are proud of our juniors, although they seem to have enough pride in themselves to render ours unnecessary. Such pride must be deserved!

Inoculation period, a preliminary step in preparation for the summer camp, begins this week for all juniors. Camp—the soldier's delight—is a new experience for these juniors, one to which they are looking forward with the greatest possible pleasure. Here's hoping that they aren't disappointed—or disappointing!

Quoting Captain Wyson: "In commenting on the excellent work of the seniors, in last week's 'Parade Ground,' there was no intention to slight the basics. The smooth operation of the little wheels makes the operation of the big wheel easier. After all is said and done, there would be no leaders were it not for the privates." Thanks, Captain!

Powell Freeman, class of '34, of Randolph field, flew up for the week-end. We wonder if the prime motive for such a great deal of flying about was not Miss Georgia B. Blakely, local young school marm, and P. C. graduate, '34.

HUMOR FROM THE PRESS

Approximately fourteen pounds of pennies went to pay the February board bill of John L. Sullivan, freshman.

Clerks in the treasurer's office were greatly surprised when the student passed $16 in one-cent pieces over the counter, and have anticipated a task in counting the money.

Contrary to the belief that Sullivan had unusually good luck in playing a slot machine, the boy seems to have secured the pennies while working in a store, they representing proceeds from the North Carolina sales tax. When the tax collector came around, Sullivan swapped him bills for the "brownies."

P. C. Noses Out Erskine Quint

P. C. put on a last-half spurt to defeat Erskine 30-27, thereby winning its first victory in several starts. The contest was rough throughout, especially during the last period, when the outcome was uncertain.

"Red" Wyatt, continuing his aggressive style of play, led the scoring with 15 points, and was the most outstanding player for either team. He was followed in the scoring by Sneed, Erskine forward, who garnered 10.

Forehand played well at the center position, despite the fact that he was the object of the affections of the Erskinites.

The Baby Hose dropped a close contest to the Erskine Toy Fleet in a preliminary encounter.

Swimmers Meet Clemson Friday

Resting only one week after a week just passed of three meets, the Presbyterian swimming team will take on the strong Clemson tank team in a return engagement at Clemson. The meet will be held in the Clemson pool Friday afternoon, February 22.

The Tiger team, state champions last year, have already demonstrated their strength this season and a close hard battle is anticipated.

P. C. Tank Men Split Furman Meet

The Presbyterian swimming team making its premier showing of the year, splashed its way to five of nine first places and a 42-42 tie with Furman University here Tuesday afternoon.

The first four events of the meet were carried off in fine style by the Hose tankmen. To start the ball rolling, the 400-yard relay team, composed of Wallace, Langston, Tiller and McSween, clipped off their distance in 4 minutes, 18.8 seconds to defeat the Furman entries.

With this as an example, Alexander, of P. C., placed first in the 140-yard breast stroke; Valley, P. C., captured first in the 140-yard backstroke; and Wilson, P. C., took first honor in the 40-yard free style. Presbyterian's fifth first place came in the final event of the afternoon, the 300-yard medley relay.

At the conclusion of the meet, it was announced that Presbyterian had won by a margin of two points, but a re-check uncovered the error a few minutes later.

Summary of events:

400 Yard Relay — Wallace, Langston, Tiller, McSween (Presbyterian); Arnold, McDonald, 1, Purser and B. Purser (Furman). Time, 4 minutes, 18.8 seconds. Points, P. C., 8; Furman, 4.

140 Yard Breast Stroke—Alexander (P. C.); Coleman (Furman); McDonald (Furman). Time, 2 minutes, 15.5 seconds. Points, P. C. 5, Furman 4.

140 Yard Back Stroke—Valley (P. C.); Sage (Furman); Wallace (P. C.). Time, 2 minutes, 2.5 seconds. Points, P. C., 6, Furman 3.

40 Yard Free Style—Wilson (P. C.); McCall (Furman); Wood (Furman). Time, 22 flat; points, P. C., 5, Furman 4.

440 Yard Free Style—I. Purser (Furman); Hamilton (Furman); McSween (P. C.). Time, 6 minutes, 7 seconds. Points, Furman 8, P. C., 1.

100 Yard Free Style—I. Purser (Furman); Wilson (P. C.); Tiller (P. C.). One minute, 7.7 seconds. Points, Furman 5, P. C., 4.

Fancy Diving—Beattie (Furman), 132.3; McSween (P. C.), 106.35; Valley (P. C.), 104.8. Points, Furman 5, P. C., 4.

220 Free Style—I. Purser (Furman); Langston (P. C.); D. Purser (Furman). Two minutes, 47.9 seconds. Points, Furman 6, P. C 3.

300 Medley Race—Valley, Alexander and Wilson (P. C.); Arnold, Coleman and Wood (Furman). Three minutes, 56.3 seconds. Points, Furman 3, P. C. 6.

Total Score—Furman 42, Presbyterian 42 (tie).

Three Basketball Games This Week

Entering upon its sixth week of inter-college competition, the Presbyterian basketball team will go up against the strong Terrier quintet of Wofford College at Spartanburg tonight. In one of the first games of the season, Wofford defeated the Hose by a score of 55 to 32; therefore the local team will be out for revenge.

On Wednesday the Clemson aggregation, winner over the strong Carolina outfit, will come to Clinton to match wits and goals with the Calvinists. The final game of the week will be played here on Saturday night against the Newberry Indians. In addition, the game Saturday night is the final one on the Hose schedule and will end the season for the Presbyterian basketeers.

Clemson Swimmers Defeat Hose, 58-26

In their third meet in four days, the Blue Hose swimmers were defeated 58 to 26 by a fast Clemson college team here Friday afternoon.

Alexander, swimming the breast stroke, and the medley relay team, composed of Valley, Alexander and Wilson, accounted for Presbyterian's only first places.

The outstanding individual star of the meet was Durban of Clemson. The Tiger swimmer chalked up first places in the 40, 100, and 220 yard distances, swimming the 40 yard dash in the excellent time of 19.6 seconds.

The Blue Hose team, in spite of the fact that it was defeated, seemed to possess much more power than was exhibited by the score.

Summary:

400 Yard Relay—McHugh, Watkins, Allison, Bacot (Clemson). 4 minutes, 22.2 seconds.

150 Breast Stroke — Alexander (P. C.); McNeely (Clemson), Heikkila, (Clemson). 2 minutes, 19.5 seconds.

150 Back Stroke—McHugh (Clemson); Valley (P. C.); Watkins (Clemson). 2 minutes, 6.9 seconds.

40 Yard Dash—Durban (Clemson); Bacot (Clemson); Wilson (P. C.). 19.6 seconds.

440 Free Style—Hunter (Clemson); Allison (Clemson); Calvert (P. C.). 7 minutes, 14.4 seconds.

100 Yard Dash—Durban (Clemson); Tiller (P. C.); Wallace (P. C.). 1 minute, 1.4 seconds.

Diving — Thackston (Clemson); Fletcher (Clemson); McSween (P. C.)

220 Free Style—Durban (Clemson); Allison (Clemson); Langston (P. C.). 2 minutes, 40.5 seconds.

Medley Relay—Valley, Alexander, Wilson (P. C.).

Indians Win From Frosh and Varsity

Newberry's Indians showed superior accuracy in shooting to subdue the P. C. cagers last Thursday night in a high-scoring contest (46 ao 33) on the former's court.

McQuaid, sinking eight baskets by the free throw route and an additional 4 baskets from the field, led the scoring, but the Hoseman, Cleckler, playing in a substitute role, countered with 11 points and played an enthusiastic game. Roy Forehand, P. C.'s regular pivot man, twisted his ankle at the outset, and was forced to retire.

In a prelude to the varsity game, the freshmen of the two institutions put up an exciting nip-and-tuck fight, with Newberrys Papooses emerging victorious, 33 to 31.

Court Tournament Progresses Nicely

Although it was found necessary to postpone the semi-finals and finals until next week, the Blue Key-sponsored intramural basketball tournament swept toward a successful conclusion during the past week. All but three of the competing teams have been vanquished and a close race is anticipated in the finals.

Doyle Boggs, in charge of the tournament, has announced that an all-intramural team will be selected by the votes of the representatives from each of the ten organizations entering teams. The all-campus team thus selected will, if possible, meet the freshman team in a challenge game.

In the three games played during the past week, the Pi Kappa Alpha team defeated the Kappa Alpha quintet, Alpha Lambda Tau defeated Spencer dormitory, and Pi Kappa Phi trounced Beta Kappa.

Pi Kappa Alpha 29, Kappa Alpha 10

In this game, the first of the week, the fraternity team representing Pi Kappa Alpha got off to a flying start early in the game and had rounded up 18 points by the half, to 4 for the hard-pressed Kappa Alphas.

The nimble floor and basket work of that fast trio, Quarterman, Yearout, and Bolick, brought a comparatively easy victory. For the losing five, McClary and Hudson turned in excellent performances.

Alpha Lambda Tau 24, Spencer 3

Presenting one of the outstanding teams in the running, the Alpha Lambda Tau hoopsters nearly blanked a gamely fighting team from Spencer dormitory. Penland, half-pint fraternity player, gave a fine exhibition in spite of the fact that he was closely guarded from the opening whistle. Van Sant, A. L. T., was high scorer with 11 points.

The three points chalked up by the dormitory were the result of a goal by Jordan and a foul shot by McCaskill.

Pi Kappa Phi 52, Beta Kappa 9

The Phi team, aided and abetted by the stellar shooting of lanky Bill Clark used a wealth of regulars and reserve players to soundly trounce the Beta Kappa aggregation. In addition to Clark, the playing of Seagle and Degner, for the winners, was especially noticeable.

For Beta Kappa, John Wilson was a bulwark of defense.

Saurians Annex Decisive Victory

A tanned Florida tank team journeyed up from the South and soundly defeated the Presbyterian outfit Thursday afternoon by a score of 64 to 20.

The Florida team was composed of a group which displayed some of the best talent seen in the local pool in several years. Sechler and Cone, on the dashes, and Lawhorn, on the distances, were outstanding for the visitors. In Zewadski, trim diver, the Floridians possess a gold mine.

Furman Five Tops Blue Hose, 59-38

Clearly proving their superiority for the second time this season, Furman's basketeers delivered a 59-38 victory to their home-town supporters at the expense of P. C.'s Blue Stockings on the Furman court.

With the same group that wrought havoc to the Calvinist cagers in Clinton bearing the offensive burden, the Hornets began stinging early, and before the termination of festivities had stung their determined apponents into submission.

All members of the starting five, with the exception of Wakefield, scored 12 points or more, to swell the Hornet margin of victory. Wyatt and Levi scored 14 and 10 points, respectively, playing in their customary talented fashion.

WHERE MEN ARE MADE

AN ACCREDITED A-GRADE COLLEGE, OFFERING COURSES LEADING TO B. A. AND B. S. DEGREES.

FOR INFORMATION ADDRESS THE PRESIDENT.

Students Say 'No' To League Entry

Neither Do They Believe U. S. Should Have Largest Navy and Air Force, According To Poll.

College students do not believe that the United States should enter the League of Nations. Neither do they believe that the U. S. should have the largest navy and air force. These are the conclusions to be drawn from the final returns of the Literary Digest college poll.

By a close ballot of 55,689 for and [illegible] students from 118 universities and colleges indicated that [illegible] the League of Nations is merely a question of two sides.

The voting was overwhelmingly in favor of government control of munitions, 9 to 1, in fact. The vote was 2 to 1 that the United States could stay out of another great war and 5 to 1 for universal conscription. American youth will still defend its home, or so it voted again 5 to 1 for the affirmative to the question. "Would you fight if America were invaded?" The votes, however, ran almost 5 to 1 negative to the question, Would you fight if America were the invader?" One is led to conclude that America's youth does not want war.

Contrary to the total vote, South Carolina was one of eighteen schools, including Georgia, to vote in favor of America's building a navy and air force second to none. By a small margin South Carolina ran contrary to the total vote, and voted in favor of America's entry into the League.

"More than a third of the ballots were returned," says the Literary Digest, "the highest percentage of returns ever obtained in a Literary Digest poll." In spite of all that is said to the contrary, the evidence points to the conclusion that "unthinking youth" is interested in America and her international problems.

BLUE STOCKING FIGHTERS BEAT GAMECOCKS

[illegible]'s more experienced and adept Harry Hilton. Hilton was the more aggressive of the two, but Pitman staunchly stood his ground and punched back.

The Gamecock entry packed a powerful mitt and a pair of fast feet that aided greatly in chalking up the tallies. This, the senior welterweight, brought the score to 4 to 3, in favor of P. C.

The last bout on the card, because of the fact that Carolina forfeited both light-heavy and heavyweight, was between middleweights Cappelmann, P. C., and Stoddard, Carolina.

For two rounds the two men mixed it and then, in the third period, the Paris Island mauler flayed his man with powerful blows to the head that left the Gamecock reeling. At this point the referee stopped the battle and awarded Cappelmann the decision on a technical knockout.

Several preliminaries were fought between Carolina freshmen, all exhibition bouts, but Cappelmann's T.K.O. rang down the curtain.

[illegible] the P. C. team acquitted himself well, and each came out of the fray in fairly good condition. Seagle received a cut over the eye, while Taylor, Carolina, was bleeding even more profusely.

The next Hose match will be against [illegible] Tuesday, February 26, in Clinton.

Bantamweight: Taylor, Carolina, by [illegible] P. C.

Featherweight: Forfeited by Carolina.

Lightweight: Clark, P. C., by T.K.O. [illegible] Carolina.

Welterweight: [illegible] Carolina, by decision over Pitman, P. C.

Middleweight: Hilton, Carolina, by decision over Pitman, P. C.

Middleweight: Cappelmann, P. C., by T.K.O. over Stoddard, Carolina.

FERA Projects Now Organized

Leaders Named For Each Phase of Work On Campus. Weekly Reports To Be Made.

A special meeting of all F. E. R. A. members on the campus was held last week for the purpose of organizing new projects for the coming month. According to Dr. J. H. Davis, administrator of the group, the following projects with their respective leaders have been outlined: Co-ordinator of Outdoor Projects, J. E. Ratchford. Tennis Courts behind Judd Hall, in charge of E. D. Patton. New rifle range on practice athletic field, in charge of P. W. Yearout. Grading of campus between the administration building and Smyth, in charge of W. J. Langston. Map of campus, in charge of T. F. Carothers. Student statistics, in charge of H. C. Garrett and C. C. Billingsley. Athletic history, to be compiled by Coach Johnson. Intra-mural sports, J. Woodward assisting D. W. Boggs of the Blue Key. History of South Carolina, J. McClary assisting Dr. Jones. Alumni history, Misses Frances Spratt and Sophie Sullivan assisting Mr. W. L. Jones.

The projects generally conceded to be the most interesting of the group inclue the map of the campus, which will be drawn accurately with a transit instrument; student statistics, which will consist of a questionnaire and will estimate the average cost of attending P. C., including picture shows and soft drinks; the history of athletics, which will include a list of all games and contests participated in by our school since P. C. has had athletic teams; and the construction of the new rifle range on the lower athletic field, which is a definite step forward in the progress of this institution.

The executive committeee of the F. E. R. A. consists of J. E. Ratchford, T. F. Carothers, and J. McClary. Weekly reports are made at a scheduled meeting every Tuesday afternoon, and the project program changes from month to month. For full details of campus F. E. R. A. maneuvers, read the new bulletin board on the second floor of the Science Hall.

P. C. Fighters Meet Georgia Tomorrow

BOARD OF TRUSTEES TO MEET IN ANNUAL SESSION TUESDAY

Reports of Administration and Committees To Be Made At Meeting Tomorrow. No Unusual Matters To Be Prsented To College Directors, Is Belief.

The board of trustees of Presbyterian college will convene here tomorrow for its regular annual meeting, at which time there will be the usual report of the president and the special reports of any committees that may be scheduled for this time.

The meeting will be in the reading room of the library building and will be at eleven o'clock to continue until all business has been finished that afternoon.

The board of trustees is composed of one representative from each of the presbyteries in Georgia and South Carolina, of a representative for each ten thousand communicants in the two synods, which allows four men from the Synod of South Carolina and three from the Georgia synod, and four alumni members who may come from any synod of the church. Dr. Henry Wade DuBose, of Spartanburg, is chairman of the board; Mr. Marvin M. MacFerrin, of Augusta, is vice-chairman, and Dr. A. E. Spencer, of the college faculty, is secretary and treasurer.

The business at this meeting will most probably be routine matter, since it is not thought that anything of unusual importance will be brought up at this time.

Fourth Corps Area Rifle Match Soon

Last year the Fourth Corps area started a competitive firing match between all the senior R O T. C. units in eight Southern states. There were twelve teams in the contest last year and P. C. took eighth place.

The states represented were: North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Louisiana, Tennessee, and Mississippi. The schools were: N. C. State, Davidson, Clemson, Presbyterian, Georgia Tech, University of Georgia, George Teachers' college, University of Florida, Alabama Polytechnic institute, Universtiy of Alabama, Louisiana State University, and the University of Mississippi. Georgia State Teachers' college is not entered this year and Wofford appears on the roll of competitors. It is hoped that The Citadel will also enter.

Once a week one phase is fired and the team's total is sent to corps headquarters at Atlanta, to be graded. After all phases have been sent the teams are graded and the order is announced.

The team for each school is composed of the highest ten scores of fifteen sent.

Clemson Rules S. C. Basketball Roost

Clinches State Title By Winning From P. C., 39 to 33, Closing Season For Both Schools.

Proving themselves superior throughout the fray, Clemson's Tigers decisively defeated P. C.'s Blue Hosemen by 39 to 33, and in doing so removed the last obstacle to their claim for undisputed state honors. The game ended the season for both Presbyterian and Clemson.

Swails, the Tiger feature attraction, led the scoring with 17 points, but was excelled by the Tiger, Jennington, and Wyatt, Cleckler and Levi of P. C., in actual ability. Bradley, of the Hosemen, and Brown, of Clemson, gave four-star defensive performances.

The victors built up an early lead that was kept secure until the final whistle.

Clemson's only state loss was to Carolina, but in a return game the Tigers evened things up, and a loss to Furman on the following night knocked the Gamecocks out of the running.

I. R. C. Conference Held At Davidson

Fifty-Two Colleges Represented At Meeting To Study International Questions.

The Presbyterian College International Relations club sent six delegates to the Southeastern Students' Conference on International Relations which had its twelfth annual meeting at Davidson college, February 21-23. The delegates were Dean M. W. Brown, faculty adviser of the club, Preston Charles, Hugh Holman, Colin Hudson, Tom Newland, and Lynn Jones.

The conference officially opened on Thursday night with a banquet. On Friday morning the Far East and Central Europe were discussed. Following luncheon, Dr. K. C. Frazer, of the University of North Carolina, made an address on "The Work of the League of Nations in Disarmament, and American Policy." This was followed by individual reports from the clubs present. Following a banquet, Dr. Otto Nathan, political economist and former German professor, now at Princeton due to the Hitler regime, made a radio-broadcast address on "Problems of World Recovery."

Saturday morning there was a round table discussion of the question, "Should the Munitions Industry Remain in Private Hands or in the Control of the Government?" This was followed by a business meeting, then luncheon, and adjournment of the conference.

There were fifty-two colleges represented at the conclave, each state in the southeastern district being represented with the exception of Florida. South Carolina led with the number of colleges represented, the number being twelve, while Georgia was next with ten.

The outstanding speakers of the occasion were: Dr. Otto Nathan, former German political adviser and economist; Dr. K. C. Frazer, professor of political science at the University of North Carolina; Dr. T. W. Lingle, professor at Davidson college; Dr. A. A. McFadden, missionary to China; Dr. J. M. McConnell, professor at Davidson; Dr. C. B. Gosnell, professor at Emory university; Alan Jenkins, professor at Asheville Normal school; Miss Ursula P. Hubbard, representative of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, New York.

Baseball Men Start Year's Practice

Thirty-one Candidates Report For First Practice. Johnson Expects Excellent Team.

Baseball practice began on Wednesday afternoon with thirty-one men reporting for the squad. This is the largest number of candidates that has reported in a number of years, according to Coach Johnson, and out of this material he expects to develop a powerful team.

All of last year's regulars, with the exception of Wood and Morgan, are back, and there are quite a few new men out this year. Higbe, Horne, Bolick, Captain Holcomb, Millsap, and Holliday are among the sluggers of last year returning to the squad, while the new men are showing promise of developing into good players.

Holliday, Wyatt, Suggs, and Mullinix are expected to do most of the mound duty this season, and Bolick, Forehand, and Plowden are to do their stuff behind the bat. With such a large squad out, it is yet too early to predict who will play the other positions.

The Blue Hose officially open the Palmetto Baseball League season when they journey to Due West on March 28 to battle Jake Todd's Flying Fleet. Following the opener, the Hose season is as follows:

April 2—Furman, at Clinton.

Wysor To Remain Another Year

Professor of Military Science Returned To This Post. Announcement Pleases Students.

Dr. John McSween, president of Presbyterian college, announced this morning that Captain R. E. Wysor, Jr., professor of military science and tactics at the college, has been ordered to remain here for another year by the war department of the United States government, "unless something unforseen arises."

The announcement was met by loud cheering and applause, signifying how popular the "Cap'n" is with the students.

Captain Blanton, member of the military staff, has been ordered to another post.

Annual Services Well-Attended

Rev. A. G. Harris, of Milledgeville, Ga., Leads Successful Series of Religious Meetings.

The annual series of revival services which began at Presbyterian college Monday ngiht was brought to a close Friday evening, after Rev. A. G. Harris, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Milyledgeville, Ga., had completed his ninth commonsense, inspiring and thought-provoking message to the students.

The attendance at the evening services of the series was unusually large—possibly the largest of any other meeting of this kind in the recent history of the school. This was due largely to the concerted efforts made by the Y. M. C. A. to get the men out to all meetings. Under the leadership of Van Arnold, president of the Y. M. C. A., the student body was divided into sixteen groups with a chairman over each of the groups. This chairman was to see three sub-chairmen whose duty it was to see in turn three more men. Thus, in a most satisfactory and convenient manner every man in the student body was invited out to each of the services, and consequently all services were well attended.

Dr. McSween and Mr. Harris expressed their appreciation for the unusual amount of preparation which was done in the few weeks prior to the actual services. Dr. McSween said that not since he had been here had the preparation been so thorough as this time. Mr. Harris expressed his appreciation to the staff of The Blue Stocking for so effectively placing the attention of the student body on the services.

During the four days of the services the administration made it possible for the students to hear Mr. Harris during the chapel hour by shortening the morning periods by ten minutes in order that the chapel period might be of suitable length for a regular service.

A short song service was led each time by the various fraternities and other organizations on the campus. During these opening exercises the student body heard the college quartet several tims, the glee club once, and other special musical selections by various members of the student body.

The student body found Mr. Harris to be all that it had expected of him—a forceful speaker, basing his messages on common sense, constructing his messages on perfectly logical outlines, and then delivering what he had to say in a manner appealing to collegians. He interspersed his messages with frequent well-chosen illustrations which aptly put over his point; he had just the right amount of the humorous and at the same time remembered that his highest purpose was to give the young men in his audience some spiritual and moral inspiration that would not be passed off with the end of the sermon.

At the opening service on Monday evening Mr. Harris gave a practical and thought-provoking message, ideal for modern youth, when he spoke on the text from Luke 5:4, "Launch out into the deep and let down your nets."

Pi Kappa Phi Wins Intramural Race

Basketball Tournament Comes To Close. Campus Swimming Meets Next On Program.

Pi Kappa Phi fraternity, winning the intramural basketball championship of the campus, jumped into the lead last week with twelve points in the race sponsored by Blue Key, leadership fraternity, for the intramural cup awarded by the group.

Alpha Lambda Tau runs a close second with seven points, Pi Kappa Alpha comes third with four, and Smyth dormitory fourth with two.

Three consolation games were played Monday afternoon and night. Beta Kappa fraternity defeated Spencer dormitory, and Smyth trounced both Beta Kappa and Alpha Kappa Pi. The Beta Kappa-Spencer score was: Beta Kappa 10, Spencer 8. The other two ended with scores not quite so even. They were: Smyth 20, Alpha Kappa Pi 5; Smyth 17, Beta Kappa 7.

The first of the games to determine the intramural winner was played Monday. The fast Alpha Lambda Tau quintet romped over the Pi K. A.'s pride and joy to the tune of a 30 to 16 drubbing.

Penland, scintillating Tau player, accounted for 8 of his team's 30 points. For Pi K. A., "Pudge" Plowden, weighty forward, chalked up 6 tallies.

The final game was played on Tuesday night between Pi Kappa Phi and Alpha Lambda Tau. This was one of the closest games of the entire tournament and neither team was able to do much scoring.

However, the excellent shooting of Clark and the great defensive work of the entire Phi team proved too much for the Tau aggregation and the game ended, Pi Kappa Phi 13, Alpha Lambda Tau 8. .

This victory gave the Pi K. Phi's the 12 points that put them in the lead in the contest.

On the following night, a game was

Track Aspirants Respond To Call

McMillian Is Putting His Men Through the Paces Daily. Will Be Stronger In Track Events.

A large number of men responded to Coach Lonnie McMillian's call for track applicants last week and are working out daily on the cinder oval.

It is slightly early as yet to make any predictions as to the team which Coach McMillian will mold. The squad will undoubtedly be stronger in the track events than in the field events. The loss of several men by graduation and by failure to return to school makes the shot put, javelin, and discus vacancies somewhat of a problem.

For the dashes, three men who were in the competition last year will be available. Yearout and Bradley, both on last year's varsity, and Thompson, a sophomore, will be in the running.

Bill Clark, holder of the state record for the 440, will lead the middle-distance aspirants. Colin Hudson, Estes, Cranford, and others will hold down the mile and two-mile gallops.

The P. C. relay team, defeated only once in the state in the past seven years, will be intact from last year. This quartet, composed of Bradley, Winget, Yearout, and Clark, bettered the time of the 1933 team which was sent to the Penn relays.

The freshman team is always an unknown quantity for the first few weeks. Some men come to college with enviable records and do nothing; others who have never before been a track develop into state champions. For this reason it is impossible to make any pre-season prophecies.

P. C.'s chief contenders in the varsity state race will probably be Clemson and Carolina, in the order named. These two teams tied for first place last year, with Presbyterian next in line.

The first meet for Coach McMillian's charges is scheduled for Saturday, March 23, against Wofford at Spartanburg.

FULL CARD WILL BE PRESENTED

Close and Interesting Series of Bouts Expected For Tuesday Night. All P. C. Scrappers Are In Condition. Holliday Returns To Ring After Absence.

Tomorrow night in Leroy Springs gymnasium the leather pushers of P. C. will clash with the hard-hitting team of the University of Georgia. Last year these two teams met twice, each winning one match.

The Presbyterian fighters came out of their 5 to 3 victory over Carolina in fairly good condition, with the exception of Seagle, who received a cut over the left eye. The high velocity scrapping done by the Hosemen last week predicts a close, hard encounter.

In the bantamweight class, Seagle has won one of his fights, lost one, and drawn one. He can always be depended upon to put up a good scrap.

McCaskill, who will most likely fight the feather-weight division, has defeated Altman of Clemson, drawn with Dillard of Citadel, and won from Carolina by forfeit.

Clark, the lanky professor of leather from Union, is undefated and therefore little need be said of his ability. Two of his battles were won by decision and the other by a technical knockout. He seems likely to repeat again tomorrow evening.

Welterweight McClary has had bad luck this year, but he has shown that he has what it takes. To him will be entrusted the 145 pound bout. Pitman, who fought his first intercollegiate rounds last week, seems to be developing into a very good fighter. With another week of practice, and the experience obtained from the Carolina fracas, he should do excellently in the senior welter-weight section.

Cappelmann and Holliday will probably wear the mitts in the middleweight and light-heavy fights. Holliday has been out most of the season, but is now in fairly good shape. Cappelmann has taken the decision twice and lost only once. He will give any man sent against him plenty of trouble.

Harry Bolick will fight the heavy weight bout. Bolick has defeated Henly, of Clemson, drawn with Symmes, of Citadel, and won from Carolina by forfeit.

Little can be learned of the Georgia fighters in this section. The Athens team always comes well equipped with game batlers, who have never yet failed to supply ample competition. From last year's tussle, Redutzky and Jacobson will be especially remembered. Both know all the boxing answers and never ask any questions. All told, the fights tomorrow night should be a highlight of the boxing season.

Tennis Men Look To Good Year

Captain McCutchen Expects Improved Team. First Practice Scheduled For Today.

"We expect to have a better tennis team than last year's," said Chalmers McCutchen, captain of the netmen, in commenting on the approaching season.

The first practice was to be held this afternoon and a number of men were expected to report. The courts have been undergoing top-soiling by the FERA workers and have not, therefore, been in shape for play. Now, however, all is in readiness and the squad will soon get down to hard work.

Only two or three men were lost by graduation or by failure to return to school and a good season is in prospect. Some of those who were expected to report this afternoon were: Gregg, Tiller, Van Sant, McCutchen, Estes, Parham, Levi, and Patton.

Of these, four played regularly on last year's team and one played on the freshman team. Several others from the sophomore class are expected to show up in the near future.

Thought For the Week

(Editor's Note:—Since we feel that religion does play an essential part in our life at Presbyterian College, we are inaugurating this brief column for the purpose of giving those students of a religious tendency a means of expression in this organ. This will be a weekly feature).

THE STANDARD OF PERFECTION

Perhaps the most essential element of human existence is a standard of perfection. Sooner or later in life every individual realizes the necessity of a mental yard-stick with which to measure his thoughts and ideals. The primary analysis of any matter is usually to determine whether a thing is physically right or wrong in the eyes of our fellow men. There are also other deeper considerations of fundamental importance. When contemplating a proposed course of action, we may appropriately ask ourselves these questions: "In the sight of God, is this thing absolutely honest? Is it absolutely pure? Is it the loving, Christ-like thing to do?" We as Christians know from John 3:16 that God has given to the world the Supreme Standard of Perfection. Keeping in mind this fact, our rue and unfailing standard of perfection comes through faith in Jesus Christ. His life and His ideals form the only consistent and worthwhile pattern by which we may shape our own lives.

We're Not So Dumb . . .

The older generation is constantly criticising us for wasting our time in college and learning nothing that is of real value to us. It is a criticism that is by no means just. Of course we do not have the profound knowledge of life and its intricate problems and relations that they have. But they should remember that, afer all, we are young and inexperienced in the ways of the world. To acquire this knowledge with less pain than they had in acquiring it is one of the primary reasons that we are here.

Look at our course of study and see if we aren't actually getting more from college, in the sense of learning to live, than they received. We no longer spend precious hours of our youth digging learnedly and laboriously in dusty and boresome tomes that have only an aesthetic value—and that a doubtful one. We are in one sense learning in college to grapple with life. Our studies are yearly becoming more virile and real — economics, aviation, chemistry, journalism, modern psychology, these are subjects that were touched either briefly or not at all by our parents, and these are the subjects out of which modern life is being made. Are we not better equipped when we have a hazy knowledge of them than our parents were when they had a hazy idea of Zenophon's Anabasis.

NOTES AND SHADES

MOVIES

Monday and Tuesday—"Kansas City Princess." This so-called comedy about two Kansas City manicurists, Joan Blondell and Glenda Farrell, out to do some plain and fancy gold-digging, is certainly no strain on the intelligence. Escaping racketeer Robert Armstrong's attentions, they step off to Europe and luxury in this Warner film.

Wednesday—Richard Dix in "West of the Pecos." Here is a good Western—moving swiftly, with comedy situations sprinkled in, and several new story twists. The cowboy hero is Richard Dix, who goes to San Antonio to round up a gang of crooks, and meets Martha Sleeper, disguised as a hard-boiled boy, her father, Samuel Hinds, and Sleep'n Eat, and Louise Beavers. Dix is splendid in this RKO-Radio production.

Thursday—"King Kelly of U. S. A." No reviews available.

Friday—"Bachelor of Arts." This film is highly entertaining and full of university life, if you like that sort of thing. Tom Brown and Anita Louise play the youthful lovers with great sincerity and this is probably because they are in love in real life. Mae Marsh, Henry B. Walthall, Donald Meek, and Frank Albertson are all splendid, and Step 'n Fetchit is his usual self in this Fox attraction.

Saturday—"A Man's Game." No reviews available.

RADIO

Last week's radio schedule was practically complete and will remain the same until the middle of March. At this time the radio sponsors will change their programs for the spring season and at that change a new schedule will be published.

DID YOU KNOW THAT?

Katherine Cornell's revival of "Romeo and Juliette," with Brian Aherne and Basil Rathbone, is enjoying quite a success on Broadway.

Last week, when you saw Elissa Landi singing in the film, "Enter Madame," she was not singing but merely moving her mouth. Nina Koshetz, world-renowned operatic soprano, was the voice behind the scenes.

Kirsten Flagstad, the Norwegian operatic diva, made one of the most successful debuts that has been made at the Metropolitan during the last decade.

"Frankenstein's Bride," starring Boris Karloff, is soon to be released as a sequel to "Frankenstein."

"David Copperfield" entered its fifth week at the Capitol theatre this week. This is the first time in the history of this illustrious movie palace that a picture has had such popularity.

WITH THE GREEKS

Beta Kappa fraternity adds another pledge to its ranks with Marion Parham joining the brotherhood. Parham is a member of the sophomore class and is from Latta, S. C. With the new man now added to the Beta Kappas, the organization now totals 18 members, seven of them pledges and eleven actives.

Alpha Kappa Pi fraternity gave a social last Friday evening, at which a number of young ladies from Clinton and Laurens were present. Among these were Misses Catherine Davenport, Marigene Martin, Helen Mahaffey, and Marjie Minter of Laurens; and Misses Polly Roberts, Vivian Woodruff, Mary Kate Hollis and others from Clinton.

THE PARADE GROUND

TO THE SOLDIERS, TO MAKE MUCH OF TIME

(Apologies to Robert Herrick)

Gather ye laurels while ye may,
Old time is still a-flying;
And this same gunner that shoots today,
Tomorrow will be dying.

The Reserve Officers' Rifle team will fire a "shoulder-to-shoulder" match with the varsity team next Wednesday night. All men who are interested in sportsmanship, rifle shooting, and comedy, are cordially requested to be on hand—the varsity is going to need support.

The state rifle match will take place in April at Clemson. Those participating are Clemson, P. C., Wofford, and possibly The Citadel. P. C. has just lost—most decidedly—a match with the N. C. State shooters, and spirits are rather humble at present. Much improvement will have to be achieved, patented, and put into action, before Monsieur Young's charges can even think of trying to claim a state championship.

The military department is thinking of having competitions, between squads and individuals, sometime in April. Medals are to be awarded to individuals. At the same time, fancy drills are to be put on by selected squads. All is to be in the gym at night. In other words, we are to have a military show—another novelty for P. C.! Another triumph for the P. M. S. and T.!

Captain Wysor is not only a sporting enthusiast; he is also one of the local "uncrowned champions" of the golfing realm. It has often puzzled this columnist as to where our P. M. S. and T. spent his spare time, and especially as to why he can never be found in his office on bright, sunny afternoons. It has just been ascertained that the expert swinging of golf clubs takes up both spare time and bright afternoons. On Tuesday last, as fate would have it, the Captain enjoyed a very successful round or two, defeating two prominent preachers who are of obviously Scotch descent—a most remarkable conquest for a military man!

The co-ed rifle team, with doughty Christine Peake as star performer, is progressing rapidly under the tutelage of that most remarkable instructor, Sergeant Young. Practices are held twice a week—the professor desired four per, but the young ladies trotted out a copy of the latest NRA, and proved to his satisfaction that only two were permitted by law.

BOOK REVIEW

By H. W. Calvert

"BETWEEN THESE TWO"—Pearl S. Buck

Few writers have that power of description which makes objects, scenes, and personalities so vivid that they become real pulsating tableaux. Character portrayal accompanied with situation depiction to mold a theme into a moving, active story has given some novelists a place in the sun. The ability to catch some sparkling sio from the wine of life and make its glamour eternal through mere words — the right words — has merited Pearl S. Buck the praise of the reading world.

Miss Buck in her latest release has perhaps reached new heights in her capacity for depiction. She has expressed the well nigh thought inexpressable. She has captured an epoch from the Great American Family and pictured it so vividly that a reader seems to actually live with the story.

From this depressed and perplexed life in our country, two characters emerge from their backgrounds to fight for that vital human necessity —love. "Between These Two" carries the young couple through their rough stream bestrewn with problematic obstacles to exit safe in the smooth path beyond the rapids. Just what marriage can offer the poor, struggling, wretched lovers of today in this drab, depressed world, is the problem the pair in this story has to meet.

Idealistic, the heroine shuns marriage, fearing that with it love ends. She fears her marriage may end the apparently unhappy course of her parents' matrimony. She persuades her young American mate to try for love only to find the traditions and morals of society are condemning. Faced with a crisis in her own family life, she finds that love doesn't end after the marriage vows, even though it is latent at times. Thus a romance of two young Americans finds happy ending.

This charming emotional story has a peculiar appeal which will make it popular. It is one for which America's youths can perhaps find parallels in their own lives. To say the least, they will enjoy reading it.

"Between These Two" is a complete short novel in the March Cosmopolitan Magazine.

HUMOR FROM THE PRESS

The stag line has been abolished at Christian college. The supporters of this move claim that it breaks formality and is an aftermath of the Civil war, having been brought down South by the North, and being alien to the spirit of social functions by its discrimination.—Emory Wheel.

The Mercer boys are going sissy in a big way. They have organized a knitting team and even selected a coach (a funny man, to put them in stitches). It is in emulation of the Prince of Wales' pastime.

The light that lies in a woman's eyes probably lies because it is the reflection of what the young man has been saying all evening. — The Alabamian.

The Gertrude Stein influence on a class in economics:

"A bill of exchange is a bill of exchange is an order of the drawer through the drawer to the payer in pounds for dollars dollars for pounds Britain pounds and backed with gold pounds are gold dollars are gold Did you ever see a dollar inflating up up p one million two million what is a dollar 15 5-21 grains of gold 9-10 fine very fine gold is very fine. The president fixes gold you can fix gold does gold need fixing why fix it we never use it . . . "—Randolph-Macon Sidelights.

Weekly dumb crack: My radio is little that when I get Amos and Andy I can only get Amos.—Randolph-Macon Sundial.

How about Kate Smith?

An English class at Carolina recently was much delighted when the professor quoted with great gusto a section from "The Man on the Flying Trapeze." They especially enjoyed the professor's rendition of the verse in which the hero thumbled his nose, sneered, and said "Nertz."

Local authorities, in a sensational disclosure, reveal that two college boys, Joe Commander and Tom Upshur, have just been released on $500 bond after they were caught stealing coal from the P. C. fuel supply back of Laurens dormitory. The culprits, when reached today, directed reporters to their legal advisers.

Close questioning of the pair by representatives of the law revealed that their motive originated in a desire to have dates with two attractive Clinton girls, sisters. The father of the young ladies had, however, issued an ultimatum to the effect that any males who wished evenings with his daughters must bring a scuttle of coal each. Thus, the perpetrators of the deed had been filching fuel from the college supply for some time before being caught.

College authorities expressed surprise on finding out that such prominent students were involved in the crime. It had been suspected for some time that coal was being taken from the bin, and the police had been notified to be on the look-out, but many were of the opinion that outsiders were responsible. The case of the two will come up for trial at an early date.

ALUMNI

Dr. Delmar Rhame, son of D. O. Rhame, of Clinton, was a student at P. C. from '23 to '26, having come here from Clemson. Dr. Rhame graduated with the B. A. degree, after which he received his M. D. at Columbia university, New York. He completed his internship at King's County hospital, Brooklyn. Since then he has been assistant to Dr. S. C. Hays, class of '06, at the Dr. Hays' hospital, in Clinton.

While in college Dr. Rhame was active in extra-curricula activities of a wide and varied nature. He was a star low hurdler and captain of the track team.

Robert G. "Christy" Matheson, class of '21, and formerly from Fountain Inn, S. C., received his B. A. degree from this institution. Mr. Matheson was third in his class. He received his M. A. from the University of South Carolina.

Mr. Matheson then accepted a position in the city schools of Columbia, where he taught in the English department of the high school. From there he went to the Virginia Polytechnic institute, where he also taught English.

Not long afterward Mr. Matheson was made dean of Presbyterian Junior college, Maxton, N. C. This office he filled for several years, then becoming president of the institution.

Mr. Matheson is now back at his alma mater and has the position of assistant to the president.

THE FINAL FLING

The Blue Hose basketball machine, 1935 model, is screeching to a stop. True, it has traveled along a bitter path; and there has been experienced many bumps. Sometimes it hit on one cylinder, sometimes two, and on rare occasions, all five. On only one occasion did it experience victory within the confines of the Palmetto state. But is it as delapidated and inefficient as is thought? Let's take statistics:

Most talented: Levi.
Most aggressive: Wyatt.
Best defensively: Bradley.
Best shot: Levi.
Best substitute: Cleckler.

It is the writer's firm belief that "Red" Wyatt would be a valuable addition to any team in the state. Levi, handicapped by lack of height, is one of the most accurate passers in the state and can handle himself unusually well. Bradley, despite his offensive inability, is a clever guard, whose scientific style of defensive play has proven valuable to the Hosemen throughout the year. Forehand and Adams have shown their ability at times, and should be much better next season. Forehand's ability to consistently control the tip-off has been a valuable factor.

The P. C. machine could not match the power, the co-ordination and the speed of its opponents. Graduation will deprive it of certain power, but new cogs will be supplied by the present freshmen and with the addition of those who are at present ineligible, P. C. should produce a fairly strong vehicle to trod the road of competition during the year 1936.

Sidewalk toy sellers work the year around in New York, shooting mechanical toys around and round, despite the perilous feet of hundreds of passers-by.

Blue Hose Quint Loses To Terriers

[illegible] Methodist Terriers experienced little difficulty in licking P. C. cagers in a return contest played in Spartanburg.

The Methodists, featuring Mullikin, their star guard, piled up an impressive lead, and after the regulars had performed for half the game, the second stringers were sent in.

"Red" Wyatt set the pace for the Hosemen with 11 points to his credit. His teammates were mediocre. Adams dropped two through the wicker and made good a foul shot to register five points.

The freshmen of the two institutions provided the spectators much more excitement in a game played prior to the varsity encounter. The Terriers finally nosed out the Baby Sox by 21 to 19.

played between the all-tar team selected by a representative of each of the organizations and the freshmen basketeers.

For the first half the intramurals seemed to have the upper hand. Underwood turned in some fine work at forward and things were going well with the score 9 to 5 in favor of the all-stars. Then, in the last half, stars and other things began to fall and when the final whistle sounded, the rats had made a spectacular comeback and defeated the intramural team 22 to 19.

The first and second teams picked by the intramural representatives were as follows: First team—Guards, Berg and Holcomb; forward, Clark and Underwood; center, Van Sant. Second team — Guards, Degner and Penland; forwards, Seagle and Quarterman; center, Yearout.

The all-star versus freshmen game ended the Blue Key basketball program, but swimming will be begun at an early date, probably the first part of this week.

ANNUAL SERVICES WELL-ATTENDED

for a draught." In developing this text Mr. Harris pointed out that we are expected to follow God's call to serve Him and our fellowman, that we are to have great ambitions to go into the deep water, that we are to use our own talents to the best of our ability; and that we are to work expecting to get a draught.

In the first morning service, the student body heard a message from Genesis 4:9, "Where is Abel, thy brother?" in which was brought out the facts that we are our brother's keeper, that our lives are inter-related with those of our fellowman and with God, which makes it impossible to harbor envy, the child of hate, in our minds,

Other interesting themes used during the meeting were: "A Worthy Witness," taken from Acts 1:8, "Ye shall be witnesses for me," in which the speaker pointed out that God's true witness must have knowledge, courage, and character; a theme from II Samuel 23:15, 16, telling of David's great thirst for water from the well of his home, symbolizing man's thirst for spiritual water, and telling of the supreme service which three of David's men rendered for him to obtain this water symbolizing the service due to God, and later revealing the true regard for things sacred; one taken from I Samuel 23:16, where the marvelous friendship between David and Jonathan is revealed to teach us the even greater friendship that Jesus Christ showed for us; another from Judges 11:35, where the hearers were shown the utter importance of living up to their vows to God, believing always that we will receive some ultimate reward from things which may seem disastrous in their first light; yet another from John 12:21, in which was revealed the necessary procedure to "see Jesus"; and a most comforting one from Moses' parable of the eagle in Deuteronomy, teaching that God expects us to fly on our own support in due time, that He stirs our nest if we do not, and that He is always near us bearing us up when we need support; and then the final address of Friday evening, taken from Acts 11:26, "What ti means to be a Christian," where Mr. Harris pointed out the obvious facts that we must first believe, then serve to complete that thing for which we were born. In concluding the message Mr. Harris gave some practical advice to young men in regard to the choice of a life profession. "In the first place," he said, "do what you can do best, then do what needs to be done, and then above all take God into your heart and trust in Him to show you what He will have you do."

The selection, buying and preparation of the right kinds of Turkish tobaccos for making Chesterfield Cigarettes is a business in itself . . .

Handling Turkish tobacco in the Liggett & Myers modern factory at Smyrna, Turkey.

WE have buyers in all the tobacco markets of Turkey and Greece, including Xanthi, Cavalla, Smyrna and Samsoun.

And at Smyrna Chesterfield has built the most modern tobacco plant in the Near East.

Here the spicy, aromatic Turkish leaf is sorted and graded under the eyes of our own tobacco men.

Then it is put away to age in its own climate for two years or more to make it milder and better-tasting.

When you blend and cross-blend the right kinds of aromatic Turkish tobacco with mild ripe home-grown tobaccos as we do in Chesterfield you have . . .

the cigarette that's milder
the cigarette that tastes better

STUDENT BODY NOMINATES OFFICERS

Blue Key Fraternity Taps Four New Men

McClary, Horne, Adams, Bradley

Ability and Service Recognized By Leadership Group. All Members of Junior Class.

The local chapter of Blue Key, national leadership fraternity, last week announced the passing of four new men. They were James McClary of Georgetown, William S. Horne of Charlotte, Phil Adams of Dublin, Ga., and Joseph Bradley of Chicamauga, Ga. This brings the Blue Key membership to thirteen.

All of these men are members of the junior class. McClary has been outstanding in campus circles, serving on several athletic squads. He is a member of the student council, and Kappa Alpha fraternity. Bill Horne is captain of the 1935 football team, and a member of the baseball team. He is a member of the glee club and of Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity. Bradley was captain of this year's basketball team. He is a letter man in track, and a member of Alpha Lambda Tau fraternity. Adams is captain of next year's basketball team, and a member of Pi Kappa Alpha.

Intramural Trophy

At the chapel period last Tuesday morning L. A. McCall, Jr., president of Blue Key, displayed to the student body the "Blue Key Intramural Trophy." This is a fifteen-inch silver cup, the gift to Blue Key of L. A. McCall, Sr., of Florence, of the class of '92.

The cup is to be awarded annually to the team which wins in the combined intramural sports program. In the case of a fraternity winning, the cup is to be kept in the fraternity rooms, but if a dormitory wins, it is to remain in the trophy case where it is now on display.

Board Of Trustees In Routine Session

Members Hear Report of President and Set Up Budget For Coming Year.

From all reports, the board of trustees see a somewhat brighter outlook for P. C. financially for the coming year. At the semi-annual meeting in the library last Tuesday, the board heard what has been reported as a "favorable report from President McSween on the improved financial condition of the college."

In addition to hearing the report and transacting other routine business, the board adopted a budget for the coming year. The details including the "hows" and "wherefores" of the budget have not, as yet been made public.

The board elected as its new chairman for the coming year, William P. Jacobs, an alumnus of the college, of the class of 1914. He is a grandson of Rev. Willaim Plumer Jacobs, D.D., LL.D., founder of the college. Rev. E. C. Hill, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Athens, Ga., was elected vice-chairman. Dr. W. H. DuBose, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Spartanburg, is the retiring chairman of the board.

Johnson Improves From Flu Attack

The entire student body will be happy to know that Coach Walter Johnson is rapidly improving after an illness of a little over a week. Coach has had a rather bad attack of influenza, contracted on Sunday before last and has been confined to his bed since. His condition is reported as greatly improved and he should be out again in a few days.

Military Ball Comes This Week-End

Stage Is Set for First Event of Kind On Local Campus. Blue Stocking Orchestra To Play.

Invitations have been sent and final plans have been made for the first military ball to be held on the Presbyterian college campus. Latest plans for the Friday night formal call for a "grand march" for the junior and senior cadets. According to plans, the grand march, taking place just before intermission Friday night, will be led by Cadet Lieut. Colonel Doyle Boggs and his date. He will be followed by Cadet Major Seagle and his date, and then the other cadet officers following according to rank. The festive appearance of the occasion will be greatly added to by confetti and streamers.

Saturday afternoon, the tea dance is being sponsored by the six social fraternities on the campus. A cordial invitation has been extended by these organizations to all men on the campus and all visitors to the dances. The tea dance is to be informal.

This series of dances will reach a second climax in the "collegiate ball" Saturday night from nine to twelve. A collegiate ball seems to be a welcomed excuse to attend a terpsichorial affair in very informal attire, or in other words, an opportunity to go to a dance wearing any sort of clothes that happen to please the eccentricities of the individual.

Music for all three dances, seemingly to the thorough satisfaction of the student body, will be the Blue Stocking orchestra, under the competent baton of "Shorty" McDonald. Sweet strains have been wafted often from the "Y" room in the gym as the orchestra has been practicing for the coming festivities.

Track Schedule Now Complete

Several Changes Made Since Recent Publication of Meets. Six Home Events Arranged.

Due to the fact that the track schedule was not quite complete and final when it was printed in a recent issue of The Blue Stocking, and several changes have since been made, the correct schedule for both varsity and frosh, as announced by the athletic department, is given below.

The schedule is as follows:

Saturday, March 30 — Carolina at Columbia—varsity and frosh.

Saturday, April 6—Georgia at Clinton—varsity.

Saturday, April 13 — Clemson at Clinton—varsity and frosh.

Saturday, April 20 — Furman at Clinton—varsity and frosh.

Friday, April 26—Davidson at Clinton—frosh.

Saturday, April 27—Florida at Clinton—varsity.

Friday and Saturday, May 3 and 4—Annual state varsity and frosh meet at Clinton.

Notice

This issue of The Blue Stocking is held over until Tuesday so that the student nominations might be announced. Next week's issue also will be held up for the results of the elections.

BROWN IN HOSPITAL

H. P. Brown, member of the freshman class, was taken to the local hospital for an appendicitis operation early last week. Latest reports are to the effect that he is improving rapidly and is expected back in a short while to resume his work. All of his friends wish him an early recovery.

Saturday's Victory Follows Tuesday's

Bulldogs Forfeit Three and P. C. One. Only Four Fights Held In Athens Engagement.

For the second time in one week the crack Presbyterian college boxing team defeated the University of Georgia ringmen by a score of 4½ to 3½, the second match being fought at the Georgia school Saturday night.

Because of the fact that four bouts were forfeited, three by Georgia and one by P. C., only four fights were on the card. P. C. forfeited in the unlimited division, and Georgia to McCaskill in the featherweight, to Clark in the lightweight, and to Cappelman in the middleweight.

With the score already 3 to 1 in favor of P. C., Seagle stepped into the ring to meet McEver of Georgia. From the opening bell Seagle made the fur fly. In the first round McEver became groggy several times and it looked as if he would take the count.

The second round was somewhat tamer and neither man went to the extreme. In the third Seagle once again opened up and flayed the Georgia bantam with body and head blows. McEver was clearly outclassed and, although he put up a good fight, Seagle easily took the decision.

Georgia having forfeited the featherweight and lightweight, the next bout was between welterweights McClary and Redutsky. Redutsky, Georgia, won the fight on a technical knockout late in the battle.

Since the university fighter has already exhibited his brand of scrapping once this year before a P. C. audience, little need be said of his skill. McClary, up against one of the best boxers in Southern collegiate circles, refused to admit defeat and fought his usual game battle.

The Hose welterweight was bleeding freely about the face when the fight was stopped. He seemed able, however, to have finished to final round had there been any chance of taking the decision.

Winston, of Georgia, took the decision from Pitman, of P. C., in the next to the last fight of the night, the senior welterweight.

"DREAM TRAIN" WINS CLOSE BOUT

College Bus Scores Two Technical Knockouts On Way From Athens, Ga. Vicious Right and Left To Hub Cap and Fender of Adversaries Are Telling Blows.

Presbyterian's placid and retiring school-bus, familiarly known by every student as the "Dream Train," was plodding home from Athens, Ga., with the boxing team Saturday night. The monotonous chug-chug of the tired old engine was broken only by occasional laughs and groans from the dimly-lit interior. The talk was running along fighting lines, naturally enough, and the hot blood which had for so long lain cold and dormant in the old bus began to rise with these stirring tales of the ring.

Thomas Newland, driver of the bus, noticed that the musty engine gave a nervous little sputter and started pounding with a more determined air—but paid little attention to it as the bus was just starting down a long hill.

At the bottom of the hill, a disgruntled '27 model Essex seemed intent on blocking the road, as it purposely exasperated its driver with hacking coughs and diabolical stalls. The Dream Train, incensed at this deliberate display, rushed ahead. Newland applied the brakes, but to no avail, for the bus gritted its sparkplugs with grim determination, and with taut springs and a flailing fanbelt, rushed forward with a strange, half-crazed light in its battered headlights. Its rusty bumper was held dangerously poised and its radiator was boiling with anger.

A new Chevrolet coming from the other direction blocked any possibility of steering the bus around the Essex on the left and a ditch blocked the way on the right.

The Dream Train rushed quixotically ahead to engage them both and tore in between the two cars. It lashed out, smashing the hub-cap of the Essex, and with a quick one-two crumpled the Chevrolet's fender.

Damage done, besides the fender and hub cap: Dream Train badly bruised, and lady in Chevrolet experienced a fainting spell.

Yesterday the Dream Train was back in its garage, as if nothing had happened. It settled back on its springs with a happy sigh, and there was a satisfied look on its radiator.

ELECTION TO BE HELD TUESDAY

Leaders for Student Council, the Y. M. C. A., PaC-SaC, and The Collegian To Serve Next Year Will Be Chosen In Balloting.

This morning the student body of Presbyterian college nominated its officers for the coming year in one of the most orderly and systematic student body meetings held here in many years.

The officers nominated were: President of the student body, secretary and treasurer of the student body, sophomore councilman, president, vice-president, secretary, and treasurer of the Y. M. C. A., editor, business manager, and advertising manager of the PaC-SaC, and editor, managing editor, and business manager of The Collegian. The staff nominations for president of the student body, vice-president, secretary, and treasurer of the Y. M. C. A. were uncontested.

The elections will be held next Tuesday, March 12, at which time the president, vice-president and senior councilmen will be selected from the nominations for president. The secretary and two junior councilmen will be selected from the candidates for the junior positions. Two men will be selected from the sophomore list. The president of the Y. M. C. A. will be selected from the list, no election being necessary for the other "Y" positions. Lynn Jones was automatically made vice-president; William Chalmers, secretary, and T. D. Talmage, treasurer, when their nominations were uncontested. One man will be voted for in each of the other positions on the ballot.

Nine Engagements On Debate Menu

Affirmative and Negative Teams Selected To Contest Representatives of Other Schools.

Nine intercollegiate debates have already been scheduled and a group of debaters is making ready, with the suggestions of Prof. Swedenberg, to match brains with the best of them.

The affirmative of the query, "Resolved, That the nations of the world should agree to prohibit shipments of arms and munitions," will be represented by H. M. Wilson, E. E. Stanton, and H. W. Calvert, two at a time.

The negative team will be made up of Hugh Holman and Charles Steenbergen, with Charles E. Carson as a likely reserve. The freshman team, though yet unorganized, have Burns, Craig and one or two other promising debaters, and will have some debates if they work up the team.

The varsity schedule is as follows:

March 13 — Dual debate with Erskine, affirmative teams traveling.

March 14 — Affirmative meets Southwestern (Memphis) here.

March 18 — Affirmative goes to Winthrop.

March 20 — Dual debate, negative team to Furman, and Furman's negative coming here.

April 9—Dual debate with Wofford, negative teams traveling.

April 12 — Negative meets Textile Institute here.

Prospective debates with Maryville and Mercer have not yet been definitely arranged.

JEAN McSWEEN ILL

Jean McSween, nine-year-old daughter of Dr. John McSween, president of the college, is now in the [illegible] hospital recovering from an appendicitis operation, performed early in the week. It is understood that she is convalescing nicely. The student body wishes for her a speedy recovery.

Thought For the Week

The Practical Religion

The spirit of action strikes with ringing appeal in every human heart. All successful men recorded upon the pages of history have been men who have crystallized their ideals into definite and conscientious activity. The successful man in the commercial world of today is the man whose exploits are in close harmony with his decisions. This principle of coordination of thought and action is also of paramount importance in the business of religion. A man's influence certainly depends largely upon whether he lives as he believes. We read in James 1:26 that "as the body without the spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead also." The utter inconsistency of the man who goes home from the church service and folds up his religion with his Sunday suit is as yet unparalleled for sheer hypocrisy. To make our religion honestly convincing we must make it sincerely practicable. If we have the genuine, pure religion of Jesus Christ, our creed will be reflected in every phase of our daily life.

"Politicking"

Tomorrow the student body of this institution makes its nominations for the positions of honor on this campus. Each nomination should represent the sincere belief of at least a part of the student body that that man can fill the position with distinction and honor. Alas! in some instances it will not.

Here, as elsewhere in our democratic land, politics raises its dirt-bespattered head and growls defiance. Everyone has someone whom they would like to see in a position of responsibility. Every fraternity has the natural desire to add that particular office to their list of distinctions. These are natural and praiseworthy desires, BUT let those nominating remember that the positions that their work is filling are positions that, at least partially, determine the success or failure of next year. Let fraternity not forget that these are places that demand and must have real ability; let fraternities not forget that these jobs are more than mere honors to be added to the frat roll. Every organization on this campus has able men—let them pick from these able men, the ones they will support in the elections.

One of the worst political practices on the campus is the swapping of votes. It gives a distorted result that often is not a true expression of the feeling of the student body and, worse than that, it often places a man in an office for which he is not equipped. Let us, everyone, vote for the man whom we believe to be worthy of the office, for the man who has the ability to faithfully and properly administer the duties of that office.

We, the rank and file of the students, are going to choose our leaders—let us choose them wisely, sanely, and according to the dictates of our own minds and thoughts. Politics has no true place in such an election.

NOTES AND SHADES

MOVIES

Monday and Tuesday—Claudette Colbert in "Imitation of Life." You will weep gallons, but you will love this warm, human story of the fine friendship between two mothers of different races allied in the common cause of their children. Bea Pullman (Claudette Colbert) a widow with a baby girl, is selling maple syrup for a living, when along comes shining black Aunt Delilah (Louise Beavers—and what a performance) with her little girl, Peola. Delilah makes delicious pancakes. Result: Aunt Delilah's Pancake Flour, and eventually a fortune for the two women. As the children grow up, however, difficulties present themselves. Peola, (Fredi Washington) looks white, and denies her black mother. Bea's daughter (Rochelle Hudson) falls in love with Warren William, whom Bea was to marry.

Wednesday—Sylvia Sidney in "Behold My Wife." This is ye old time hokum, done convincingly with distinct audience appeal. Sylvia Sidney is an Indian princess who would do justice to any reservation. Gene Raymond marries her to get revenge on his socially-elegant family, who thwarted his love affair with his sweetheart. But Sylvia turns the tables. Miss Sidney is lovely, but Gene Raymond easily makes it his picture. A newcomer, in this Paramount production, Ann Sheridan, is good.

Thursday—Ann Harding in "Enchanted April." If you like out-and-out whimsey in your movies, you may like this frail little story of two women, one, Ann Harding, the deserted wife of Frank Morgan, a famous author, and the other Katherine Alexander, the "husband-pecked" wife of Reginald Owen. It is during the making of this picture the much-publicized "dehydration" of Miss Harding occurred. It seems to also dehydrate her hats which, along with Charles Judels, furnishes the only comedy relief of this RKO-Radio film.

Friday—Laurel and Hardy in "Babes in Toyland." This screen version of Victor Herbert's nursery-rhyme classic is a marvelous mixture of stirring, if fantastic drama and riotous tomfoolery. With Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy at their best and funniest, with Charlotte Henry as a very charming Little Bo-Peep, Felix Knight the handsome Tom, and Henry Kleinbach the villain, this is gay and pleasant entertainment for young and old.

Saturday — "The Silver Streak." The new streamline train, hero of "The Silver Streak," lends this picture a swift dramatic sense. The human actors are forced into the background by this mechanical miracle which gallantly speeds across the continent, delivering respirators to the stricken men at Boulder Dam, and winning Sally Blane for Charles Starrett. William Farnum is the old railroad owner and Hardie Albright his son. Edgar Kennedy turns in a grand performance in this RKO-Radio picture.

DID YOU KNOW THAT?

Grace Moore sang the hits from her picture "One Night of Love," last Tuesday evening on her weekly broadcast.

Some of the Broadway critics have placed Tallulah Bankhead's performance above the late Jeanne Eagels in the revival of "Sadie Thompson."

Olga Baclanova, famous motion picture actress, was the guest star on Rudy Vallee's radio program last week.

WITH THE GREEKS

Hugh Holman, editor of The Blue Stocking, has been chosen to lead Alpha Kappa Pi frat through the coming year, while Stuart Campbell is on the Pan-Hellenic council, representing the same group. Other officers elected recently were Marion Bird, vice-president; George Cody, secretary; and Richard Yow, treasurer.

Alpha Lambda Tau social fraternity adds another to its list of pledges with the affiliation of Herman Singletary. Singletary is a member of the freshman class, and lives in Lake City.

The week-end past was livened by parties staged by two fraternities. Beta Kappa gave one Friday evening, inviting numerous members of other fraternities.

The Pi Kappa Phi social was held Saturday night.

Four K. A.'s went through the initiation ceremony during the past few days. The new initiates are Hick Harvin of Manning, Ernest Propst of Winnsboro, Jim McClary of Georgetown, and Lynn Jones of Pontotoc, Miss. The first two are sophomores and the others juniors.

In the interim, two freshmen, JOE SEAWELL and JOE COMMANDER, are vying with one another for her favor . . . Rumor would have it that "STUPE" BUCHAN and "HICK" HARVIN have been "knifeheading," as it is termed by some of their associates. . . . Why has GEORGE DUNLAP been going around with that perplexed expression on his face for the last week or two? asks a puzzled friend . . . The answer is this: He can't decide which one of his girl friends from Chester to ask over for the Military Ball . . . Better hurry up and decide, George; some enterprising young man may beat you to both of them . . . Things seem to be breaking right for GEORGE OLIVER lately . . . Not a one of his huge collection of feminine photographs is facing the wall . . . To MARY HOWZE DILLARD (college readers please skip over): "Go thou and do likewise."

THE PARADE GROUND

The annual war department inspection will be held on April 23rd and 24th. Freshmen are hereby warned to start polishing and shining their uniforms. Sophomores are advised to review scouting and patroling. Juniors had better begin taking stock of their military do's and don't's. As for the seniors, it is common knowledge that they have already begun to work on their curls and complexions — a godlike appearance is their aim. Let's hope that the inspector is susceptible to our dignified masculine beauties!

Seniors and juniors will receive 5 per cent more pay beginning April 1st. This extraordinary increase is due to a generous congress—the same one that is just about to give Roosevelt $4,880,000,000. With a little pressure in the right place by the right persons, the R. O. T. C. units here and there should be able to manage another 5 per cent raise—F. D. is a very generous fellow, and youth is one of his favorite hobbies.

A few more hours spent on tactics, and the juniors will be the most proficient crawlers on the campus. Horne and Potter, despite the fact that they have most striking cheveux, can now find cover behind a blade of grass, and both are becoming more graceful in their actions—if it is possible for the center on a football team and a future reverend of superior dignity to secure additional grace.

"The Military Show" will probably be scheduled immediately after the inspection. All military-minded souls on the campus are reminded that medals are to be awarded to the winners of the individual contests. It would be quite worthwhile to dig into a trunk fifty years hence, and pull out the medal won at good old P. C. back in '35, and thrill the grand-children with the spectacular account of how it happened.

The military department hereby proposes a novelty for the consideration of the students: We need more parades. It would be possible to schedule one parade a week—to be held on a set day after the last class in the afternoon. No drill would be held on that particular morning. This would give an opportunity for the town people to see us "on parade." What's your opinion?

Inoculation had widely varied effects on the juniors—they are suffering various degrees of pain, from mildly sore arms to violent illnesses necessitating a stay in bed. It's certainly a wonderful thing to have a legitimate excuse for complaining—at least once in a while.

Captain Wysor is elated over the progress of his golfing lately. However, he seems to be having much trouble in finding some really worthwhile competition. He plays quite frequently with our esteemed president, of whom he speaks thus: "As a g player, McSween makes a very go president. He manages to give me little exercise once in a while."

We also hear authoritatively the P. M. S. and T. is seriously templating a trip to Goldville or K ards (those who are not familiar w these unique places may find the very easily on a world map). He s that his wife has spent two weeks New York (that's the town that Hi Wilson calls home) and that she ta of nothing else. Wherefore, the Co tain decided to take a trip to th enable himself to discourse freely travel.

Turk Osman has just returned fro a two weeks' stay with the 8th infa try, and, as Captain Blanton so ap puts it, is "exuding inspired con dence" in the P. C. grads whom saw in action there. From all side at all times, we hear laudatory com ments on the old P. C. military men

NOTICE! Hereafter, on any and rainy mornings, provided there is special schedule, day students a granted the privilege of turning ov and going back to sleep—there will b no drill on such days. It is humbly quested, however, that the studen ascertain beyond all doubt that it actually raining before they return the realm of Somnus, for it is gettin harder and harder to believe some e cuses which are handed in at the o fice of the P. M. S. and T.

BLUE STOCKING FIGHTERS TAKE GEORGIA IN TOW

Victory Won Over Neighboring State University Here Tuesday Night, 4½ to 3½.

Fierce Fighting Seen

Knockout and Two Technical K. O.s Feature Card. Each Team Gives One Forfeit.

The flying, pounding fists of the Presbyterian boxers ripped out a 4½ to 3½ victory over the stubbornly fighting garnet and black warriors of the University of Georgia Tuesday night in a series of spectacular bouts in Leroy Springs gymnasium.

Presbyterian scored one knock-out, two technical knockouts, one decision, and one draw. Georgia tallied by two decisions, one forfeit, and the draw. P. C. forfeited the unlimited to Perlow, and Georgia forfeited the featherweight to McCaskill.

"King Kong" Cappelmann's sensational knockout of the Georgia middleweight, Boulware, was one of the highlight bouts of the night. Both men entered the squared circle seemingly calm and unperturbed. For fifty or sixty seconds they sparred cautiously, feeling each other out. Then, during a clinch, something happened. Referee Seigel tried to part the boys and stopped a punch with his cheek for his trouble.

Finally they broke, and "King Kong" went wild. He rushed his man to the ropes and lashed him with rights and lefts to the face, body, and head. Boulware was knocked through the ropes and completely out of the ring. Cappelmann seemed bent on something and refused to go to a neutral corner. Referee Ruben sparred with the agitated Hoseman for two or three seconds before he could make him see the light. Cappelmann went to the corner and the count was begun.

Somewhere between "four" or "five," Boulware began to show movement. At "eight" he was trying to roll through the ropes. Just after "ten" he staggered to his feet. Seigel raised Cappelmann's hand and the Parris Island mauler, still looking war-like, was the victor before the fight had gotten fairly under way.

In the opening fight of the night, the bantamweight, P. C.'s Jimmy Seagle tore into his opponent, McEver, and fairly rained blows on the Georgia man's face and body. Near bell-time at the end of the first round, Georgia threw in the towel, but the referee ruled that the gong had already sounded.

Seagle was not to be denied, however, and came back even stronger in the second stanza. After about thirty seconds of this round, the referee stopped the fight, awarding P. C. a T.K.O.

Bill Clark, Hose lightweight who is undefeated this year, turned on the steam toward the latter part of the first round of his battle with Ashford of Georgia and slammed in right upper-cuts to the heart in rapid succession. During the second, Ashford was knocked to the canvas, but managed to get up.

Before the third round was a minute and a half old, Clark had knocked his man down three times. Although Ashford gamely regained his feet each time, Seigel realized his dazed condition and stopped the fight.

James McClary, losing the welterweight decision to the famed Redutsky of Georgia, stayed with the visiting fighter every minute of the time and exhibited great courage and intestinal fortitude. McClary lost twice to Redutsky last year and knew what he was up against before he climbed through the ropes.

The first round seemed to go to McClary on his aggressiveness and on a flicking left mitt that was constantly in Redutsky's face. In the second period, Redutsky really got down to business and connected several times, one of which floored McClary for the count of "one." During the third, the Georgia fighter used excellent footwork, and left and right jabs that had a peculiar habit of landing, to pile up the points.

Pitman, fighting for the second time in a varsity bout, lost the senior welter-weight title to Winston of Georgia on a decision. Winston was clearly the faster of the two. Pitman had showed much improvement but still swings a little too freely.

Harry Bolick of Presbyterian, and Georgia's renowned Jacobson fought other win. Bacot, of Clemson, placed first in the 100-yard free style, second in the 60-yard free style, and also swam in the 400-yard relay. Durban, placing first in the 60-yard free style, second in the 100 and 220, also was prominent for the Tigers.

Summary:

Breast stroke: Alexander (P. C.) first; Hekkila (Clemson), second.

Back stroke: McHugh (Clemson), first; Valley (P. C.) second; Wallace to a draw in the three rounds of the light-heavy bout that completed the card.

Jacobson, built on the long and rangy plan, packed a powerful punch in each hand. The fight was close from opening to closing bell, one man and then the other seeming to have the edge. Bolick fought with his usual

Tigers Capture All But Two First Places and Walk Away With Meet, 58 to 25.

Clemson's tankmen, taking seven first places against Presbyterian's two, turned back their Calvinist opponents for the second time this season, in a meet held in Clemson waters. The score was 58 to 25.

Coach Hank Wilson, teaming up with Valley and Alexander, easily won the medley, and a first place in the breast stroke constituted P. C.'s (P. C.) third.

60-yard free style: Durban (Clemson), first; Bacot (Clemsen), second; Wilson (P. C.) third.

100-yard free style: Bacot (Clemson), first; Durban (Clemson), second; Tiller (P. C.) third.

220-yard free style: Allison (Clemson), first; Durban (Clemson), second; Langston (P. C.) third.

440-yard free style: Allison (Clemson), first; Hunter (Clemson). second; Calvert (P. C.) third.

Diving: Fletcher (Clemson), first; Thackston (Clemson), second; Valley (P. C.) third.

300-yard medley relay: P. C. first (Valley, Alexander, Wilson); Clemson second (McHugh, Hekkila, and Fletcher).

Clemson Annexes State Tank Meet

Tigers Capture Six First Places and Amass 54 Points To Win Annual Swimming Event.

Clemson college added another state championship to its growing list as its tankers amassed 54 points to cop first honors over the aquatic representatives of Presbyterian and Furman, in the third annual state meet held in Greenville.

Presbyterian finished second with 32 points and Furman last with 25. The efficiency of the contestants participating in the meet was borne out by the fact that six new state records were created. Allison, Clemson speed demon, set new records in the 220 and 440 free style events, while Alexander of P. C., McHugh, Durban and Bacot of Clemson, each set a new mark.

The Tiger tankers captured six first places, holding the lead throughout the meet. P. C.'s crack 300-yard medley team had little trouble taking this event. The Calvinists' other first place was in the 200-yard breast stroke, won by Alexander. Beattie, Furman diving ace, secured his team's only first place.

The meet found favor in the eyes of the large crowd of spectators who gathered to see the contestants strain and exert themselves to determine superiority. Run off with clock-like precision and smooth efficiency, the annual affair proved highly successful.

Results of the meet, with winners of first, second and third places, and the best time of each event, were as follows:

400-yard free style relay: Clemson, P. C., Furman. Time, 4:13.4.

200-yard breast stroke: Alexander, P. C.; Coleman, Furman; Heikkila, Clemson. Time, 3:19 (new record).

150-yard breast stroke: McHugh, Clemson; Valley, P. C.; Wallace, P. C. Time, 2:14 (new record).

40-yard free style: Durban, Clemson; Bacot, Clemson; Wilson, P. C. Time, 19.4 (new record).

440-yard free style: Allison, Clemson; Hamilton, Furman; McSween, P. C. Time, 6:2.6 (new record).

100-yard free style: Bacot, Clemson; Durban, Clemson; Tiller, P. C. Time, 58.2 (new record).

Diving: Beattie, Furman; Thackston, Clemson; Fletcher, Clemson.

220-yard free style: Allison, Clemson; Durban, Clemson; Arnold, Furman. Time, 2:36.6 (new record).

300-yard medley race: P. C., Furman, Clemson. Time, 3:56.

Baseball Aspirants Round Into Form

With two weeks of practice behind them, Presbyterian's baseball candidates are slowly whipping themselves into shape for the opening contest of the 1935 College Baseball league season. The Blue Hose nine will meet Erskine in its initial engagement, the game to be played on the latter's soil on March 28.

Ralph Holcomb, veteran of three years of collegiate competition, is the team's captain. He is an outfielder. Others bidding for jobs in the outer garden are Johnson, Evans, Coe and Patton. Harry Bolick probably will hold down first base, Horne second, and Higbe short. There is strong competition for the hot corner position. Harvin, Estes and Millsap are the candidates for this position. Other infield candidates are M. Jacobs and Suggs.

The catching assignment will go to either "Pudge" Plowden or Marion Bird. Roy Forehand may offer for this position, also. "Goof" Holliday is the most promising pitcher, but is receiving strong competition from Mullinax, Suggs, J. Wilson, and "Red" Wyatt.

Coach Johnson has been confined to his bed with a case of influenza during the past few days, and during his absence Chick Galloway, former big league player, has had charge of the team.

P. C. BOXERS WIN TWO FROM GEORGIA

Pitman landed several lusty blows, but the Georgia entry was adept in riding out the punches. The Hoseman frequently left his chin and jaw unprotected and thus became the target for much punishment.

Even though losing the decision, Pitman put up a game tussle. He was not quite so aggressive as in the Tuesday night fight against Winston, but fought more on the defensive.

The last bout of the night was between Bolick, Presbyterian mauler, and Jacobsen, Georgia, ace, for the light-heavy decision.

Bolick fought one of his best fights of the year, but the judges rendered the decision a draw, duplicating the termination of the scrap between the two light-heavies earlier in the week.

Both men seemed willing to mix it and the battle was by no means slow. Bolick was in much better condition. The first two rounds were fairly close, but Harry, to all appearances, led the scoring in the final stanza.

Jacobsen battled coolly and skillfully, but could not ward off the barrage of blows that rained upon his face and body in this last round. Bolick repeatedly connected with his left, and Jacobsen seemed unable to block it.

This match closed the season for the Presbyterian fighters. The first match was lost to The Citadel, the next, P. C. and Clemson fought to a draw, and the last three, one with Carolina and two with Georgia, were won by P. C. Therefore the Hose record is one defeat, one draw, and three victories.

Jimmy Seagle, bantamweight, was defeated only once this season, McCaskill, featherweight, is undefeated, having won all of his fights by either a victory or a defeat. Bill Clark has defeated every lightweight aspirant in the state, as well as the Georgia fighter. Cappelmann has lost only one fight. Harry Bolick, fighting in heavy and light-heavy, has been defeated but has drawn three ta

MILITARY BALL WAS HUGE SUCCESS

Chi Beta Phi Frat Hears Dr. Davis

Biology Professor Talks To Science Group On "The Races of Men" In Open Meeting.

The Chi Beta Phi, scientific fraternity, held a meeting Tuesday night in the science lecture room. An open invitation had previously been made for the entire student body to attend. Dr. John H. Davis, professor of zoology, lectured on the subject, "The Races of Men."

Dr. Davis traced the development of man from the earliest known antediluvian periods to the present day. He cited the various theories that are held as to how the races of men originated. Some believe that the various races began as such, while others hold that certain racial characteristics are purely the result of environment and habit. Much light has been thrown upon the biological problem of the origin of the species by the unearthing of human fossil remains. The method used to determine the nationality of an unearthed human skeleton is to measure the skull and divide the breadth by the length and multiply the resulting figure by one hundred. This is called the "cephalic index" of that particular specimen. The cephalic index, Dr. Davis pointed out, is an almost certain method of deciding upon the race of a fossil. If the cephalic index is eighty or under, the head was normal or slightly narrow; if over eighty, the head was very broad.

A fair-sized crowd of professors and students attended the lecture.

Beginning with this issue of The Blue Stocking and continuing until the termination of the semester, this column will be devoted to the weekly presentation of campus personalities —men who have, by virtue of their achievements, crept noticeably ahead of the field.

As a fitting introductory gesture we offer — Doyle Boggs. Character, talent, personality and leadership are blended into the make-up of this prominent exponent of the town of Liberty, S. C. Boggs has reached the top run of the ladder of student objective in two fields: militarism and student body leadership. He is highest ranking cadet in the R. O. T. C. unit—lieutenant colonel. His qualities for leadership are exemplified by the action of his fellow students in electing him president of the student body, the loftiest goal within the student realm of desire. He is a member of Blue Key, leadership fraternity, and Pi Kappa Phi, social fraternity.

Among his athletic achievements are three varsity football letters and two basketball letters. His work at guard for the '34 grid eleven was especially meritorious.

Doyle is of a pleasing personality, sincere friendliness and unhampered ambition—qualities that will aid him to meet the demands of the life that looms ahead for him.

Elections To Be Held Tomorrow

Student Body To Name Leaders For Various Activities. List Undergoes Changes.

Tomorrow the student body of Presbyterian college elects its officers for the coming year. There has been much enthusiasm already manifested over these elections and they probably will prove to be some of the most hotly contested that the campus has ever seen.

Several errors appeared in the list of nominations that was printed in The Blue Stocking last week. R. R. Yow, H. B. Carpenter, and William Moore were scratched from the list because they failed to meet faculty requirements. A corrected list appears today.

Weather Hinders Squads' Training

Cold and Rain Keep Varsity and Frosh Track Men Inside. Large Number Candidates Report.

Although hampered by rainy, cold weather, the varsity and freshman track squads have been working out daily in the gymnasium and, at times, on the cinder path outside.

An exceptionally large number of men have reported for both teams. Much of last year's talent is back, but several of the men are out for the first time. The rats have three or four men who were outstanding in high school and a good team is in prospect.

After two weeks of practice, there are still 34 men on the varsity and 22 on the freshman rolls. A great deficiency in the weight and other field events is still prevalent in the varsity line-up, as has been expected since the loss of several men last year.

The rosters of the two squads are as follows:

Varsity: Adams, Abbott, Bradley, Collins, Cappelmann, Carothers, Chapman, J. H., Chapman, C. G., Cody, Clark, Charles, Cranford, Dean, Forehand, Freeman, Guerard, Grey, Garland, Harmon, Hudson, Jacobs, McInnes, McSween, Perrin, Pitman, Smith, P., Talmage, Thompson, Upshur, Wilbanks, Williams, Winget, and Yearout. L. O. Elmore is varsity manager.

Orchestra Gets Dinner Jackets

On last Wednesday the student body voted to go without supper in order to furnish the ochestra with dinner jackets. The orchestra is to play at five meals in return for this action on the part of the student body. The supper that is to be skipped is next Sunday night.

The action is praiseworthy, for the orchestra looked great in their new regalia.

Adams Named Quint Captain

At a recent meeting of the varsity basketball squad, P. A. Adams, guard on this year's team, was elected captain for next season.

Adams is a member of the junior class and has played with the varsity for the past two years. He is from Dublin, Ga., is a member of the Pi Kappa Alpha social fraternity, and was recently installed in Blue Key, honor fraternity.

Lander Group Gives Program

"Building a Christian Life" Is Theme of Program By Neighboring College Girls.

A Lander college Y. W. C. A. deputation presented one of the best-received programs of the year last Thursday night at the weekly "Y" meeting. The general theme of "Building a Christian Life" was effectively carried out by a talk and several special selections. Miss Selena Parrish presided and introduced the several members of the deputation.

Miss Nina Sparks, in the only talk, dealt with the subject of "Reaching Upward and Building Heavenward," by bringing out five essentials of development. She exhorted all to build and advocated that one should adhere to certain considerations. These were: "One must have an adequate plan or pattern, one must consider the cost, one must utilize the material, one must have a foundation and that in Jesus Christ, and finally, one must use labor." The effect of this talk was enhanced by the special selections which blended with the topic.

Three musical numbers were rendered. The first a duet, composed of Miss Bernice Boozer and Douglas Devore. They sang "In the Hour of Trial." Each of these two also sang solos. Miss Boozer sang "Thou Shalt Keep Perfect Peace," and Mr. Devore sang "Thank On Thy Word." The scripture was read by Miss Mary Chambers, who also made the opening prayer. Miss Jane Bellume recited Henry Wadsworth Longfellow's poem, "The Builder," which completed the theme in a well-rounded presentation.

In the absence of Van Arnold, president of the Y. M. C. A., Colin Hudson, of the program committee, announced the coming team. The program was concise and complete and commented at once[illegible] to disappoint several in attendance who seemed anxious to hear the penalty for speaking "over-time" on the visitors.

Ready To Begin Intramural Tennis

Tournament Was To Have Begun Last Week. Will Start Play At First Opportunity.

The mammoth intramural tennis tournament which was to have started last week under Blue Key sponsorship, was unable to get under way because of the inclement weather and the condition of the courts. The playing will begin at the first opportunity and many close matches are anticipated.

Bob Perrin, member of Blue Key, has charge of the net matches. He has announced that the college courts and the Jacobs' private court will be used.

The social fraternities of the college, as well as the dormitories, are entering teams. With Pi Kappa Phi fraternity already holding the lead in the intramural program with 12 points, as a result of the basketball tourney, competition is increasing daily for the silver cup presented to Blue Key by L. A. McCall, Sr., of Florence, of the class of '92.

The organization or dormitory winning the highest number of points in the tournaments will be awarded the cup and declared winner of the intramural sports program. The leadership group intends to make this presentation an annual event.

Baseball Men Look To Erskine Game

Candidates Working Hard For Places On Team and Several Have Edge For Positions.

With only 17 days remaining in which to prepare themselves for the season's opener with Erskine, P. C.'s baseballers are going about their duties with added determination and interest.

The past week marked the return of Coach Johnson, whose recent illness prevented any coaching activity. During his absence the coaching assignment was borne by "Chick" Galloway.

In practices last week the work of "Lefty" Suggs stood out. Suggs will probably grab a first-string job in the outfield in addition to aiding Holliday with the pitching burden. The infield will be made up of a fast and shifty quartet—Bolick, Horne, Higbe and Millsap. Hick Harvin will be counted on for relief duty. Holcomb and Evans will team up with Suggs in the outfield. This trio is capable of supplying batting power in addition to snagging flies. Roy Forehand and Pudge Plowden are still fighting it out for the catching assignment. John Wilson is showing steady improvement in his campaign for regular mound duty.

The Hosemen should supply plenty of opposition to their Palmetto College league opponents. Says Captain Ralph Holcomb: "The team is faster, stronger and more spirited than last year's outfit."

P. C. opens its season against Erskine on March 28 at Due West.

Swimmers Reelect Valley As Leader

Tom P. Valley, captain of this year's swimming team, was reelected at a meeting held last week to the leadership of the tankmen for next year. This year's outfit scored [illegible] to second place in the state meet under the captaincy of Valley.

[illegible] Valley is from Pickens, S. C., a graduate of the junior class, and a member of Kappa Alpha social fraternity. During the past season he has done excellent work in the water sport, specializing in the back-stroke, diving, and medley relay.

Blue Key Sponsors New Dance Series

Military Ball, Collegiate Ball, and Fraternity Tea Dance Feature Entertainment For Week-end. Local Orchestra Furnishes Excellent Music.

Last week-end old Copeland hall again swayed to the beat of fast music and dancing feet as the most successful series of dances so far this year took place. The Military ball and the Collegiate ball, with a fraternity tea dance — a new series that went over with a decided bang!

The series was sponsored by Blue Key, leadership fraternity, of which L. A. McCall, Jr., is president.

On Friday night Presbyterian's first Military ball was held. A grand military procession, uniforms with colorful sashes, and the home guards in formal dress, all added spice and color to this dancing innovation. The procession came at eleven o'clock with the advanced corps men following the colors with their dates and marching around the ball to the music of "Mr. and Mrs." in clever drill movements. Immediately following intermission returning dancers were met with a cloud of confetti and soon the air was filled with this mechanic of good parties and great fun. Even the "no-breaks" were unusual, for surprise was manifested when Shorty McDonald announced an R. O. T. C. no-break, a junior-senior no-break, and then a sophomore-freshman no-break.

The tea dance, sponsored by the six social fraternities, was a well-attended and most enjoyable occasion. Fast music and good dancing were its outstanding features.

Then came Saturday night and another innovation—the Collegiate ball. Anything went in dress for both ladies and men. And the costumes ranged from the absurd to the dignified, from the rah-rah college boy to the dignified senior. Again it was beautiful girls and splendid music that characterized this dance, and it, like the others, was a great success.

Shorty McDonald and his P. C. orchestra furnished the music for the occasion and they were received with more enthusiasm than any orchestra

Does This Sound Familiar?

(From The Parley Voo, Converse College).

The boy has just been introduced:

He and she (together): Where are you from?"

He: "I'm from Goodville, S. C."

Pause for a second.

He: "I don't know whether you've ever heard of it; but it's sixty miles from everywhere. It's a fine town! And where did you say you were from?"

She: "Oh, I'm from the best city in the state."

He: "It's no better than Goodville."

She: "Yes, it is. See, I'm from Nicestboro."

He: "Oh, do you know Cassie Seen down there?"

She: "Yeah, she's o. k."

He: "Well, she used to be an old flame of mine. What ever became of her?"

She: "She married a boy from Powertown."

He: "Now Powertown is a good load to be from! Of course you know Cheery Pie from there. Everybody does."

The conversation ceases to flow and both members of the party look around for someone to break. But no luck!

She: (continuing the conversation) How do you like Converse?"

He: "I like it fine. (Still looking for someone to break).

She: "Isn't the orchestra grand? I think it's wonderful."

Someone breaks.

He and she: "I enjoyed the dance."

Thought For the Week

The Call To Advance

A distinguished professional man upon one occasion was asked for his personal opinion concerning the Christian religion. "Oh," he replied, "I think it is all a very beautiful idea." Thus in one brief sentence a prominent man of the world expressed the popular sentiment that is felt by many people today. This false conception of true Christianity is evinced not only by secular persons, but unfortunately the same general attitude is portrayed by the lives of many influential church members. We sometimes become concerned so much with formalisms and theories that we almost lose sight of the true purpose of our belief. The principal objective of our religious life should concern a supreme effort to attain the life of God in the soul of man. In approaching this ideal many battles must be fought and many hardships will be encountered. The life of passive indifference does not conform at all with the Christian idea of progress. No great good has ever been accomplished without the output of an honest effort. Indeed, Christianity requires of us a deep love for God that will be demonstrated daily by a faithful and uplifting service for our fellow man.

Political Pharisees

(From The Hornet, Furman University)

Students who are interested in current events and international affairs never cease to be amused by what they term the "Three-ring circus" of politics. Unhesitatingly, they point out the folly of a supposedly intelligent nation's placing its government largely in the hands of men who are not interested in the welfare of the nation but chiefly in the individual "I." These students rue the fact that the "scholars" of the country are not its guiding heads.

And yet on the average college campus, the place where "scholars" are supposed to flourish—the Utopia of unmolested intellectuals—what does one find? The answer is so obvious that a repetition of it here would be no less than red undaucy, for the average college campus has a political system that is rotten to the core.

Is the average president of the Student Council holding that positoin because he has an inner urge to teach others group responsibility, or because he likes to have a group of gaping freshmen following him around? Do students participate in activities because they wish to improve campus conditions or because they wish to decorate the annual with their pictures? And as for political machines there's none which is more completely organized than the average fraternity. It's all very well to talk about the evils of the national spoils system, but when a fraternity man becomes head of an organization, his brothers usually "come tumbling after" into minor positions of the organization whether they be adept at boxing or "bulling," and the same students who howl gleefully at the man who says, "I shall vote with a certain party because my father voted with that party," are the very ones who cast their vote for a student because he is a member of "dear old Alpha."

It would probably be better for all concerned if students who have time to criticize national politics would use that time to improve political conditions on their own campus. The role of a Pharisee is never an attractive one.

NOTES AND SHADES

MOVIES

Monday and Tuesday—Katherine Hepburn in "The Little Minister." Moving in measured tempo, this beautiful production rejoices in visual beauty and some fine restrained performances. The photography is unsurpassed, resulting in a softened and gentle Katherine Hepburn—really almost a stranger. As Babbie, the girl who loves to play gypsy, she is vivacious in an 1840 way—not quite the Jo of "Little Women." You are of course familiar with the story of religious intolerance in the Scottish village of Thrums, with its new minister who falls in love with the gypsy masquerader. John Beal gives a splendid account of himself as the little minister, and the supporting cast is exceptionally fine. Every character is played with fine assurance, and the authentic Scotch burrs of Donald Crisp and Andy Clyde are things of joy in this excellent RKO-Radio production.

Wednesday—"Woman in the Dark," with Fay Wray and Ralph Bellamy. No previews available.

Thursday—George O'Brien in "When a Man's a Man." No previews available.

Friday—George Raft and Carole Lombard in "Rumba." George Raft still has the smoothest hair, the highest cut trouser waistline and the tightest collars in Hollywood. Carole Lombard still has the most flexible scalp. Together they still have the least conviction of any screen romantic team in their love scenes. "Rumba" has a less interesting story than "Bolero." Raft again is a dancer, Carole a wealthy society girl, falls for him. They seem to misunderstand each other until the very end. "Rumba" has better dance scenes than "Bolero," at which most of the picture is aimed. It has almost as good music, although Ralph Rainger is no Ravel. You'll like the native rumba better than the efforts of George and Carole in this Paramount film.

Saturday—Warner Oland in "Charlie Chan in Paris." This inscrutable Warner Oland is at his best in this latest Chan, with the Confucius proverb business removed to the picture's advantage. The production is smooth and more opulent than usual. Mary Brian and Thomas Beck carry the limited love interest in this Fox film.

DID YOU KNOW THAT . . . ?

Chaliapin simply wowed the General Motors audience in his recent radio performance at Radio City.

Claudette Colbert and Clark Gable won the motion picture awards for their work in the Columbia production, "It Happened One Night," which was directed by Frank Capra.

Five excerpts from the following operas will be sung Tuesday night by artists of the Metropolitan in appreciation of Gatti-Cazzasa, general manager of the company, whose resignation goes into effect at the end of the present season: Norma with Rosa Ponselle and Gladys Swarthout; Manon with Lucrezia Bori, Richard Crooks, and Giuseppe De Luca; Lucia with Lily Pons and Giovanni Martinelli; Die Walkure with Kirsten Flagstad and Friedrich Schorr; Otello with Elisabeth Rethberg and Lauritz Melchior.

Gary Cooper is Anna Sten's new leading man in "The Wedding Night."

WITH THE GREEKS

One of the best socials ever staged by Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity at P. C. came off the last day of February. A number of girls from Clinton and Laurens gave color to the event. Besides Mrs. Harry Bolick, the following were present: Misses Fay, Helen and Nannie Sue Adair, Burns and Medora Browning, Hazel Boland, Ina Bramlett, Marion Gene Campbell, Mary Howze and Bebe Dillard, Aggie Jones, Joyce Pitts, and Mary Workman.

Kappa Alpha frat also staged a party on the night following the Pi K. A. affair. Among the feminine social lights present were Misses Bebe and Mary Howze Dillard, Beverly Davis, Sadie Chandler, Lydie Lenke, Medora and Burns Browning, Tish and Agahta Jones, and Catherine Graham.

Saturday evening Pi Kappa Phi acted as host to a group of young ladies from Converse. They were all members of the Owls club, a sorority at the girls' college. Miss Medora Browning, member of the club during her college days, was hostess and saw that everyone got acquainted.

Alpha Lambda Tau, not to be outdone by the other three fraternities that helped make it a social week-end also entertained the young ladies Saturday evening. Misses Joyce Pitts, Mary Jane Sturgeon, Georgia Bee Blakely, Mary Anderson, Robbie Henderson and Catherine Graham are some of those who enjoyed the evening.

Jake Penland, of Columbia, underwent the A. I. T. ceremonial rites Sunday night of last week. Penland, a sophomore, is a transfer from the University of South Carolina. He is assistant sports editor of The Blue Stocking.

This initiation brings the active membership of this fraternity to a total of 11. There are six pledges, making a total of 17 men in the group.

Vann Lee and L. A. McCall represented Mu chapter of Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity at the district convention at Raleigh, N. C., several days ago. They report a very successful meeting.

BOOK REVIEW

By Stuart Campbell

"ERASMUS OF ROTTERDAM," by Stefan Zweig

Stefan Zweig in "Erasmus of Rotterdam," has followed his great success of "Marie Antoinette" with another highly entertaining and accurate biography. Instead of giving a portrait of "an average woman" he gives a portrait of "the first European." Erasmus, a little-known figure, except by students of the Reformation, is here presented with great clarity and sympathy.

Zweig compares Erasmus with the forgotten foundation stone of a great masterpiece of architecture. His search for independence, mental and moral, and his hatred of factionalism caused him to be attacked by all the religious sects of the period. He was extremely sensitive and this trait caused him to bend to the storm rather than fight for his principles. He was above rabid nationalism and although he referred to himself as of Rotterdam he lived in many countries and influenced the whole of Europe. During the Reformation he was subjected to bitter persecution by both Catholic and Protestant. Erasmus desired a mild Reformation within the Catholic church. Perhaps his great opponent was Martin Luther.

In the realm of literature Erasmus because of his satire, was far above other such writers of his time. He has been compared to a Saladin who with a pillow in two with a fine sword while his opponent, Luther, a Coeur de Lion splitting iron with battle axe.

Stefan Zweig employs a refreshing never-boring style that makes a pleasure to read "Erasmus of Rotterdam." At times when reading of the historical character we are struck the modernism of their ideas lives. It is this way with Erasmus portrayed by Stefan Zweig. Stefan Zweig is one of the most outstanding figures in the realm of modern biography and his latest work upholds his preeminence in this field. "Erasmus of Rotterdam" is truly a biography of a contemporary European another contemporary European.

ALUMNI

Dr. Leslie St. Clair Hays was graduated from P. C. with the class of '06, with the B. A. degree. He was valedictorian of his class.

Dr. Hays received his M. D. degree at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Columbia university, New York. He is now head of Dr. Hays' hospital, of Clinton.

At the last meeting of the Alumni association he was elected president, an honor which he deserved because of the fact that he has always been loyal to his alma mater.

John Maxie Wilson, father of Jimmie, of the class of '34, and of John, of the class of '36, was at P. C. from '08-'10, after which he went to King's Business college, Charlotte, N. C.

Mr. Wilson is president of the Highlands Lumber Co., Fayetteville, N. C., and is also a banker in that town. Last year he was regional vice-president of North Carolina and this year is vice-president of the Alumni association and an alumni member of the board of trustees of the college.

During past years Mr. Wilson has had a part in sending quite a number of men to P. C. and always has been one of the most loyal alumni of the college.

THE PARADE GROUND

A new batch of the juniors, as Captain Wysor says, "have been fed to the bugs." Translated literally, this means that typhoid inoculations have taken place — with extremely radical results in the case of one Thomas Valley. The P. M. S. and T. was discussing the fatality of shells during his class conducted on the field recently, when a thudding noise was suddenly heard from the rear. Thinking that the enemy was attacking, the class began a hasty retreat with the Captain leading. Someone, however, had enough courage to glance to the rear, and the body of an unfortunate comrade was seen stretched out on the ground. Returning to the scene of action, the class discovered that the cause for the riot was only poor Tom Valley, who had fainted — whether from some remark of the Captain's or from the effect of an over-dose of "bugs," it is not known. At any rate, Tom spent the next day in bed, and can now claim to know the real horrors of war — from personal experience.

Levi and Guerard, heretofore the mainstays of the military department as concerns office work, are to report to their companies for practical work, there being none such in the office of the P. M. S. and T. at present. McAllister will uphold the two of them, at least temporarily. All of those who are interested in the internal affairs of the military department and its intricate methods of accomplishing things, may see the two members of the retired office force for full particulars.

Willard Jones, the "book-keeper," will trot out his Reserve Officers' rifle team on Wednesday next to meet the varsity "second" team. Being unable to overcome the first team, the R. O.'s have dropped down the scale a mite to see if poorer competition will not give them a chance to take home the spoils. It must be disappointing for the older heads not to be able to outshoot our younger "whippersnappers" —at least with rifles.

It has been very noticeable during the past week that the juniors have been extremely lax in performing their duties — as regards criticism of the sophs and frosh. The reason for this unnecessary and seasonable sweetness is perfectly obvious, however. Our crafty junoirs are aware of the fact that student elections are now in progress, and that positions and offices are to be secured through their inferiors (in rank). May the sweetest man win!

Spring is in the air — or so says Sarge, and he is now ready to move his feminine charges outside and, discarding rifles, train his co-eds in things more important than learning how to slay men, namely, running and dashing, for, as Sarge probably knows, the co-eds are already well-versed in the field of "bumping off" of eligible males. We would like to remind Sarge that he is supposed to be a military man, not a leg coach, and to advise that he act accordingly.

The P. M. S. and T. has received some new "evolutions" for the color guard. This affords us ample cause for timely rejoicing, for anything new is desirable among our youthful soldiers. Also, some "evolutions" in various other organizations on the campus and especially in the military department would be welcomed.

JIMMY WINGET, track star and ladies man, is about to ruin his career on the cinder path, it seems . . . One of the prime requirements is that a track man get plenty of sleep, but apparently he has not been getting any at all since a Laurens girl broke a date with him . . . A Clinton High boy was the cause of it, so the story goes . . . The famous Tatooed Lady actually exists in the flesh, according to ALAN LEVI and L. A. McCALL. They saw her in Raleigh, N. C., last week . . . With MARION BIRD, hefty footballer, having retired from the field badly worsted, RED ABBOTT is starting off in a big way by carrying POLLY ROBERTS to dinner at Judd hall . . . Watch out, Polly, rumor has it that Red is deeply in love with a Laurens girl . . . PUDGE PLOWDEN, of the rotund physique, is recovering slowly from a severe boil . . . For the past week or so he has been forced to sleep on his stomach and eat off the mantle . . . POLLY ROBERTS' younger sister said she wished a certain columnist would refrain from saying that Bird could not hold Polly's hand, because it was entirely untrue . . . As proof of that statement she cited the fact hat she sat behind them in the picture show the other day and therefore knew from actual experience that it was absolutely false . . . Freshman DARBY, commonly called "Malicious," announces that he cleaned his finger nails for the first time this year . . . Up until this time he was the proud owner of a half dozen geraniums, which he had been nurturing with meticulous care in this dark expanse of unirrigated soil . . . SADLER LOVE, our efficient sports editor, had to wash his hair the other day . . . Asked why he made such an unprecedented step, he replied that he had to get rid of the cement . . . His room-mate adds that concrete is constantly being exuded from the pores of his scalp, and that it is necessary to wash his head at least once or twice a year.

This columnist was greatly surprised recently to find on first-hand observation at what lengths some people will go after being mentioned unfavorably in print. Some malicious scoundrel stamped on the floor above the writer's room and caused a huge portion of plaster to fall, making the room resemble the wake of a hurricane. One irritating feature of the disaster was that the inmate of the room was forced to put on clean sheets, a step that would not have been done before the latter part of April, had it not been for the havoc wrought by the plaster dust. Anyone who finds out the perpetrator of this deed will please send in the culprit's name and receive commendation in this column. Likewise, the criminal himself will be exposed in all the depth of his depravity to the unprejudiced eyes of our reading public.

The boxers have reached the end of the trail; their gloves, shoes, pants and other paraphernalia are neatly tucked away. Once again, the incomparable taste of a beloved Camel or Chesterfield, the vicious assault on Mr. Rose's best candy products and the unrestrained liberty of trudging in at 3 a. m.—all these are theirs.

All in all, the pugilists experienced a successful season. The double defeat so nearly administered to Georgia's Bulldogs was the highlight, and the failure to subdue The Citadel the lowlight. The victory over Carolina was sweet—despite the Gamecocks' inability to produce a team measuring up to strength of former years. The Calvinists, by their performances against state and out-of-state teams, clearly proved that they were comparatively strong.

Let's take statistics:
Most colorful—Cappelmann.
Most scientific—Clark.
Most aggressive—Bolick.
Most dependable—Clark.
Grittiest—McClary.

The above statistics are not meant to imply that Jimmy Seagle (a fellow club-member) did not fight well at all times. The diminutive P. C. wildcat was a feared opponent (ask Georgia's representative). McCaskill fought consistently well and got into the habit of having his hand held up at the end of his fights. Pittman needs more polishing up but shows strong possibilities. Next year watch these men: Gillis, Pittman, McClary, Holliday.

To Announce National Team

All-America Basketball Squad Selected, Based On Data Furnished By 60 Coaches.

An all-America college basketball team for 1934-35, based on selections made by 60 basketball coaches, will be announced Thursday night on the Kellogg College Prom broadcast, over WJZ-NBC network. In addition to the all-America, five sectional teams representing the East, the West, the South, and the Southwest will be named.

Those chosen for the all-America were Bob Kessler, left forward of Purdue; Ray Ebling, right forward of University of Kansas; Harry Leroy Edwards, center of University of Kentucky; Claire Cribbs, left guard of University of Pittsburg; and Bill Nash, right guard of Columbia.

The selections were made by tabulating all-opponent teams picked by the 60 basketball coaches. Each coach named the outstanding players who opposed the team he coached. The schedules were examined carefuly for competitive value. Easy games were discounted, or if the team took a long trip, playing too many games in succession, the natural fatigue was considered. Team and individual scoring and guarding results were weighed, and all-around performance as against occasional brilliance was noted.

These elements were taken into account by Les Quailey, noted sports analist, and from them he made the selections. These will be announced on the broadcast by Ward Lambert, the Purdue basketball coach.

The all-Southern team:
Dana Henderson, left forward, University of South Carolina.
James E. Walker, right forward, University of Alabama.
Stuart M. Slythe, center, North Carolina State.
W. T. Downey, left guard, Virginia Military institute.
James R. McCachren, right guard, University of North Carolina.

Chick Galloway Is Added To P. C. Coaching Staff

Will Direct Baseball For Season Of 1935

Is Graduate of Presbyterian College and Former Shortstop for Philadelphia Athletics.

The announcement last week by Walter A. Johnson, director of athletics at Presbyterain college, of the appointment as baseball coach of Clarence E. (Chick) Galloway, former big leaguer and star short-stop for the Philadelphia Athletics, was received with much enthusiasm on the campus and in alumni circles.

Galloway played both football and baseball at P. C. in 1915, '16, and '17. After leaving college, he became a member of the famous Atlanta "kid team" and went from there to the big leagues. "Chick" is a personal friend of Connie Mack and was for twelve years or more one of the outstanding players in the league.

In addition, Galloway was voted the world's best short-stop in 1925. The expert coaching and advice which he will be able to give will undoubtedly whip the present nine into fine shape and attract many new students to the college in the future.

Coach Galloway, in accepting his new position, returns to active work in his favorite sport after a lapse of several years. While playing with the Detroit Tigers he suffered a head injury which incapacitated him for further professional duty.

The first regular practice under the new mentor was held Wednesday afternoon. At this time Galloway spoke briefly to the players, stressing the fact that he wanted to build a team that would fight whether winning or losing. He further stated that he wanted his men to develop self-confidence and to feel that their team was the equal of any outfit in the state.

Erskine And P. C. Divide Debates

Presbyterian Affirmative Wins At Due West, and Seceder Negative Victorious Here.

On last Wednesday night, the Presbyterian debating teams split decisions with Erskine, P. C.'s affirmative winning at Erskine, and Erskine's negative winning here.

The Presbyterian affirmative team, composed of Hank Wilson, first speaker, and Edgar E. Stanton, Jr., second speaker, was victorious in its tilt with the Erskine team of McGowan and Patton. The debate was held in the Philomathean Literary society hall at Erskine, and was well attended by college students and townfolk. The Presbyterian team presented a logical, smooth argument, and the rebuttals were effective enough to clinch the decision. The oratorical ability of Wilson, and the convincing speech of Stanton were outstanding. This was the first debate of the season for both schools, and, considering this fact, both sides did exceptionally well.

The affirmative team that Erskine sent to meet Hugh Holman and Charles Carson, P. C.'s negative, was made up of McCutcheon and Calhoun. These men are splendid orators and had their subject well in hand. The Presbyterians, while efficiently attacking the major points of their opponents, lacked the polish, power, and drive that is necessary to clinch a decision, and their Erskine opponents easily won the decision.

Next week, the affirmative meets three teams. Monday they debate Winthrop at Rock Hill; Wednesday they debate Furman here; and Thursday they debate Southwestern here. The negative has but one engagement, Furman at Greenville on Wednesday night.

Colin Hudson was elected business manager of the PaC-SaC. Hudson is from Greenville, a rising senior, and two-miler of some note on the track team. He is a member of the Kappa Alpha fraternity. Recently he was elected to Sigma Kappa Alpha, local honorary scholastic fraternity, and due to his holding the highest average in the class, will automatically become president of that organization next year.

Alan Levi defeated Henry Calvert for advertising manager of the PaC-SaC. He is from Charlotte, a member of the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity, a forward on the basketball team and a member of the tennis team.

For managing editor of The Collegian, in a run-over, Sadler Love defeated Joe Patrick. Love is a native of Rock Hill. He is a rising junior, and last year, a member of the frosh track team. He is a member of The Blue Stocking staff. In addition, he has made several contributions to The Collegian during the past year.

Henry Calvert, Greenwood, S. C., rising senior, defeated W. E. Mullinax for business manager of The Collegian. Calvert is also on The Blue Stocking staff. He is a member of the swimming team.

W. P. Chalmers, East Point, Ga., another rising junior, was elected vice-president of the Y. M. C. A. Chalmers has taken quite a bit of interest in this work since he has been in school. He is a member of the Ministerial club. T. D. Talmage was the man defeated in this race.

Lynn Jones, from Mississippi, a rising junior who entered P. C. last fall, was elected vice-president of the "Y." He is a member of the Kappa Alpha fraternity.

Honor Society Gets Four New Members

Hudson, Plaxico, Andrews and Johnson Earn Highest Scholastic Honor On Campus.

At the regular chapel exercises on last Wednesday Dr. John McSween, president of Presbyterian college, formally initiated four new men into Sigma Kappa Alpha, local scholarship fraternity. These men were Colin Hudson, Tom Plaxico, E. R. Andrews, and Cliff Johnson.

Membership in this honor organization is awarded by the faculty, the highest five per cent of the junior and senior classes being chosen. All the men initiated Wednesday were juniors. Hudson, as highest ranking man in his class, will automatically become president of the fraternity next year. The present president is Paul Todd.

Membership in this organization is the highest scholastic honor a man can receive at Presbyterian college.

Exercises Recall College Founder

Dr. Jacobs' Memory Honored On Birthday, March 15. McSween Tells of Fruitful Life.

The ninety-third anniversary of the birth of William Plumer Jacobs, D.D., LL.D., founder of Presbyterian college and Thornwell orphanage, and for nearly fifty years pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Clinton, was observed by suitable exercises in the college chapel Friday morning. Dr. John McSween, president of the college, was the principal speaker, with Dr. L. Ross Lynn, president of the orphanage, and Dr. D. J. Woods, pastor of the First church, taking part.

Dr. McSween's address was brief but extremely appropriate. In the beginning he quoted from Emerson, "Every institution is a shadow of its founder," and informed the audience, made up of the students and faculty of the college and of numerous townfolk, that the purpose of this day was to honor the memory of this great man, to recall the ideals that made him great, and most of all, to find inspiration from his life to face the problems of the present.

Following out this plan, Dr. McSween showed how Dr. Jacobs matched his frail body but indomitable will with the unfavorable environment of a reconstruction-period South, and showed how he succeeded even though this condition existed. He also said that Dr. Jacobs lived dangerously—in that he dared to believe that in doing great things for God he would in turn receive great things from God. He demonstrated by his life what God can do with a life completely surrendered to His will. Too, Dr. Jacobs showed that God works out His plans through human instrumentality.

From the careful diary which this great man kept, Dr. McSween read an extract which told of his first conception of Presbyterian college—an institution which would "be for the glory of God, and one which would show that a poor, country preacher could do great things for God."

Then the speaker reminded the listeners that this was still the purpose of the school; and said that we, like Dr. Jacobs, must "dream, have faith in these dreams, and believe that God will do great things through us."

After a brief summary of the remarkable growth of the college since Dr. Jacobs conceived it in his dreams, Dr. McSween concluded with the statement, "I believe that the spirit of this man will live on through this institution, and that his dream will not fail to be realized even more than it has been thus far."

P. K. Phi Dances Enjoyed By Many

Local Fraternity Stages Social Affairs During Week-End. McDonald's Orchestra Plays.

One of the most brilliant social affairs of the season was the Pi Kappa Phi spring dances, an annual feature of the fraternity's contributions to P. C. social life. Don McDonald harmonized very effectively with his orchestra, which is composed of P. C. men, and showed that he has registered improvement even above the fine exhibition of musical attainment he displayed at the military ball a week before. The Lakeside country club was the scene of the festive occasion. The dances were on Friday night, 10 to 3, and Saturday, 9 to 12.

Besides the regular orchestra renditions of popular songs, there were several novelty numbers, such as a tap dance, and special arrangements of the two pieces, "Old King Cole" and "Mona," in which members of the band came off their dignity and provided comedy relief for the dancers. Miss Mildred Whitten, one of the number who attended the dance, sang "St. Louis Woman" with fine effect.

For no-break numbers, there were "Angel of Pi Kappa Phi," and other numbers, such as "Solitude" and a medley arrangement of "My Dear" and "I Love You Truly."

Swimming Is Next In Campus Sports

Water Competition To Start As Soon As Tennis Play Is Completed. Events Arranged.

Continuing its policy of offering a well-rounded intramural sports program, Blue Key leadership fraternity has announced that competitive swimming will be begun upon the completion of the tennis tournament now in progress.

George Dunlap, appointed by Blue Key to direct the tank festivities, states that final details have not as yet been fully worked out, but promises that all contestants will have ample opportunity to display their aquatic abilities.

Tentative plans are that there will be eight events, several of which will probably be altered slightly after details have been completed. The events scheduled thus far are as follows:

(1) 240-yard sprint relay—(4 men, each to swim free style 60 yards).
(2) 100-yard breast stroke.
(3) 40-yard dash—free style.
(4) 80-yard backstroke.
(5) 80-yard dash—free style.
(6) Fancy diving (5 required and 2 optional)—
Required: Plain front, back dive, front jack, back jack, front half-twist.
Optional (any two)—back jack half twist, half gainer, full gainer, one and a half front somersault, back somersault, front jack half twist.
(7) 120-yard free style.

Student Body Fills Important Posts In Annual Election. Almost Every Man Votes.

The student body of Presbyterian college has again decided who is to lead it through another year. On last Tuesday and Wednesday the officers for 1935-36 were elected.

In the election Tuesday every man in the student body voted with the exception of eight. The results were: McClary and Forehand to run over for president, and Potter made senior councilman; Collings, Steenbergen, Shoemaker, and Evans to run over for secretary and treasurer of the council and junior councilman; Plaxico and Charles to run over for editor of the PaC-SaC; Hudson was automatically made business manager when his opponent, Yow, was forced to withdraw due to faculty rulings; Alan Levi elected advertising manager of the PaC-SaC; Arnold elected president of the Y. M. C. A.; Lynn Jones was automatically made vice-president when his nomination was uncontested a week previously; Chalmers was elected secretary and treasurer of the "Y"; George Oliver, editor of The Collegian; Sadler Love and Patrick to run over for managing editor; and Calvert, business manager.

In the run-offs Tuesday every man in the student body voted with the exception of four. McClary was made president of the student body. Collings became secretary and treasurer of the council, and Steenbergen and Shoemaker, junior councilmen. Plaxico was elected editor of the PaC-SaC. Love was made managing editor of The Collegian.

All the elections were remarkably close. Though there is no official ground for the statement, it is generally accepted that two votes decided the presidency of the student body, and that eleven votes turned the annual over to Plaxico, while only six votes kept Evans off the junior council.

The elections were conducted in a most orderly and praiseworthy manner and the largest percentage of the student body voted than ever has in the past.

There was a huge amount of interest taken in the elections and the outcome. The student body is to be congratulated in this active display of interest, and retiring President Boggs cannot be praised too highly for the efficient manner in which the balloting was carreid out.

Governor Johnston Appoints P. C. Graduate To Direct Relief Activities In South Carolina.

On last Thursday Governor Olin D. Johnston of South Carolina announced that James Douglas Fulp, president of Bailey Military academy, at Greenwood, and a Presbyterian college alumnus, had been appointed state ERA administrator to succeed Miller C. Foster, resigned. Mr. Fulp will continue his duties at Bailey.

The appointment to the position of relief administrator for South Carolina is a signal honor for Mr. Fulp and it makes him one of the strongest economic and political figures in

QUARTERMAN'S ILLNESS

Lee Quarterman's many friends will be happy to know that he is rapidly recovering from a tonsil operation which he underwent at the Hays hospital the early part of last week. It is believed that he soon will be filling his familiar place on the campus.

Thought For the Week

The Life Worth Living

The lotus flower is said to be the favorite symbol of righteousness and saintly virtue among the people of India. This beautiful plant of the water lily family, growing undefiled out of the wet mud of its mother soil, presents a striking contrast to its drab environment. It is a figure that is strongly applicable to the Christian life today. In his daily activities the Christian comes in contact with individuals and events that are completely out of accord with God's plan of religious conduct. Even some of the Christian's closest friends may be persons whose lives have not yet been touched by the Gospel message. He encounters many temptations along life's way that, were he to yield, would divert him from the straight path of living. This, however, does not mean that he should try to avoid undesirable associations altogether. The sincere Christian, whose strength is in the Lord, will emerge from this negative atmosphere a better man and a stronger character. In the process of keeping himself pure and unspotted from the world he will strive to the best of his ability to lead others less fortunate to a better and a higher plane of living.

New Wine . . .

The Student Body of this school seems to have at last realized that they are under a definite obligation to make known their desires and choices. In past elections it has been difficult to get enough men to vote to make a quorum. Praise Allah, those days seem to have passed. Last week less than nine men failed to vote in the elections either day.

This is a new and praiseworthy attitude on the part of the student body. It is time that we began taking an active interest in what is going on about us, and in a school government such as we have, it is high time that we began expressing ourselves in the manner to which we are constitutionally entitled. The results of these elections do matter, and vitally so, to each of us, for they establish the powers that will govern us in the coming year. Thank God, we are at last beginning to realize the fact and to do something about it.

But this interest, splendid though it is, will have failed in one of its major fields if we do not apply it to every part of our government and not to just the elections. It should be a part of every Student Body meeting. A sad situation still exists in regard to them. We are too interested in getting our mail to remain in the chapel long enough to actually accomplish anything there. Anything can be passed there. If a motion is made we immediately vote for it, often without knowing for what we are voting, just that we may get to the mail boxes a few minutes sooner. This is truly a deplorable thing.

Let us carefully, sanely, and honestly weigh everything that is brought up in our Student Body meetings and vote according to our honest beliefs. It is certainly worth the time it will take!

Let us carry this sane and sensible interest that we have demonstrated in the elections over into all phases of our school life. Let the days be past when one can pass ANYTHING over us simply by making it into the form of a motion.

NOTES AND SHADES

MOVIES

Monday and Tuesday—"Maybe It's Love." A young couple, during the first six months of a hasty marriage—the girl desperate over lack of money and the boy burdened by the interferences of her family—is the theme of this First National picture. Ross Alexander makes the young man an extremely interesting person, but the picture on the whole is frankly dull. Phillip Reed and Gloria Stuart are hampered by their parts. Frank McHugh, Ruth Donnelly, Helen Lowell and Henry Travers make up the supporting cast.

Wednesday—"Lightning Strikes Twice." If you can be entertained by a mystery built on a murder that didn't happen, intermixed with mistaken identities, you'll be amused. Ben Lyon and Skeets Gallagher are funny as the befuddled young men-about-town, and Pert Kelton is good as the fan dancer. Laura Hope Crews, John Hale and Thelma Todd also turn in able performances. But the cast can't surmount the weak and incoherent story of this RKO-Radio production.

Thursday—"The President Vanishes." For once a picture deserves the term "sensational." Timely, startling, even shocking, this screen speculation of what would happen if the chief executive vanished in a crisis, is guaranteed to do more than capture your intense interest. It will make you think. In no recent film have there been so many cameo-cut vigorous characterizations. Arthur Byron plays the conscientious President Stanley with earnest, human dignity. Edward Arnold achieves another triumph as Secretary Wardell. Others in the cast keep up the high standard.

Friday—Bing Crosby and Kitty Carlisle in "Here Is My Heart." If you're a Bing Crosby fan—and who isn't—here's something to get excited over. For between the laughs, Bing sings those haunting kinds of tunes you'll hear for ages. The story? Well, it's just the old "Grand Duchess and The Waiter" yarn all dressed up in new raiment, but it's still a good story.

Saturday—"Rocky Mountain Mystery"—with Mrs. Leslie Carter and Randolph Scott. No reviews available.

DID YOU KNOW THAT . . . ?

Tallullah Bankhead may play "Sadie Thompson" in London.

Josef Von Sternberg will never direct Marlene Dietrich in another Paramount film.

Lotte Lehman is to sing "La Tosca" next week for the first time in New York.

o

THE PARADE GROUND

From the viewpoint of the P. M. S. and T. (the point of view being a comfortable seat on the side lines), the military ball was a distinct success. The "soldiers" were handsome and the girls beautiful. The P. M. S. and T. refrained from dancing, not because of age or physical disability, but to keep from embarrassing some of the escorts. The assistant P. M. S. and T., who also was on hand for the festivities, says that the white belts of the basics looked very distinguished, and that the "color schemes" of the advanced corps were extremely pleasing to the eye. Some ball!

Perrin, Clark, and Yearout will leave for Montgomery, Ala., sometime next week to take the physical examination for entrance to the air corps school. Carothers, who at one time intended becoming a bird also, has decided that his future lies on the ground, so he has withdrawn from the competition. There is a great future in the army air corps, and the pay is simply elegant for the successful flier.

The P. M. S. and T., according to his own statement, is still giving "lessons" in golf. A little successful investigating, however, has revealed to your correspondent that there are two sides to this golf question. The illustrious Clinton foursome, Wysor, Jacobs, McSween, and Whitten, may be seen almost any day now swatting away at the country club, and, according to one of these civilian gentlemen (name not to be disclosed) "when the Cap'n is hot, he burns up the course, but when he's not so hot, he is absolutely lousy!" From this same source comes the startling information that our noble president is the scorer of the "four horsemen," and the way that he usually manages to stay one up on the rest of the experts is simply amazing.

The corporals of the corps are now "on the spot." In the next week or so, selections are to be made for the advanced corps, and ratings are also in order. Since Captain Blanton will not be with us during the coming year, it is most probable that all will be announced this spring. All sophomores desiring to be sergeant majors are hereby warned to watch their drill very closely for the coming month!

We have all sorts of clubs on our campus—social, literary, journalistic, linguistic, international relations, athletic, etc., but we have no military club. Why not? Those men on our campus who are really interested in military affairs would enjoy getting together every week or so to discuss wars, past, present, and future, and all that war connotes. Such a club would be both instructive and interesting, and would certainly be more worthwhile than some of our other greatly touted organizations.

WITH THE GREEKS

Alpha Lambda Tau fraternity chose her leaders for the coming year on last Monday night. The following men now hold places of responsibility under the new regime:

Regent, Joe Bradley; Baron, Hank Wilson; Secretary, Tom Plaxico; Treasurer, Bob Coulter.

Kappa Alpha social fraternity put three men through the final degree of its initiation ceremony, Jim McClary, Lynn Jones, and Wendell Williams. McClary is the recently elected student body president and is from Georgetown. Jones is a transfer from the junior college at Pontotoc, Miss. These two are juniors, while Williams, a freshman, is from Moultrie, Ga.

MY GAL SAL

On the dance floor, she's the script
Of lilting poems, neatly flipped.
She's a dancing, rhythmic ballad,
She's a metered, gliding mallard.
Now dactillic, now iambic,
Never blank verse epigramic.
She's a frothy, swaying sonnet—
And yet, in spite of this, dog-gon-it;

In the parlor, she's a rule-book,
A dusty, dry, dogmatic school-book.
"Let go my hand!" (and she's my hostess!)
"This certainly isn't Emily Post-ess,
Say, Dr. Dean and Dorothy Dix
Would throw me in the River Styx!"
She teaches every rule, all right!
I'll learn them all again tonight.

Conversation At the Dance As Converse Would Have It

(Note: This is a meek attempt to answer the excerpt on this question, which was published in last week's issue of The Blue Stocking).

The scene: A Converse dance.

(The boy has just been introduced).

He: "Hello! I am five feet eleven inches tall, have normal chest expansion, use Listerine toothpaste, and take a bath every Saturday night."

She: "The reason my chin looks so white is because I'm camouflaging a pimple. I had my hair set today at the La Petite Beauty Shoppe (Time, Jan. 25) for a cost of one dollar. This is the most anaemic corsage I've ever seen."

He: "Tha's a funny looking wart on your nose, too. By the way, I see that things are looking up in the Saar Plebiscite again."

She: "Schopenhauer is too, too divine! Oh, but the Townsend plan, the Townsend plan. (Gurgles with delight). (Sings) "Oh, you ill-bred man—taking your love on the Townsend plan!"

He: "Did you realize that nitrogen pentaoxide is derived by dehydrating pure anhydrous nitric acid with a little phosphorous pentaoxide?"

She: (breathlessly) "And that only the other day Guilio Gatti-Casayza of the Manhattan Metropolitan Opera company, etc., etc.

(Some one breaks)

He: " 'The bird of time hath but a short way to flutter, and the bird is on the wing'."

She: " 'Cogito ergo sum'."

LOST IN A FOG

(A Poem)

Oscar Tumor, fat and forty,
Tried and true, and quite unbawdy,
All his life had never laughed.
(The wine of joy, he'd never quaffed).

Mrs. Tumor, with a bray,
Up and went caffard one day.

LOVE

A bleak wind whistled irritably o

"John," she sighed, "I love you mo

"Anne, darling," he cried, "y

McCLARY, PLAXICO, ARNOLD AND OLIVER WIN RECENT STUDENT ELECTIONS

JAMES McCLARY
President of the Student Body

James McClary, just elected president of this student body, highest position of honor on our campus, was born in Georgetown, S. C., June 20, 1914, and has called that town home since. He attended the high school in that city, during which time he was president of his senior class and a member of the football, baseball and basketball teams of the school.

Since entering P. C. with the class of '36, Mac has made a freshman numeral in football, a varsity letter in boxing, was treasurer of his class during his sophomore year, has been a member of the student council since last year, and was recently admitted to the local chapter of Blue Key, national honorary leadership fraternity. In addition to these honors, he is a member of the Y. M. C. A. cabinet and has been prominent in other religious activities on the campus during his three years here. He is also prominent in social activities of the campus, being a member of Kappa Alpha social fraternity.

Friends on the campus know Mac as a jolly good fellow who has shown by his life here that he is absolutely sincere in what he holds to be right, that he is in deep earnestness in developing himself in a full, well-rounded way. He has shown by his service on the boxing squad that he possesses that long-heralded "P. C. spirit," and this with the natural ability which is his, assures us that the interests of the student body will be safe in his hands during the coming year.

TOM PLAXICO
Editor 1935-1936 PaC-SaC

Tom Plaxico added another link to his chain of honors by action of the student body last Wednesday in electing him to the editorship of the PaC-SaC, the college annual.

Plaxico, a junior from Sharon, S. C., is highest ranking cadet in the junior class, is a member of the International Relations club and is on the editorial staff of The Blue Stocking. He was recently elected to the Sigma Kappa Alpha, local scholastic fraternity, the highest honor a student can attain at Presbyterian college. He is a member of Alpha Lambda Tau social fraternity.

Plaxico is a man of great mental ability, determination and perseverance, and it is believed he will produce a splendid PaC-SaC.

ERNEST JONES ARNOLD
Y. M. C. A. President

Ernest Jones Arnold, the newly-elected president of the Y. M. C. A., was born in Marble Valley, Ala., in 1913. He attended high school in his present home town, Sylacauga, and is a graduate of the State Secondary Agricultural school of that city. He secured summer work in Montreat, N. C., in 1931, and has been in charge of the Anderson auditorium there for the past four years.

He entered P. C. in 1932, and was made a member of the freshman Y. M. C. A. cabinet that year. He was a member of the varsity Y. M. C. A. cabinet during the year 1933-34. He was a corporal in the R. O. T. C. in 1934. He was elected to the advanced corps, but withdrew because his Montreat work would conflict with his attending the six-week camp this summer.

Throughout the time he has been a student here, Arnold has been actively associated with the ministerial group, being vice-president this year. In 1934 he was received into the Delta Chi Alpha, Christian leadership fraternity, and he is now vice-president of that organization.

In February of this year, at the annual conference in Columbia, he was elected state president of the Student Volunteer movement. This is a signal honor, and such an achievement reflects glory upon the institution which he attends.

Arnold is a young man of high capacity and a modesty of attitude that inspires the confidence of all who know him. He has shown an unexcelled spirit of clean leadership throughout every undertaking in which he has engaged himself.

GEORGE E. OLIVER
Editor The Collegian

Presbyterian's literary magazine, The Collegian, next year will be under the editorship of George E. Oliver. Hailing from Savannah, Ga., Oliver prepped at McCallie, serving on the staff of the newspaper, and at Belmont Abbey, where he contributed to the literary magazine. Thus when George placed his lot with P. C., his ability along literary endeavors already had been recognized.

For several years Oliver has been active on the campus. He is a member of Beta Kappa social fraternity, all-state track star, member of the Block "P" club, and was elected secretary-treasurer of his class the last part of his junior year. Although he has been a part of The Collegian staff in the past, his absence from P. C. the first semester of this year has necessarily kept him from publishing material during that time.

The Collegian staff for next year will include, in addition to Oliver: Robert C. McLees, associate editor; F. Sadler Love, managing editor; Henry C. Calvert, business manager. The other members of the staff will consist of those students who show interest by their contributions. This plan of acquiring a staff, rather than selection by the editor, was carried out successfully this year. Of the present fifteen writers for The Collegian, only three will graduate in June, leaving a larger nucleus than ever before about which to work.

McLees is widely known for his stories, all his own, such as "The Emperor's Eyeball." His linoleum cuts, profusely illustrating The Collegian, have received wide-spread popularity. Love not only is one of The Collegian's best writers, but his stories, such as "Tomorrow," show great promise. Calvert has served on the business staff in the past, and is quite capable of the responsibility the position requires.

THE NEW COUNCIL

The new council is:

James McClary, of Georgetown, (mentioned elsewhere in this paper) was named president.

Roy Forehand, vice-president. Roy has served one year with the council, is a member of Beta Kappa social fraternity, a member of Blue Key, the Pan-Hellenic council, the glee club, is a four-letter man in athletics and a first sergeant in the R. O. T. C. corps.

Richard Potter, of Atlanta, also a Beta Kappa, was chosen senior councilman. Red has served with the council since his freshman year, was for the past year secretary of both the student body and the Y. M. C. A., and has been prominent in other extra-curricula activities on the campus, He, too, is a first sergeant in the R. O. T. C. department.

James Collings, of Atlanta, affiliated with Beta Kappa fraternity, was elected secretary-treasurer of the student body to succeed Potter. Collings has represented the college through the Y. M. C. A., the glee club, the college quartet and the varsity football team.

Other junior councilmen chosen in the same election were Charles Steenbergen, of Point Pleasant, W. Va., who is a member of Pi Kappa Phi social fraternity and the varsity basketball squad; and Raleigh Shoemaker, of Charlotte, N. C., who is a member of Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity, the college orchestra, and the varsity football team. Steenbergen has served one team on the council, while Shoemaker is assuming these duties for the first time.

From the present freshman class, Joe Commander, of Florence, S. C., and Frank Johnston, of Jefferson, Ga., were selected as sophomore representatives on this governing body. Commander is president of the freshman class and a member of Pi Kappa Phi social fraternity. Johnston was a regular member of the frosh basketball squad. Both are serving on the council for the first time.

this section.

P. C. lists Mr. Fulp among its outstanding sons. He was born in Fort Mill, S. C., and graduated from Presbyterian in 1906 with the bachelor of arts degree Since then he has studied at Columbia university and in 1919 at the University of London.

He has long been a prominent figure in the educational life of the state. For several years he was principal of the Mount Zion institute, and for four years superintendent of the Abbeville schools. He was also state high school inspector. In 1926 he was president of the National Association of High School Supervisors, and from 1926 to 1927 president of the South Carolina Teachers' association.

He served meritoriously in the World war as a captain and is at present a lieutenant colonel in the infantry reserves.

Mr. Fulp is a member of the American Legion, Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity, the Kiwanis club, the Presbyterian church and the Democratic party. He is listed in "Who's Who in America."

COLORFUL FRATERNITY DANCES ARE FEATURES OF WEEK-END

Bowery Ball Staged By Pi Kappa Alpha

New Departure In Social Activity Inaugurated Friday Night. Costumes Claim Attention.

Inaugurating a new feature in Presbyterian college festivities, the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity held its annual dance Friday night at Copeland hall—a colorful Bowery ball.

The New York "East Side" influence was very much in evidence. But costumes were not limited to this famous section. There were representatives from the farm, from history, from Spain and from vivid imaginations. These brilliant and colorful costumes and the uniqueness of the affair added much to the spirit of the occasion.

Music was furnished by Don McDonald and his Presbyterian college orchestra and they lived up to their past record of successes. Just prior to the intermission the orchestra played "Dream Girl of Pi K. A." for the fraternity leadout. "Shorty" Horne, making his debut as a songster, sang the melody, to the evident pleasure of the dancers.

A large number of out-of-town girls attended the dance and several representatives from each of the other organizations on the campus were present. Chaperons were members of the faculty and several of the parents in Clinton.

Kappa Alpha Has Semi-Formal Affair

Saturday Night Dance Enjoyed By Group. Many Here From Out of Town.

Saturday night Don McDonald and his P. C. orchestra played for the Kappa Alphas at their semi-formal dance at Copeland hall where quite an assembly of friends and beautiful girls were gathered.

Four no-breaks were announced, during one of which Harris Gray sang "The Sweetheart of Old K. A." The orchestra also gave its variety numbers.

Among the visitors from off the campus were K. A.'s Tom Downie, Harvey McConnell, Redge Harris, Joe Johnson, Scotty McLeod, and Palmer, from Davidson.

Recent students returning for the social affairs were Bob Hamer, Claude Moore, and J. P. Matthews, and among the alumni were Gregg McFie and Kitchin.

Other collegiate visitors were the Crigler brothers, Fouche, Nelson and others from Furman, and Robert Hemphill and John Dubose from Carolina.

After the festivities in Copeland hall, which was decorated with red and blue crepe paper, light refreshments of punch and cakes were served in the newly refinished club room.

STAR DUST
— By —
"JAKE" PENLAND

He colored his freshman year with triumphs in four major sports—added weight to these achievements as a sophomore, and, in the past pair of years, has branched out into new fields as well as retained his seat on the athletic pedestal of fame.

BOLICK —BACK—

Harry Bolick, in four years of collegiate activity, has personified leadership and ability. He is a member of Blue Key, is president of Pi Kappa Alpha social fraternity, and has captained both the football and boxing teams. The Jacobs blocking trophy, a coveted honor, came to him in '34 as a reward for unselfishness and proficiency in blocking. On the heels of this honor came his selection as all-state fullback.

It was during Harry's sophomore year that he met with most of his

Local Debaters Continue Wins

Local Men Win Decisions Over Representatives of Winthrop, Furman and Southwestern.

P. C.'s affirmative debating team has continued its record of victories this week by defeating three strong teams in four days, while the negative has had but one debate and that a non-decision encounter.

On Monday afternoon the affirmative journeyed up to Rock Hill to meet the negative team of Winthrop college. P. C.'s affirmative consisted of Hank Wilson and Edgar Stanton. Winthrop's team was made up of Misses "Billy" Cole and Anne Rosenbloom. P. C. won the decision.

On Wednesday night Wilson, with Calvert substituting for Stanton, successfully met Furman's negative team here. The Furman team was made up of Messrs. J. R. Bruce and P. M. Cable.

On the same night the Presbyterian negative, composed of Hugh Holman and Charles Carson, met Furman's affirmative at Greenville. This was a non-decision debate, but the negative showed vast improvement over their performance against Erskine and carried off honors.

On Thursday, Wilson and Calvert met the touring Southwestern university (Memphis, Tenn.) team and successfully expounded the affirmative side of the question. Southwestern presented a particularly strong team.

This week neither team has a debate, the next one being here on April 4, when the negative meets Winthrop's affirmative.

New Rifle Range Ready For Use

The new rifle range, constructed by student F. E. R. A. labor, is now ready for use, according to Dr. John H. Davis, campus administrator of the group. The new range, located on the lower athletic field, was erected in a little over a month's time. It is built of concrete and is to be used by the college R. O. T. C. unit and also by the Clinton coast guard. The major contribution for this contsruction work was made by Captain R. E. Wysor, Jr., our P. M. S. and T. This project is indeed a great step forward in the modernization of our campus.

Install McClary As Student President

New Council Takes Oath At Same Time. Leader Speaks for Associates.

On last Tuesday morning James McClary was installed as president of the Presbyterian college student body at the regular morning chapel service. Retiring President Doyle Boggs administered the oath of office and in a brief speech expressed both his and the council's appreciation for the splendid support and help they had received.

McClary thanked the student body for the honor that had been bestowed upon him and expressed the determination of the new council to give honest, efficient administration to all the affairs which would be under their control.

He then swore in the other members of the council. They were: Roy Forehand, Richard Potter, James Collings, Charles Steenbergen, Shoemaker, Joe Commander and Frank Johnson.

Baseball Men Start Season Wednesday

Opening Game With Erskine At Due West. Well-Rounded Outfit To Represent P. C.

Having shown up well in practice games during the past week, P. C.'s baseballers face the remaining few days before the opener with Erskine with optimism.

The Hosemen whipped Clinton Mills decisively and in so doing proved their ability at bat and afield. They continued their heads-up play against other near-by aggregations and should be ready and capable when the Erskine game comes up.

Coach Galloway has shifted "Red" Wyatt from the pitcher's box to third base, and the talented red-head has shown both power at the bat and fielding ability. "Lefty" Suggs has performed well enough to be counted on to take his turn on the mound with Holliday, Wilson, and others, while Evans' hard hitting insures for him a permanent berth in the outfield.

The probable starting line-up will be: Holliday, p; Bolick, c; Millsap, 1b; Horne, 2b; Higbe, ss; Wyatt, 3b; Evans, Captain Holcomb and Suggs, outfield.

Rifle Team Splits With Clemson

On Saturday, March 16, the Presbyterian college rifle team divided sharpshooting laurels with the Clemson aggregation here in Leroy Springs gymnasium.

Clemson won the ten-man match by twenty-three points and P. C. took the five-man with a margin of thirteen.

MISS CLINTON

MISS GEORGIA BEE BLAKELY

Miss Blakely Wins Festival Contest

Graduate of P. C. In 1934 Selected To Represent Clinton At Charleston Celebration.

Clinton's beauty queen is Miss Georgia Bee Blakely, an alumna of Presbyterian college. She was chosen as the Clinton representative to the Charleston azalea festival by the vote of the people of the town in a contest that closed Monday.

Georgia Bee graduated from P. C. last June, having attended this institution for two years. The first two years of her college life were spent at Erskine. At present she is on the faculty of the Academy Street public school here.

While at P. C. Georgia Bee was for two years voted the most popular co-ed. She was the shining light at many social and fraternal occasions during those years. She was a charter member of Alpha Chi Delta, local sorority.

Congratulations, Georgia Bee, on this deserved honor!

Columbia Hi Wins Meet Saturday

Track Contest With P. C. Frosh and Thornwell Goes To Capital City Lads, With 60 Points.

P. C.'s freshman track team was unable to cope with teams from Columbia high school and Thornwell orphanage as the Capital City tracksters amassed 60 points to cop first honors in the triangle meet, held on Johnson field last Saturday afternoon.

Thornwell trailed the Columbians by only two and one-half points, the relay deciding the meeet, while the collegians came out a poor third with 34 1-2 points. Dick Little of Columbia was the individual star of the meet, taking top scoring honors with 16 1-2 points. A feature of the afternoon was the 440 yard dash, won by the diminutive Johnny Campbell of C. H. S. with a time of 53.8 seconds. Macon Hipp was the Calvinists brightest star, winning the discus and javelin throws and placing second in the shot put for a total of 13 points.

Columbia high placed first in eight events, with P. C. and Thornwell halving the remaining six. The Columbians placed in every event, Thornwell in 12 and P. C. frosh in 10.

P. C. varsity men officiated.

Psychology Class Visits Hospital

On last Tuesday the class in abnormal psychology journeyed down to Columbia to the State hospital on a field trip. They were conducted through the hospital by Dr. James M. Austin of the hospital staff, who pointed out typical cases of mental disorder with descriptions of the case histories and methods of cure that were being employed. Then a tour of the better wards of the hospital was made.

TRACK MEN TO TAKE THE FIELD ON SATURDAY

Dual Meet To Be Held At University In Columbia. P. C. Performers Rapidly Rounding Into Shape For Season's Work.

The varsity and freshmen track and field teams of Presbyterian College will open the 1935 schedule with a meet at Columbia Saturday afternoon with the University of South Carolina aggregation.

Carolina, co-winner of the 1934 meet, can always be depended upon to put out an excellent team. Rumors from the Gamecock stronghold seem to infer that this year's team has its heart set on one of the two high marks of the 1935 meet.

The P. C. performers are rapidly rounding into shape. Coach Lonnie McMillian's discovery of the hurdling ability of Bill Thompson, freshman dash ace of last year, will undoubtedly strengthen the team. In a trial test Saturday, Thompson ran the 220 flight in 26.9, 1.4 seconds above the state record of 25.5 held by Lambeth of Newberry.

Yearout and Bradley, probably assisted by Thompson, will take care of the 100 and 220 yard dashes. Clark, Winget, and others will handle the middle distances; and Hudson, Charles Pitman, and Talmadge will take care of the mile and two mile runs.

The relay team, composed of Bradley, Winget, Yearout, and Clark, is intact from last year. The state record of 3 minutes, 27 seconds, is held by these four.

With Guerard on the high hurdles, Bob Perrin on the low hurdles, Jacobs and Wilbanks on the field events, and a host of others aiding and abetting, Saturday's meet should be one of the most exciting of the year.

Cappelmann Is Boxing Leader

Team-Mates Select Captain For 1936 Season. His First Year Eminently Successful.

On last Thursday morning the 1935 boxing team elected its 1936 leader and that man was "King-Kong" Cappelmann, rising junior.

This year was Cappelman's first in varsity pugilistic circles but he showed remarkable ability, losing but one fight and that by a very narrow margin. He closed the season in glory by a second-round knockout over Georgia's fighter. Cappelman fights in the middleweight class.

He is president of the sophomore class and a pledge to Alpha Kappa Pi fraternity.

Intramural Tennis Continues Apace

Although marred by a large number of forfeits in the early rounds, the intramural tennis tournament sponsored by Blue Key leadership fraternity is rapidly narrowing down.

The excellent tennis weather of the past week has aided greatly in heightening campus interest in the net sport and in hastening the play-offs. There are still 12 or 15 matches yet to be played, and no prophecy can be made as to the final outcome of the tests.

Sports Calendar For Week

Wednesday, March 27—Baseball, Erskine at Due West; tennis, Erskine at Due West.

Saturday, March 30—Track, Carolina at Columbia, varsity and frosh.

Monday, April 1—Baseball, Furman at Clinton.

Thought For the Week

Life's Supreme Challenge

The chief desire of every human being is to excel in his profession. We students come to college ostensibly for the purpose of securing advanced learning to add to our basic foundation of knowledge. As a matter of fact, whether we actually assimilate any practical information here or not, we do begin to acquire the fundamental principle of how to think. Herein lies the possibility of a familiar controversy that presents itself to the thinking mind: are we going to believe everything that apparently we cannot prove absolutely by the laboratory method of rationalism? The contest of faith versus reason is a major problem that must be faced fairly and squarely, and we should make a candid decision now as to which will be our guide throughout life. We cannot be progressive if we are just half-way believers. Christianity is a religion of which a very essential element is a faith that is deeply grounded in the soul of man, a power which utterly defies all destructive efforts of material analysis. After all is said and done, TRUE science and TRUE philosophy tend to substantiate every principle of our Christian belief.

The Digest Poll

Several weeks ago we wrote an editorial on the subject of the results of The Literary Digest peace poll. Now that poll has been completed and the youth of our colleges have declared themselves definitely opposed to war. They have stated that they will not fight if America is on the aggressive, and that they are not so very strongly for fighting if America is defending her shores. Worthy and noble are these sentiments, and they are the fruit of education. We have already stated the doubt that we hold has to their surviving a national crisis, but we do believe that if that crisis is withheld several years and the youth have this constructive education continued, then this meritorious sentiment will become a precious part of our national temper.

And we further believe that this is the proper, and the only, way in which peace can be permanently secured. Peace propagandists, in their attempts to secure that elusive quality, have often outstepped the bounds of reason and laid the entire blame for the war past and the wars to come on the minor agencies that are a part of these wars.

Wars have never been fought without the consent of the people fighting, and the days of mercenaries are over, so that the cold fact remains that no nation can wage this barbaric destruction without the consent of its inhabitants. And this points the way to true peace — education of the people.

Let us teach both ourselves and others that war is a useless and gloryless pastime of cruel tyrants and money-loving financiers; let us show through the medium of print, screen, and the radio that war is hell and the next one will be more hell than any before. Then we will have started a successful peace move.

It comes down to this, that the rules always seem fair to the winner and rotten to the loser.—Robert Quillen.

H. G. Wells says he plans to see Congress in action. England will probably miss him in years to come.—Greenville Piedmont.

NOTES AND SHADES

MOVIES

Monday and Tuesday — Will Rogers in "The County Chairman." Will Rogers leads all Hollywood's stars at the box-office—far and away. Very possibly the reason he does is that he gets closer to the American scene than any other star. People love him because they know him; they've seen him before. In this, of course, he has George Ade to help him paint the portrait of a lovable but astute rural politician. Naturally, Will has plenty of fun with the subject, running off his pleasantly satirical observations on the great American pastime, which only confirms a sneaking opinion that Rogers writes ninety per cent of his lines. The drama revolves around an election race for prosecuting attorney, with Will lining up his young law partner, Kent Taylor, against Berton Churchill in a good old-fashioned mud-slinging campaign. Mr. Churchill also plays the father of Evelyn Venable, with whom Taylor is in love. Thus the conflict. The usual Rogers stock company, complete with Evelyn Venable, Kent Taylor, Louise Dresser, Berton Churchill, Frank Melton and Stepin Fetchit, fit admirably into the cast. As Will Rogers repeats throughout the entire film, it will be "good politics" to take the whole family to this Fox production.

Wednesday—Myrna Loy and Cary Grant in "Wings In the Dark." An aviation story with a heart. Cary Grant gives his best performance to date as the aviator all set for a great flight when he is blinded by an explosion. Myrna Loy is pretty swell as the stunt-flyer who provides thrills at the county fairs and risks her neck to get Cary out of hock. She gives him a "Seeying Eye" dog, played by the beautiful and intelligent Lightning, grandson of Strongheart. And she accepts a distance-flight for twenty-five thousand dollars which will save Cary's ship, on which he has his invention for blind flying. She is lost in a heavy fog near the landing field—Cary goes up and leads her to safety, using his invention. There are some real heart-stirring thrills, not the harrowing crack-up kind. Roscoe Karns as Myrna's manager, is in one of his best spots. Hobart Cavanaugh as a Scotch mechanic, is a joy. Technically, the picture is an achievement, and the performances are top-hole in this Paramount film.

Thursday—Barbara Stanwyck in "A Lost Lady." A considerably revamped revision of Willa Cather's famous novel, presenting Barbara Stanwyck as a disillusioned woman married to Frank Morgan, who brings back her faith in men. The marriage is not for love, and they promise always to be "honest." Ricardo Cortez comes along, and then Frank has a heart attack. From there on, things drift in slow motion. The supporting cast of this First National production includes Lyle Talbot and Phillip Reed.

Friday—Norma Shearer, Charles Laughton and Frederic March in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street." The tender love story of Elizabeth Barrett and Robert Browning comes to the screen in a picture approaching perfection. This adaptation of a stage play, which served Katherine Cornell so well, has been given one of MGM's most meritorious productions, and serves Norma Shearer just as fittingly. As the invalid and emotionally restless poetess, Elizabeth, whom love miraculously leads from the shadows of death, Miss Shearer is inspired to do her best work. Frederic March is brilliant as the Browning who will not be denied his love, and whose zest for loving is the tonic that saves Elizabeth. Charles Laughton again increases his acting stature as the tyranical, psychopathic head of the house of Barrett. There are excellent supporting performances by Maureen O'Sullivan, Una O'Connor, Marion Clayton and Ralph Forbes. Director Sidney Franklin wins new respect for his handling of this able cast and worthy story. The drama is one of flashing; burning romance that finds its way through ominous, near-impenetrable fog of paternal objection and jealousy. Its sombre overtones enhance the beauty of its sharp, clear notes. The dialogue, impressive on the stage, is equally so in the film; perhaps even improved. The Victorian settings are truly drawn. Don't miss this picture.

Saturday — "Babbitt." George Babbitt, Sinclair Lewis' famous character, comes to the screen via Guy Kibbee, as a naively exasperating old gent, who is very susceptible to flattery. As a result of Kibbee's characterization—and he's at his best—the picture escapes the caustic preachment class and is humor-laden entertainment. Aline McMahon is excellent as his wife. Minna Gombell, Alan Hale and Minor Watson shine in support of the principals in this First National film.

WITH THE GREEKS

Kappa Alpha fraternity staged an initiation of five new men last Saturday evening and afterward celebrated the event with a banquet.

A large number of Kappa Alpha alumni saw the initiation ceremony performed. An outstanding one was Dr. H. M. Poteat, of Wake Forest college, who is province commander of the brotherhood.

After the initiation rites, the group, numbering over thirty, went to the dining room of Hotel Clinton, where they enjoyed a banquet. The room was very attractively decorated, with a St. Patrick's day scheme predominating.

The new men added to the K. A. active list are Baxter Carpenter, of Greenville; John Wells Todd, Laurens; Jack Witherspoon, Clinton; Barney Dreyfus, Atlanta, Ga.; and Malcolm Hemphill, Griffin, Ga.

"Marriage and home" is the subject of a new course offered by the Wesley Foundation of the University of Texas.

Gambling is wrong according to 111 University of Washington (Seattle) students who took a psychology test, but only 23 of this number condemned "petting."

Dr. C. W. Spears, Wisconsin's grid coach, wants his centers to be musicians; then he will have rhythm, he says.

Wayne University (Detroit, Mich.) has adopted new methods of rating students of the graduate school, whereby they are now given credit, no-credit, or honors for their grades.

Pennsylvania has nine medical colleges, seven of which are in Philadelphia.

THE PARADE GROUND

Now since spring is here again, the order every day is "Outside, with rifles." And the outside didn't come any too soon either, since it is now just one more month till the annual reckoning — government inspection. But, as usual, there is always the usual amount of growling about this most delightful time of the year. One fellow aches because we will soon be without blouses and he will find it necessary to change shirts at the end of every week instead of at the customary two weeks' period. Another grumbles because he has to cram other things into his head besides the romance the poet told about. But all in all, we are glad that this time of the year is here again, and we pledge ourselves to "prepare for inspection."

We suspect that the seniors whose army careers will be over in another month will really bear down on the gentlemen in ranks during this last period. Of course, they won't want to leave a bad taste in anyone's mouth, but at the same time they will realize that those in ranks won't have much time to keep that taste, and besides, a fellow is a senior with lots of authority just once in this life, so who can blame them?

Sophomores are being selected and rated for next year at the present time. Tests in practical and theoretical knowledge of things pertaining to military matters have been given by Captain Blanton during the past two weeks, and another one will be given in the near future. The average for the class was higher than that of last year's sophomore class on the first test, but it fell below on the next. Well, buddy, just watch out.

At last that bugbear of inoculation and vaccination is gone from the junior class. All men have demonstrated satisfactorily that they can take it, and now they look forward to this time next year when doubtless some of the weaker brothers will let the bugs get the best of them.

Color Sgt. Millsap has recently demonstrated that he has ability in other lines than ordinary routine matters of military life. For instance, just the other day, he solved a problem that had stopped the whole junior class cold. They couldn't figure what one should do with the dirt taken from a hole they proposed to dig to trap an enemy tank, when Millsap broke the ice by simply suggesting that they dig another hole to put the dirt in. It's funny how little things like this will stop a bunch of fellows, when the solution is perfectly obvious all the time.

The varsity rifle team has competed its firing for competition in Hearst trophy matches, but no results have been received yet. The scores of the two teams which were selected before the match began was higher than any Hearst trophy score, having 878 for the first team and 870 for the second. Upshur led with 183, Jeanes and Gregg with 179 and respectively, followed. For the second team, Pitman, with 174, and R. with 170, were high. P. C.'s team always shown up well in this competition and now with a higher than ever, it is expected that we come out "up there."

For practical use in his map reading course, Captain Blanton is having a map of the campus mimeographed for the freshmen who demonstrate to the inspector just what they have haven't learned during the year at least show the man just "w they are at."

Campus personalities:

J. B. JACOBS, it is reported, had a 14-inch blond hair on his arm in Bible class the other morning. . . . And the night before, it seems, he was leader at Christian Endeavor . . . SIMON LEGARE says the man who rode in the same car with him during the dances, and late-dated with him afterwards, behaved himself with obnoxious decorum . . . For meaning of the last word, we refer you to PROF. SWEDENBERG . . . GEORGE DUNLAP, overwhelmed by the immense amount of publicity given his affairs in Chester, avoided embarrassment by not having a date for the military ball . . . Meanwhile he sits up late nights in the PaC-SaC office staring blankly at a large feminine portrait which adorns his desk . . . This picture, it is learned, paid for by a rival, no less than the famous Earl Carroll (of bathtub fame), and presented to George as a sign of friendship even in the face of defeat by the local annual editor's love-making tactics . . . ODELL MATTHEWS is getting ready for spring in a big way . . . He now sports a pair of silver-rimmed specs, in place of the well-known horn-rimmers . . . SIMON LEGARE is chafing mightily at his failure to make the desired amount of time this week-end when he had his best girl up for the dances . . . Simon and his loves" is now a common expression on the campus . . . Seen at the ball: Between numbers, GUSSIE WILLIAMS, the object of BILL THOMPSON'S affections, walking across the floor and shaking her finger at Julius Boggs, and seemingly in a high dudgeon . . . Thompson reports a strenuous time at the dances, what with keeping boys from making late dates with the said Gussie, and also seeing that TOM ESTES, STUPE BUCHAN, and others, were broken upon frequently . . . NORTON, when asked what office he nominated a certain man for, replied, "I don't know." . . . BABY RAY SHOEMAKER complains that the shadow of his shady past looms ever before him and keeps him from getting started with new courtships . . . Every new girl he meets has somehow heard about the embarrassing situation at Greenwood in which he was involved . . . Question: Who is the auburn-haired girl HICK HARVIN has been dating?

"Stupe" Buchan is being urged on all sides to go on the stage and exhibit his ability as a female impersonator. Some days ago he was in Columbia with Hick Harvin and the two decided to take a certain young lady to ride. They stopped at her home and both went in to get the one sought for. But when the young lady saw them she protested, "One of you go back to the car quick; Mother won't let me ride with two boys." So back to the auto went Mr. Buchan.

A moment later the mother came in. "Who was the girl I heard in here?" she queried.

"Oh, that was Doris," replied the fair one, cautiously.

"Let me go out and meet her, my dear," said the mother again. So out to the car they went, with poor, unsuspecting "Stupe" about to be the victim of unfortunate circumstances.

Such a situation as this, however, could not down the bold and quick-thinking Buchan. As the lady walked up to the car Harvin signaled him, and as she spoke to him he immediately caught on. Wrapping himself up in his overcoat so as not to be seen clearly and assuming the sweetest, most feminine voice possible, he held conversation in his new role for several minutes. History fails to relate what comment the young girl's mother made later, but it is probable that she said, "She seemed like such a sweet girl," or words to that effect.

History also fails to relate what else happened in the car during the course of the evening.

The following are a few striking statements on miscellaneous subjects collected from various campus celebrities:

"I absolutely refuse to make any statement whatever on the marriage question."—Hugh Holman.

"You make enough false statements about me already without my making any."—Odell Matthews.

"I really kicked the gong around in Atlanta last week-end."—Buddy Chapman.

"It's nobody else's business when I want to go out and do a little smooching."—Jake Penland.

"Converse is a swanky place."—Francis Gregg.

"I stopped being silly at the age of nine."—George Cody.

"There's nothing like a good slug."—Simon Legare.

"I wish to thank all those who supported me in my race, and I hereby pledge myself to uphold and promote the cause in every way possible."—John H. Peterson.

"It looks like rain."—Joe E. Brown.

Tennis Men To Play Erskine Wednesday

The Presbyterian varsity tennis team meets the first intercollegiate opponent of the season when it goes up against the fast Erskine netmen at Due West Wednesday afternoon.

Because of the fact that the courts have been undergoing top-soiling, the P. C. team has found it difficult to secure proper practice facilities; but [illegible] in good condition [illegible] rapidly.

The Blue Hose line-up will probably be something like this: McCutchen, Levi, Gregg, Parham, Tiller. Van Sant has been out of town for the past few days, and may not see service. Parham was a member of last year's freshman team and Van Sant, a sophomore, entered school this year from a junior college. The remaining four were regular varsity players last year.

McCutchen and Levi will probably hold down one of the doubles matches and two of the other players the second doubles. Judging from the brand of competition exhibited by the Erskine team last year, a hard, close match can be expected.

P. C. Rifle Team Noses Out Terriers

The Presbyterian rifle team defeated the Wofford gunners in a shoulder-to-shoulder match held at Wofford. The meet was close throughout and P. C. won by a margin of 17 points. The final score was 1024 for P. C., and 1007 for Wofford.

For Presbyterian, Upshur was the high point man with 181, followed closely by Captain Jeanes and Gregg, both having 178 points. For Wofford, Edwards was high scorer with 181 points. He was followed by Tolbert with 172 points.

The teams and their scores are as follows:

Wofford:		Presbyterian:
Edward, 181		Jeanes, 178
Tolbert, 172		Elliot, 152
Ulmer, 164		Upshur, 181
Chandler, 162		Anderson, 167
Brown, 169		Gregg, 178
Partlow, 159		Carothers, 168

NIGHT FOOTBALL BECOMES CERTAINTY

Track Men Swamp Gamecocks In Opener

Frosh Downed By Young Gamecocks

Varsity Wins Season Initial Attempt By 82½ To 48½ At Columbia Saturday.

The Presbyterian varsity track team brilliantly rolled up the curtain on the 1935 season by overwhelmingly defeating the Carolina Gamecocks at Columbia Saturday by a score of 82½ to 48½.

The track victory was the third curtain-raising triumph of the week for varsity teams, the tennis and baseball aggregations having opened their seasons in fine style several days previous to the Columbia event.

Although times and distances were, on the whole, rather low, the Blue Hose team showed itself to be in good shape and a stronger contender for state honors than has heretofore been thought.

The outstanding individual performance of the day was that of Bill Clark in amassing 14 points by placing first in the 440, first in the 880, tieing for first in the high jump, and rupning anchor man on the winning relay. Bill Thompson, up and coming sophomore, was a close second with 13 points. Thompson's conquests included first places in the 220 low hurdles and in the broad jump, and second in the 100-yard dash.

Colin Hudson's time of 10.24 on the two-mile is notable in that it betters his own time of 10:24.2 in last year's state meet. Adams showed excellent possibilities as a miler, never having run the distance before and losing second place by only a matter of inches.

Thompson covered his flight of 220 low hurdles in 26.2, being .7 of a second above the state record time of 25.5. The mile relay time of 3:39.4 was rather disappointing, but consideration must be made for the fact that the team was at no time seriously threatened by the Gamecock entry.

Yearout got off to a bad start in the 100 and failed to place, but redeemed himself by winning the 220-yard distance in 23 flat. Bradley, another Hose dash man, placed third in the hundred and second in the 220.

Although Georgia was easily defeated by Clemson, Saturday's meet with the Athens institution should give some indication, a comparison of times and scores, of the outcome of the state race.

Summary of Carolina varsity meet:

100-yard dash: Epps (Carolina), Thompson (P. C.) Bradley (P. C.) Time, 10.3 seconds.

220-yard dash: Yearout (P. C.) Bradley (P. C.), Epps (Carolina). Time, 23 seconds.

440-yard dash: Clark (P. C.) Winget (P. C.), Parrot (Carolina). Time, 52.2 seconds.

880-yard run: Clark (P. C.), McLaughlin (Carolina), Winget (P. C.) Time, 2:9.4.

Mile run: Cardwell (Carolina), Sease (Carolina), Adams (P. C.) Time, 4:48.

Two mile: Hudson (P. C.), Cardwell (Carolina), Charles (P. C.) Time, 10:24.

120 high hurdles: Pettit (Carolina), Guerard (P. C.), Taylor (Carolina). Time, 16.4.

220 low hurdles: Thompson (P. C.), Pettit (Carolina), Perrin (P. C.) Time, 26.2.

Mile relay: Bradley, Perrin, Yearout, Clark (P. C.) Time, 3:39.4.

High jump: Jacobs (P. C.), Clark (P. C.), Wilbanks (P. C.) (tied). Height, 5 feet, 7 inches.

Pole vault: Carothers (P. C.), Farnum (Carolina), Epps (Carolina), Jacobs (P. C.) Height, 11 feet, 6.8 inches.

Broad jump: Thompson (P. C.), Epps (Carolina), Guerard (P. C.) Distance, 21 feet, 4.5 inches.

NET MEN WIN OPENING TILT

Down Erskine By Count of 4 to 3 At Due West. One Match Is Forfeited By Blue Hose.

Opening the 1935 season in fine style, the rackets of the Presbyterian varsity tennis team drove out a 4 to 3 victory over the Erskine netmen at Due West Wednesday.

The matches were hard fought and close throughout. P. C. won three of the five singles and one of the doubles. The second doubles match was forfeited by P. C. because of the fact that it would not affect the outcome of the contest and the time was limited before darkness.

One of the closest of the singles matches was between Preston, of Erskine, and Gregg, of P. C. Gregg won the first set 4-6, and was leading 4-1 in the second, when Preston staged a come-back to win both second and third sets.

Gettys, of Erskine, although losing his match, was clearly one of the ablest men on the Due West team.

Summary of matches:

Levi, P. C., defeated Gettys, Erskine, 0-6, 6-3, 6-4.

McCutchen, P. C., defeated Calhoun, Erskine, 6-3, 6-4.

Preston, Erskine, defeated Gregg, P. C., 4-6, 6-4, 7-5.

Hemphill, Erskine, defeated Tiller, P. C., 3-6, 6-3, 6-0.

Parham, P. C., defeated Pressly, Erskine, 6-1, 7-5.

Doubles:

Levi and McCutchen defeated Calhoun and Pressly, 6-1, 7-5.

Gregg and Parham forfeited to Gettys and Hemphill.

New Theatre To Open Here Soon

Clinton is to have another theatre. The Casino is to be remodeled with cushion chairs, new screen, and a new sound apparatus for the walls, besides other decorations. The new theatre will be near the Commercial Depository and it is expected that both theatres will be in operation by the middle or last part of April. Both motion picture houses will show first run pictures and the Casino prices will not be increased. Thus Clinton movie fans will be delighted because this means newer and better films will be shown. Let's give three cheers for Mr. Sheely.

25 NAMES ON DEAN'S LIST

Rules for Admittance To Sigma Kappa Alpha Changed. Requirements More Stringent.

Twenty-five Presbyterian college students names appear on the Scholastic Honor list that was given out by Dean Marshall W. Brown on last Thursday. The announcement gave out the following about honors:

At the second regular faculty meeting for this month several changes were made in connection with scholastic honors, especially in regards to admittance to Sigma Kappa Alpha, local honorary scholastic fraternity.

In the future it will be the policy of the administration of this college to publish after each semester's report, a list of all students whose cumulative scholastic average shows a relation between quality points and semester hours of 2.5. Those whose averages place them on this honor list will also be extended an invitation to the annual Sigma Kappa Alpha banquet; and their names will be placed in the college catalog in the order of their rank in the whole student body.

In regard to admittance to the scholastic fraternity section "c" under the qualifications for election to this fraternity is amended to read: "The election shall be held at the second regular faculty meeting in February of each year, at which time the highest 5% of the Junior class shall be elected; and the second highest 5% of the Senior class MAY be elected providing they have a ratio of quality to semester hours of 2.5."

It is evident that this step taken by the faculty will make the basis of election to honors stricter, since the second 5% in a small class, or in one where the scholastic average is not unusually high will no longer be eligible for membership until they have attained the approximate scholastic average 88.8.

The Scholastic Honor list for the Nine Men Named To Chi Beta Phi

Students Majoring In Science Received Into Local Chapter At Initiation Tuesday.

Nine new men were initiated into Eta Chapter of Chi Beta Phi Scientific fraternity last week. After an evening of "through the mill" followed by a day of wearing test tubes and rubber aprons, the candidates, or "neophytes," in scientific language, were formally initiated Tuesday night.

Chi Beta Phi is a national honorary sceintific fraternity, whose purpose it is to further the study of and interest in science among men and women in undergraduate schools. Requirements for admission into this organization consist of: not less than a minimum number of hours credit in the various sciences, an interest in science in general, and election by the unanimous vote of any local chapter.

The nine men recently initiated are: T. R. Barringer, a Pi Kappa Alpha, of Florence, S. C.; J. W. Freeman, of Ion, S. C.; M. D. Gillis, Alpha Kappa Pi, of Fayetteville, N. C.; P. K. Harclinton, S. C.; J. E. Freesland, of Dillmon, of Milledgeville, Ga.; M. J. McDonald, Alpha Kappa Pi, of near Dillon, S. C.; R. A. Shoemaker, Pi Kappa Alpha, of Charlotte, N. C.; Charles Steenbergen, Pi Kappa Phi, of Point Pleasant, W. Va.; and T. P. Valley, Kappa Alpha, of Pickens, S. C.

The addition of these men brings the roll of Eta chapter up to twenty-one, of whom eight are seniors, nine are juniors, and four are sophomores.

P. C. CONQUERS ERSKINE NINE

Season's First Game Annexed, 5 To 4, By Local Team At Due West Wednesday.

Robbie Higbe slammed out a home run on the first pitched ball of the first inning in his first inter-collegiate appearance and gave his mates a lead they never relinquished as Presbyterian defeated Erskine 5 to 4 to usher in the Palmetto Collegiate League campaign last Wednesday at Due West.

A score of errors were chalked up to the two nines during the afternoon, eleven being committed by the Hosemen, whose infield was rather erratic at times. Despite this, they proved their superiority over last season's aggregation and should click bteter as the season progresses.

Holliday's six-hit hurling performance and the hitting of Evans, Millsap, Wyatt and Higbe were the high spots in the P. C. attack. Simpson was effective at bat for the Seceders.

Scoring once in the first and second stanzas and twice in the fourth gave the Calvinists a 4-1 lead. Both teams sent a man across the plate in the sixth and Erskine threw a scare into the P. C. ranks in the eighth by making two runs.

Both nines had a flair for base-stealing and before the curtain fell the Hosemen had pilfered nine and the Seceders five.

Score by innings and batteries follow:

Presbyterian	110	201	000—5
Erskine	010	001	020—4

Batteries: Presbyterian— Holliday, Bolick; Erskine—Tarre, Miller, McCuen, Gettys.

Y .M. C. A. Cabinet Personnel Chosen

Executive Group Names Men To Head Various Activities In Christian Organization.

E. J. Arnold, newly-elected president of the Presbyterian College Y. M. C. A., announced his varsity cabinet last week. The cabinet was chosen by the president and his executive group, composed of Lynn Jones, vice-president and Bill Chalmers, secretary and treasurer. The term will begin immediately and continue throughout the regular Y. M. C. A. year of 1935-36. It was announced that the cabinet would be subject to change, depending on the committee's attitude toward its work and its efficiency.

The cabinet as appointed by the executive committee is as follows:

Program: Red Potter, Doug Patton, and W. C. Keller.

Religious activities: J. E. Ratchford,

Alumni To Light Johnson Field

Work To Begin Immediately and Rushed To Completion. 72,000-Watt Equipment Called For.

Announcement has been made by Dr. S. C. Hays, president of the Presbyterian College Alumni association, that plans have gone forward to such an extent that work will be begun immediately upon the lighting equipment for Johnson field which will make it possible for the college to feature night football and other outdoor events.

The lighting apparatus which, it is planned, will also include an amplifying system, will be of 72,000-watt power and be the largest in the state and one of the finest and most efficient in the entire South. The electrical engineer who consulted with the college administration and members of the alumni group stated that the lights would be of such brilliance that it would be possible to read a newspaper at a distance of five city blocks by the reflection.

Work will be begun immediately. The necessary poles will be installed this week and work begun on the reflectors and other apparatus the first part of next week.

It is hoped that the installation will be completed before the end of the present track season in order that one or more track meets may be held at night.

In addition to football and track, the new system will be invaluable for the staging of outdoor boxing matches and college and civic activities of all kinds.

The fact that Clinton is located within easy driving distance of a number of cities and towns, and many would undoubtedly attend Presbyterian college athletic contests if business and conflicting engagements did not interfere, has long made it apparent that night programs are the only solution to the problem.

While only one football game is thus far scheduled to be played at Clinton next year, every effort will be made to re-arrange the schedule in such a way that more games may be played at home. The prospect of increased gate receipts will make it possible to play more games in Clinton than the athletic association has found it financially possible to arrange in the past.

Approximately $1,500 will be necessary to finance the project. An alumni committee, headed by Dr. Hays, is endeavoring to raise funds from the alumni of the college and sports enthusiasts throughout the section. A student committee, headed by Doyle Boggs, is to begin a canvas this week to raise $200 from the student body.

Those in charge of the drives expressed themselves as confident that alumni and students of the college would respond whole-heartedly in this step for the advancement of athletics at Presbyterian college.

Thought For the Week

The Power Invincible

The invention of wireless telegraphy by Marconi in 1896 inaugurated a new era in world progress. Through the transmission of SOS signals from shpis in storms at sea, help has been summoned and many human live have been saved from a watery grave. No matter where the Christian may be, he too, has an unfailing means of communication with rescue in the time of greatest need. This is through the medium of prayer. The employment of this marvelous agency, however, is not to be limited merely as a last resort in seeking refuge from impending danger. The power of prayer is an unconquerable force which permits the mortal soul daily to come into hallowed accord with the Divine. Someone has appropriately likened prayer to a key with which the new day should be unlocked each morning and the closing day locked again each night. Prayer is not only the introduction and the termination of the day for the Christian, but it is a personal element that is welded srongly into his very life and soul. Throughout every moment of existence, by means of this remarkable power, the praying heart finds renewed strength and encouragement to attempt fields of endeavor that otherwise would seem unattainable and impossible. The amazing results of answered prayer more than justify the necessity for the daily use of this wonderful privilege.

What! No Spring Holidays?

From every other campus in the state we are gazed upon with awe. We are looked upon much as spectators regard a chain-gang. The students here aren't particularly jailed up behind four walls and kept under close restrictions. In fact we are allowed to get out and gaze at the sunshine and enjoy college life with a restricted freedom as long as we keep good moral behavior. We have to work steadily and with peculiarly small small amount of surveillance. We have work to be done and the only restriction is that this work must be done or else. This work is alone enough to keep our students tied to the campus, not including the huge athletic and extra-curricular activities which the students cooperate with the college in promoting. We do have many privileges and appreciate them. We do apparently have a great deal of freedom, but others which have equal liberty are granted parole and allowed a furlough on probation in this glorious season of the year. Presbyterian is the only college in the state which does not grant Spring holidays,

In the army of South Carolina colleges, P. C. alone remains out of step with the rest. Or is this College the only one in step, all the others being out of cadence with it? Perhaps P. C. is like the freshman who says, "I'm in step, it's the band that's wrong." But then after all is keeping in step so important? Does it ruin the parade? Are Spring holidays an asset to the college program? We think they are. With a long period of study broken only by Christmas vacation, which comes comparatively near the beginning of the school year, there is definitely an unbalance. Spring holidays gives a chance to the students to get their breath and catch up and then off to a fast finish of the year. If our students need such a prolonged Christmas holiday during the first semester, how much more they need at least a brief period of relaxation in the second half of the year. After exams and the getting into the swing of new courses, the energies of students are certainly more dulled and in need of rest than any other time of the school year. We think that other schools must feel something of a similar nature since so many American colleges do have Spring holidays.

Presbyterian College has always tried to be at the front in every endeavor. She has always wanted to equal any other school in a worthy movement. She has never been surpassed in anything that she could do anything about. We wonder if our college is going to continue to keep out of step in the parade of progressive schools on this point.

NOTES AND SHADES

MOVIES

Monday and Tuesday—Joan Crawford, Clark Gable and Robert Montgomery in "Forsaking All Others." That Van Dyke man is a wizard. He has directed a salubrious entertainment and made Joan Crawford into a human being, with Clark Gable, Robert Montgomery and Charles Butterworth at their best. The story is so simple you wonder how they had the nerve to make a picture of it—again—but it leaves you dizzy with laughter. Billie Burke is splendid in this MGM picture.

Wednesday—"One Hour Late." A new screen personality, Joe Morrison, makes a strong bid for fame in this spritely little yarn depicting the love of an office clerk for a stenographer, Helen Twelvetrees, and their difficulties when their romance is nearly wrecked by the boss, Conrad Nagel, and a file clerk, Arline Judge. Laughs are frequent, pathos well spaced. Entire cast is good, but it's Morrison you'll remember in this Paramount film.

Thursday—Mary Ellis and CaCrl Brisson in "All the King's Horse." No review available for this Paramount production.

Friday—Francis Lederer in "Romance in Manhattan." Once in a while a well-nigh perfect screen play is written; a practically flawless cast is assembled to make the already life-like characters breathe, and a clever director lifts the whole thing to a rare height. Such a picture is "Romance in Manhattan," directed by Stephen Roberts and enlivened by Francis Lederer, Ginger Rogers, Jimmy Buttler, J. Farrell MacDonald, Sidney Toler and Donald Meek, all of whom make the film an offering of rare excellence. Lederer plays the part of a Czechoslovakian immigrant who enters the country illegally and gets a job from Ginger Rogers' small brother, Jimmy Butler, selling papers. Ambitious, he rises to the triumphant heights of being a taxi-cab drvier—and in love with Miss Rogers at the same time. But he cannot marry her because he is not a citizen, and the small brdther is placed in an orphan asylum because Miss Rogers is judged an unfit guardian, and things look pretty black until an Irish cop, MacDonold, comes to hte rescue in one of the most hilarious scenes ever des gned to bring about a happy ending. Lederer is charmingly at home in his role and Miss Rogers is excellent. But the bulk of the bravos must go to Stephen Roberts, whose direction is just this side of miraculous, and to the authors whose pens were inspired for this RKO-Radio production.

THE PARADE GROUND

Information was received this week by the P. M. S. and T. that the inspector for the annual government inspection of this unit will be Captain John R. Boatwright, formerly P. M. S. and T. at Wofford college, and at present on duty with the South Carolina National Guard. Captain Boatwright was born in Virginia, educated at the University of Virginia, and also graduated from the United States Infantry school. The inspection will be on the 23rd and 24th of April—one day being given to theoretical examination and conference with the directors of the unit here, and the other being devoted to practical demonstration of the unit, with various kinds of drill, along with the usual review and inspection.

Official results of the Hearst trophy rifle firing have been received by the P. M. S. and T. Presbyterian's first team, with a total score of 871 and a high individual score of 179 (made by Upshur), came thirteenth in the ranking of the 25 teams that entered from this corps area. Georgia Tech, wih an unusual score of 917 and a high individual score of 193, came out first in the area. While 13th doesn't seem especially notable from first glance, a closer examination shows that our team out-fired teams of Davidson, L. S. U. and Clemson, all of whom have always stood far up in this competition.

Continuing its schedule, the rifle team will enter the state meet to be held at Clemson on Thursday of this week. There it will compete with Wofford, Clemson and The Citadel for the South Carolina championship. Also there is a probable trip to Charleston on the 13th to fire a dual meet with The Citadel. Hold everything! It's too late to go out for the team, and no dead wood will be taken along; so please don't get elated over the trip. You would enjoy one better this summer.

Now that inspection is just around the corner (and this is no Hoover stuff) the various classes are beginning to review (or probably after an examination of the mid-semester grades in the basic courses it would be best to say "cram"), for the spring inspection. Juniors are getting the sequence of stripping and essembling the old Browning machine gun, model of 1917, caliber .30, which these gentlemen can tell you is belt fed, recoil operated, water cooled, etc., etc.; and the other classes are studying their subjects with the same determination.

And in connection with the above mental strain the juniors are cramming their minds full of jokes, quips, cranks and the like so they can qualify for "regular guys" in camp this summer. Also, they are being coached by their predecessors in all pranks that are prevalent in this ideal (?) life so when someone wants to play a trick they won't be "it."

Student Reading At High Mark

Library Subscribes To Pamphlets On National and International Affairs.

It may be due solely to the tremenduous number of term papers being called for, but the students of Presbyterian College are reading as they never have read before. That is they are if the library records are to be taken as a criterion of their reading.

The first week in March set a new record in the number of books read. Though the library was open only five days an average of two and a fraction books per member of the student body were taken out.

The library is now subscribing to the World Affairs pamphlets. These are small books dealing with national and international affairs are issued in connection with the Foreign Policy Association reports and fortnightly reviews. The first seven of these pamphlets have been received and catalogued. One of particular interest to Southerners is Peter Molyneaux's "What Economic Nationalism Means to the South." Says Librarian Jones: "This is one book every man interested in the South should read."

Another new feature is the practice of taking the "Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Sciences" in bound form. These books have been taken in paper form for several years before this. Each issue of the Annals deals with but one subject, several articles by experts on the subject contributing to each. The questions dealt with are wholly social and political.

Changes Made In Schedules

Baseball

April 18—Carolina at Columbia.

April 30—Carolina at Clinton.

Tennis

April 10—Mississippi State at Clinton.

Other changes will have to be made in baseball dates due to conflicts in Clemson's baseball schedule.

To Finish Tennis Play This Week

With the prospect in view of completing competition by the end of the week, interest in the Blue Key intramural tennis tournament is heightening daily.

Although a number of matches still remain on the docket, it is thought that a few days of fair weather will permit ample time for the play-offs.

A number of men have shown excellent form in their matches. Among the fore-runners at the present time are Johnston, Creech, Parham, and Steenbergen.

The ltitle splash at this columnist by the Mercer Cluster's "Pass in Review"-er rolled off our back into the sea of not quite good enough deluges. Better luck next time.

Notice

The fourth and last issue of the Collegian will appear about the middle of May. All contributions must be in the hands of the editor before April 20.

With the Greeks

Pi Kappa Phi adds a plege to its ranks as Bernard Fitzharris joins the fraternal order. The new man is a second semester transfer from the University of South Carolina, and lives in Florence, S. C. While at Carolina he was a pledge of Sigma Chi.

On last Friday night the Alpha Kappa Pi fraternity had one of the biggest socials of the year. The rooms were cleverly decorated in the fraternity colors, green and white. A large number of men from other fraternities on the campus were present and an unusually large group of girls attended.

son until May 9, so that the Clemson-Carolina games may be played, and Carolina and Newberry have jointly swapped dates to accommodate Clemson for an April game.

Both changes, made at Clemson's request, were satisfactory to Clemson, and it is hoped that the Tigers will find themselves able to return to the loop. Their last-minute withdrawal has "thrown a monkey wrench" in the machine of the loop.

However, coaches of all the schools in the league have expressed the determination to continue the league despite Clemson's withdrawal.

CLINTON DAIRY ICE CREAM PARLOR

—so far as we know tobacco was first used about 400 years ago

—throughout the years what one thing has given so much pleasure..so much satisfaction

It was a matter of pride with a host in Colonial days that his guests should smoke tobacco grown on his own plantation.

Today the Governor of North Carolina says to the Governor of South Carolina—

"Have a cigarette"

TODAY people all over the world use tobacco in one form or another.

They chew it, they smoke it in pipes, they smoke cigars and cigarettes, and here is what an eminent physician said about cigarettes:

"I have been something of a student of cigarettes, and it is my belief that they offer the mildest and purest form in which tobacco is used."

Yes, nowadays the cigarette is the most popular form in which tobacco is used. A good cigarette certainly gives men and women a lot of pleasure.

Have a Chesterfield—

For one thing—they're milder.
For another thing—they taste better.

PRESBYTERIAN RIFLE TEAM SUPREME IN STATE CIRCLES

Ends Season Friday At Clemson By Winning Both Five- and Ten-Man Competition.

The Presbyterian college varsity rifle team ended its season Friday with a double victory and state championships for five-man and ten-man teams as results of the shooting on Clemson's range.

Clemson was nosed out by a single point for the ten-man score, and by eleven for the five-man. Wofford entered only the smaller team, and The Citadel was not represented at all.

Edgar Pitman and Colin Hudson of P. C. captured high scores with 176 out of possible 200, with Edwards, of Wofford, and Acker, of Clemson, a few points behind.

Team scores were as follows:

Five highest of six firing:

P. C.	833
Clemson	822
Wofford	806

Ten highest of eleven firing:

P. C.	1633
Clemson	1632

Individual scores of the Blue Hose sharpshooters were:

*Jeanes	172
*Upshur	169
*Anderson	163
*Gregg	170
*Elliott	159
Pitman	176
Hudson	176
Ratchford	155
Carothers	152
Ellis	141

*Score counted for both five- and ten-man contests.

Student Body Hears Dr. J. McD. Richards

President of Columbia Seminary Speaks on "The Transforming Power of Jesus Christ."

Dr. J. McD. Richards, president of Columbia Theological seminary, Decatur, Ga., addressed the faculty and student body at the chapel period Friday morning, giving a short but inspirational treatment of the subject, "The Transforming Power of Jesus Christ."

Dr. Richards took his text from John 1:42, emphasizing the words of Jesus, "Thou art . . . but thou shall be." He reminded the hearers how young people dream of and hope for the time when they will change to grown-ups, to independent, intellectual beings; and of how those who have passed this stage of life look back knowing that they are then weak when they were once strong, that their golden dreams have already been fulfilled, leaving only the end of life to look forward to.

Then the speaker pointed out three important facts he drew from his text: (1) That Jesus has the ability, as shown in the text, to place his finger on the weak point in any one's life as he did in Peter's. He knew Peter had no dependability about him and he pointed it out.

(2) That at the same time Jesus was seeing Peter's weak point he was also seeing his possibility to become "transformed" into something greater. He reared the desire in Peter to be something more than he was at that time.

(3) And that Peter did become what Jesus had said he would become. Dr. Richards cited instances in Peter's life, particularly about the time of Pentecost, when he seemed to count it joy to suffer shame for Jesus. Tradition even has it that he requested to be crucified head down because he didn't regard himself worthy to die in the same manner the Master had died.

The speaker closed his talk with an appropriate illustration of the faithful Negro woman whose epitaph was "Born a slave; died a child of the King." This is the aim in life—to go out a much different person from the one that entered.

Dr. Brimm Speaks At 'Y' Meeting

Head of Bible Department At College Cautions Students To 'Be Temperate In All Things'.

Dr. D. J. Brimm, of the Bible department of Presbyterian college, spoke on "Intemperance" last Thursday night at the regular meeting of the Y. M. C. A. With the exception of several songs the entire meeting was given to the speaker. "Doug" Patton, member of the program committee, presided.

Dr. Brmim, in the beginning, remarked that he felt as if he were robbing the "Y" of its real development. He cautioned that its purpose should be more than that of a mid-week prayer meeting and should be to develop the talents of its members. This self-development, he said, would be more beneficial than all the best speakers who would appear before the group, even though such famous ones spoke each week.

For a Biblical basis of development, the speaker quoted a number of passages of scripture which he emphasized as to the importance of his subject. Temperance was referred to as a striving with self-control as in I Corinthians 9:25. It was quoted as among the "sacred nine" recorded in II Peter 15. Also it was cited in relations drawn from Acts 26:25 and Philippians 4:5.

In the discussion of the topic Dr. Brimm gave twelve outstanding forms of intemperance that are prevalent in the world today. He referred first to drinking and showed how it was only one form of intemperance and should never be regarded as inclusive of the whole word. Eating was mentioned as a form of intemperance supporting the statement "He dug his grave with his teeth." Other forms which were enumerated and briefly discussed were intemperance in exercise, in fanaticism, in pleasure, in resting, in religious work, in talk, in study, in smoking, in idleness, and in sex relations. These all were portrayed in a discussion that was terminated only by the time limit. Dr. Brimm, in closing, cautioned the "Y" members that they should "avoid intemperance in all things."

Work Delayed On Field Lighting

Necessary Materials Have Not Arrived. Work Goes Ahead On Raising of Funds.

Although there has been some delay in getting the necessary materials and work has not yet gotten under way on the lighting equipment for Johnson field, the organizations for the raising of the necessary funds are speedily laying their plans.

Dr. S. C. Hays, president of the Presbyterian College Alumni association, is the chief figure behind the alumni movement to secure additional funds for the project. The association already has raised a large part of the $1,500 necessary and prospects are that the remainder will be raised in the near future.

The student body of the college has been called upon to raise a quota of $200. A committee composed of Doyle Boggs, chairman, and McCall, Forehand, Evans, and Isom from each of the four classes, has been appointed by McClary, president of the student body, to interview each man in the drive for the funds. It is hoped that each student will contribute at least $1.00 toward this the most progressive step of the college along athletic lines in recent years.

Chairman Boggs states that he is confident that every man in the school will see the advantage to the college of the new lighting system and will respond whole-heartedly.

Stokes Gets Post At Wesleyan U., Conn.

Presbyterian Graduate and Former Rhodes Scholar To Be Assist In English Department.

Joseph Morgan Stokes, assistant professor of English at the University of South Carolina and Presbyterian College alumnus, has been appointed assistant professor of English at Wesleyan University in Middletown, Conn.

Mr. Stokes graduated as valedictorian of his class at P. C. in 1925. While here he was editor-in-chief of the Pac-Sac, a member of the Blue Stocking staff and one of the organizers of Chi Tau, the fraternity that later became the present chapter of Beta Kappa. He was one of the most versatile men that this school has ever seen.

In 1926 he returned to P. C. and for one year served as an instructor in mathematics. He then attended Princeton for a year and went to England from there as a Rhodes Scholar. He has since returned to England where for a year he did additional study at Oxford. For the past few years he has been assistant professor of English at the University of South Carolina.

Wesleyan is one of the finest schools in the East and Mr. Stokes is to be congratulated on his appointment.

This issue will contain more poetry than usual, a wide variety of short stories, sketches and essays. The contributers are: Charles Carson, George Oliver, Robert McLees, Hugh Holman, William Chalmers, Chester Keller, Jack Gasque, Sadler Love, Hank Wilson, Keitt Darby, and George Collett.

SOUTH CAROLINA HISTORY CLASS VISITS LOWER PART OF STATE

There is at least one class in college which should experience a sudden upward spurt in scholastic average, because it will be able to visualize what it is reading about. The South Carolina History Class has just returned from a visit to the actual scenes upon which the history they are studying was enacted.

Last Tuesday morning three car loads set out for Charleston, the birthplace of Carolina. The first official stopping point was Stateburg, which was at one time considered as the location of the state capitol but lost it to the present day Columbia. Some miles on the highway this side of Sumter, its principal landmarks are a beautiful plantation home and the old Stateburg church. In the churchyard were the graves of Joel R. Poinsett, explorer and biologist, after whom the Poinsettia was named and William Wallace Anderson, who was Surgeon-General of the Confederate Army. Admiral Gillom, who made an unsuccessful attempt to organize a South Carolina navy during the Revolution, also rests there, but just where the group was unable to locate.

About four miles out on a side road the grave of General Sumter. On the stone was a small bronze tablet to Charles and Etienne de Fontenay, dedicated by the French Embassy when they died fighting in 1916. Upon it Dr. Jones noted with glee a mistake—although great-grand-sons of Sumter, they were called 'grandsons.'
